"Thou hast given us to-day a red-letter day in the history of this city." With these words of grateful thanks Dr. STALKER led in prayer the annual meeting of the Glasgow "Mizpah Band" last Thursday evening. And surely they convey no idea of exaggeration; for those who were present at the various meetings held that day at the St. Andrew's Halls are not likely soon to forget the scene and its surroundings. The gatherings were designed to focus and to crystallise the deep widespread interest that has been awakened in the west central district of Scotland by the revival movement in which Messrs. Moody and Sankey and Rev. John McNeill have been the chief actors. The day was a very full one. At eleven o'clock, in the Berkeley Hall, there was a crowded meeting of ministers, office-bearers, and students; immediately afterwards there came a three hours' conference in the great St. Andrew's Hall. At seven p.m. the annual gathering of the Mizpah Band took place in the small hall, and almost at the same hour the general crowd filled to repletion the large hall for the anniversary of the Glasgow United Evangelistic Association. Dr. Stalker was therefore amply justified in regarding the quadruple event as constituting a "red-letter day" in the annals of the city. At the same time it was an unmistakable token of the high esteem in which the evangelists are held by the most active and warm-hearted portion of the religious community of central Scotland. Among those present we noticed at least one well-known Christian friend all the way from Inverness, and doubtless there were shoals of pastors, evangelists, workers, and converts from the towns and districts round about Glasgow. One of the principal features of the day's speaking was the hearty reception given everywhere to Scotland's

LATEST EVANGELISTIC RECRUIT

Rev. John McNeill. He has certainly caught the popular ear of his countrymen. We wish him health and graceand length of days in which to fulfil the high promise of his new career.

Mr. MOODY presided over the throng of pastors, students, and others that filled every available corner of the Berkeley Hall at eleven o'clock. He had been announced to give the principal address, but he impressed his friend, Mr. McNeill, into that service, and gave his address later in the day in the large hall. We cannot venture, from lack of local knowledge, to describe the distinguished audience in the Berkeley Hall, but it seemed to contain all the best-known ministers and men in the evangelical world of Glasgow, not forgetting a goodly contingent from Edinburgh. The galleries were crammed with students, who were warmly interested in the proceedings, and cheered Mr. McNeill to the echo on every possible excuse. It is a very noteworthy fact that the authorities of the Free Church College had given a forenoon holiday to all the students to enable them to attend—a thing, we are informed, without precedent in the history of the institution. Principal Douglas, Prof. H. Drummond, and probably other of the professors, were among the auditors at the meeting.

With business-like promptitude Mr. Moody called on Mr. McNeill to speak, after a psalm had been sung and Rev. Dr. Black had offered prayer. Mr. McNeill gave three addresses during the day, and this first address was perhaps the most pungent, pointed, and profitable of the three. We give an outline of it on another page. Some of the more local allusions, which we have not reproduced, went home; and the frequent sallies of sanctified humour kept the gravest of the audience in a state of mild excitement and expectation. With Mr. McNeill on his legs there is certain death to dull and frigid formality, while there is no lack of pathos and real spiritual power.

At the close of his remarks the company adjourned to the big hall, where seats had been specially reserved for them. Mr. MOODY again filled the president's chair. Dr. ANDREW BONAR, venerable, but still youthful in spirit, led the assemblage in prayer, and Mr. SANKEY very feelingly sang the late Dr. Horatius Bonar's hymn, "Pray, brethren, pray." The was begun by a fervid address from Rev. JOHN SMITH, of Broughton-place Church, Edinburgh. The thought borne in upon him, he said, by such a gathering was—We are almost at the close of a special religious movement that has awakened most profound interest almost from end to end of Scotland. The momentous question arises: What is this great movement to come to? God has been giving showers of blessings in many parts of the land, and great promise of further blessing. Will all this interest, which has been so suddenly aroused in the country, pass away? When Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey came to Scotland in November, the thought in many minds was that the old times were coming back again. Is that to be all! "I have the profoundest conviction, which I must express, that God designs to give us far deeper and than that." As illustrating his conviction on this point, Mr. Smith referred to a passage in the history of Judah, mentioned by the prophet Micah—a period when they had lost their ascendancy amongst the nations, and there was a blight on the religious life of the people. It was at such a crisis that God, by the mouth of the prophet, gave them to hope that they might have back again the glories of the early days when they ere delivered from Egyptian bondage. In some respects Scotland's spiritual history has corresponded to the great movements in ancient Israel. It is my firm and unshaken faith (said the speaker) that this movement, the beginnings of which we see around us to-day, is not to pass away. I believe we are standing at the beginning of a great,

CONTINUOUS, SPIRITUAL MOVEMENT

in this land; that God is saying: "Open your mouth wide and I will fill it." Have we faith to expect it? We are face to face with a most momentous crisis, and God is saying to us that according to our faith it will be unto us. May God enable us to realise his almightiness; that there is nothing too hard for Him, and that not only according to the measure of his past working, but in far higher, grander measure, He will work for us. We may well look to Him when we contemplate the drunkenness, uncleanness, and other mighty evils that inflict such havoc upon tens and hundreds of thousands here in Scotland. Mr. Smith went on to say that, after his work in preaching of the Gospel, he felt that they ought to thank Mr. Moody for the splendid service he had rendered in laying his finger on the drink traffic as and placing the responsibility for its continuance upon Scottish Christians, in the way that he had done.

As to the outcome of it all, Mr. Smith said we are so apt to forget, in regarding the thousand millions that lie in heathen darkness, that it is God's design to give us this spiritual fire and this hungering after spiritual life, in order that, not in ones or twos, but in tens and hundreds, men and women may go forth to the heathen world and lift high the standard of King Jesus. Our place is at the throne of grace, that this may follow. Let us believe, and God will do greater things than we can even imagine.

The next address was from Dr. STALKER, and was a very practical exhortation to based on the words in Proverbs, "The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting." There is a touch of the ludicrous, he said, in the picture of the huntsman who had spent his breath and his strength in catching his prey, but never had a slice of the carcase because he was too lazy to roast that which he had caught. It is an extreme illustration of a mood and temperament of which we need to beware. The mood is the relaxation that is apt to ensue after severe exertion. There is the temperament that goes along with it which is splendid at beginnings, but at some critical moment the nerve effort seems to be cut, and the whole thing comes to nothing.

It helps to spoil every revival movement. There are some aspects of religion that appeal strongly to sanguine and excitable natures. There are those who seem to run well for a time, but suddenly effort is relaxed, and everything collapses. In the Word of God everything is promised to the man who overcomes. I hope I am not saying too severe a thing if I remark that the religious history of many might be thus described: they got religion a good many years ago, and they never have done anything with it since. There is only one epoch in their religious life, and that is their conversion. If you ask them to speak of their experience, they have nothing to say of yesterday or last year; it was all at their conversion. Some one has said that there are multitudes of Christians, but there is only one here and there who has spiritual power. Is it not too true? Does God in'end it? Is the Christ of any man different from the Christ of the man who has spiritual power? There are so many professing Christians who only derive from Christ a kind of STARVATION EXISTENCE.

Dr. Stalker also urged the need of unrelaxed and persevering effort in the varied branches of Christian work; illustrating his point by the persistent action of the stone mason, who, by steady and repeated blows, breaks asunder the mass of granite on which he is operating. It was the hundredth blow that did it; if he had stopped at the ninety-ninth he would have been a failure. When the man went out after the lost sheep in the parable, he did not merely keep up his search till some one told him he had done his duty, or till people were praising him as a model shepherd. He sought the sheep till he found it.

Mr. BURKE having rendered with splendid effect the song, "When the mists have rolled away," followed with a very telling address on the testing of Gideon's army, according to God's instructions. Commenting on the story, which he described as a very scarifying one for professed Christian workers, he graphically portrayed the depletion of Gideon's forces when the first test of fear was applied to the thirty-two thousand Israelites. Twenty-two thousand of them "executed a magnificent strategical movement upon home"; and when they got there they explained their return to their families by saying that "the fight hadn't come off when they left." There is an awful edge of severity in the narrative, and God's fan is in his hand still. There are multitudes of such cowardly, nerveless Christians in all our congregations. The further test by lapping at the water brook was very cleverly expounded, with fitting play of gesture. The faithful three hundred who remained were those who scented danger from the foe as they drank, and kept themselves in wakeful readiness for the onset of the Midianites. The applications of the lessons in the narratives are obvious, and the speaker faithfully set them in order before his audience, composed mainly of professed Christian workers. At the outset of his remarks Mr. McNeill bespoke earnest prayer for himself and Mr. Burke, and paid a hearty tribute of personal esteem to his singing companion in the fight.

REV. JOHN McNEILL

The beautiful hymn, "Sometime we'll understand" (given in these columns some weeks ago), was sung, with moving sweetness and effect, by Miss Darling, Mrs. Barclay, Mr. Sankey, and Mr. Burke, arranged as a solo, duet, and quartet. Two brethren led the meeting in prayer, and then was largely filled up with Mr. Moody's address on "The Holy Spirit." He began by remarking that it was a very difficult thing to preach to preachers, as they were not accustomed to listen for themselves, but for their congregations. Alluding incidentally to an observation of Mr. McNeill at the students' meeting, Mr. Moody said he had met with many Scotch ministers who had been set on fire at Keswick, and therefore he believed that that conference had proved a great blessing to Scotland. If any minister or worker present were not bringing forth fruit he ought to examine himself and give himself to prayer that that very day the Holy Ghost might fall upon him so as to give anointing for service. He went on to speak of the work of the Spirit in this dispensation. He convinces of sin; He imparts love, so that the worker does not go about his work from a cold sense of duty; He gives hope; He bestows liberty—a thing that is badly wanted in many churches throughout Scotland; He delivers from the carping and critical habit; He testifies of Christ. All these points were amplified with much power and unction. Different degrees of Spirit possession were described, and the need of the fulness of the Spirit as an enduement of power for service was urged. Finally, there was a vivid sketch of the way in which Elisha got his heart's desire to have a double portion of the spirit of his father in the faith, Elijah. The utterance was a very helpful and inspiring one, and awakened heartfelt responses in many a hearer.

After prayer the great audience dispersed, many of those present having been in close attendance for the space of four solid consecutive hours.

The annual meeting of the "Mizpah Band" was held in the evening. Lack of space compels us to hold over our report of this to next week.

THE EVANGELISTIC ASSOCIATION.

At the same time as the Mizpah men were cheering Mr. Moody and Mr. McNeill, the anniversary of the Glasgow United Evangelistic Association was being held in the Grand Hall, which was everywhere crowded with a brilliant and enthusiastic audience. Mr. J. Campbell White, as President of the Association, was in the chair. The large united choir was ably led by Mr. J. H. Burke.

Principal Douglas having led in prayer, a report of the past year's work of the Association was submitted by Mr. Miller, the secretary. Grateful reference was made to the origin of the Association as an outcome of Mr. Moody's visit to the city eighteen years ago. The many and varied branches of the Association's work were briefly passed in review—the noonday meeting, the Fellowship Association, the Gospel work at the Tent, Bethany Hall and Mizpah Hall, the Girls' Home in St. Vincent-street, the Fresh-Air Fortnight scheme, the Homes for Destitute Children at Saltcoats, &c., &c. It was stated that last summer no fewer than 3500 poor children had got a fortnight's outing in the country through the scheme. At the close of the financial year there was a satisfactory balance of £1870 in hand.

THE CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH

was excellent, and highly practical. Referring to bygone periods of blessing, he mentioned the dates of 1859, 1874, 1882, and (thank God) 1892, as years to be for ever remembered as seasons of the Spirit's working in the hearts of the people of Scotland. He thanked God for the successive visits of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey, and referred specially to 1874, when so many of the existing Christian agencies had sprung into existence. These branches were alluded to, and the Chairman appealed for the continued support of Christian friends in the vigorous maintenance of the work of the Association. The unsectarian platform of the Association's work was commended, and the aggressive element pressed home. A word was said in passing about the importance of divinity students receiving practical training in Gospel work as a portion of their curriculum. Then the "lapsed masses" of church members were exhorted to rise to the level of their privilege and responsibility; and Mr. White wound up an effective utterance by a rousing defence of the fundamental Christian doctrines which, in many quarters in our day, are called in question.

Professor Simpson having uttered a brief but compactly expressed appeal for greater consecration in service and liberality in giving to foreign missions, Mr. Burke sang with great expression and pathos "He saved a poor sinner like me."

REV. JOHN McNEILL

was called upon, and soon put himself en rapport with the great audience by some flashes of homely and caustic humour. He said he had now lost some of the sweet compensations and strong consolations of the stated ministry. But his new work had its advantages also. He had reached a haven where "the elders cease from troubling and the deacons are at rest." Not being tied to any church whose members could take offence at too plain speech, he was able to say things that needed to be said, but from saying which many ministers shrank. Then Mr. McNeill launched out into a exposition of the text, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no wisdom or device or knowledge in the grave whither thou goest." It is a strange text, he said, so breezy at the beginning and so funereal at the end. Though there is so much of the word "do" in it, it is a grand evangelical utterance, because faith precedes work. What a word it is, too, for daily life! Let us not dream about this and that; but do it. A trumpet blast like this is needed to take the laziness and sloth—the "canna be fashed"—out of us. We have so much talking and so little real doing. Here in Glasgow we are on the bank of a dark, turgid stream of sin, and as the bodies go floating by we see that they are our own brothers and sisters. Christian! pluck thy hand out of thy bosom and rescue these perishing souls! Every one of us has got a hand that can do something to > Rescue the perishing; care for the dying;

> Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave;
> Weep o'er the erring one; lift up the fallen;
> Tell them of Jesus, the Mighty to save.

How often our great purposes for God and the world "burn away, and lose the name of action." The Lord save the Evangelistic Association and all the churches from

"FUSHIONLESS" CHRISTIANS.

Notice the motive to earnest action: "For there is no device," &c. This looks like a wet blanket upon all energy. To tell me I am going to die will surely make me sit down, and take all the steam power out of me. Nay; the New Testament has given this Old Testament text another setting. As Christians we do all our work—secular and sacred—under the impulse of two great motives—an opening grave and an opening heaven. Which will open first none of us knows; but from either and from both combined, how splendid should be the energy for Christian work! What a pressure is thus put on the believer! An engine works far better at high pressure than at low pressure. People sometimes come to me and say, "Take it easy." If they only knew me they would not give that advice, for I have a tremendous capacity for taking it easy. And how many people there are in our Churches to whom you would think the Lord had given the word of command,

"STAND AT EASE!"

I remember my boy coming home one day after hearing me talk something like this in a sermon. He stood before his mother and said: "Mother, I don't know all that father said, but he said it means this, 'There is to be less talk and more work in this house.'" We are doing the Lord's work; let us work hard. "The night cometh"; and that for us means sweet rest. The Lord puts none of his workers on the "night shift." Let us work for our rest and our reward.

MR. MOODY'S NEW SCHEME.

On rising to give the last address of the day, Mr. Moody was greeted with rounds of cheering. Without any prelude he plunged into the heart of a practical proposal that he must have been meditating beforehand, but which no doubt took the audience by surprise. The address was a capital commentary on Mr. McNeill's exhortation that had gone before. This association, said Mr. Moody, ought to move forward on a new line. The cry is coming from all parts of the world for Christian workers. I do not know any country where there are so many good workers as in Scotland. I would like to see you make a new departure, and start a

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR WORKERS.

I believe that your ministers generally are educated away from certain classes of the population. Do not run away and say that I have been talking against educated ministers; I am not. But there is a class of people we are not reaching, and I do not believe that our highly-trained ministers will ever reach them. The quicker we find this out the better. In your large cities we are told that ninety-five per cent. of the working population never go inside a church. In America the bulk of our working-men are outside the churches. Take a boy who goes from the academy to the university and then to a theological seminary; let him put on a white cravat, and do you think he will reach these working-men? If some of our theological students were to act as reporters on the daily papers for six months, or were to work at a trade for a year—trying meantime to preach to street crowds, they would soon find out whether God had called them to preach or not. If God calls a man to preach He will send some one to hear him. The time has come, I think, for us to CALL OUT THE VOLUNTEERS.

Suppose a youth of twenty-two is converted, and the Spirit of God moves him to go into the ministry. It will take him four years to prepare for the University, then four years at the University, and then four years at the Divinity Hall—twelve years in all. Perhaps, after all, he is not fitted for the regular pulpit, and could have been doing good Christian work without entering the ministry.

Mr. Moody went on to describe the sort of training in vogue at his Chicago Bible Institute—instruction in the Bible and in music in the forenoon, and actual mission work of some kind in the latter part of the day. Godly women trained in this way could hold mothers' meetings which very few ministers were qualified to conduct. Street preaching and work of that sort, he said, should not be left to untrained men; it needs the very best men that can be got, only they must be in touch with the people and have a command of the colloquial English. Such a training school would also prepare WORKERS FOR THE FOREIGN FIELD.

He did not think that any man or woman ought to go to the mission field abroad till they had proved themselves successful workers at home. Why should there not be in Glasgow an institution of this kind, that would prepare Christian men and women for work in all parts of the world? Mr. Moody quite warmed up to his subject, and, like the practical man he is, he declared that Glasgow's wealthy Christians ought to secure a site for this training college close by the Christian Institute in Bothwell-street, and have a suitable building erected without delay. They had plenty of money, he said; indeed, some of them had so much they did not know what to do with it. As to a fitting person to superintend the work, he said they had in Mr. John Anderson, of Ardrossan, the very man for the post.

Of course, the great audience cheered Mr. Moody's proposals very heartily, particularly when he secured from the chairman, Mr. Campbell White, a promise to give the site, if the Lord opened up the way of carrying the project though, and like promises of help in erecting the building from Mr. Napier and Colonel Buchanan, who were sitting on the platform. As a finishing touch to his address Mr. Moody asked the audience to pray earnestly about the matter and go forward; when he came back to Glasgow he would expect to find the Training School in operation, and he would be much disappointed if it was not. The Chairman also asked that prayer should be made, not only about this matter, but on behalf of the American Evangelists, and Messrs. McNeill and Burke in their arduous Gospel work. Mr. Sankey sang, by request of Dr. Bonar, "Jesus of Nazareth passeth by"—a hymn greatly blessed in past missions to Scotland—and Dr. Bonar closed the memorable gathering with prayer.

Among the new hymns sung in the course of the evening was a stirring one by Mr. James McGranaham, "Preach the Gospel"; words and music will be found on another page.

So much of our space is taken up with a report of the Glasgow Conference that we do not in this issue give any detailed notice of the meetings held during the past week by Messrs. Moody and Sankey, Mr. McNeill, and others. They have been busy, however, and have been seeing fruit of their labours. After closing the western campaign at Dumbarton, Helensburgh, and Alexandria, Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey began on Sabbath a week's work in the Lothian district. Mr. McNeill having closed at Paisley, is now following up at Dumbarton. His coming mission in Glasgow will be held at Newsome's Circus, and not at the East-end Exhibition building. This will accommodate some four thousand or five thousand people, and is much more centrally situated. At Carrubber's Close, Edinburgh, noon meeting, on Monday, Mr. Sankey sang, and told of the blessing that had been given the previous day at the Bathgate meetings held by Mr. Moody and himself.

Professor Simpson reported a winter session of blessing in the students' meetings held on Sabbath evenings by Professor Drummond. He related an extremely interesting fact. A young American minister, who had been studying lately in Edinburgh, felt so deeply concerned for the spiritual welfare of one or two students he had met there, that he came over the Atlantic for the winter solely with the view of influencing these friends, especially one who held sceptical views. At the closing students' meeting for the session on Sabbath evening last, this young minister was present with his quondam sceptical friend who has been led to decision for Christ, and sat down at the Lord's Table in the Oldfellows' Hall, with several hundred other students who have attended Professor Drummond's meetings. The Professor gave a simple earnest, and powerful valedictory address, and at the Communion service helpful addresses were given by Principal Rainy and Rev. John Smith, of Broughton-place Church.

Medical Missions.

AN EDINBURGH JUBILEE.

Fifty years have passed away since the founding of the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society, and the jubilee has just been fittingly celebrated. The first of the series of meetings was one specially for medical students, and was held in the Free Assembly Hall on Saturday evening. There was a large, brilliant assemblage. The area of the hall was reserved for the students, who turned out in large numbers, and proved to be as mercurial in temperament as young "medicos" generally are. Doubtless a principal attraction was the presence and speech of Archdeacon Farrar, who came down from London specially to advocate the great cause of the twofold Gospel of healing for body and soul.

Professor Simpson presided, and briefly introduced the business of the evening. In speaking of the vastness of the work to be done, he expressed a hope that the young friends before him would rise to the height of their responsibility, and would "take off their coats to the work." A very able, graphic, and intensely interesting address was given by Dr. Henry Martyn Clark. He described the actual work of a medical missionary, from his own experience in India, proving up to the hilt that as a real evangelistic agency among a heathen people a medical mission is unsurpassable. Some of the facts he related as to the way in which prejudice and opposition had been overcome through the exercise of the healing art were very striking, and altogether his speech was a splendid plea for the special work of the Society.

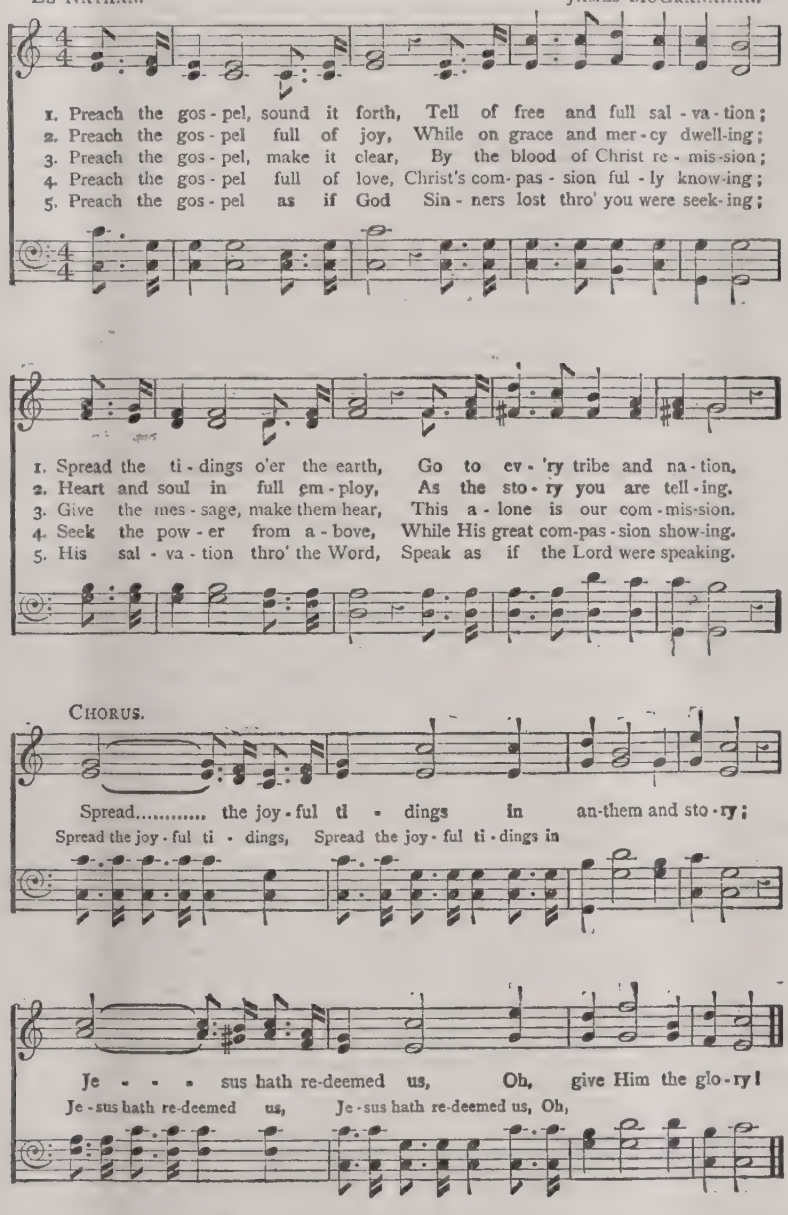
He was followed by Archdeacon Farrar, who kept the audience spellbound as he enlarged, in elegant and eloquent language, on the extent to which the pioneer missionary work of the world had been successfully accomplished by young men, often at the cost of much suffering and self-sacrifice. He made brief and rapid mention of the noble achievements of devoted men in days past and present—men who gave themselves to the service of Christ and humanity while the dew of youth was yet upon them, and who had accomplished great things, though in many cases at the price of much self-denial, and in some instances at the cost of life itself. Then there came a powerful plea for a like devotion from the Christian youth of to-day founded largely on the peculiar responsibility which Great Britain bears in its relation to heathen countries, and on the heavy debt which it had contracted through the misdeeds of many of its sons, who have been missionaries of evil and not of good. The Archdeacon's peroration was most thrilling and weighty. He bowed his head, he said, and blushed for very shame, when he thought how there had gone from this, as from other European lands, the kidnapper, the man-stealer, the drink-seller, who had heaped stumbling-blocks before the inoffending childhood of the world. What we have to do in regard to the heathen nations is not the mere granting of a boon out of our plenty, but rather the imperfect payment of a heavy obligation, and the tardy reparation for an intolerable wrong.

The effect of Dr. Farrar's appeal was heightened by the singing of Miss Darling, who rendered with much feeling and due emphasis Miss Sarah Stock's new missionary hymn, of which the following is the first stanza:—

A cry as of pain, again and again,
Has come o'er the desert and wide-spreading main;
A cry from the lands that in darkness are lying,
A cry from the hearts that in sorrow are sighing;
It comes unto me; it comes unto thee;
Oh, what shall the answer be?

Mrs. Bishop, the well-known traveller, was the next speaker, and nothing could have been heartier than the testimony she bore to the value of medical missions as she had seen them working in many lands. The greater part of Mrs. Bishop's remarks took the form of practical counsels to those students who were intending to enter on missionary work. These counsels were full of sound wisdom and spiritual force. She exhorted intending missionaries to the exercise of great care in preserving the keen edge of spiritual life, and conserving enthusiasm in the time of preparatory study. She also gave some very plain but not unneeded advice on the question of marriage, and the importance of having a life companion who is in full sympathy with missionary work. Mrs. Bishop's address ought to be published in pamphlet form, and distributed widely among all intending missionaries, medical and otherwise.

There was only time left for a very short address by Professor Drummond. The greatest fact in history to-day, he said, is that the kingdom of God is advancing in the world; and Christian young men are coming to see that their lives can be spent in no better way than in giving their little all to the direct furtherance of God's purposes. As a minor traveller through some parts of the world, he cordially confirmed Mrs. Bishop's estimate of the worth of medical missions. He had visited these missions in some very remote places, and he declared that they were doing good, and nothing but good.



Archdeacon Farrar's sermon in the United Presbyterian Synod Hall on Sabbath afternoon, drew together an immense congregation, and thousands, it is said, were unable to get in. The preacher took a very comprehensive survey of the present aspect of the world religiously, and dwelt emphatically on the solemn obligation that rests on Great Britain for furthering the evangelisation of those who dwell in heathen or semi-heathen darkness. Towards the close of his splendid discourse, he drew a graphic and scathing picture of the wrongs that European nations had inflicted on the heathen in different lands, in order to their own self-aggrandisement, and regardless of the devastation they had caused to the souls and the bodies of their fellow-men. He closed with an earnest appeal for support to the Edinburgh Medical Mission, and its operations at home and abroad.

A large public meeting was also held on Monday evening.

Preach the Gospel.

The Constantinople Rest.

The new report is accompanied by the following letter from Miss Kool, one of the managers of this Institution:—"For over seven years Miss Armytage has been engaged in the Lord's work among the sailors who visit Constantinople. The Lord has given us his blessing and has set his seal of approval to it; precious souls have been gathered into the fold, and many a seaman looks back to the Rest as his spiritual birthplace. The work is quite unsectarian, and depends entirely on the free-will offerings of the Lord's people. The strictest economy is observed in carrying it on, the expenditure last year amounting to only £250. The funds just now are very low; indeed, we are in debt."

The grateful acknowledgments of those who have come to know the Rest overflow with thankfulness. One says: "How I love this place, and thank God for bringing me here. It was all his doing; I shall never forget it as long as I live." Another said he had thrown all his novels overboard, as he did not want them now. A young German said, "I never knew what happiness was till I came to Jesus. It has changed my life, and I only wish all my companions knew it too." The wife of a Roman Catholic wrote saying she would thank God to her dying day for the good her husband had received, and for the Holy Book he had brought her. "Surely," she says, "there never was such a book in all the world, and I will read it every day." Over six hundred new members have been added to the temperance roll during the year, organisations have been formed in Russia and Prussia, and many have also joined the Bible Union.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, MARCH 20.—2 PETER III.

As it was in the Days of Noah (1-7).—"This is now, beloved, the second epistle I write unto you" (R.V.). 2. Note that the apostles are put on the level of the prophets as being the medium of the voice of God, and also note (R.V.) "the commandment of the Lord and Saviour through your Apostles," from which we gather that the Master gave commandments from Heaven as of old on earth (Acts i. 2). 3. How often unholy desire warps our judgment. 4. The permanence of natural law is a stumbling block to the reception of the truth of Christ's coming, unless we remember that it has not always been permanent, as when the Deluge broke in upon the world of men. It is not true that things have always continued as they were from the Creation, else Noah had never built the ark. 5. There is a wilful forgetting. It is convenient to forget some things. "Compacted out of water and amidst water." This may mean, which is a geological truth, that water had much to do in moulding the shape of the physical world. 7. What the Word of God did in commanding the waters of the Flood, it can do again in loosing the fires from their leash. "The heavens and the earth have been stored with fire" (R.V.) is remarkably corroborated by physical science, which describes a planet as a crust solidifying over fire.

The Coming of the Day of God (8-13).—God can do in one day the work of a thousand years, and a thousand years being as one day, it was only in the morning of yesterday that Jesus died. It is not long ago. 9. The delay of judgment means, not indifference to sin, but yearning love over sinners. 10. The universe shall pass through a baptism of fire, from which it shall emerge pure and beautiful. 11. Conversation, i.e., "living" (R.V.). 12. Hastening, i.e., "earnestly desiring." Some render it "hastening the coming of the day of God," as though believers are able to bring it nearer by their longing and devotion. 13. The promises are scattered through the Bible, and specially in the Prophets (Isa. lxv., lxvi.).

Be Watchful (14-18).—The coming is certain, but not the time. The uncertainty should lead to a holy living (Matt xxiv. 43). Blameless now, faultless presently. 15. How lovely to find that Peter speaks of Paul as a beloved brother, in spite of Gal. ii. 14. We can write according to the wisdom given. Much depends on our use of Scripture, either to salvation or destruction. 17. Forewarned is forearmed. 18. "Grow in the grace and knowledge" (R.V.). All is ensphered in Christ.

The Epistles of JOHN.

These three exquisite writings, so full of love and truth and obedience, are the worthy product of the disciple whom Jesus loved, and were probably written by him from Ephesus, at a time when Gnostic and other heresies began to blight the early promise of the Church. His name is not affixed, but in his spirit and style we detect the Apostle of love. There are close analogies to the Gospel that bears his name, both in the teaching and language, and this confirms the universal tradition of the past.

MONDAY, MARCH 21.—1 JOHN I.

The Word of Life (1-4).—Compare John i. 1-5. He was from the beginning, because He was before it. He was without beginning of days. The Apostle goes back on the reminiscences of his early manhood, and recalls the voice, the face, the touch of the Son of Man, who was, indeed, the Word of God. "Concerning the Word of Life." 2. The life of all living beings is in God, but it was hidden and secret until it took visible shape in Jesus. That word "manifest" implies the bodying forth of that which had been pre-existent. The day is not far distant when it shall again be manifested. 3. We cannot keep the good tidings to ourselves (2 Kings vii. 9). There is no fear that numbers can exhaust those stores; but the more that are led into the blessed fellowship, the more is the common gladness increased. Ah, how the glad circle of the redeemed has been swollen by the addition of countless myriads since these words were indicted! The Apostles' fellowship is rapidly filling the vast spaces of Heaven. Directly we are in fellowship with God, we are also with man. To touch God is to touch man. To have power with God is to have power with man. 4. There is some diversity whether it should be our or your. But it is much the same. Our joy bubbles over whether we give or take. The world says, Give and Take; the Gospel says, Take and Give. The word "fellowship" may be rendered "partnership." We are in real partnership with the Eternal God.

Walking in the Light (5-10).—The risen Christ sent messages to his apostles by the Holy Spirit, as He will also to us: only let us see to it that what we hear we tell. 5. The Divine nature is gentle in its manner and all pervasive, as light which, though it leaps the abyss and fills the immensity of space, is yet so tender that it does not injure the most delicate organism of the eye. Darkness means either sin or ignorance, neither of which can exist in God. 6. It is possible to say this to ourselves and to others, and yet to contradict it by our behaviour. But if we really are walking with God, the secret will soon betray itself, for in us also there will be no wilful darkness. 7. To walk in the light is to avoid known sin—to open our entire being to the indwelling and irradiation of the light, and to avoid turning to the right or left of any known or wilful sin. To walk in the light is to walk with God; to be led and governed and purified by the Holy Spirit; to yield the will to be energised and pervaded by his holy will in all things. In the best of us, at the best, there are things which we may be ignorant of, but which would deprive us of God's company, if it were not for the blood of Jesus, which is always cleansing us. 8. Distinguish between sin and sins (in the next verse), the former being the fact that by our very nature we must come short of God's glory; the latter referring to the outbreak of sin in our lives. 9. He is faithful and righteous, because He must keep to his promise, and honour the sacrifice of his Son. We are saved, not by sufferance, but as a matter of justice. 10. God's justice is no longer against, but for us. God's word in a man compels him to realise his sinnership, though it reveals to him the possibility of salvation from known sin.

TUESDAY, MARCH 22.—I JOHN II.

Our Advocate and Example (1-6).—By pondering these deep and blessed words we shall be kept from wilful sin. But if, through want of watchfulness and abiding in Jesus, we are betrayed into sin, the Advocate is always ready to intercede. "Advocate" is the same word as is used of the Holy Spirit in John xiv. 16; it is the Greek word Paraclete; in classical usage patron: he who pleads the cause of his client. How wonderful that the righteous Lord should intercede for us when we sin. 2. The death of Jesus is co-extensive with all the family of man, but all do not avail themselves of its benefits. 4. Obedience and not profession is the only sufficient test of character. 5. If you want to know God's love to the uttermost, obey to the uttermost. 6. "Even as He walked" should be our daily motto, our one question being what would Jesus do under these circumstances.

Love to the Brethren (7-11).—These teachings were not new; they were embedded in the heart of the Old Testament, but they were illumined by the life and character, the death and example of Jesus. 9. Any trace of hatred or jealousy veils our eyes to the beauty of the Gospel, and to the true policy of life. Love to the brethren is a condition of the clear shining of the light of God.

Love not the World (12-17).—All believers are included in the designation "little children." Their sins are forgiven, and they know the Father. And there are two classes—the elder, who know God in the intimacy of years, the younger, who, strong not in their own strength, but in the word of God, have learnt the secret of victory over Satan. The talisman of victory is the indwelling of the word of God. 15. The world is the spirit of the age; or it may be defined as that system of things around us which is inconsistent with the love and nature of God. Only love can expel love. It may be defined also as the sum of all that is sensual, vain, and proud. 17. Not only do the things of the world pass away, but the power to enjoy them, "the lust thereof." Let us be nailed to the will of God. To obey is the secret of stability, and abiding influence on men.

The Last Time (18-29).—"As ye heard that antichrist cometh" (R.V.). The age may be regarded as a book divided into chapters, and as each chapter closes there is a last time. But ere long we shall come to the last line of the last chapter. Each last time has had its anti-christs, described as denying the fundamentals of our faith, though once nominal disciples. 20. "Unction" is anointing (2 Cor. i. 21, 22). These anointings occur perpetually through life, if we seek them. The anointed know by a holy intuition. 21. Though we know the truth, a brother's voice confirms us. 23. This verse answers the difficulty of those who lament because the Lord Jesus is more real to them in prayer, &c., than the Father. But in Him they have the Father. 24. When the Word of God abides in us we abide in God, and enter on the deeper enjoyment of eternal life. 27. God's Holy Spirit comes to abide. God only can teach us how to live the life of abiding fellowship. 28. He was manifested (iii. 5), He shall be manifested (here, R.V.). We can never be ashamed if only we live in abiding fellowship with Jesus; and the joy of seeing Him is the only addition to the blessedness which is within our reach now.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23.—1 JOHN III.

The Children of God (1-10).—We are not only called sons, but "such we are" (R.V.). Only infinite love could ever have availed to do such a miracle as this. The more we resemble our elder brother, the less will the world think of us. 2. The possibilities to which the germ of sonship is to unfold are beyond the reach of our wildest dreams to conceive. One thing at least is sure, we shall be like Him. We must be like Him, or we could not see Him; if once we see Him, we shall be like Him. Look and be like (2 Cor.. iii. 18). 3. "This hope set on him" (R.V.). Through this link of union, transforming grace flows into the believer. Attached to Christ, he is detached from the world. 4. "Sin is lawlessness" (R.V.). Three arguments against wilful sin: it is a violation of God's law; it is directly contrary to the work and character of Christ; it is a belying of our faith. 6. "Sinneth not," as long as we are living in abiding fellowship with Jesus by the Holy Ghost, we are delivered from known sin. "Whosoever sinneth," i.e., as the rule and practice of life, indulging in known and presumptuous sin. 8. There are two classes of men, those who permit and practise sin, whatever their protestations to the contrary, their parentage is obviously of the Devil; and those who are born of God, and who cannot accept the supremacy of sin as the law of their existence. The latter cannot be happy and content whilst indulging in it or being overcome by it. The sow and the sheep fall into the same morass, but the former wallows in it, the latter leaps out and bleats piteously till clean. 10. Rightness to God involves rightness to man, i.e., love.

Love in Deed and in Truth (11-24).—To be destitute of love to the brethren is to be in the same category as Satan and Cain, and the world of the ungodly, and to be destitute of the life of God. 14. With some much-tried souls, doubtful of their acceptance, this verse is peculiarly precious, because it gives a sure sign of faith and acceptance with God. (15. Matt. v. 22-32.) 16. We are not to wait to feel love. We must do the deeds which love prompts, and we shall find that love will grow up almost invisibly in our hearts. 17. There is to be no limit to our willingness or endeavour to help our fellow believers but that imposed by our circumstances. 19. As we review these deeds we shall become conscious that they could not have emanated from ourselves, and shall trace them to a source higher than ourselves, in God; thus we shall assure our heart before Him "whereinsoever our heart condemn us" (R.V.). 22. There are two conditions of all successful prayer; first, we must keep his commandments; second, we must please Him. Then we shall only ask what is in his mind to bestow, and we shall know that we receive. 23. Faith in Christ and love to his saints are two sides of the same act. 24. Oh, blessed fruit of obedience! The interlocking of fellowship between Christ and us; and the evidence of that fellowship appears in the ever new reception of the Holy Spirit.

THURSDAY, MARCH 24.—1 JOHN IV.

Prove the Spirits (1-6).—Religious teachers must not be taken without anxious and prayerful sifting (1 Thess. v. 21; 1 Cor. xii. 10). 2. The Pre-existence, Incarnation, and Messiahship of Jesus are contained in this testimony. 3. "Every spirit which confesseth not Jesus" (R.V.). This spirit was never so prevalent as to-day. It is in the air. 4. This is the secret of victory, when the stronger than the strong man is within; little children can be overcomers then. 5. We should be in great fear, when our teachings are palatable to worldly men, lest they should be of the world, and prompted by the spirit of error. 6. Those who know God detect a kindred spirit in those who speak from Him.

God is Love (7-21).—If you do not feel love, go on doing deeds of unselfish kindness. Since you are a child of God, you must partake of your Father's nature, and there must be, therefore, within you the power of loving as He loves (Matt. v. 48); only we must give it scope. 8. The more we act love, the more we shall understand it, and the deeper will be our insight into the nature of God. We know God, not by the intellect, but by the heart, i.e., by the intuitive knowledge of sympathy. 9. Love gives. God has loved us better than He has loved Himself. 10. As God's love did not originate in our love, so it is maintained unaffected by our sinful changes; and the one aim of his love is to set us free from the condemnation of the power of sin, so that we may partake of real blessedness in fellowship with Himself. "Propitiation" is borrowed from the mercy-seat or propitiatory which covered the Ark (Rom. iii. 25). 12. Love to each other makes the unseen God real; nay, the loving heart is as conscious of Him as it is of its life. The more we love, the more we receive of his love, till that love brims up to the perfect measure of our capacity to receive it. 13. The indwelling of God is attested by the possession of the Spirit of God. He indwells by his Spirit. 14. This was the burden of the apostles' testimony. They were eye-witnesses. 15. Three tests of this reciprocal indwelling are given in this epistle: Obedience, iii. 24; His Spirit, v. 13; Confession, here. 16. We know God by realising Him as within us. Love is his nature; all pure love emanates from Him; to love is to be God-possessed; we thus know Him, and become able to believe in his character and his dealings whatever they may involve. 17. How can we fear the judgment, when we and Jesus are linked in the tenderest love! Besides, as He is before the throne, accepted and beloved and glorified, so, by virtue of our union with Him, are we, though still limited to earth. 18. Love begets the fear of the child that dreads to cause grief, but it casts out the fear of the slave. 19. At the best our love is only our answer and echo to his. We catch his love on the mirror of our nature, and flash it back to Him. 20. How many are self-deceived; communicants, members of churches, &c., and yet living at variance with fellow-Christians, and, therefore, not only destitute of the new nature, which is love, but living in direct opposition to the Divine command.

Faith in Jesus the Son of God (1-12).—Faith and the New Birth are two sides of the same act (John i. 12). If a man truly loves God he will inevitably accept Christ when presented to him. 2. Give yourselves up to God, and to obey Him, and love will arise naturally to all beside, as fountains fed from the hills arise in the valleys. If we love God we love God in our brethren. 3. The test of love is to obey, and as we obey we love. All God's commands are enablings, and therefore they are not too heavy to be borne. Besides, it is easy to obey when we are in the line of his will and purpose. 4. Those who are one with Jesus in living union participate in his victory (John xvi. 33). 5. No one else can. 6. There is a reference here to a sight which greatly impressed the beloved Apostle (John xix. 34). This double issue indicated a ruptured, broken heart. Water as indicating ceremonial ablutions, could not avail. Blood alone can atone for and expurgate sin. 7-8. The best MSS. omit the clause which names the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, as an interpolation of later date (See R. V.). 9. In the descent of the dove at his baptism, in the voice that spoke from the Mount of Transfiguration, and in his resurrection from the dead, God has borne witness to his Son. 10. God also gives testimony to Jesus by the convictions which He produces in each believer. 11. There is no eternal life apart from the Lord Jesus. To reject Him is to reject it; to possess Him is to possess its germ at least, though it is destined to flower out into endless beauty.

That Ye May Know (13-21).—The accent of this Epistle is the conviction of certainty. The word "know" rings through it like a refrain. It is a knowledge which any one of us may possess, because it originates in the pure heart. 13. "These things have I written unto you, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, even unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God" (R.V.). 14. True and successful prayer is the reflection cast in our hearts of the will of God. We learn our Father's will, and forthwith turn it into supplication. To such prayers the conviction is borne in on us, that we have the answer, though it may have to lie in the hands of God till the moment comes when it will be best for us to receive it. 16. For all, save those who sin unto death, we may obtain eternal life. 17. The sin unto death is surely the same as that against the Holy Ghost, which is not forgiven, because it does not seek forgiveness. 18. Ch. iii. 9. "Keepeth Him," i.e., Jesus, who is the only-begotten, keeps his child. His invisible presence lies between the evil one and the believer. 19. We know three things: that we are of God, else why so great a difference between us and the world? that the Son of God is come, and has given us spiritual insight; and that we both know and are in living union with Jesus Christ. 21. An idol is all that draws away our love and life from the one true and sufficient object of trust.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26.—2 JOHN.

A Model Letter.—1. The name of this Christian lady seems to have been Kyria. The elder is the Apostle John, and refers either to his office in the church, or to the fact that he was the only survivor of the apostolic band. Eight of the verses have already been considered in the first epistle. Love and truth are one. And the emphatic reference to truth in the earlier verses indicates that the Apostle's love was not only founded in truth, but was elicited for the truth's sake. 2. The truth shall be in us, and with us for ever, because Jesus is the Truth, and nought can sever us from Him. 3. Where truth is, there must be grace, mercy, and peace. 4. Having encountered some of her children, the Apostle congratulates their mother on their godly walk. 5. We may still receive commandments from the Father. 6. To walk in those commands is the true evidence of love. There has never been a variation in this teaching from the time of Christ's ministry (John xiv.). 7. Love must not lessen our antagonism to those who teach false doctrine. 8. This may be read, "Look, that ye lose not the things ye have earned, but may receive a full reward." Probably we make too little of the rewards which await all faithful servants of Christ. 9. 1 John ii. 23. 10. The believers in those days were bidden to keep clear of false doctrine and teachers. Are we careful enough to maintain the lines of demarcation? 12. If this is true of earthly reunions, what will not the reunion of Heaven be!

WELCOME HOME, RATCLIFF HIGHWAY.—The steady growth in strength and power of the work among sailors and of the "Christian Life Boat Crew" was forcibly seen throughout the proceedings of the last muster at the Welcome Home, Ratcliff-highway. Deputations from various branches gave most encouraging accounts of the progress. Extracts from letters were read, among others from one received from Louisa, Lady Ashburton. Practical addresses were given by Messrs. Charles Pinhorn, James Sprunt, Patterson (of the Gospel Union), and, as usual, many of the seafaring men gave stirring testimonies. Miss Child gave the text for the month, "Blessed are they that dwell in thy house; they will be still praising thee" (Psalm lxxxiv. 4), and asked the friends to join in praise for blessing on the work.

International S. S. Lessons.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, MAR. 27.

The Blessings of the Gospel.—Isa. xl. 1-11.

Golden Text: Verse 5.

With this chapter the second part of Isaiah's prophecy begins. Without any valid evidence the authorship of chapters xl. to lxvi. has been attributed to some person or persons unknown. As the New Testament quotes from these chapters, and describes the words as "spoken by Esaias the prophet" (Matt. iii. 3; xii. 17-19), there seems to us to be good reason for accepting the newer theory. The division of the twenty-seven chapters into three equal parts, each of which is closed in similar language (see xlviii., lvii.) indicates that the whole prophecy is one.

Chapter xxxix. closes with a prediction of the Babylonish captivity. This lesson assumes the fulfilment of that prediction, and foretells the deliverance from Babylon, and the greater deliverance under the Messiah, of which that was only a type. This prologue contains four herald voices, which give the whole course of Israel's redemption.

1, 2.—The first voice is that of God, speaking through his prophet. The scene is laid in Babylon, whither Isaiah, in imagination, transports himself, near to the time when the captivity is to close. "My people, your God," upon this covenant relationship the work of deliverance is grounded. Though they have been the cruel jest of the heathen (Psa. cxxxvii.), God does not disown them. The voice speaks first "to the heart of Jerusalem" (see margin). It is the wooing of love. The Deliverer must be admitted before the deliverance can be known. The God of consolation can alone minister heart comfort when his people are in distress. Cry unto her. The tone of voice changes. It is no longer a whisper of love, but now an exultant call. Her warfare is accomplished, &c. The predicted years of her captivity are drawing to a close, and her deliverance is at hand. The language had only a limited application to the Jews then (Lev. xxvi. 41-43). It becomes much more significant in the light of New Testament teaching. It is not by our suffering for sin, but by the greater sufferings of Jesus, the Sinbearer (liii. 5, 6), that sin is amply expiated. This is the only solid basis for a proclamation of comfort to the guilty and the oppressed.

3-5. The second voice describes the beginning of the actual work of deliverance which faith has already received. (See Matt. iii. 3.) John preached in a literal wilderness; but a moral wilderness and a moral desert are intended, in which the way of the coming Deliverer is prepared. "Eastern monarchs send heralds before them in a journey, to clear away obstacles, make causeways over valleys, and level hills." Such was John's work as the herald of Jesus. His work is still needed. The knowledge of sin, true repentance, humbling of pride—these are necessary preparations for the incoming of the Saviour. It is just the want of such experiences that hinders many from receiving Christ. Mary's song teaches us the same lesson (Luke i. 52, 53). All flesh shall see, &c. God's deliverance shall be as manifest to the nations as the captivity of his people had been. No salvation is worthy of the name which does not make a change which the world can see.

6-8. The aim of the third voice is to assert the certain fulfilment of all that the Word of God has spoken. It is better to regard the description of the frailty of men as the complaint of the prophet. What call could be of any service to a people who were so rapidly passing away, and who could now boast no great leader to inspire them with courage? The answer comes back from the Lord Himself. Everything and everybody else may fail, but one thing abides secure and eternal. In spite of every difficulty, and even of seeming impossibility, the Word of our God shall stand for ever. Expect its fulfilment when circumstances seem to contradict it.

9-11. This fourth voice calls Jerusalem to the work of heralding to others the good news of salvation. It is ever the Divine method, to use those who have been saved as Gospel messengers. The Spirit and the Bride, and he that heareth, must say Come (Rev. xxii. 17). Boldness, distinctness, and strength must characterise the Gospel proclamation. The message directs, not to the messenger, but to God (compare Jno. i. 29). God is announced, first, as delivering his people (10). It is a work of power requiring his "strong hand," and his own "arm" of might. The cross shows us the passive side of his atoning work; but to endure it required all his strength. The hymn puts it, He > Bore all incarnate God could bear,

> With strength enough and none to spare.

The reward before Him, which enabled Him to endure, was that of possessing his saved people (Heb. xii. 2). Next, God appears as shepherding his people (11). He is as wise and watchful and tender, in caring for those whom He has delivered as He was strong to deliver them. Note how discriminating He is. They are a "flock"; but the individual is not lost among the many. The weakest and the youngest receive the more special and tender care. In a Chinese Christian family, the youngest of three children asked to be baptized, and was told that he was too young. To this he replied, "Jesus has promised to carry the lambs in his arms. As I am only a little boy, it will be easier for Jesus to carry me."

Personalia.

Rev. G. Pittendrigh, of the Madras Christian College, is expected shortly in Scotland—home on a brief furlough.

Rev. John Thomas, D.D., of Liverpool, is, we are glad to hear, progressing favourably after his serious illness.

Bishop Marsden has been appointed by the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol to assist in the work of the diocese.

Rev. J. C. Carlile, of Bermondsey, was, we regret to learn, injured on Sunday by an explosion of gas at his residence, being burned on hands and face.

Rev. R. W. Stewart, a well-known advocate of the C.M.S. and enthusiastic missionary speaker, is to accompany Mr. Eugene Stock to Australia.

Mr. A. H. Baynes has been asked by the Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society to visit the mission stations in Italy, after the May anniversaries, some fresh arrangements having become necessary.

The Hon. and Rev. W. Talbot Rice has been appointed to the important vicarage of Great Yarmouth. The nomination will be received with thankfulness by many, as that of an earnest young Evangelical.

Mr. George C. Needham, who is still busy in evangelising services, besides leading in Bible-readings and Bible-schools, wishes it to be known that his new address is 1490, North 55th-street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Rev. Newman Hall, B.A., LL.B., has received the degree of D.D. from the University of Edinburgh. Years ago, we believe, he received degrees from several American Universities, but has never attached them to his name.

Mr. W. Pierce, of New Court Chapel, speaking on Sunday week on ecclesiastical titles, requested his congregation not to address him by the title "Reverend," which he had always considered out of harmony with the spirit and example of the New Testament.

Mr. T. Shuldham Henry has, we are glad to hear, so far recovered from the effects of his attack of influenza as to be able to resume work. He hopes to be at Clapton Hall next month, and at St. George's Hall in May, but asks prayer for full restoration.

Rev. C. A. Berry has resumed his ministry at Wolverhampton after an absence of nearly twelve months. He told his people, in his first sermon, that while out of the church he has not been out of service; for wherever he had gone he had sought to witness for Christ individually.

Rev. W. E. Robbins, M.A., of Bombay, who accompanied Mr. Dyer on his anti-opium mission at Pekin, is in England, and intends remaining here about a month. He is open to address anti-opium meetings. Letters to him may be addressed care of Mr. A. S. Dyer, 31, Paternoster-square, E.C.

Rev. Dr. Elmslie, with his wife and a young lady engaged to be married to Dr. Fotheringham, sail on Saturday from Southampton for Nyasa-land, after furlough. Dr. Elmslie has been detained for six weeks to confer with Rev. Dr. Laws and the Livingstonia Committee, on matters of importance.

Rev. F. B. Meyer has, we understand, given notice of his intention to move, in the approaching assembly of the Baptist Union, "That this Union views with great disfavour the interchange of pulpits on the part of the ministers of any of its associated churches with Unitarians, as tending to impair its testimony to the Gospel."

Rev. John Brown, D.D., of Bedford, with Mr. T. W. Harrison, of Hanley, has been appointed to represent the Congregational Union at the Triennial Council of the Churches in the United States, to be held at Minneapolis next October. Dr. Brown, who is now suffering from a throat complaint, left England last week for a brief rest at Mentone.

Canon Paget (who is just completing his eightieth year) intimated to the congregation at Welton on Sunday week that, in consequence of the infirmities of advanced age, which disable him from the discharge of important duties, he had decided to resign the living which he had held for exactly forty-seven years, and that his resignation would take legal effect at the beginning of May.

Rev. J. Stephen Barrass, well known as the Secretary of the Church of England Young Men's Society, has been appointed to St. Michael, Bassishaw, vacant by the death of Canon M'Caul. Mr. Barrass has for some three or four years past visited regularly the young men in the City warehouses, conducting services and meetings amongst them, and generally endeavouring to promote their welfare. His appointment to a church in the heart of the City will, it is believed, give a strong impetus to this work.

COREA.—The Southern Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has decided to open a mission in Corea, and two members of Union Seminary, Va., have been commissioned to commence it. They will sail probably in August.

Letters to the Editor.

A QUESTION OF CONSCIENCE.

Sir,—In September last I read with much interest a letter you published on "Railway Investments," and I have been disappointed that there has been no correspondence on the subject. Being concerned in the matter myself, I shall be very glad if some of your readers will give their opinion as to whether a Christian ought to invest money in railway shares or not. I believe there is no Company that does not run some trains on Sundays. In what may a Christian invest and have a conscience "void of offence"?—Yours faithfully, Inquirer.

MISSIONARY PROXIES.

Dear Sir,—In connection with the Rev. J. Heywood Horsburgh's work in Mid-China there lies in the bank nearly £300, given for the very purpose of supporting proxies. Where are the men? Where are the women? The fifty-four undergraduates at Cambridge who have signed the covenant which expresses willingness to go, are not ready yet. "One million in China die every month," and the Master says, "Go out quickly."

Those willing to join Mr. Horsburgh in the "Mid-China Interior Evangelistic Mission," should apply at once to Rev. H. E. Wigram, Church Missionary Society, Salisbury-square.—I remain, yours truly,

A. Christy Wilson, M.D.

89, Hall-gate, Doncaster.

A QUESTION FOR CHRISTIAN FARMERS.

Dear Sir,—I am a farmer, but for many years have not been able conscientiously to grow barley for malting purposes. The Bible says: "Touch not the unclean thing." Now beer must be unclean to those who are teetotalers on principle; in which case, can we consistently make profit by producing any part of it? I think not.

I grow oats in place of barley, and think I don't lose much; but if I do, I certainly regain all in a clear conscience. I have seen quite enough of drunkenness produced by real home-brewed beer, which certainly was innocent of "brewer's drugs" or any other drugs. I have teetotal neighbours who do grow barley, but I frequently hear them ridiculed by non-teetotalers as inconsistent, so that their influence goes for very little on our side the question. Northamptonshire.

Sir,—It is with regret that I read the letter of "M. J. S." in your last week's issue, and I grieve that, with his evident knowledge of Scripture, he has not learned what Paul wrote, "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak." I admit at once that there is no distinct command, "Thou shalt be an abstainer;" but, considering the awful sin of drunkenness, I grieve that a professing Christian can be found to lift up his voice in defence of drinking habits. Let us act in the spirit of our Master, who considered not Himself.

Upon the question as to whether Christian farmers should grow barley for malting purposes, perhaps my own experience may be useful. Some years ago I dealt, to some extent, in malting-barley, and when reproached with inconsistency, and reminded that I was a tectotaler and a Christian, I always replied that I considered it "plundering the Phillistines." This, however, did not quite set my conscience at rest, and before long I was in a crowded meeting publicly challenged with inconsistency. This was too much, and I felt that at once the question must be settled, and I then stated, in reply to my questioner (a publican), that I would offer no more barley for malting purposes. I was told on all sides that I was a fool, except by those whose opinion I most valued.

I now decline all offers of malting barley, and devote my attention to other grain; and whilst, of course, it sometimes involves an apparent loss, I can thankfully say the Lord has prospered me in my business. To carry on a successful business in malting barley it is necessary to be on good terms with brewers and their agents, and my experience is that the fewer relations we have with such men the better for our spiritual happiness.—Yours truly,

Herts. Corn Merchant.

Romish Persecution in Spain.

We have had a Gospel work going forward at Criptana, La Mancha, for nearly three years. Soon after commencing our labours there, there was in one of the rooms an image, which we broke up and burnt. The owner, backed up by the priests and fanatics, began a lawsuit, which has dragged on slowly, and ended at Madrid, where it has been decided against us; and for this and other law expenses a sum of £39 is demanded.

Though the matter is unpleasant, yet I feel thankful for the testimony thus given for the Gospel and against idolatry and Romish image-worship. I trust that kind friends will help us with funds towards this expense.—Yours truly,

3, Endsleigh-Gardens, N.W. W. Greene.

Evangelistic Notes.

M. Le Quere has now four salles in which the Mission among Bretons is carried on at Havre.

Hythe, Kent.—Mr. Rowland Sturt has just concluded a ten days' mission here, with good gatherings and much interest.

March. — Much spiritual benefit has been effected as a result of a special mission which Gipsy and Mrs. Smith have conducted here in connection with the Railway Mission.

Soham.—A ten-days' evangelistic mission has been held here. All the meetings have been instructive and profitable to many, and it is hoped that the greatest good will result.

Rev. T. Crocker has just finished a very successful eight days' mission in connection with the Gospel Hall, Lower Weston, Bath. The large hall was nearly full each evening, and many received blessing.

Mr. M. Kennedy, of Southport, concluded a successful mission on Thursday week at Culcheth, near Manchester. The meetings were well attended, and sinners professed to be converted each evening.

Gatley.—Mr. J. Albinson and Rev. J. W. Paull have conducted a special mission in this place, and as a result thirty-eight new members have been added to the church. The mission is being continued by local helpers.

Ireland.—A successful four weeks' series of Gospel services has been held at Corvalley Presbyterian Church by Mr. J. H. Crawford, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, and several interesting cases of conversion took place.

Irish Evangelization Society.—Messrs. Peatt and Crozier, of this Society, have just finished a successful series of meetings at Crossgar, co. Down. A large number professed conversion, backsliders were restored, and Christians blessed.

Salisbury.—Mr. Payne has just concluded a fortnight's mission here among railwaymen and others. The meetings have been characterised by much spiritual power. Many felt their lost condition and were obliged to cry to God for mercy. When Mr. Payne visited Salisbury four years since, many local preachers and young men received blessing, and four of these are in active mission work. On the Sunday concluding the mission, a number of railway-men and women assembled in the large market square, and testified to a large gathering, of God's saving and keeping power.

Major Cole has been labouring in the Gospel for seven weeks in Kansas City with somewhat remarkable results; it being stated that over one thousand have publicly testified to having found peace. As indicating the interest awakened, we may mention that nearly two hundred places of business were closed on certain days from ten to twelve to permit of the assistants attending the morning service. All classes have been moved, including mechanics, policemen, teachers, and merchants, also not a few gamblers and infidels. Mr. P. V. Tenness is travelling with Major Cole and singing the Gospel.

Rev. F. C. Spurr with Rev. F. B. Meyer will hold missions in Sidcup, March 26 to April 6; West Croydon (Rev. J. A. Spurgeon), April 9 to 20 (Good Friday all day); Camden-road Chapel, May 1 to 11.

THE LATE MR. SPURGEON.—The March issue of the Metropolitan Tabernacle Pulpit (5d.) contains the four special memorial sermons—all of them of the best, and each remarkably opportune to the experiences and condition of the great preacher. Many will be glad to possess this part, as well as the memorial number of the Sword and Trowel (3d.) which is amply illustrated, and replete with matter of deep and pathetic interest. Memories of Stambourne (1s.) Mr. Spurgeon's last-published work, the charms of which we have already spoken of, is now in its tenth thousand. Passmore and Alabaster.

THE JOLLY SAILOR.—This old public-house in the West India Dock-road, referred to in a recent issue, has now been bought by the British and Foreign Sailors' Society for a "Jolly Sailors' Rest," where, it is believed, by the ministry of Christian men and women, seamen will be made happy through "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." The widowed mother of the lost sailor who took Mr. Spurgeon £50 for the above society, generously paid the deposit, and so secured the old "Jolly Sailor," which, through the help of the Lord's stewards, will henceforth be turned to a better use than ever.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY MISSION TO CHOTA NAGPORE.—The second annual meeting of supporters was held on Wednesday evening in Trinity College, Rev. Dr. Gwynn, Regius Professor of Divinity, presiding. The report, read by Rev. H. B. Kennedy, B.D., stated that on December 18, five missionaries sailed from Gravesend, and arrived safely at Ranchi. Rev. J. H. Bernard reports the financial position of the Mission to be fairly satisfactory. Rev. F. C. Boyd, M.A., for ten years missionary, from Chota Nagpore, gave an interesting account of the work. He asked those present not to discourage young men who are willing to go out, as there is a great work to be done. Earnest addresses were also given by Dean Dickenson and Mr. Martin.

Among the Churches

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Another ritualistic clergyman has been appointed a Canon of Bristol Cathedral.

The Spring Conference of the Church Association was held last week at Yarmouth.

The parish church of St. Nicholas, Rochester, was, on Sunday week, partially destroyed by fire.

Rev. G. Collett, a thorough evangelical, has been appointed by the Simeon Trustees to Basildon, Berks.

Bishop Mitchinson, writing in The Church Times, contends firmly that "fasting communions" and "early celebrations" form no part of the Church's intention.

News has been received at Salisbury-square of the death at Saadani of Mr. J. H. Redman, who went out with Bishop Tucker at the close of last year. Mr. Redman was for some years secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Reading, and private secretary to Mr. Martin Hope Sutton.

Last year the congregation of St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, contributed in offertories to the work of the church not less a sum than £19,000. This exceeds all previous records, and the amount for the past decade reaches the extraordinary total of £161,559, of which nearly £11,000 was given to London hospitals.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. John Wills has entered on the pastoral charge of Hanover Chapel, Peckham.

It is said that by the will of the late Mr. Simpson, of Spalding, the L. M. S. receive £300.

The one-hundredth anniversary of the Kent Congregational Association will be held at Maidstone in April.

A vigorous effort made by the members of Clarendon Park Church, Leicester, to reduce the building debt by £1200, resulted in the subscription, within a week, of £1050.

At the meetings of the Somerset Congregational Union, held the week before last at Castle Cary, the special theme was "Christian Work Among the Masses," especially as regards villages.

An enthusiastic response has been made to the L. M. S. Forward Movement by the congregation of New Court Chapel, the offerings from the week of self-denial amounting to over £200.

The annual meeting of the men's Sunday-morning adult school, in connection with the Tabernacle Church, Sheffield, was held on Tuesday week. Encouraging reports of several branches of the work were given.

The annual Conference of the Lancashire Congregational Union was held on Wednesday week at Preston. The presidential address was delivered by Professor Wilkins, of Manchester, who touched upon the difficulties and aims of Congregationalism.

Rev. M. E. Smit has completed fourteen years' pastorate at Bridlington Quay. When he relinquished his profession as a lawyer in South Africa (writes a correspondent) his income was over £1200 a year, and he has served us faithfully now for fourteen years, refusing calls to other churches owing to our building debt, which, however, he has now succeeded in discharging by his strenuous efforts, except the cost of the site.

BAPTIST.

Rev. W. Stott has been invited to succeed Rev. T. Lardner at Battersea-park.

Rev. J. P. Clark, M.A., has undertaken the charge of the Gunnersbury Church for three months.

At the recent half-yearly meetings of the Midland Baptist Association, held in Birmingham, the amalgamation of the Particular and General churches was effected.

The Baptists, who in Launceston, Cornwall, have been conducting services for the last eleven years in the Oddfellows' Hall, have now started building a new chapel.

On Thursday, last week, 250 "drift" children were invited to a free soup supper at the chapel, High-street, Bow, after which Pastor Vanstone conducted a Gospel lantern service.

Rev. T. Lardner, having resigned the pastorate of Battersea-park Tabernacle, is open to engage in Christian work and preach as openings offer. Address 65, The Chase, Clapham, S.W.

Rev. C. Stanley, who for the last eighteen months has been engaged in evangelistic work at Westoe Hall, South Shields, has received an invitation to the pastorate of the church at Waterhouse.

A special meeting in connection with the centenary of the Baptist Missionary Society was held last week in Brockley-road Chapel, New-cross. Mr. A. H. Baynes gave an address on mission work, with special reference to the centenary celebration.

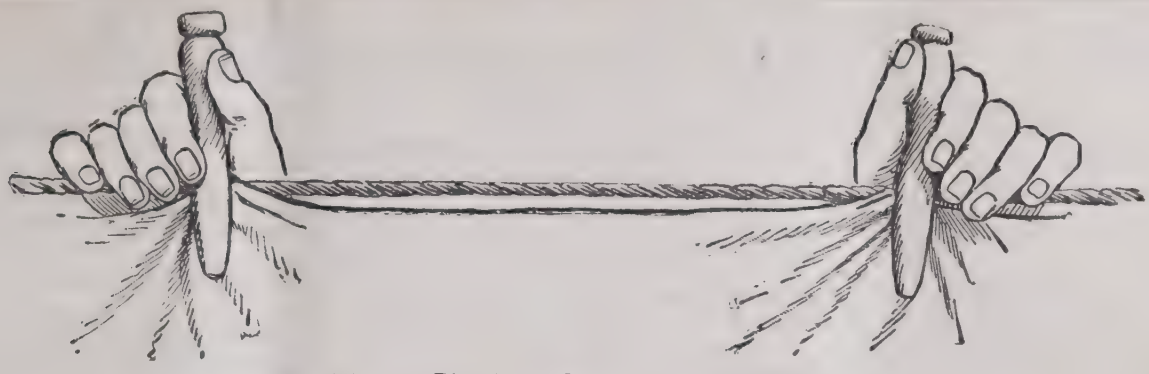
A number of young men connected with Graham-street Church, Birmingham, have commenced a mission in Camden-drive—a neglected locality. They have taken an old public-house, and fitted it up as a reading and coffee room. Bright services and meetings of a varied character are held each evening.

This being the centennial year, the Students' Association connected with Bristol Baptist College, have been making an effort to stimulate interest on the subject in the villages, and with this object a conference took place on Friday week at the Institution, Stokes Croft. Dr. Culross presided, and Dr. Glover gave an interesting address on mission work at the afternoon meeting. In the evening a public meeting was held at the college.

PRESBYTERIAN.

A fresh cause has been started by the Home Mission Board at Church-end, Finchley.

Rev. E. J. Dukes, of Bridgwater, has been laid aside with illness for several weeks at Durham, whither he had gone for a few days' holiday.



At the annual meeting of John Knox Church, Stepney, on Thursday week, addresses were delivered by Dr. Monro Gibson, Mr. H. M. Matheson, and Rev. J. T. Levens.

It is said that since the Disruption no Free Presbytery has grown to such an extent as that of Hamilton, owing to the increasing mining population, and the efforts put forth to meet their needs.

We hear that the trustees of the late Mr. George Sturge have forwarded another handsome gift of £2000 to the Foreign Mission Committee of the English Presbyterian Church, making £9000 in all.

Rev. Alfred Holborn, M.A., who some weeks ago announced his intention to retire from the pastorate of College Chapel, Bradford, on account of ill-health, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday week.

JUST A LINE

to tell you something worth knowing. SUNLIGHT SOAP will make your clothes clean and white. It will not injure the most delicate fabric. It will not shrink flannels and woollens.

It will not keep you at the washing-tub from early morn until night, but will enable you to do a large wash in half a day. No hard rubbing is required, and you, therefore, escape without the backache and sore knuckles incident to an old-fashioned wash-day. Give it a trial. One Tablet of will do more washing than two tablets of ordinary laundry soap.

☞ But BEWARE—Do not allow other soaps, said to be the same as SUNLIGHT SOAP, to be palmed off upon you. If you do, you must expect to be disappointed.

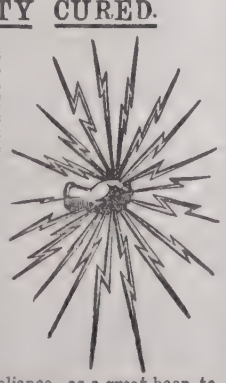
HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

GALVANIC AND FARADIC. BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.



SEEING IS BELIEVING!

CALL & SEE THE BELTS SCIENTIFICALLY TESTED.

It has Cured Thousands of Sufferers

Without the aid of poisonous drugs and quack nostrums. If any of our readers doubt the remarkable curative powers of this genuine and convenient appliance, we would ask them to carefully read the following letters, and write for our Book of Testimonials; or, better still, call, if possible, and carefully inspect the originals. They will, at the same time, be able to see the Belts scientifically tested, and have the various curative appliances fully explained to them.

DEBILITY CURED.

John Hablet, Esq., Norwood Hotel, West Norwood, writes:—"Some two years ago I purchased one of your Electropathic Belts, but at that time neglected to use it. Some three or four months ago, however, I had a languid, depressed feeling, and made up my mind to try it, and the result is I never felt better in my life. So much good has it done me that, a week or two ago, I purchased a Belt for my wife, who received great benefit from it. I recommend the appliance as a great boon to all who require new life put into them."

DR. ANDREW WILSON'S OPINION.

"The Medical Battery Co.'s Belt has been frequently recommended as a genuine electrical appliance which the public may purchase with safety and satisfaction. In these days of electrical quackery it is highly satisfactory to find such an enterprise for the development of electrical manufacture on a large scale so successfully carried out at their commodious premises (52, Oxford-street, London, W.)."

NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.

Mr. J. E. Taylor, 13, Sutton-street, Holloway Head, Birmingham, writes: "I have commenced wearing my new Electropathic Belt, and am much pleased with it. My previous one I wore daily for two years, during which time I travelled through America, British Columbia, Japan, China, East Indies, and South Africa, and as I have worn it when performing on the stage at night, it has had some rough usage at times, and, considering the intense heat of the climates I have been in, I think it has lasted wonderfully well. When I first began wearing the Electropathic Belt I was suffering from Renal Calculi, Nervous Exhaustion, and Dyspepsia. I took to it in sheer desperation, hoping that it might do me some good, but not having much faith in it, and in about three weeks' time I found that I could run upstairs; hitherto I had crawled up, holding on to the banisters. I then began to give it a fair trial. I gave up taking medicine of any description, and trusted entirely to my Belt, and now, at the age of 61, I am a strong, hearty man, suffering from neither ache nor pain, and able to digest or eat anything."

A BLESSING TO MEN.

The missionary contributions (it is announced) from the Sabbath-schools of the English Presbyterian Church for 1891 amount to £2210, being an increase of £340 on 1890. Of this, the sum of £2120 was voted to foreign missions.

On Sunday week Rev. Hugh McIntosh, of Brockley, visited his old church in Glasgow (London-road Free), preaching to large congregations, and lecturing on the following evening on "Typical Present-Day Churches." The visit proved a time of much blessing.

The death of Charles A. Aitken, Professor of Oriental Literature in Princeton Theological Seminary, who was a member of the American Committee for Old Testament Revision, is felt as the removal of a man of remarkable literary taste and ability, and one who always took a deep interest in the students.

The Town Hall Lantern Services, Gateshead, continue to afford the most gratifying evidences of the deep and sympathetic interest which they have aroused among the non-church-goers in the poorer parts of the town. On each of the past two or three Sabbath evenings, in spite of weather inclement enough to deter all but those genuinely interested in the services, the hall has been crowded as usual with an eager and attentive throng, not merely of listeners, but evidently of sincere, though perhaps unconventional, worshippers.

METHODIST.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse preached last week in Leeds to great gatherings.

A great Home Missionary meeting was held last week in Brunswick Chapel, Newcastle.

A united gathering of local preachers was held on March 3, in Nottingham, for mutual help and study.

Rev. Thomas Champness paid a visit last week to Nottingham, and held deeply interesting meetings.

The executors of the late Mr. Samuel Turnbull, out of the residue of his estate, have granted £1000 in aid of the Central Hall Mission, Manchester.

The Students' Missionary Union, in connection with the Primitive Methodist College, Manchester, is holding interesting meetings in the Central Hall.

The committee of the Children's Home having resolved to commemorate the election of its founder and principal, Rev. Dr. Bowman Stephenson, to the chair of the Wesleyan Conference, by raising a special fund of £10,000 for the purposes of the children's home, some wealthy Wesleyans have taken the matter up, and privately subscribed more than half the required amount before any appeal has been made to the Wesleyan body as a whole.

An "All-Day Convention" of great interest and profit was lately held at the Central Chapel, Hastings. For some time past the heavy debts on the chapels have weighed on the hearts of the ministers, and it was felt that, in making a special effort to reduce these by self-denial and sacrifice, there would be, not only a blessing received, but the way would be cleared, to a large extent, for aggressive work. After prayerful consideration it was decided to endeavour to reduce to one-half the amount of the existing debt, for which the sum of £4000 was necessary. At the close it was found £2600 had been given or promised.

A local preacher writes in reply to a question as to method and preparation:—"My plan has been as follows: To procure texts, my wants are made known to God, not so much by prayer upon the knees, but by inward yearnings that some portion of his Word may be laid upon my heart, and when it fastens itself there, I get my Bible, read the connections, search out references, and get Matthew Henry's Comments, then let my mind be fixed upon it as much as possible, asking for the help of the Holy Spirit, so that my heart may be inspired. Sermons I never write, notes I rarely use, but with a good confidence in God and his promises I go forth—and for some years I have been used signally in the work."

THE SALVATION ARMY.

General Booth is shortly about to visit Holland and Scandinavia.

A Servants' Home has been opened at 90, Ladbroke Grove-road, Notting-hill, with a registry office.

The growth of the Salvation Army Social Work may be inferred from the fact that no fewer than 382 officers are now exclusively devoted to this work.

The life of Mrs. Booth, on which her son-in-law has been engaged for six months, will be issued in the autumn. It will form a handsome book of three volumes.

The following is a pleasing evidence that spiritual work goes hand in hand with social efforts at reformation. The officer in charge of the Wharf says that forty-five out of his ninety men are saved, and that four fresh conversions are reported in the wood-cutting section at Old-street, and at the Prison Gate Home, "The Bridge," a large proportion of the inmates are professedly saved.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Friends' work extends in Mexico, a parcel of several acres having recently been secured for missionary buildings.

Owing to his opposition to the rum interest, Charles H. Edwards has been shot in Alaska. "As we mourn the murder of our friend, let us renew our opposition to this foe that has slain him."

The condition of Jamaica seems deplorable. Gilbert F. Farr nobly represents Iowa yearly meeting there, and has just been joined by Arthur Swift; but more help is much needed amid the "moral miasma."

Joseph Cosand, who has been so successful a worker in Japan, is obliged to return to America on account of failing health. Yet the work spreads, and one English and three Japanese Friends have opened a mission in Yokahama.

Very cheering accounts come to hand of a great revival in Carthage, Indiana. After 140 professed conversions, the meetings could not be closed, but were being continued. John H. Douglas had been engaged in the gracious work.

Appeals for help to build new meeting-houses are frequent both in The Christian Worker and in The Friends' Review. Among them is an earnest one for Portland in Oregon. A new yearly meeting is in prospect for that division of the Pacific coast.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Sermons were preached last Sunday in the Presbyterian churches on behalf of the Church Extension Fund, which maintains in the South and West of Ireland forty congregations, and seventy-five mission stations.

Albert-bridge Congregational church, Belfast, of which Rev. James Cregan is the pastor, is prospering. It has three day schools, has nine hundred scholars in the Sunday-school, and every seat in the church is occupied.

An interesting and successful conference on missions and evangelisation has just been held in Cootehill in connection with the Presbytery of Cavan. Addresses were delivered by Revs. H. Henry, J. S. Gass, E. W. Hamilton, and others.

One of the most deservedly popular organisations connected with Irish Presbyterianism is the Orphan Society, of which Rev. Dr. Johnson, Belfast, is the founder and secretary. The Society has now on its roll 2404 orphans, of whom 2061 are fatherless, and 343 have lost both parents, while the total number placed on the books since the commencement of the Society has been 916!

At present various places in the North of Ireland are agitated over the question of burial rights. In several parish churchyards, where Presbyterians and other non-Episcopalians have for generations buried their dead without hindrance, the present incumbents are now trying to restrict that right by imposing a fee, and this has given rise to unpleasant scenes at Killinchy, Donoughmore, Ballyrashane, and other places.

The annual meeting of the Belfast Society for the Employment of the Industrious Blind was held last Friday in Belfast, Lord O'Neill presiding. The number of blind persons employed during the year was seventy-seven, of whom sixty-three were Protestants, and fourteen Romanists; twenty-seven were women. The men earn from six shillings to twenty shillings a week, and the women from five shillings to ten shillings. A sick fund has been established, which has proved of great service, and 1390 home lessons were given, while the missionaries of the Society are doing a most valuable evangelistic work.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Tring, Mr. W. H. Grange, aged seventy, well-known as an earnest Christian worker; at Gloucester, Mr. John Wilson, an active helper in the work at the Brunswick-road Chapel; at Southport, Alderman Batty, a well-known and leading Wesleyan; at Rusholme, Mr. T. Lowe, a devoted local-preacher and class-leader; at Chepstow, Rev. Joseph Lister, an able and experienced Wesleyan minister; at Barnard Castle, Mr. F. Wimpenny, who for half-a-century has been a Sunday-school superintendent and an earnest Christian worker; at Swansea, on March 2, Rev. John Thomas, a faithful Congregational minister; at Smarden, Mr. Joseph Kedwell, who for years, notwithstanding great affliction, has has been a zealous worker for God; at Cala, South Africa, Rev. John Wilson, for fifty years Wesleyan minister and missionary; at Preston, on Feb. 21, Mrs. Briscombe, wife of Rev. W. Briscombe, a true and faithful ministering servant of Jesus; at Birch Hall, Colchester, Mrs. C. G. Round (widow of the late Mr. Round, M.P.), who has been a helpless invalid for nearly twenty years, yet by prayer, gifts, and sympathy has been a helper of many; on Feb. 28, at Blisand, Rev. F. W. Pye, aged ninety, a learned and devout, yet remarkably faithful and sturdy evangelical; at Omagh, Mr. Jas. Greer, J.P., Senator of the Royal University, and a most earnest member of the Presbyterian Church; at Dublin, Mr. Jno. McCallum, M.A., aged forty-seven years, financial secretary to the Commissioners of National Education, and a devoted Presbyterian.

Up to and including March 24th,

AND ON

FRIDAYS, April 1st and 8th.

COMMISSIONER HOWARD and other Officers will assist.

THE STARVING AND HOMELESS POOR OF LONDON.

One of the most difficult problems of this or any other age is how to help the Poor without pauperising them, or being imposed upon. Both of these difficulties are now easily avoided, thanks to General Booth's "Darkest England and Way Out" Scheme. Any generous or philanthropic resident may now effectually help the homeless and destitute without giving them money, which, alas! too often is spent in drink.

FOOD TICKETS varying in value from ½d. to 2d. may be purchased, which entitle the bearer to Food of the value marked on the ticket.

SHELTER TICKETS, value 4d., entitling bearer to Supper and Bed, also Breakfast next morning, or 2d. Tickets entitling to Bed only, may also be had.

BOOKS OF THESE TICKETS, containing assortment of each (for those desiring them), may be purchased, value 5s. Packets of either kind will be sent on receipt of P.O. to value.

Applications to be made to Commissioner CADMAN 101, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

THE CRISIS AND THE POOR.

What the debilitated poor, slowly recovering after painful suffering, are enduring from the present prohibitive price of coals, few can realise. Through the kindness of a merchant we are supplied at original price. Twenty tons have gone out this week. Further help much needed.

Contributions thankfully received by Mrs. F. A. Bevan, 59, Princes-gate, S.W., or by the Director, North-East London Gospel Mission, Wm. Chorley, 2, Marquess-grove, Canonbury, N. c60

HOMES FOR AGED CHRISTIAN BLIND MEN & WOMEN,

HANLEY ROAD, CROUCH HILL, LONDON, N.

AN URGENT AND EARNEST APPEAL is made on behalf of these Homes to meet present and pressing liabilities. The Inmates number 80, many are very aged and infirm as well as blind. These require night and day nursing, taxing much, and in many ways, the funds which are at the present time exhausted. Not sufficient to meet last month's account.

Also a strenuous effort is being made to raise £514 to free the property from debt. This done the General Maintenance Fund will be greatly helped as the interest will be saved.

Contributions will be gladly received by the Founders and Hon. Superintendents, Rev. H. and Mrs. BRIGHT, at the Homes; or by Messrs. MORGAN and SCOTT, Office of The Christian.

A CALL TO ACTION.
"GO FORWARD."

A very warm response having been given to the "CALL TO PRAYER AND HUMILIATION," let us now respond to this call by "buckling on the armour," and as "true soldiers of Jesus Christ" "contend for the faith once for all delivered to the saints," in setting forth the truth, and exposing the error of the "GREAT APOSTACY." Many methods can be adopted; by lectures, establishing branches in connection with the Protestant Alliance, Colporteur work, and free distribution.

Having received numerous letters urging this last method, I here give a sample:—"I am very wishful that the "HIDDEN HAND" may be got into the hands of the people, and as you are seeking help for that purpose, would it not be well to have a Central Committee, and also to have a committee in every city and town in Great Britain? My great concernment is that it may be done quickly, that the Protestantism of our country may be aroused. I am writing for a second dozen. "G. M. B.

"Keswick, Cumberland, March 2."

In response to this, three gentlemen have formed themselves into committee for this work:—

William Green, 3, Endsleigh-gardens, N.W.
William Frith, Harringay, Hornsey.
James L. Wood, Cranbrook, Oakleigh-park.

Unity is strength. Shall we not one and all make a grand effort, and set apart a week for self-denial, the proceeds to be used for this cause. Let all readers feel their responsibility and share in this privilege of taking part in this glorious work, that the candle lighted by "Master" Ridley may be made to burn more brightly in shedding forth the light and truth so dearly purchased by the blood of the Martyrs. Reflect! Is there not a cause? Let the response come by every one "bringing an offering and all the people saying, Amen, and praise the Lord." J. L. W.

A Special Grant of the "HIDDEN HAND" is offered at half-price for this purpose.

Remittances addressed to Committee of "Hidden Hand," care of Messrs. Marshall Brothers, 10, Paternoster row.

☞ Everyone should read "THE HIDDEN HAND," enlarged Third Edition, completing 43,000, with Supplementary Chapter, IRELAND'S SORROWS: THE CAUSE AND REMEDY. Price 3d., post free 4d.—Marshall Bros., 10, Paternoster-row. [1196

SCOTTISH CHRISTIAN CONVENTION FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL HOLINESS
BRIDGE OF ALLAN, June 13th-18th, 1892.

Dear Friend—In accordance with the earnest wish many Christians in Scotland, including ministers, office-bearers, students, evangelists, and Christian workers in the various Churches, we purpose, God willing, holding Convention for the spiritual improvement and growth in grace of the children of God. In many lands, and not least in our own, the desire for a fuller measure of Divine fellowship and power has found expression in similar Conventions, and from very many believers who have thus waited upon God, the testimony comes that beyond their utmost expectation and prayers, God has revealed Himself in blessing. That the interest in such gatherings should have deepened year by year is no more than might have been anticipated, and it is with the hope that a great central Midsummer Convention in Scotland (Bridge of Allan having been chosen as the most convenient centre) will commend itself to your sympathy and prayers, that we venture in much humility to invite you to this Convocation. Convinced that such assemblies have been owned of God in promoting the greater unity, faith, holiness, and power for service of the Lord's servants, we further venture to ask your co-operation in making this Convention known to your friends. No ecclesiastical distinctions are maintained, no doctrines at variance with evangelical standards are taught, no sectarian aims are in view in the Convention. We meet as brethren—"all one in Christ Jesus" with the one object of cultivating and manifesting, as the Holy Spirit shall enable us, that life of holiness and practical obedience which finds its centre and source in the indwelling Christ, and its sphere in the private and public relationships, duties, and details of daily life. We bespeak therefore your presence and prayers, trusting that, by the blessing of God, all who come to this Convention will have reason to praise Him for new discoveries of His love and richer experience of His grace and power.

We are, dear Friend, in name of the Committee,

"Ye shall go over, and possess that Good Land."

7th March, 1892.

Dear Fellow-Helpers,

I am (D.V.) sending off to Canada, on the 17th March, the largest party of Young Emigrants ever sent out at one time from the Homes. It will consist of 300 Trained Lads, who will be commended to our Father's care at a Farewell Meeting in Exeter Hall, on Tuesday Evening, the 15th inst.

Will you help me to give these dear young fellows a start in life? £9 per lad for Ontario, £11 per lad for Manitoba, will pay the whole cost of journey and outfit, thus giving a fresh start in life to 300 boys rescued for the most part from the slums of Darkest England, and enabled through your kindness to turn their backs for ever upon the East End of London.

Say that the cost is on an average £10 per boy. That would amount for the whole party to £3,000. As yet I have only received about £310. Unless the hearts of God's people are moved to supply the necessary cost, I will be compelled to reduce the number of those to be sent out. Will you help me to avoid this? Last year one generous friend gave me £1,000, which paid the entire cost of 100 boys right away.

No truer, wiser method has ever been devised for effecting four desirable objects than this scheme of well-organised Christian Emigration of trained and tested Young People: for 1st.—It saves the boy, delivering him for ever from the perils of his former lot.

2nd.—It relieves our over-crowded cities, the labour-markets of which are hopelessly congested, and in which the struggle for existence is growing fiercer every day.

3rd.—It supplies Canada with her greatest need: additions to her population of the choicest materials—honest, industrious, and piously-trained Youths, who, by God's blessing, will grow into the successful Citizens of the near future.

4th.—It provides room for the immediate admission to the Homes of as many fresh cases, to be rescued from the streets and lanes of our great cities all over the land.

Every year an increasingly large sum is received as Thank-offerings from Old Boys who have been placed out in Canada, and who are now doing well. These gladly contribute of their comparatively small means to help out others who are as forlorn as they themselves once were.

Commending my dear lads to your sympathies and prayers,

Believe me to be,

Yours sincerely in Christ's service amongst the Waifs,

Thos. J. Barnardo.

50th Thousand.

Its Hopes, Its Inhabitants, Its Riches, Its Rewards. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Baptist Magazine:—"We have here the large verbal familiarity with Scripture; the raciness of style; the profuseness and aptness of illustration; and the intense spiritual earnestness—which are always to be expected when Mr. Moody opens his lips to speak or takes his pen to write."

THE FAITHFUL SAYING:

19th Thousand.

A Series of Gospel Addresses. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The King's Highway:—"These discourses are full of power and homely beauty, and exemplify very fully the strong points of the great Evangelist. His anecdotes are so fresh, so pointed, and so touching."

"TO THE WORK! TO THE WORK!"

6th Thousand.

A Series of Trumpet Calls to Christian Service.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.

MR. PULVERMACHER has had the honour of receiving Testimonials from Her Majesty's Physicians, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales's Physician, and over Forty Members of the Royal College of Physicians, London, and Royal College of Surgeons of England.

The distressing symptoms of Nervous and Muscular Weakness are speedily removed by means of which act directly on the affected parts, and impart new life and vigour to the whole system, making life a pleasure.

The public are cautioned against the many sham appliances now being advertised, and to avoid disappointment intending purchasers should send for Pulvermacher's prospectus before investing.

The "LANCET," in speaking of Mr. PULVERMACHER'S APPLIANCES, says:—"In these days of medico-galvanic quackery it is a relief to observe the very plain and straightforward manner in which Mr. Pulvermacher's Apparatus is recommended to the profession."

SIR CHARLES LOCOCK, Physician to Her Majesty the Queen, says:—"PULVERMACHER'S BELTS are very effective in neuralgia and rheumatic affections, and I have prescribed them largely in my practice for other similar maladies, paralysis, &c."

CONSUMPTION—CRITICAL CASE at CHATTERIS—A SEQUEL to INFLUENZA.

In the summer before last I was applied to by the friends of a young man named W. Pamby, aged 20 years, of consumptive family, and who was then suffering from evidently advanced disease. Three months before he had a severe attack of influenza. Instead of this being accompanied with acute pneumonia, which so often rapidly proves fatal, a chronic congested condition of the lungs was induced, and tubercular disease soon followed. The cough was trying, the expectoration heavy and purulent, and mixed with blood. Night sweats were heavy and exhausting. The breathing was very difficult. There was gradual wasting, increasing debility, and falling off of the hair. In this extremely critical case application was made to me.

From June to about February last my instructions were followed. The bleeding ceased immediately, and appetite improved. Friends expressed their delight at his progress. The patient gathered strength and flesh, and every letter reported some good.

In November, writing me on another matter, his mother says:—"I have great pleasure in telling you that our son continues well, and is strong again."

PEPSONYMIN TONIC

THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely from its use." Mrs. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dyspepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SPITE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. THE GREAT REST-GIVER.

By the late W. HAIG MILLER, Author of "The Culture of Pleasure," "Life's Pleasure Garden," "The Mirage of Life," &c. 2s. 6d., cloth.

The Rev. C. H. SPURGEON wrote of this book (see Sword and Trowel, March, 1892):—"We sorrow that the pen of our dear friend, Mr. Haig Miller, will no more write for his Lord upon pages scanned by mortal eye. Ah, he could write! He had been a mighty reader, and a great taker of notes, and so his writing was like a fountain which flowed from an inexhaustible fulness within. We never enjoyed any kind of reading more than that which he produced; he was a master of the art of simple, touching, illustrative book-talking. We would have all men read this his last book, if they desire peace of mind and joy of heart."

A WINTER IN NORTH CHINA.

By the Rev. T. M. MORRIS, with an Introduction by the Rev. RICHARD GLOVER, D.D., with a Map. Crown 8vo, 5s., cloth boards.

Dr. Glover and Mr. Morris visited China in the winter of 1890-91, as a special deputation from the Baptist Missionary Society. They had unusual facilities for becoming acquainted with the present condition and prospects of missions in North China, and Mr. Morris gives in this book a clear, concise, and instructive sketch of the journey and its lessons.

INDIAN GEMS FOR THE MASTER'S CROWN.

I. The Indian Devotee and his Disciples. II. From Bondage to Freedom; or, The Life of Tulsi Paul. By Miss DROESE. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 2s., cloth boards.

These are "real true" stories from Indian life, and, as such, are even stranger than fiction.

FAITH HEALING.

By ALFRED T. SCHOFIELD, M.D., Author of "How to Keep Healthy," "Health at Home," &c. Crown 8vo, 1s. 6d., cloth boards.

The important subject dealt with in this little book has attracted, and is still arousing, much attention from Christian people. The author, a medical man thoroughly acquainted with the past history and the present state of his subject, deals with it fully and fairly from the standpoint of a thorough believer in the truth and power of the Gospel.

THE WONDERFUL STORY

OF WISDOM, LOVE, AND GRACE DIVINE.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, PATERNOSTER ROW, LONDON.

The Christian.

☞ It is particularly requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan & Scott, and not to individual members. Communications for The Christian should be addressed to the Editor. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Right Rev. Dr. J. W. Bardsley, Bishop of Carlisle.

Invitations to conduct special missions continue to reach Messrs. Moody and Sankey. A largely-signed and urgent requisition comes to them from Christian friends in Australia. An accompanying letter says:—

Never were these colonies so ripe for blessing, or Christians so really in earnest. We have had two years of much prayer all round.

The project for founding in Glasgow a Bible Training School, mooted by Mr. Moody at the recent all-day conference in that city, has now been placed in a fair way of realisation. Mr. Campbell White, of Overton, as already intimated, will acquire a site in Bothwell-street, at a cost of some £14,000. The United Evangelistic Committee have unanimously agreed to ask Mr. John Anderson, of Ardrossan, to superintend the Training Institution. Arrangements are in process for the formation of a similar Training school in Edinburgh, so that the evangelists are likely to leave behind them enduring mementos of their third Gospel campaign in Scotland.

We rejoice to learn that Mrs. Grattan Guinness has to a considerable extent recovered from the effects of the paralytic stroke which she experienced on February 29. Though still extremely weak, she is now able to raise her right arm, and to converse with the members of her family. Telegrams have been received from Dr. Harry Guinness, from St. Palmas, in the Canaries, and also from Madeira. It is expected that the steamer by which he is coming will reach Plymouth on Sunday next. The spiritual work which lately commenced among the natives in the Balolo Stations on the Upper Congo still continues to make cheering progress.

Our readers will share the deep sorrow we feel in reporting the death of Mr. Graham Wilmot Brooke, the devoted leader of the Mission on the Upper Niger. A telegram was received from Brass, on March 19, by the Church Missionary Society, in the following terms:—

Wilmot Brooke at rest—March 5—black water fever.

The sad news was thus reported by Rev. H. H. Dobinson, and we shall have to wait a month for further intelligence. It is supposed that Mr. Brooke died at Lokoja, which is a long distance from Brass, hence the considerable interval between the sad event and the receipt of the telegram. An exemplary and useful life has thus been terminated. We pray that the God of all wisdom may graciously sustain the sorrowing relatives, and raise up many other such devoted missionaries of Christ.

The current issue of Regions Beyond reports a very helpful address by Pastor A. G. Brown on "The Will of God." It was delivered to a party of missionaries, but the counsels and instruction deserve the earnest attention of all who bear the Christian name Having spoken of the Lord Jesus Christ as the perfect missionary, whose heart-refreshment was found in doing the will of his Father, Mr. Brown said:—

The will of God is that his Gospel "shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." Then it is not for us to stop to argue whether missions are a success or not. It is not for us to inquire whether they pay or not. It is God's will they should be carried on "until He come." It is for us just to carry out his will, and in perfect subjection thereto, to find, as Jesus did, our rest.

It is after we have prayed "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven," and not till then, that we are at liberty to ask God for our own daily bread. Is this the order of our prayers and desires? I fear with some of us not only does daily bread come before the accomplishment of the will of God, but we want our bread buttered and a little cake thrown into the bargain too! I fear that only after we have asked the Lord for the things we desire for our private life—almost as a postscript—comes that which should have the very first position of all, "Thy will be done."

Doing the will of God costs much, and it is well that those who give themselves thereto should view the situation in the light of God's revealed purpose. Mr. Brown says:—

For many years I have been engaged in home mission work. I believe God will always tell his servants just what particular work they have to do. He will lay that on the heart of his servant which He wishes him to accomplish. I have found gradually more and more my thoughts, not lingering less perhaps on the poor of East London, but lingering more on the heathen nations lying in darkness. The cry of those near is not less distinctly heard, but the cry of those afar off is ringing more loudly in our ears. I believe that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. The King is on the return. There is no time to spare.

Jesus says, "Occupy till I come," and it is impossible to shut one's eyes to the fact that if the masses of East London are not saved by the Gospel, at least they are sodden with it. Up and down the streets, five and six deep, go God's workers, treading one upon another, and still offering the Gospel to those who have rejected it times without number. I would not have it less so, but I would that there were more ready to say, "Let me go to fresh soil, and break that up; let me go to those who at least are not Gospel hardened; let me go and tell it out where its gladsome notes have never yet been heard."

World-wide evangelisation is the Divine command; and those who strive to carry out that command should be encouraged by the certainty of future triumph, as well as the abundance of present grace.

It would be amusing, if it were not painful, to observe the wanderings of those who are not satisfied with God's way of salvation, and who persist in suggesting improved methods for the moral and spiritual amelioration of humanity. The latest of these "fads" is to be found in a paper in the current number of The Fortnightly Review, in which it is claimed that men are simply irresponsible automata, and a system of "Determinism" is propounded as a substitute for the Christian religion. And the result of this "Determinism," it would appear, would simply be the adoption of self-interest as the mainspring of action, and that vice and crime would be abandoned only so far as it might be judged to be prejudicial to that interest.

God is evidently answering the many prayers that have been offered for the suppression of the opium traffic in India. Only a short time ago the proposal that the iniquity should be abolished by law, instead of being, as at present, regulated or promoted, was contemptuously pooh-poohed by statesmen of rank and influence. The next step was an attempt to minimise the evil. Still, however, in the name of national righteousness and human compassion, the cause of the millions of victims of the degrading vice was not allowed to pass out of sight; it was remembered before God, and proclaimed in the ears of legislators and the masses who, by the exercise of the voting franchise, make Governments and establish imperial policies.

Only lately it seemed to some as if victory was very near, but those who were acquainted with "the depths of Satan" were not so sanguine, for they reasonably expected blank denial and ingenious misrepresentation to continue until the Christian honour of the country would rise to the fervour needful to vindicate the cause of righteousness. The end is not yet. A long article in Monday's Times offers the latest and most audacious opposition, by maintaining that the prohibition of the use of opium in India "is indefensible on moral grounds. and would lead to the demoralisation of the Indian races"! The contentions and admissions of the writer are somewhat difficult to harmonise. He seems to regard the opium habit as a valuable safeguard against endemic disease—at once a necessity and a luxury, and rarely, if ever, a vice.

Evidently the apologists of the traffic are in straits. The grounds alleged by this writer would suffice to justify or excuse many practices which the law stringently forbids; and until two blacks make a white it cannot be rational or opportune to twit philanthropists with attempting, in regard to opium in India, legislation such as has not been enacted in regard to strong drink in our own country. The fear of God and the welfare of man has called into existence both the anti-opium and the anti-strong drink movements, and they will proceed on their mission until God shall grant the blessed emancipation for which his servants pray and work.

A writer in Regions Beyond, dealing with the financial aspects of the opium traffic, says:—

Happily the system is a Government monopoly, and can, therefore, be abolished by a single stroke, as it were. Happily the revenue derived from it is a mere bagatelle, only amounting to three or four millions annually, and can with facility be dispensed with by a country that is spending an additional twenty millions in five years (1888-1894) on her Navy, and that had two millions surplus on last year's Budget concurrent with a reduced taxation.

A Roman Catholic contemporary takes occasion to comment upon the address delivered by Professor Wilkins at the opening of the Conference of the Lancashire Congregational Union as containing much matter for reflection for those outside the Congregational body; and if the Professor has been correctly reported, we do not wonder that exception should have been taken. It is sufficiently painful to find evidences of the down-grade antagonism to sharply-defined doctrine, but what shall be said of the following:—

They believed in the Divine education of the world, and they saw that this education was being given still, as it was of old, in many portions and in many ways. Newton and Darwin, as well as Isaiah and Paul, were making known to them the thoughts of the Eternal. Was it to be wondered at that some were tempted to feel that the teaching of the Bible needed to be supplemented, interpreted, and even corrected by the teaching of Providence?

The Solicitor-General is credited with having stated in his speech in Parliament on the Eastbourne Bill that, so far as he knew, the Salvation Army "is the only religious organisation that made the sole test of membership personal purity and holiness of life," and we are somewhat surprised that this unwise utterance has not ere this called forth a flood of strong protests. A speaker in the elevated position of the Solicitor-General ought not to require to shelter himself behind the shield of the qualification, but is in honour bound to acquaint himself with the whole of the facts before making sweeping statements affecting those who cannot answer at the time.

The New York Independent gives some interesting details of a remarkably fruitful revival in various towns and villages in Connecticut, following the labours of Rev. I. H. B. Headley, an evangelist whose work God has already blessed greatly elsewhere. After describing the interest awakened, our contemporary adds:—

The Church in Wauregan has already received a large accession, on account of the faithfulness of its young people, who went in large numbers to the meetings. The pastor of the Central Village Church says the work has brought about an entire change in the town. All classes have been reached. Storekeepers and their clerks, town officers and prominent citizens, and occasionally a whole family have been brought to a knowledge of the truth.

Following his work in this village an invitation came from Brooklyn, Conn. Two weeks there added about thirty to the roll of converts. The next place visited was the little hamlet of Packersville, where there was a small church, with a congregation of some thirty or forty, and a parish widely scattered and difficult to reach. In no place have there been such marked results. It might, with almost literal truth, be said that not an unconverted person is to be found there.

The Accuser Cast Out.

The following paragraphs are in continuation of the Notes on the same subject in our issue of March 10. We have received some communications respecting them, but it will be more convenient to reserve replies until in this and another paper the case has been stated.

God in his wisdom left Satan at large when he had himself rebelled, and after he had tempted our first parents to their fall. He had access to the council chamber of God in the days of Job. He was the accuser of our brethren throughout the legal dispensation. In accusing them he, by implication, accused God of injustice in passing over their sins, instead of condemning the saints who sinned (Rom iii. 25, 26). Satan derived his status as the accuser from the fact that no atonement had been made, and yet God in his forbearance passed over the sins of those who acknowledged their iniquity, and sought forgiveness (Pss. xxxii., li.).

The Old Testament saints were well aware of the legal status held by Satan as the enemy of God and man and the avenger of the broken law, and were profoundly affected by it, so that they were all their lifetime in bondage through fear of death. The consummation of the misery of Israel is thus pathetically expressed in Psa. xliv. 15, 16: "My confusion is continually before me, and the shame of my face hath covered me: for the voice of him that reproacheth and blasphemeth—by reason of the enemy and avenger."

Yet they who saw the promises afar off, and were persuaded of them and embraced them, were able to rejoice in the excellent name of God, who, out of the mouth of babes and sucklings, ordained strength: that He might still the enemy and the avenger (Ps. viii. 2).

This function of Satan as the accuser is referred to in the imprecation in Ps. cix. 6, quoted by Peter as referring to Judas: "Set Thou the Wicked One over him, and let Satan stand at his right hand"—"to accuse him; for this was the place and posture of accusers in the Jewish courts."

In the later days of the dispensation, when the priesthood had altogether failed, the prophet saw Joshua, the high priest, clad in filthy garments, and Satan at his right hand (the judicial place of the accuser) to resist him. But the Lord rebuked him thus: "Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment." Joshua was a type of Jesus, the Branch, who was made sin for us, and who removed the iniquity of that land (and of all the world) in one day—the day of Calvary; in fulfilment of the word, "I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day" (Zech. iii. 9).

Jesus, looking back to the foundation of the world when He became in purpose the Lamb slain, and looking forward to his approaching death, said to the seventy who rejoiced in their power over demons through his name, "I beheld Satan like lightning fall from heaven." And, as the day of his lifting up drew nearer, He said, "Now is the judgment of this world; now shall the prince of this world be cast out" (Luke x. 18; John xii. 31). Just as it was the removal of his iniquity by God's Servant, The Branch, that procured Joshua's change of raiment, so it was the putting away of sin by the blood of his cross that gave the name of Jesus power to cast demons out of men, and on his ascension to cast Satan out of heaven.

The rejoicing Apostle, seeing that all this had come to pass, makes affirmation in the most emphatic form possible to human speech, when he asks the unanswerable question, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" (Rom. viii. 29, 30.)

All Heaven was profoundly moved, as the everlasting doors were lifted up that the King of glory might come in—Jehovah-Jesus, the Lord, strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle, mighty to save.

> Through suffering and defeat
> He won the meed and crown;
> Trod all his foes beneath his feet
> By being trodden down.

And as He took his seat on the right hand of the Majesty on high, Michael (who before had judicially debated with the devil concerning the body of Moses, using the same words as the angel in Zechariah's vision, "The Lord rebuke thee"—Zech. iii. 2; Jude 9) cast him out of heaven and his angels with him.

Only in the light of the Old Testament record and recognition of Satan's judicially acknowledged position as Accuser, and the awful bondage occasioned by the presence of such a foreign element—a piece of hell in heaven—only thus can we appreciate the enthusiastic Hallelujah which rang through all the heavens, when at the entry of the Redeemer, the Atoner, the Justifier, by virtue of his own blood, the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted aloud for joy: now when redemption was accomplished, as before when the foundations of the earth were laid (Job xxxviii. 4-7). For the incoming of Jesus was the signal for the outcasting of Satan, and his angels with him.

Love's redeeming work was done; the Redeemer had, through death, annulled the devil, the accuser, who had the power of death (because the wages of sin is death), and had charged sin against those whose sin had been passed over in the forbearance of God. But Jesus had put away sin. And John heard a loud voice saying in heaven,

> Now is come the salvation, and the power, and the kingdom of our God, and the authority of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accuseth them before our God day and night. And they overcame him because of the blood of the Lamb, and because of the word of their testimony; and they loved not their life even unto death (Rev. xii. 10, R.V.).

If he was not then cast out, there will never be anything more done on the ground of which he can be cast out. And being cast out, nothing will ever take place to bring him back again. Because "It is finished." M.

PRAYER FOR REVIVAL.

For the last eighteen months, a number of Christian men, representing various branches of the Church of Christ and different spheres of Christian work, have been meeting, from 2 to 3 on Monday afternoons, at 186, Aldersgate-street, London, E.C., for purposes of Bible study and spiritual converse. The meetings have been quite informal. Mr. Robert Paton has given any direction to them that they have needed, but there has been an absence of any marked leadership throughout the entire course.

Within the last few weeks, however, attention has been remarkably converged towards the state of religion in London and throughout the United Kingdom; and many fervent desires have been expressed from time to time that God might grant the manifested power of his Holy Spirit, and that days of revival might be granted.

These culminated recently in a conference as to the best means of promoting a general revival of religions, and on the last occasion, a considerable period was spent in united prayer for guidance as to what steps should be taken. It was finally resolved that a short account of the meeting should be circulated, with a view of calling in the co-operation of all Christian men who are working for God in London, and who are in sympathy with the object which has been laid so heavily upon the hearts of those who have been meeting—namely, a wide-spread revival of the Church, leading to the awakening of the world; that all such should be invited to meet on successive Mondays at 186, Aldersgate-street at two o'clock.

Who can tell whether from such a meeting on unsectarian lines—not to hear speeches or addresses, but to unite in fervent and believing prayer—might come, as with the prayers that were offered upon Carmel, a plentiful rain by which God's heritage should be refreshed.

THE McALL MISSION.—Dr. McAll gave an account on Thursday last, at the noon prayer meeting in Aldersgate-street, of the work of this mission, dwelling specially on the new mission boat secured after much prayer for the purpose of working on the inland waterways of France, and carrying the Gospel from place to place. Already much encouragement has been granted. Dr. McAll also spoke of interesting work among young people, and told how a little girl had but recently been the means of bringing her sceptical father, first to the mission meetings, and then to the Saviour. He closed by asking earnest prayer for the whole of the work in France.

THE IPSWICH CONVENTION.

This Convention for the Deepening of Spiritual Life has been felt by many to be a time of real profit. Wednesday morning was marked especially by an address from Pastor Theodore Monod, who as a correspondent puts it, in gentle but regretful terms, compared a certain class of professing Christians to coins which passed as of current value, but were not really so, having been worn by years of circulation. These said they were Christians, but had not the stamp of Christians; as they did not live in fellowship with God they had not the weight of Christians. Passing on, he reminded his audience that "Christian man" might be rendered "a man in Christ," and after speaking at some length on the phrase in this light he turned it once more, remarking that the same letters might be changed to "Christ in Man." Christ should dwell in all the thoughts and desires of Christians, and they should not only receive Him in their souls for an hour or two at time, but receive Him all the time.

Dr. A. T. Pierson, speaking in the evening, on spiritual life, made incidentally an eloquent defence of the Bible as the book of Divine revelation. He regretted that there was a tendency to treat the Bible like other books, but it had an immaculate conception. The Bible was the nearest thing the world had got to God. The bread and the wine at the Table were not so near; they were emblems, but the Word of God, instinct with his life and inspired by his Spirit, was living, because it was the Word of the living God.

Amongst other speakers of the day were Revs. J. J. Luce, C. G. Moore, A. E. Barnes-Lawrence, and F. B. Meyer.

On the second day of the Convention Mr. Robert Wilson again presided, and addresses were delivered by Revs. Clement Clemance, D.D., A. E. Barnes-Lawrence, F. B. Meyer, and Pastor Monod. Mr. Meyer began with a telling illustration. There was a very simple experiment which a mere child in chemistry might try. It was to take a little spark of fire out of the common atmosphere and to plunge it into a jar filled with oxygen gas. The effect of that operation upon the little spark would be to make it glow and flame out, until the eye could scarcely stand the brilliancy. So did a great change come over some human lives. Of this he recalled several notable instances, including that of the brothers Wesley and Whitfield, of whom it was recorded in John Wesley's diary that after spending afternoon, evening, and night in prayer, there came upon them such a sense of the Almighty presence that they fell prostrate on their faces, and presently rose up singing with one accord, "We praise Thee, O God; we acknowledge Thee to be the Lord." From that manifestation dated the great revival of the past century. Had any such crisis come in the lives of those he was addressing? That was the question, for there was, he urged, another and greater power to be had in Christian living than was realised by most Christian people.

On the last day of the Convention, Rev. W. Haslam delivered two stirring addresses, while amongst the other speakers were Revs. C. G. Moore, F. B. Meyer, and John Wilkinson.

ON BEHALF OF VILLAGE CHILDREN.—Mr. S. J. Hewlett proposes, at the beginning of May, commencing a mission to children in outlying villages. He will be assisted by friends, and in addition to the services for children it is intended to make a systematic distribution of Gospel literature. The workers will make a short stay in each village, and hold their meetings either indoors or in the open air. For conveying the harmonium, literature, &c., a Bible-carriage is required. Should any one be able to lend such to Mr. Hewlett for the proposed tour he will be glad to hear from them without delay. Address 6, Park-terrace, Mitcham-road, Streatham, S.W.

THE EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.—We recently announced the new arrangement regarding the Secretariat of the Evangelical Alliance, caused by the retirement of Sir John Field as joint secretary. The Council, after much prayerful consideration, have appointed Rev. James Consterdine, M.A., clergyman in charge of Little Heath, Herts, and Rev. Philip Colborne, Congregational minister, late of Birmingham, as Deputation Secretaries. They will act in conjunction with Mr. Arnold as General Secretary; and the Council earnestly hope that the good work accomplished by the joint secretaries during the past thirteen years, may be carried on with even increasing interest and usefulness in the future.

THE START FROM SINAI.

Numbers x. 29.

Israel sojourned under the shadow of Sinai for about eleven months, long enough to see the round of the seasons, but the green verdure of the spring and the fading tints of the autumn would leave no trace on the appearance of those vast sandstone rocks. But what a change had been wrought in their condition! They arrived there a fugitive and unorganised people; they left it a mighty nation in battle array, provided with a sacerdotal system which was to last for centuries, as a type of the priesthood of Christ and his saints; and furnished with a code of laws and sanitary enactments which have been a model for the most civilised peoples of the world.

The very appearance of the camp indicated this marvellous change. In the midst the sacred tent with its brooding cloud, and around it the goodly tents of the people, "as gardens by the riverside, as lign aloes which the Lord had planted, or as cedars beside the waters." The priests and Levites pitched immediately around it, in the inner circle; and around them again the twelve great tribes, three towards each point of the compass, guarding the Tabernacle as a most sacred charge, and as the centre of their national life.

It was a marvellous spectacle, also, when the cloud was taken up, and the priests, through the silver trumpets, gave the signal that the camps on the east side should begin to lead off the march. Then Judah passed on first, followed by Issachar and Zebulun; and the sons of Gershom and Merari, with their six wagons, bearing the heavier portions of the Tabernacle, came next; and after these Reuben, followed by Simeon and Gad; then the long lines of Kohathites, carrying on their shoulders the vessels of the Holy Service; and, lastly, the remaining six tribes in two great divisions, the one led by Ephraim and the other by Dan.

All was beautifully ordered, and though we may not attribute the mighty revolution which had been thus effected to the unaided genius of Moses, we cannot but feel that, as God for the most part gave his teachings through minds competent to receive and transmit them, so the mental endowments of Moses must have been of no mean order, that he could so readily take, and keep, and transmit the legislation which made Israel a great people. But side by side with this colossal intellect there was still a weak, human heart, which betrayed itself in the proposal which he made to Hobab.

I. Moses' Proposal.—During their stay at Sinai, it is probable that deputations from neighbouring tribes visited the people, and amongst them was this chieftain of a tribe closely related to Moses by marriage. Hobab, we are told, was the son of Reuel, the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law. Of course, he knew the country well, every foot of it, where the springs lay, and the pastures, and the safest, shortest routes, and so Moses approached him with the request that he would go with them, to give them the benefit of his practical knowledge. "Leave us not, I pray thee, forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou shalt be to us instead of eyes."

This request was, of course, most natural. Moses was a very lonely man, as we have seen, and it was pleasant to have one, bound to him by a blood affinity, to unburden himself to, in any special crisis.

At the same time, it was at variance with the general custom, which even then must have commenced strongly to assert itself, of Israelite exclusiveness. This national characteristic was keenly perceived and adverted to by Balaam, when he said: "Lo, it is a people that dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations." The Jew made no intermarriages with neighbouring peoples on pain of death, dressed in a special garb, and differed from all other men to the very dressing of his beard. And all this, to keep the people free from the plague-spots of the earth, which, in the expressive language of Leviticus, was vomiting out her inhabitants.

Even though we admit that at the heart of the nation there were tenderer emotions towards any who were willing to sympathise with its spirit, to a Rahab and a Ruth, to the strangers within its gates, and to the Gentiles, who might in after days be attracted by the light which shines from Zion's hill, yet it was an unusual thing for the great lawgiver to go out of his way to utter this winsome invitation to a Midianite prince. And there must have been a strong reason that prompted it.

And shall we not find it in that instinctive shrinking of the human heart from the strange and unknown way? It was because Moses had never gone that way before that he was so eager to obtain Hobab's company, and offered as a bribe that what good soever the Lord should do to them, they would do also to him. How closely home does this phase of thought come to us all. We do not know what may await us at the next turn of the path, or at the top of the pass; what foes may lurk; what emergencies arise; what unexpected barriers arrest our steps. What if we are going into the midst of the foe, or missing a sweet glen with its luscious herbage, or making for a cul de sac, through which we shall find no aperture, and must return. And then how shall we survey the place in time to get suitable camping-grounds for the coming hosts! How well to have a Hobab who knows the ground!

We seek our Hobabs in the advice of sage, grey-haired counsellors; in the formation of strong, intelligent, and wealthy committees; in a careful observance of precedent. Anything seems better than a simple reliance on an unseen guide. Now, in one sense, there is no harm in this. We have neither right nor need to cut ourselves adrift from others, who have had special experience in some new ground on which we are venturing. It is a mistake to live a hermit life, thinking out all our own problems, and meeting all our own questions as best we may. Those who do so are apt to become self-opinionated and full of crotchets. God often speaks to us through our fellows; they are his ministers to us for good, and we do well to listen to our Samuels, our Isaiahs, our Johns. But there is also a great danger that we should put man before God; that we should think more of the glasses than of that which they are intended to reveal; and that we should so cling to Hobab, as to become unmindful of the true Guide and Leader of Souls. How often God is compelled to isolate us from human voices, and to remove our Hobabs from our side, that we may be shut up to Himself. When we have given Him his right place, He will probably restore our judges as at the first, and our counsellors as at the beginning, but the first necessity is that the eye should be single towards Himself, so that the whole body may be full of light.

II.—The Failure of Hobab, and the Divine Substitute.—The desert chieftain was by no means enamoured of the proposal of his great relative. He had no desire to leave his tribe, his camping-ground, his free, careless existence, to link his fortunes to that vast and ill-mannered host.

And other considerations may have weighed with him. It was only a month before that Aaron and his sons had been set apart for their sacred work, and the fire of God had fallen on their dedicatory sacrifices. The people had seen and shouted; but before evening their joy had been shrouded in sudden mourning. For some violation of the sacred ritual, or perhaps, as the subsequent prohibition of wine suggests, for personal misconduct whilst engaged in their ministry, the two young priests had been stricken dead, and Aaron forbidden to weep. This must have struck an awful fear through the camp.

Shortly after this, another incident occurred. The son of an Israelitish woman, whose father was an Egyptian, had blasphemed the holy name of God, and cursed in the midst of conflict with a man of Israel. The blasphemer had been stoned. The sentence must have seemed severe, though, as God was King, it was high treason; but this may have been another deterrent cause in influencing the decision of Hobab.

The result of it all was that in reply to Moses' request, he said bluntly, "I will not go, but I will depart unto mine own land and to my kindred." Moses still further urged and entreated him, but whether he succeeded or not is doubtful, though there are some reasons for thinking that the second request prevailed, because the descendants of the Kenite are numbered amidst the chosen people.

But it would seem as if his aid was rendered needless by the provision of guidance immediately promised. Up to this moment the position of the Ark had been in the midst of the host in front of Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh, but henceforth it went three days' journey in front of the people, "to seek out a resting-place for them." We are left to conceive of its lonely journey as it went forward, borne by its attendant band of priests and Levites, and perhaps accompanied by a little group of princes and warriors, and specially by the great lawgiver himself. Far behind, at a distance of miles, followed the camp with its tumult, its murmur of many voices, the cries of little children, the measured tramp of armed bands. But none of these intruded on the silence and solemnity which, like majestic angels, passed forward with that courier group accompanying the ark, over which cherubic forms were bending. That Moses was there is indubitable, for the august sentences are recorded with which he announced its starting forth and its setting down. In the one case, looking into the thin air, which seemed to him thronged with opposing forces of men and demons, he cried, "Arise, Jehovah, and let thine enemies be scattered, and let those that hate Thee flee before Thee"; and in the other he cried, "Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Israel." What need for Hobab now! Though all the guides that knew the desert pathways had gathered in one great band to help the pilgrim hosts, there had been no need for any one of them, or all of them together. The Lord Himself had become director and guide, and all that Israel had to do was to keep at a distance sufficiently wide to enable them to reap the fullest benefit of its advance guard. Thus God Himself superseded the proposal of Moses by an expedient which more than met their needs.

What consolation there is to each of us, in realising the spiritual truth underlying this historical fact! We have to pass into the untried and unknown, and know not the way we should take. Some have to go alone. Some with the memory of companions that once went at their side, but whom they will see no more in this life. Some, though at present dowered with dear fellow-pilgrims, are apprehensive and fearful as to the route, and what a day may bring forth. But amid all Jesus is with them, and goes before them, whether for war or rest. He never will forsake nor leave them. And the days as they pass will enable them to say with ever new meaning, I know whom I have believed.

The Lord Jesus is the true Ark of the Covenant, who has gone before us through the world and death, through the grave and the last rally of the hosts of darkness to the glory. We have but to follow Him. It is for Him to scatter our enemies, while we stand still and see his salvation. It is for Him to choose our resting-place, while we lie down and prepare ourselves for new obedience.

Let us not anticipate God's guidance, or press on Him unduly. Those that believe shall not make haste. Let there be an interval between the Ark and your steps, so that you may see, so far as possible, what God would have you do; and then deliberately, thoughtfully, but with fixed determination, follow. He will "be to us instead of eyes."

And, oh! the bliss of knowing that Jesus is between us and our foes. Before they can hurt us they must reckon with Him. In Him, too, is Rest, so that we may lie under his shadow with great delight, and know that all must be well, since He has chosen our inheritance for us.

THE LONDON WESLEYAN MISSION.

The annual meeting of the London Wesleyan Mission, held at Exeter Hall last week, was full of enthusiasm and animation, the mission work in the great City having, as the Chairman put it, "roused the circuits."

Mr. John Hall, who presided, said that the work of the London Mission had struck a chord that had vibrated in the churches, and reached the country towns. He came from a village, and it had been felt there; it had reminded them in his town of Leek that they ought to be doing more. In that little town they had thousands of people who never entered a place of worship. They had got two of Mr. Champness's evangelists, who were doing a grand work, which allowed one of their best local preachers to be set aside for special work. It had all come from the Wesleyan London Mission, and thousands of other circuits in the Connexion could say the same.

Rev. W. D. Walters, secretary, said: So far as the spiritual work is concerned, there is an advance all along the line. Never were there more abundant evidences that God is in our work. During the year we have secured two additional halls—one in connection with the South Mission, and one in connection with the Central Mission. So that we have to-day eighteen halls and chapels in connection with the London Mission. We have ten ministers appointed to this work. We have between sixty and seventy sisters doing Christ-like work in visiting the homes of the people, and I have sometimes ventured to say that this loving ministration is the very backbone of the London Mission. We have twenty devoted men set apart specially to this work. We have some hundreds of voluntary workers, many of whom devote hours every day. Last year we reported 3068 members, with 902 on trial. We shall have an increase this year of quite five hundred members. When it is remembered that last year and the year before we reported similar large increases, this is matter for congratulation. The vast majority of these are gathered out of the world. We have at the present time in round figures, nearly five thousand people actually meeting in class. We must look abroad to estimate the results. In moving up and down the country, we have met, in every circuit more or less, young men and women who had been converted by the instrumentality of the London Mission, and have had thereby enkindled in their hearts an enthusiasm which is setting the country on fire. When we went to the Œcumenical Conference, we found in America that the London Mission and its work were recognised. Mr. Mark Guy Pearse also found in Australia that everywhere the news of the London Mission had gone before, and only last week I received news from a place in that part of the world where they have opened a large hall on the lines of the London Mission.

Testimony as to the operations in the various districts followed: Rev. Walford Green speaking of the general work, Rev. Peter Thompson of the East-end, and Rev. Hugh Price Hughes of the West-end Mission.

AMONG THE SANTALS.—Miss F. Rowat, who, three years ago, went from Bristol to work among the Santals, under the direction of Mr. Haegert, has removed to Mihigam, E.I.R., Bengal, and, unconnected with any society, has taken up the work formerly carried on by Miss Hollyer. Writing from the Mission House at the place named, on February 22, she says: "We have been in camp for the past three months, and have enjoyed seasons of much blessing. We have a mixed population to labour amongst, but the Santals are in the majority, therefore our efforts are chiefly directed to bringing them to a saving knowledge of the truth. Our hearts have rejoiced by seeing the first-fruits gathered in; several more are not far from the kingdom. Our schools give Bible instruction to over sixty scholars daily, and two native evangelists are visiting the people systematically."

WORK IN THE WEST INDIES.

HAYTI.

Rev. D. N. M. Kitchin, Baptist Missionary, Cape Haytien, Hayti, writes:—"Our hearts are more than ever gladdened in the work connected with the North Haytian Mission. We have laboured throughout the year without interruption, and the efforts put forth were not without the 'signs following.'

"A most hopeful sign of late has been a stronger desire on the part of converts generally to rescue their perishing fellow-citizens. At one of the stations, where there is a church of only fifteen members, there are three evangelists, three local preachers, and two Bible and tract colporteurs.

"At all four of our Mission stations may be found some agency or auxiliary Bible Society for the purpose of scattering the Word of God among the people. At one station two young men, full of promise and hopefully converted, have gone forth to pursue such studies as will, under God, fit them for the work of the Gospel ministry. This fact, while auguring well for the future of the Mission generally, dates a new era for that station in particular. Given a long lease of peace, and multiplied missionary agencies, with the blessing of the Prince of Peace, what may we not be emboldened to expect for Hayti in the not very distant future? We earnestly solicit the prayers of your readers in all lands on the behalf of Hayti."

BARBADOS AND ANTIGUA.

Admiral H. D. Grant, C.B., sends us the following notes of work in the West Indies:—"I am sure it will rejoice the hearts of many of your readers to hear of the progress of the Y.M.C.A. at Barbados. It was my privilege twelve years ago to found this branch, amid many prognostications that it would not succeed. I have heard of it from time to time, and great was my pleasure, when at Barbados last month for a fortnight, to find it very much alive; the spiritual work was to the fore, and the young men on Sabbath mornings were afloat, speaking the Word to the seamen, and encouraging them to come to the services in the rooms. One young man has set on foot a Fishermen's Mission, has raised the money to build a small mission-room, and I believe has an idea of converting it into a Sailors' Rest.

"I was glad to find that racial difficulties had been overcome, coloured men and negroes taking full part. The hon. secretary, Mr. Trimingham, a partner in a leading firm of solicitors, is most active and earnest in the work. His sister, Miss Edith, is the hon. secretary and the moving spirit in the Y.W.C.A., which however is not supported as it deserves to be. The meetings during the Y.W.C.A. Week of Prayer were well attended, and much earnestness was manifested. There is, unfortunately, a lack of funds, and so real danger of its being dissolved. I should be glad to receive pecuniary help, as only a comparatively small amount will serve to give the Y.W.C.A. a building of their own, and renew its life. I noticed much more religious activity, but, alas! there is also a growth of ritualism, in the Church of England, and antagonism to the simple Gospel.

"I spent a month in Antigua, where I was permitted to stir the community up to observe the Week of Prayer. The Moravian Bishop, Mr. Weiss, and the Wesleyan pastor, Mr. Sansom, entered most warmly into the work, and crowded congregations assembled each evening in the alternate churches. The prayers by our negro brethren were marked by a brevity and deep reverence which completely surprised me. Sometimes I was obliged to look at the speakers to realise that it was one of the unjustly disparaged race who was leading our prayers. I was desirous of starting a Y.M.C.A. in St. John's, and had a successful meeting, to whom I explained the modus operandi and value of Y.M.C.A. Some forty gave in their names; but the absence of any prominent member of the Christian community to take the lead has, for a time at least, caused the formation of one to be in abeyance.

"I am not anxious to speak of all I have been permitted to do on my recent voyage. I would only ask the Lord's people to give Him the praise and glory for whatever has been done."

AMERICAN NOTES.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

Mr. Robert Ingersoll, the noted infidel, has sued Pastor A. C. Dixon, of Brooklyn, for libel. The case will attract great attention. It is reported that Mr. Ingersoll, some years since, headed a list of free-thinkers, who made every effort to revoke the laws which exclude impure literature from the United States mail. Such action placed him in the category of those who seek to poison our youth by impurity and obscenity. This corrupt fruit of his atheism lowered him in the public estimation. However much he tries now to advocate liberty and morality, the record of this outrageous attack on moral law hangs as a black, condemning cloud upon him. Pastor Dixon on a public occasion referred to Ingersoll's relation to the would-be repealers of this law, charging the infidel with being their paid agent; whereupon, the Pastor was sued for five thousand dollars. Ingersoll requests a secret trial; Dixon demands a public one. It will soon come on.

Another priest has walked out a free man from Roman slavery. The shackles were broken through the instrumentality of "Father" O'Connor. The convert is Father Nicholas Redding, who was ordained priest in 1879 by Bishop Kendrick, of St. Louis. He made his first address as a converted man on Sunday evening, February 28, in "Christ's Mission." The iniquities of the Confessional first disturbed his mind. If faithful to his calling, he must indoctrinate young people in unlawful deeds by probing questions, if through native modesty he refuses to discharge the duties of his office, he is an unfaithful priest. Each horn of the dilemma gored him. He came to Brother O'Connor, who soon taught him the way of the Lord more perfectly. Father Redding now rejoices in salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ alone. In his testimony he stated that the Confessional was the foundation and pillar of the Romish system, and if it were banished the great ecclesiastical structure would collapse, while every priest would be rendered powerless over the Catholic conscience.

Philadelphia, always prompt in her charities, has sent a noble steamer, laden with tons of food, to the starving Russians. Immense crowds were present on Washington's birthday, when the ship hoisted her flags and started her steam for the ocean voyage. Public prayer was offered, speeches made, and good wishes heartily bestowed. The offering was costly, and thousands participated; but it has not—in any measure noticeable—rendered the city poorer, or lessened comfort in her homes. We could send a hundred such ships from our shores, and still have fulness of bread. God has prospered our nation beyond many; may we ever be prompt to give to those who are in need!

Rev. Jacob Freshman, who has been doing a blessed work among the Jews of New York city and elsewhere, has been recently attacked most violently by certain of our religious newspapers. Should these wicked reports reach your shores, I hasten to say, that they are false and foolish. Mr. Freshman has a noble committee co-working with him, who repudiate the charges in toto. The vindication is complete, but our honoured brother has been stabbed by some one who misled the journals, which hurriedly published harmful misstatements concerning a laborious and zealous missionary.

IN THE INTEREST OF THE FEEBLE-MINDED.—An energetic effort is being made to establish in the vicinity of Birmingham a working home for semi-imbecile women and girls. The necessity for such an institution is probably but little recognised by those who are unfamiliar with Poor Law work, and with the class of feeble-minded persons who are the greatest source of difficulty to Boards of Guardians. For absolute lunatics, the blind, and the deaf and dumb, provision has been made; not waiting for the extension of the law so as to meet the case of such as are semi-imbecile, a committee of Birmingham ladies has taken the matter up. The suggestion is that premises be taken for laundry purposes far enough away from the city for the air to be good and healthy, and that two or three cottages, rather than a large house, be secured or built adjoining the laundry, in order to give power to classify the girls according to age and moral character. Of course the Homes will not be self-supporting; the work is charitable in conception, and must be so in its general execution. In view of the sad consequences of the neglect which is now so common, the importance of the undertaking, will be readily conceded. Further information may be had from Miss Stacey, 30, Calthorpe-road, Edgbaston, Birmingham.

FAREWELL TO EMIGRANT LADS.

A large audience was drawn into Exeter Hall, on the evening of last Tuesday week, to join in the expression of hearty and prayerful wishes for God's blessing upon three hundred lads who have since started for Canada from the Homes in which they had been gathered by Dr. Barnardo from the poverty, misery, and danger of overcrowded London.

The meeting had many attractive accompaniments. Most of the youthful voyagers were on the platform behind the numerous influential ladies and gentlemen who attended to show sympathy with this good work. In the course of the evening a troop of about forty robust-looking youths, intended for farm work in Manitoba, marched on the platform from the side of the hall, and went through some drill in their farmer's costume; little handbell ringers pealed out "Home, sweet Home"; girls wielded dumb bells in musical time; xylophone and dulcimer were deftly handled by three boy players; and half-a-dozen little fellows showed what they can do in the gymnastic way.

In the absence of Colonel Howard Vincent, through indisposition, the chair was taken by Mr. E. S. Norris, M.P. for the Limehouse division of the Tower Hamlets, whose words indicated enthusiastic appreciation of Dr. Barnardo's rescue efforts. Mr. Norris claimed that the success of this work is due to the rigid application of wise principles, namely, in selecting only lads morally and physically fit for emigration; in the careful instruction and training which precedes departure; and in continual supervision after lads have been placed out. Thus, the waste material of our cities is being turned into the precious metal of fruitful lives.

Dr. Barnardo's long speech covered many interesting details, all strongly appealing to the well-earned confidence of the Christian public. He earnestly desired that the lads may feel they are carrying with them the kindly feeling and prayerful thoughts of Christians at home. The party about to start for Canada is the largest ever sent out at one time. The amount needed to send out these 308 lads is £3060, of which £700 remained to be collected, a sum which he hoped would be made up at that meeting. The cost of emigration for boys and lads is nine pounds and eleven pounds respectively, including every expense from the time of leaving the institution in London to arrival at Montreal. Some joyful, spontaneous letters from lads who are prospering in their adopted country, were read, one expressing gratitude for having been won to the house of God before he left England. Every lad who puts his name down for the colonies is examined as to his fitness, and is well tested, and unless he proves satisfactory is not sent out. There is, moreover, a home ready for each emigrant. This emigration scheme is no longer an experiment, but an undoubted success. Of the three hundred then ready to go out, only forty-six had father and mother living, 115 had only a mother living, and one hundred are absolutely orphans. These rescued lads, from various parts of the United Kingdom, some from abroad, had been swallowed up in the terrible destitution of the great city. Work such as this only needs larger opportunities to prove itself the truest and most successful means of solving some of England's darkest social problems.

Canon Barker spoke very sympathetically and hopefully concerning the departing lads, suggesting that each supporter of the work should keep up correspondence with some individual boy or girl. He rejoiced that these rescued ones were being cut adrift from pernicious, dangerous, and destructive surroundings, which are the disgraceful results of bad laws and past neglect of Christian responsibility; and, as they went forth from the encouragements of a meeting like this, he reminded them that, under God, their future is in their own hands, exhorting them to truthfulness, honesty, abstinence from evil, and to prayer and the use of God's Word.

Mr. Henry Varley said that poverty has caused the emigration of millions in the past; but he hoped that philanthropic sagacity may lead to the devotion of Christian wealth to the purpose of peopling vast lands which are pining for human life. The state of our streets at night eloquently indicates the evil harvest of dangerous forces for which we are largely indebted to great brewers and distillers. Would that every lad going out to Canada might take with him the consciousness of heart and life yielded to Jesus Christ. He implored them to go nowhere and not to do or say anything which would make sad the heart of him who had been used of God in their rescue. He trusted that Dr. Barnardo will know not only the sympathy of the British public, but also the continued favour of Him who says to his servants, "Be strong and courageous; for lo! I am with you always."

In the course of a few eloquent words, Mr. S. Gurney Sheppard mentioned that besides the emigration work, Dr. Barnardo has placed out in situations at home over one thousand rescued children.

Donation papers filled up during the evening, together with the collection, represented a sum of £300 towards the balance referred to in the Doctor's speech.

The party of emigrants left Euston, en route for Canada, on the Thursday morning following this meeting in Exeter Hall.

THE BAPTISTS IN FRANCE.

Probably there is nothing more striking or encouraging in recent evangelistic effort than the progress of our Baptist cause in France during the past year. Numbering in all but eleven churches, two of which are in Paris, and not one of these of any great standing as to numbers or social influence, a spirit of devotion and aggression has manifested itself, which now gives promise of large things. The Paris churches are working vigorously, and several mission-halls are sustained within and without the city walls, in addition to the main centres of church and evangelistic work.

Pasteur Saillens's church was only founded three years since, and it now numbers nearly two hundred members, whilst the older church of the Rue de Lille has grown at almost the same rate. During 1891 ninety-three converts were baptized at the Rue St. Denis by M. Saillens, and sixty-nine at Rue de Lille by M. Vincent, the great majority of them being from Romanism, or the infidelity which the Papal system has generated amongst the masses. Almost every evening in the week large numbers come in to listen to the Gospel, and no meeting is without its enquirers, so that numerous additions are being received almost every Sabbath. A dinner-hour service is also conducted every day in the Rue St. Denis Hall, and there are seldom less than forty working-men present, whilst the number sometimes rises to sixty or seventy. The results gathered by the small provincial churches have been also in like proportion. They are to be accounted for by the growing disposition and longing of the people for the true Gospel, together with a spirit of prayer and faith, which has been divinely bestowed upon the churches.

The temperance movement is also gaining a growing hold. In connection with the organisation known as "La Société de la Croix Bleu," a good rescue work is being accomplished, hand-in-hand with the preaching of the Gospel. There is much need for such effort, for here, as in England, intemperance is the curse of the people. We rejoice, however, that some of our most wonderful triumphs of conversion are from amongst the slaves of the glass.

THE OUTRAGE AT THE PIRÆUS.

Writing with reference to the recent outrages upon Protestants at the Piræus, Dr. Kalopothákes, of Athens, says:—"The newspaper telegrams were inaccurate in details, but the one great fact was true—that the little evangelical church was dismantled and pillaged, and the company of believers shut up in it, during the long-continued bombardment with stones, were exposed to the greatest peril. I wish publicly to express our grateful recognition of the signal manifestation of God's protecting care in preserving the lives of all, and protecting from serious injury.

"We would ask Christian friends everywhere to unite in fervent prayer that this trial may be blessed to the spiritual good of those who are the objects of persecution, that wisdom and grace may be given according to our need, and that the power of a living faith may be manifested to the praise of the blessed Lord. We ask, too, for prayers for the nation and for the Established Church, that a better spirit may be awakened, that the principles of true religious liberty may come to be better understood, and that there may be a return to the purity and simplicity of the truth as it is found in the Gospel."

INDIAN VILLAGES ENLIGHTENED.

The name Tarn Taran means, "The place of getting saved and saving others." Some years ago, when Rev. R. Clark, of the C.M.S., was working at Peshawar, a servant of his accepted the message of God's love, confessed Christ, and was baptized with his wife and son. Years passed; Mr. Clark went home on furlough, the servants were dismissed, and this man returned to his village home in the Tarn Taran district, a part of the Màjha Country, where dwell that great and most interesting of tribes in North India, the Sikhs. The man, having a house and a good deal of land of his own, settled down to farming. But alas! like too many of our own countrymen when far away from the surroundings of Christianity, and the ordinances and helps of our faith, he became careless and forgetful, and sank almost, save in name, to the level of heathenism. No missionary had as yet gone forth to the homes of the Sikhs, and there was no Christian friend or teacher for many miles. Other children were born, and though taught in a rough way, they grew up almost heathen.

About nine years ago Rev. E. Guilford, of the C.M.S., went out to this large district, which contains about four hundred towns and villages, and commenced working amongst the people, finding a very warm welcome in most places, and a hearty response to the Gospel message. Soon afterwards some of the ladies of the C.E.Z.M.S. followed and commenced work among the women. Among the first to come under conviction of sin was the eldest son of the man above-mentioned. As a little boy he had been taught by Mrs. Robert Clark, and now the lessons of his childhood came back to him. Alas! the heathen wife to whom he had been married was greatly enraged at her husband's state of mind, and vowed she never would embrace "the religion of the English." However, months passed, and the ladies diligently sought her out, and after a time she became as eager as her husband to accept Christ and become one of his true followers. After this couple followed a little band of nineteen relations out of that village, among them the old father and mother, who became penitent.

From another village there came one day to the door of the little hospital worked by the C.E.Z. ladies a woman sick unto death. She was relieved, taught concerning the Saviour, and went home to tell the good news, with the result of one or two afterwards accepting Christ, whilst she herself was baptized, and died rejoicing. From another village came another patient to the hospital, and, after a long stay, she also went home and witnessed for Christ, finally returning for baptism, accompanied by a friend, a dear old Sikh widow, whom she had drawn by her words but who was not baptized then. In a fourth village, where Rev. E. Guilford preached, the head man became impressed, and communicated his convictions to his fellow-villagers, when, finally, the whole village decided for Christ, and after instruction were baptized. Thus God by his Holy Spirit is building to Himself a Church of living stones in that district. But alas! there is no building belong to the Mission as yet into which these people can be gathered for religious teaching and worship. For many years a bedroom in Mr. Guilford's house sufficed, but it is impossible now for all to find room there.

After not a few hopes and fears, Mr. Guilford now writes that a most suitable piece of land has been offered him by Government, which will afford room for a church and hostelry, where our Christian friends can put up and stay when they come in for services and religious gatherings of any kind. The price of the land is £500, of which sum Mr. Guilford has none at present, though that needed for the building is almost complete now. Help is urgently needed, as the opportunity may pass of obtaining this site, which it is most important to get if possible, connecting as it will do the two Mission Compounds, and bringing the people into close communication with the missionaries and workers in the little mission station. We appeal to all who love the work of the C.M.S., to which this church will belong—we appeal to all who love our Lord Jesus Christ's appearing, to come speedily to our aid that we may obtain this much-needed building for the spiritual instruction and help of the people of the Màjha. Communications may be addressed to Miss Hanbury, Dynevor House, Richmond.

Annie Ireland MacAlpine.

BY J. WAKEFIELD MACGILL.

Manchester witnessed a melancholy scene on Saturday last—an enormous line of mourning coaches bearing to the Southern Cemetery at Manchester the precious remains of a most holy and gifted saint. At 3.30, on Wednesday, Annie Ireland MacAlpine passed away, upon a deathbed of surpassing triumph.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Maclaren, in Cambridge-street Mission Hall, where her marvellous series of weekly addresses were given to the ladies of Manchester. The coffin, covered with a few exquisite white wreaths, was laid on the very spot where she had stood for years eloquently unfolding the deepest truths of our religion to about three or four hundred women, chiefly of the middle-classes. Councillor McDougall, her old and tried friend, pointing to her coffin, pronounced quite an elegy on her memory. He spoke of her youthful devotion, her burning zeal, the mighty influence of her testimony, the hundreds that were awakened through the unction of her splendid proclamation of the Gospel; of her leaving Manchester in the midst of a career of usefulness, bearing away the sorrows of a city; then of her return, not again as the powerful evangelist, but as the marvellously-gifted teacher. She gathered round her, like a magnet, all the women of genuine metal; all the hungry souls who wanted feeding; all the empty souls who wanted filling; all the shivering souls who wanted heat; all the sorrowing souls who wanted comfort; all the wretched souls who wanted to slough the world; all the ardent souls who wanted to know how to fight the battles of the Lord. These came week after week to this school of the prophetesses, and were taught by this inspired woman, who dwelt meanwhile in the midst of the sanctities of home, caring for a delicate husband and little children, but abiding in the secret place of the Most High, and receiving messages direct from Himself to carry to the people.

I never met in Manchester one single woman of the highest type of devotion, consecration and power, united to well-balanced views of truth and a broad, comprehensive grasp of the theology of our religion, that I did not find owed much to Mrs. Macalpine. I consider that the great forward movement of the Church of God in this city, which has been witnessed during the last ten years, owes its existence to her influence. The constituency she gathered round her came from all churches and all undenominational organisations. She fed the ragged schools with teachers, the street-corners with the best preachers, she led the Christian women of the city in Gospel temperance, she instituted the highest class of rescue work for the fallen, she originated our prison-gate mission, and up to and beyond her health and strength she was ready to stand up for God and temperance and purity.

Though she was essentially a woman, no man could take a firmer grasp of a subject, or brighten it with a more lucid intelligence, or advocate it with more burning earnestness. And Manchester has lost all this, and well might Manchester weep when the cortège moved along its streets. The heavens might well smile upon us as we passed along our way, for what the earth had lost the sky had gained. As the venerated and venerable father of the Baptist body of this city stood at the head of the newly-opened grave, at the foot of which were her sorrowing husband and her little children, the scene was very impressive. About three hundred women—many of them her spiritual children—were grouped around, dressed in black, but nearly all with a good deal of pure white, as an emblem of the brightness that mingled with their sorrow.

Just as the coffin had been lowered into the grave a brilliant beam of sunshine seemed to fill it with the most glorious light, and sparkled on the wreaths that lay around. Dr. Maclaren thanked the Lord for the emblematic ray that was making even the darkling grave so bright.

The following lines sing to the hymn on page 66, in part 4 of the old Revival Tune Book. As it is probably out of print I shall be glad to send copies to any of your readers who write for them.

Gently we bore her to her rest—
Sweet perfumed flowers upon her breast—
Tenderly laid her beneath the sod,
Knowing her spirit was with her God.
Lay her to rest;
Jesus will watch her,
Lay her to rest.

Hers was a bright and burning soul,
Wholly resigned to his control;
Pure as the snowdrop her spirit fair,
Never a shadow had rested there.

Hushed is the tongue that spoke his word,
Powerless the hand that held his word,
Cold is the heart that impassion'd burned,
Silent the footstep that never turned.

Hers was the voice that woke my soul,
Showed me my name on the muster-roll,
Led me to pathways of joy and life,
Called me to enter the glorious strife.

She dwelt up there in the purest light,
Wondrous the view that met her sight,
Gazing in worship on things unknown,
But to her Lord and his chosen one.

Ne'er fell that voice upon mine ear
But I felt sure my Lord was near;
Ever her great theme, "A world to save,
God in his mercy a Saviour gave."

Many a tear was shed to-day,
Passing along that solemn way.
But every ray of the cloudless sun
Seemed like a word from the glorified one.

Then when a beam lit up the grave,
Gilding the flow'rs that lovers gave,
Into each heart stole a glory bright,
Brought on the wing of the beauteous light.

So we have left the casket fair,
Knowing right well no gem was there.
Jesus will watch o'er the mystic mould,
And the pure soul in his love enfold.

FROM LADY HOPE.

For some time past a great effort has been made to help the poor people of the Borough, London, S.E., where many thousands are crowded together in blocks of houses, and close dark streets, many in the very greatest poverty, and suffering from cold, sickness, and many other distresses. Clothing and coal clubs have been opened, mothers' meetings, and sewing-classes for women and children, as well as entertainments and readings for the men. For cases of illness a dispensary has been tried, and many other ways are found by which the misery of distressed families can be alleviated, and their lives brightened. Hundreds of rooms are visited, and the welcomes there received prove the importance to the poor of true friendliness.

"Don't pass us by!" they say sometimes. And certainly they never pass us by! For as regularly as our various meetings and classes are held, they are crowded by these poor people, anxious to pay in their pennies for substantial clothing and fuel, and also to learn of true comfort, to meet their friends, and get a cheering word, sometimes a cup of hot tea or coffee. The coals are now selling at such exorbitant prices that the grates are in numberless cases empty, and the sufferings from cold and illness are indescribable.

A child, dying of bronchitis in a room where the whole family lived, and the father sat bemoaning his long absence from work through severe illness, was visited by one of our helpers. Finding the mother almost prostrate with grief and weakness, she stayed the whole night to nurse the child. There was no food, no fire. Presently she heard a whisper, "Go to Mr. —— and borrow a penny, we must have a shovelful of coals to keep the lady warm." Now, the penny would not buy the coals. They asked nothing for themselves.

The news has just been brought me that the small hall used by us as the centre of our work is suddenly to be taken from us, as the rent cannot be paid. And we are to be turned out of these premises, which already are far too small and ill-ventilated. We wanted more space, and now we find ourselves deprived of what we have. The hall has been in the hands of friends who have allowed us to use it.

Nothing can do more desperate harm in these days of necessity amongst the poorest and most atheistic of the working classes than suddenly, with a few days' notice, to break up their clubs and meetings, so that they find themselves all turned adrift, and deserted by those who have professed an interest in them. It means to them a loss of almost everything that is bright and hopeful in their lives. Will your readers come to our aid, and help us immediately to obtain, if possible, a better and permanent room? Or to retain and enlarge the one we are using?

On account of severe illness, I have been obliged to try southern air, but I hope soon to return to England.—Yours truly,

G. R. Hope (Lady Hope).

MISSIONARY PENNIES.

Only a penny! What a trifle! And yet, startling as it may seem at first sight, the great question of Foreign Missions is, in one aspect of it, mainly a matter of pennies. The Lord of the Harvest has laid the burden of the world-wide whitened fields on the hearts of many, who are both able and willing to go forth to reap. And He has put into the hands of his Church the means for sending them. And yet, shameful to say, at the end of the nineteenth century since our Risen Lord said go ye, and at the end of the first century of the Modern Missionary Movement, the gifts of the wealthy Church of Christ in the United Kingdom amount to less than one penny per head per week! What a miserably infinitesimal percentage of the incomes of her members this represents cannot, of course, be accurately calculated, nor is the subject an inviting one.

A moderate estimate places the number of Church members and adherents in the United Kingdom at five millions, and their contributions to foreign missions at one million sterling. A simple sum in mental arithmetic shows us that this averages less than a weekly contribution of one penny per member. (And of this it should be remembered that a considerable proportion is derived from the pence-boxes of the Sunday-schools.)

Is not one reason why the amount given is so shamefully small in proportion to the amount needed, and to the amount withheld, that the system of giving is defective? Is it not too much taken for granted, when those best able to give or most interested have paid their annual subscription, and those not so able to give or not so much interested have put their extra shilling or half-crown into the plate when the missionary has made the annual appeal, that they have discharged their responsibility until next year?

Seeing that a penny a week is about the rate at which the Christian public gives of its abundance towards its prime duty of evangelising the world, the has been formed, with the object of getting this small subscription doubled. There are hundreds who could help the cause of foreign missions by collecting and thousands by giving these "Missionary Pennies," and it is hoped that this Association may prove a real aid to all Protestant missions.

Its principal rules are—

1.—That the membership consist of those who will undertake to collect contributions of one penny and upwards per week.

2.—That members may state any missionary society or mission to which they wish their collections to be given.

In order to sustain the interest of members in mission work a copy of The Illustrated Missionary News will be sent monthly to each, and every one who sends up a contribution card entirely filled will receive an interesting volume on foreign missions.

It may be noted that, although the aim of the association is to secure regular contributions at the rate of one, two, or three pence per week, this does not necessarily mean weekly collections, as the amount can be paid quarterly or monthly.

The Council of the Association includes the well-known names of Rev. H. Grattan Guinness, D.D., Rev. F. B. Meyer, B.A., Mr. R. C. Morgan, Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, and Mr. Geo. Williams.

The Association is intended to help all missions equally, and members may nominate the particular society, or mission (or even individual missionary), to which they would like their collections devoted. It will enable all well-wishers of missions to help on the work regularly, either as collectors or contributors.

Members of churches or missions, Young Men's or Young Women's Associations, or Bible-classes, senior scholars, or others willing to become members, or who can induce others to join, are invited to write for forms of application and contribution cards, to the Hon. Secretary, Mr. John Jackson, St. Martin's House, 1, Gresham-street, London, E.C.

JEWS IN NEW YORK.—A correspondent writes: "It is remarkable how great a work the Master has laid upon this our young brother, Mr. H. Warszawiak. There are every Saturday afternoon pretty near a thousand Jews earnestly listening to his preaching. Souls are coming out to the light; we have just had the privilege of baptizing four of our most earnest Hebrew brethren."

L.M.S. "SELF-DENIAL" WEEK.—We are glad to hear that this year the income of the London Missionary Society from all sources promises to be £11,000 larger than last. Rev. Dr. Mackennal, writing in The Review of the Churches, remarks:—"It will be found that Self-denial Week was a joyous week in the experience of those who adopted it, and that its outcome has been the recognition that God's claim on his people for service is far more pressing than religious conventionality has yet recognised. The whole style of Christian living is coming up for review."

The World's Young Men.

MR. L. D. WISHARD'S TOUR.

One of the most capable, active, and best-known workers among the educated young men of the United States in recent years has been Mr. L. D. Wishard, to whom was mainly due the inception of the famous Summer School at Mr. Moody's home in Massachusetts. About four years since, Mr. Wishard, accompanied by his wife, started out on a visit to Eastern lands, to investigate the religious condition of young men in such great countries as India, Japan, and China. He and his wife have now returned to our shores, having reached Edinburgh at the beginning of last week from Norway. Our special correspondent in Scotland was fortunate enough to meet Mr. Wishard soon after his arrival, and, in conversation with him, learned many interesting facts with respect to the subject which has been occupying his attention throughout his long journey in Oriental lands. The conversation first of all turned on the state of matters in as that topic was freshest in Mr. Wishard's mind. As to Copenhagen and its students, it was pleasing to hear that the "Summer School" is being acclimatized in the capital of Denmark. In the year 1889 five hundred Japanese students sent a message to the Students' Conference at Northfield, expressing heart sympathy with the desire "to make Jesus King." This message from the far East was privately sent from America to one of the most active Christian pastors in Christiania. When he received the message several Christian young men were with him, and the resolve was taken then and there to institute a Summer School for Scandinavian students. Accordingly, 160 young men met and spent nearly a week in a most profitable conference. In their general character the proceedings were similar to those at Northfield, and it was altogether a great advance on anything of the kind ever held in Northern Europe.

One of the rarest men in Scandinavia, says Mr. Wishard, is M. Westergaard, Professor of Political Economy in Copenhagen University. He is a very choice spirit, is popular among students, and bids fair to become a spiritual leader among them. Another conference is to be held next August, on board a naval ship, at which three hundred students are to be accommodated. It is exciting much expectation in the different universities, which are sending representative groups, and a time of much spiritual quickening is anticipated. Foreign missions will be a prominent topic of discussion, and there seems to be an increasing missionary interest among the Scandinavian universities.

Karl Fries is the able general secretary of the Swedish Y.M.C. Associations. After taking a philosophical degree, he is to give himself up to Association work. A university man himself, he will be able greatly to influence the university element. There is a Y.M.C.A. in Upsala, including in its membership a hundred students.

GERMANY.

Passing next in thought to Germany, where he had made a stay, Mr. Wishard said that the Christian students in German universities had also started a conference on the Northfield lines, having been suggested by the meetings there, attended by German delegates to the International Y.M.C.A. Convention in America. Baron von Starck, a bright young man, of good social standing, is assistant secretary to the Berlin Y.M.C.A., and is much interested in work among students. Another excellent worker there is Count Puckler, who leads and largely supports a City Mission in Berlin, and who has also been prominent in connection with the students' movement. In the Berlin University there is a Y.M.C.A. with a membership of one hundred. The Berlin Y.M.C.A. has three departments, one for business young men, one for mechanics, and a third for students. The German students held their second Conference last year near Berlin, when there was an attendance of sixty students and professors.

Mr. Wishard had an interesting fact to mention about Geneva. The students there, he says, are becoming interested in the modern development of university "settlements" in poor districts. A bright young pastor in the city, M. Choisy, who is in pretty close touch with students, is anxious to enlist their help in carrying on aggressive work, and something of this sort is likely soon to be organised. The students at Buda Pesth, in Hungary, have a missionary society, and there is a deepening of spiritual life among them. As to the students throughout Continental Europe generally, Mr. Wishard is of opinion that they are in a much more hopeful spiritual condition now than they have ever been in the history of university life on the old Continent.

JAPAN.

Mr. Wishard's mission was chiefly to the far East, and the state of things in the Empire of Japan claimed a good deal of his time and study. The Y.M.C.A. in Japan, he believes, is being solidly organised. It is reaching the student class, and among them Christianity is to-day winning its greatest victories. Its influence is spreading from the middle ranks of society both upward and downward, though not rapidly. It has scarcely as yet touched the lowest labouring class, such as the coolies and jinricksha men. A careful estimate shows that in seven of the leading Government universities, a fourteenth part of the students are professing Christians. This is a larger proportion than could have been found in American universities at the beginning of the century. It is the ambition of every Japanese student to graduate at an Imperial university, and many go from the Christian colleges to complete their course in the Government institutions, while young men from Christian families go there direct. No organised work had been done among these students till about four years ago. As a result of the formation of Y.M.C. Associations in the Government universities, the movement has spread to the Christian colleges, and there are now twelve students' Y.M.C.A.'s. Nine of these are in the city of Tokio, which has over forty thousand students—the largest number of advanced students in any city in the world. These organisations are steadily growing in influence. A new building is being erected at an expense of some £3000, contributed by American associations and other friends. A building is also being erected for the business men's Y.M.C.A., in another section of the city, at a cost of eight thousand or nine thousand pounds. Mr. Swift, the general secretary, is being reinforced by an additional secretary from America; and the first Japanese general secretary has been secured—a young man of high education, as well as executive ability. It is purposed to extend the influence of the movement among the universities throughout the Empire. Last summer their third National Conference was held, modelled on the Northfield plan. This annual gathering is increasing in attendance and influence.

CHINA.

Some six months were spent in China by Mr. and Mrs. Wishard. There is very little government educational work of a modern character attempted at present in that vast country. The only thing which would correspond to our Western ideas of education is that maintained by the English and American missionaries. The Chinese appear to have no conception of intellectual culture as we regard it. Association work has been started in six of the mission schools, and has been successful. The most thoroughly organised Y.M.C.A. work that Mr. Wishard found in all Asia was that carried on in one of the Chinese high schools. The Chinese, he says, are the most enterprising people in the Orient. If it were not for the baneful influence of the opium habit, one could confidently forecast a wonderful outcome of mission-work in China during the next twenty-five or fifty years. The opium evil is on the lips of everybody, especially the missionaries, who find in it the most gigantic hindrance to the spread of Christianity. The Chinese, of course, blame England for the introduction of the evil, and it is now so prevalent as to be apparently without remedy. The Government officials in vast numbers are themselves so thoroughly infected by the use of the drug that they wink at the evil. The Church of Jesus Christ is making solid advances in China, and in all probability the recent persecutions, that called forth such a remarkable endorsement of the Christian faith from the Emperor, will help on the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom in that mighty empire.

In a succeeding article we shall give Mr. Wishard's impressions of Christian work among the young men of our great Indian dependency.

CORN EXCHANGE CHRISTIAN UNION.

The inaugural meeting of the Corn Exchange Christian Union was held on Tuesday evening, March 15, by the kind permission of the Y.M.C.A., at the Metal Exchange, Whittington-avenue, E.C., Mr. William Aste, president, in the chair. About 130 were present, chiefly Corn Exchange men; and at the close of the meeting many applied to be enrolled as members.

After praise and prayer an address was given by Rev. E. A. Stuart, M.A., vicar of St. James's, Holloway. Taking for his text, "Sir, we would see Jesus," the speaker urged the necessity of professing Christians being perfectly honourable in all their dealings with their fellow-men, not only keeping the inner courts of our temples sacred to the Master's use and glory, but also the outer courts pure and clean—in fact, living consistently, and being the same in the house of God, in the homes, and on the public market.

After the address Mr. Aste, the president, briefly explained the objects of the Union—to unite, for mutual edification and encouragement, those engaged in business on the London Corn Exchanges (principals and clerks) who desire to live as the disciples of Christ, and to associate their efforts for the extension of his kingdom. A meeting for prayer is to be held once a month, open to all engaged on the London Corn Exchanges.

A gentleman from the Bankers' Prayer Union stated how fruitful for good its influence had been upon young men coming up from the country into London banking-houses.

A MISSIONARY HYMN.

[This hymn is written in honour and memory of my little niece and godchild, Mabel Adelaide Horsburgh, a baby missionary of only four, who died in China ("distant Sinim") December 14, 1891, very soon after her arrival. "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings Thou hast perfected praise."

Fight on, fight on, though fiercely rattle
The fiery arrows on the shield
By faith uplifted, for the battle
Is still the Lord's, and who would yield?
Fight on, fight on, we dare not linger,
The trumpet notes of the command
Call, and the cross with solemn finger
Our banner is that none withstand.
Fight on, fight on, o'er ridge and hollow,
Of foaming wave and furrowed shore,
God fights with us, and we must follow
When Christ has conquered all before.

Work on, work on, but not for wages,
On burning plains and fields of frost,
If wildly round the tempest rages,
And often all but Christ is lost.
Work on, work on, the day is flying,
And scanty time at most we give,
For some are dead and some are dying,
But all who hear the message live.
Work on, work on, for night is nearer,
With patient toil and holy plan.
God works with us, and what is dearer
To brothers than their brother man?

Trust on, trust on, for faith is living
And from the Heavenly fountains drawn;
And all our doubt and dark misgiving
Are but the heralds of the dawn.
Trust on, trust on, the Word is certain
That will the distant Sinim seal,
And from far Ind the heathen curtain
Shall drop and Christ the Truth reveal.
Trust on, trust on, though weakness hanker
For pleasant ports by which we sail,
God is our faith, we may but anchor
Upon that Rock which cannot fail!

Love on, love on, in spite of danger
And falling men and martyrs gone,
Who died to save from death the stranger,
Fill up the broken ranks; go on!
Love on, love on, the sons and daughters
Of palmy isles shall hear our plea;
And love shall cover earth, as waters
That cover all the boundless sea.
Love on, love on, while one to cherish
And teach the Gospel yet remains;
For God is love, and though we perish,
He still the glorious work sustains.

THE OPEN-AIR PREACHER.

Rev. G. W. McCree was pledged to address the South London Auxiliary of the Open-Air Mission last week in his own chapel, Borough-road, S.E., on "The Open-Air Preacher: his Call, Message, Style, and Strength." But being unable to attend, he wrote for the meeting from his sick chamber as follows :—

The Call from Above.

The open-air preacher has a Divine call. He is not called of God to preach in St. Paul's, or in any celebrated buildings. No; the Spirit saith to him, "Go into the highways, and as many as ye shall find bid to the marriage." This is a very honourable and holy call; and whosoever hears and obeys it shall have an exceeding great reward. The lost sheep—the prodigal far from home—the friendless women, the victims of strong drink, the men who are without God, are in "the highways." Let us "go" to them. A plenteous harvest is there waiting for us. Who will "go" and gather in the sheaves?

The True Message.

We are the King's messengers. We are heralds. We have a celestial proclamation to make known. These are its terms :—"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out." "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." Keep to your message. Don't touch politics. Don't discuss the rate of wages. Don't mention the London County Council. Let Socialism alone. Be ye filled with the Holy Ghost, and preach the Word with power from on high, and sinners shall be converted to God. This is the end—the consummation of open-air preaching; and blessed is "the company of preachers" who hear not the cheers of the mob, excited by a political sermon, but the heart-broken cry, "Men and brethren, what shall we do to be saved?"

The Style of the Speaker.

First of all, let it be his own style. Imitators of anybody are puppets, and not preachers. Away with them! Send them all to Jericho! Give us real men, honest souls, silver trumpets, actual personalities, ambassadors fresh from the presence of the Lord. Be men of simple speech. Long words, involved sentences, great swelling phrases, flashy rhetoric, are of no use here. Talk in John Bunyan's Saxon. Use the language of the market-place. Short, sharp, shining sentences are wanted. Look at John Wesley's style—how simple and strong it was. So with John Bright; a severe simplicity was the majesty of his speech. Yes; be of simple, clear, direct, unadorned address, and the common people will hear you gladly.

The Strength of the Man.

The open-air preacher must not be a spiritual weakling. No; he must be strong enough to put on and bravely use the whole armour of God—the helmet of salvation, the shield of faith, the breastplate of righteousness, and the sword of the Spirit. Where, then, is the source of this strength? Not in creed or culture, not in loudness of voice, not in fluent speech, not in affluence of anecdote. No; your spiritual strength and mine will be found in personal, inseparable, loving, perfect communion—oneness with our Lord Jesus Christ. Paul was a great open-air preacher because he could truly say, "I can do all things through Christ, which strengtheneth me." Christ in the heart, Christ as our creed, Christ as our teacher, Christ as our joy—this, this, brethren, means strength and victory for us all.

Let us, then, who have received the Divine call go forth this coming summer-time in the name of the Lord Jesus, "Whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus;" and if we do this in all simplicity and godly sincerity, then "my God shall supply all your need, according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Here, then, is our hope—Christ in us, for us, and with us day by day, until our last open-air service shall have been held, and we shall be for ever with the Lord. Brethren, the time is short, let us arise and go forth into the highways and bid all men to the Gospel feast, for the Lord cometh, and will not tarry. Go ye out to meet Him!

RED INDIANS IN GLASGOW.

During the visit of "Buffalo Bill's Wild West" to Glasgow this winter, there has been a little work done among the Red Indians employed there. Colonel Cody kindly allowed a lady to visit the Indians, and hold meetings for them in their encampment. The Indians much appreciated these, and with the help of an interpreter their visitors were able to talk to them. After their reserve was overcome, the Indians were most willing to talk and ask questions about the Gospel. They accept what is told them implicitly, and several have said God has given them "white hearts," and that now they "talk to God."

They are very fond of singing hymns, but having only three hymn-books in the Sioux language, one of them undertook to copy out some of their favourites, so that all could join. Some of them were hostages from the last rebellion in America, the cause of which was the strange "Messiah" craze. They believe the Messiah is coming soon to restore them their lands and avenge them on the white man, who has treated the red man so badly. The "Messiah Dance" was instituted to welcome the deliverer when he came, and was a religious ceremony. Chief "Short Bull" was the high priest of this craze among the Sioux, and was taken as a hostage. He is an interesting man, he knows all about Christ, and says he believes God has given him a "white heart" through his Son. When he gets back to his own people, "his children," instead of fighting any more he is going to tell them about Jesus.

"No Neck," another chief, a "Friendly," asked to be taught about God; he said he would believe all that was told him. Afterwards he said he had got a "white heart," and was also going home to tell the Indians about God. The greatest temptation in this country for the Indians is strong drink, which has serious effects on them. When spoken to on the subject they were at first amused; but they know it is wrong to drink whisky, though many of them do so; also that if they have "a white heart" they must not touch it. Several said they were asking God to keep them from it, and some never drink. These young warriors have now nearly all returned to their own land, to be replaced by others; but although they may have learnt some bad habits here, they will carry home with them some knowledge of Jesus Christ and his Gospel.

ENGLISH YOUNG WOMEN IN PARIS.

Miss Carmichael, writing from 77, Avenue de Wagram, thus describes a very opportune special effort in connection with Mrs. Lewis's (Miss Leigh's) Homes :—"Having been informed, on Saturday, March 5, that some forty English young ladies had arrived in Paris, to fulfil a three months' engagement at the Eden Theatre, we at once made our way to the Eden to seek them out. When we told the manager we wished to give an invitation to dinner to the English ladies, he very promptly admitted us into the room where they were. They all welcomed us gladly, expressing how lonely they felt in a foreign country, not knowing the language, and in what difficulties they were often placed.

"The next day twenty-one of them dined and had tea with us in our Hall, 79, Avenue de Wagram, and spent a very happy, bright evening. Rev. Dr. Noyes gave a few words of address, which the young people appreciated highly. Songs and recitations followed.

"We have made the young ladies welcome every day since, but the Avenue de Wagram is too far from the theatre for them to walk, so, after some difficulty, we have succeeded in finding a small apartment for the three months, within four or five minutes from the Eden—95, Rue de Provence, which we opened on Saturday, March 12. It is to serve as an eating room, where they can have English dinners and teas at a moderate price, and a reading room, where they can write their letters. We have a harmonium, and hope to have many profitable mission meetings.

"We require from fifteen to twenty pounds to pay the rent, supply a new stove and other necessaries. Two ladies have already promised twenty-five francs each, and Rev. Courthope Todd, of the Theatrical Mission, five pounds, so that we hope other friends will kindly support our effort to throw a sheltering arm round our young friends in this foreign city."

STARVING JEWS IN PALESTINE.

Mr. R. Scott Moncrieff was still at work throughout February in feeding destitute Jews in Jerusalem and Jaffa. Many of the poor outside the city have no shelter but rude huts, covered on roof and sides with the tin of paraffin oil boxes, flattened out, and put together more or less closely. Without food, fuel, or bedding, these poor people have felt the severity of the winter intensely. Mr. Scott Moncrieff has provided one hundred plank bedsteads for the most needy, and has arranged for the feeding of two thousand at Jerusalem, and twelve hundred at Jaffa daily.

The case of some two hundred Jewish refugees from Persia is peculiarly sad. They had found shelter among the poor who live in the huts above described. But suddenly the police authorities seized and locked up a number of men, women and children in a warehouse, and ordered all to leave Jerusalem for Jaffa, and there take ship for somewhere! Then ensued a most distressing scene. The wives and children assembled in the synagogue, prayer was offered for mercy amid wailing and weeping, the poor mothers holding up their babies to the Sacred Books. English gentlemen appealed in vain to the authorities. Soldiers with fixed bayonets were placed on guard over them, and they beat and pushed the women with the butt-ends of their rifles. There had been much rain, and the prospect of having to toil on foot down to Jaffa was a terrible one for these poor people.

At the urgent entreaty of the Chief Rabbi a short respite was granted, and Mr. Scott Moncrieff was thus enabled to arrange for carts, and to provide for a hot meal at the first halting-place. This cruel and high-handed treatment, simply because the people were poor Jews, is scandalous. They had fled from persecutions, and thought they had found rest and a home at last in the Holy City. Where will they find it now? Driven from country to country, the lot of all Jewish refugees is, indeed, a sad one. Donations towards the work of the Society for Relief of Persecuted Jews will be received by Mrs. F. A. Bevan, Hon. Treasurer, 54, Lombard-street, E.C., and by Mrs. E. A. Finn, Secretary, 41, Parliament-street, Westminster, S.W.

OXFORD NOTES.

The University Protestant Union continues to do a most useful work under the presidency of Rev. C. J. Casher. Meetings are held fortnightly during the term, while other and more indirect efforts are made from time to time by the members.

Very wet weather interfered with the annual meetings of the London City Mission on March 15, but the audiences greatly enjoyed the addresses of Mr. Edward Barnett, who gave an account of his work in the common lodging-houses of Westminster.

The University Missionary Union are making an earnest appeal and effort to build a Hannington Memorial Hall, to be used for the furtherance of missionary work in Oxford. Such a hall is very much needed, and it is sincerely to be hoped that success will crown the endeavour to erect it.

Rev. F. W. C. Rigby, Chaplain of Mildmay Conference Hall, preached two sermons, on March 13, in St. Clement's Church, to large congregations. Mr. Rigby was in charge of St. Clements for some months in 1889, when he made himself a good reputation by his valued ministry of the Word.

The third Bampton Lecture, by Bishop Barry, was devoted to the Scientific Law of Evolution, and its bearings on—(1) The Argument from Design, and so on the Witness of God; (2) The Progress through Matter, Life, and Humanity, to the Higher Beings in the Kingdom of God, wherein the Lord Jesus Christ crowns all.

Another special preacher on Sunday was Dr. Wace, of King's College, where he succeeded Dr. Barry. The subject, according to ancient statute regulations, was Messianic Prophecy with the particular objects—(1) Of refuting the arguments of Jewish commentators, &c.; (2) Of promoting the conversion of God's ancient people.

A quiet but effective work is done in Oxford by means of occasional meetings of small numbers of men in their college-rooms, when the cause of the Bible Society, Children's Special Service Mission, and similar agencies is pleaded by invited speakers. Several of such meetings have been held this term, with encouraging results.

A most interesting lecture (illustrated by views) was delivered, on March 14, in St. Clement's Mission-room by Rev. R. H. Maddox, for seventeen years a missionary in Travancore. The lecture was with special reference to work in connection with the Church of England Zenana Society, and dealt with the problems of female life in India, and Christian work among women.

For the Young.

"MAY I GO?"

"MOTHER?"

"Yes, little one."

"Why has my dollie a brown face?"

"Because it's a brown boy-dollie."

"But are there brown boys?"

"Why, yes, of course!" and the mother stooped and picked the little questioner up from the floor.

With solemn eyes the little one looked at her own soft, fair hands, even thrusting out one plump leg to see if that were brown or pink; then looked up again, asking incredulously, "Where are they?"

"When mother was in India she saw many, many poor brown boys and girls."

The sensitive little heart caught at the word "poor."

"Are they unhappy?"

"Some of them, very. Fancy if you were taken from mother, and sent to live with people you never knew before, and were made to do hard work, bear cruel blows, and were shut up from ever seeing the fields, and trees, and flowers."

"Why do they do that?"

"Because GOD is the only one who can teach us to be loving and gentle, and they have never heard of Him."

"Didn't you tell them?"

The mother's heart winced as she remembered the many opportunities lost when she was in the land.

"Some, darling, but there are such numbers and numbers of people, it needs a great many messengers to tell them. I could have only reached a very few."

"May I go one day, mother?"

Ah, little one, will you be willing to give up mother and home "one day," and all your present comforts, and go across the sea to bring happiness to some other little heart? Perhaps; for the love of GOD can so fill our hearts, that we shall count all loss but gain.

Now, little friends, this is only a story, but I wonder if instead of an imaginary little girl, you had been asking these questions, you would have ended up with the one great question, "MAY I GO?" Would you? We want to tell you, if the answer is "Yes," how in heart you can go now, and how your love for these little boys and girls can reach out, even as far as India. You know the sun is about 94,000,000 (units, tens, hundreds—count up!) miles away, but you can lay your hand in the shining of the sun down here, and feel its warmth. There is a verse in the Bible (Heb. i. 3) which means that though GOD, who is LIGHT, is hidden from our eyes, yet the LORD JESUS was the shining of that light in this dark world. Now if GOD has placed the light of his love in your heart, the shining and warmth of that love can be felt even as far away as India! Yes, as warm and bright as the blessed sunshine on our earth.

"May I go?" Yes, in love to-day; perhaps, in person on some far to-morrow.

"How can we go in love?"

Love has three outlets: Speech, action, and sympathy.

1. SPEECH.—We cannot speak to them, but we can to GOD. Look at Matt. ix. 38; James v. 16; Col. iv. 2, 3. GOD asks us to speak to Him about others, the heathen, and those who are working amongst them? And for every prayer you pray for them in England, some one is helped and blessed in India.

2. ACTION.—"What are we to do?" Space will not allow us to give long lists of work here, but there is so much you can easily do. Because we need your help we have formed a "Loving Service Band," on purpose to enable children (between six and sixteen) to work for our Zenana Bible and Medical Mission. Will you join? We should be so glad. If you send your name and address, and 1s. subscription, to the Secretary of the L.S.B., 2, Adelphi-terrace, London, W.C., we will send you a card of membership and one of our "Welcome" leaflets, and plenty of suggestions as to what you might do. If your brother or sister will join also, you need only send 6d. each. What do you like best to do? Collecting, needlework, making scrapbooks, dressing dolls, or will you help us with a nice large children's sale?

3. SYMPATHY.—Will you read very thoughtfully Matt. ix. 36? Learn it! That long word compassion means to "suffer with." "In all their affliction HE was afflicted" (Isa. lxiii. 9). You know the LORD JESUS died to bring them salvation, and forgiveness, and love, just as much as us. He doesn't think what colour a child is. He looks right into the heart, and if He sees the little one is lonely and unhappy because there is no one to speak of a Saviour, then He suffers with that child until we send the message. What shall we pray, what shall we do, what shall we feel, we who know of Him?

"As thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee, thy reward shall return upon thine own head." Shall it be said of you—"SHE HATH DONE WHAT SHE COULD"?

AT PAIGNTON, SOUTH DEVON.

A SERIES of sixteen days' meetings has just concluded here. Year by year a special united effort is made, sustained by local workers, to bring young people to definite decision for the Lord, and there has always been cause for gratitude in God giving the increase. Two meetings were held daily, at 6.30 p.m. for children and at 8 o'clock for adults.

The attention and interest of the young people and children was quickly caught and retained by Mr. Dodderidge, of the Children's Special Service Mission.

To the great prominence given and the honour placed upon the Word of God may undoubtedly be traced the great power in true, quiet, and thorough conviction and conversion that has resulted.

The members of other churches have co-operated with singleness of eye and heart, and have themselves received definite blessing and stimulus from the faithful and wholesome doctrine that has been declared.

A BOY'S LETTER FROM ROME.

THE following extracts from a letter appeared recently in an American religious paper. The letter, it seems, was sent from Rome to Northfield, to the Junior Christian Endeavour Society, of which the writer is a member. The communication will not have less interest for our young readers when they are told that internal evidence shows the writer to be Mr. Moody's second son Paul. Those who wish to understand fully his reference to the Pudens family should read 2 Tim. 4-21, where mention is made of them by the Apostle.

"Rome, Italy.

"We are in the city which the Roman Emperor Nero lighted with the bonfires of living Christians. We have seen the arena where the followers of God used to be burned or torn to pieces by wild animals. We went to the Catacombs where the Christians used to hide long ago; there are old skeletons there. We went to St. Peter's to see the Pope, but he has not been outside the Vatican (his palace) since Victor Emanuel II. took away his power; but we did see an archbishop. There are about as many churches, and old pagan temples and priests and monks and soldiers and policemen as you can count within the walls of Rome. We went out for a drive the other day and went the same way as some of the people did when they went to greet Paul the Apostle.

"I went to a church—a Catholic one—which stands in the place where the Pudens family lived. They show you some of the original floor of the house; it is Mosaic. Pudens, the owner of the house, was a Roman Senator, and when Paul the Apostle came to Rome he stayed with Pudens. The name of the church is St. Pudentia, named after his daughter, and they show you the place in the floor where there is a dry well filled with the bones of a thousand martyrs that Pudens gathered and placed there. Also I saw the prison—the name is the Mamertine—where they put Paul and also Peter; but as it is not really known whether Peter was ever in Rome or not, we cannot tell whether he was in the prison. They also say that on the way down into the prison a soldier struck Peter's head against the wall, and they show you the impress it made. The Catholics have a statue of the Emperor Nero and his mother when he was a baby; they kiss the toe of his mother and call the statue 'The Virgin and Child Christ. —With much love, your absent member,

REV. E. P. HAMMOND IN JERSEY CITY.

THIS well-known evangelist has just concluded a four-weeks' mission in Jersey City, holding services in eleven different churches. In localities where the Christians were in a spirit of prayer there was much blessing. Sometimes from fifty to a hundred in a single service expressed the hope that their sins had been forgiven. The work was largely among the children and youth of the Sunday-school, and it is impossible to tell how many have been truly converted. Over five hundred names were given of those who professed to have trusted in Christ, and who signed a covenant card embodying that conviction. There were some very interested and striking conversions among the adults. In some localities the work went on with much blessing after Mr. Hammond left.

A lady brought a number of the pupils of her private school, and entered with hearty sympathy into the work. Though Mr. Hammond only remained two days in the locality of her school she determined to do what she could to interest other children who had not attended his services. The following letter from her shows with what results the effort was made:—

"At the first service ninety-two children were present. At the close many were found anxious to know how they could be saved. They were of all ages from five to fifteen. The meetings have increased in numbers and power. Those who have found Christ sometimes tell their experience; at least fifty in one meeting told what the Lord had done for them. Yesterday one boy and three girls spoke of the joy that filled their souls. One said, 'When I heard you tell about Jesus, how He died on the cross for us, I went home weeping. Soon as I reached home I prayed that God would give me a new heart. He answered my prayer and I was happy. I sang so loud my mother asked, "What are you singing so much for; what is the matter with you?" I said, "I am so happy because I found Jesus, and I love Him. He has given me a new heart." My mother was glad too.'

"This is a German child, nine years old, with speech somewhat broken. It would have made you happy to hear with what earnestness she told her story. About eighty signed the covenant card, and these give good evidence of real conversion.

"A girl of thirteen, who used to be in my infant class, was much affected as I handed her your tract, 'Do you love Jesus?' I could see the Spirit of God was striving with her. She was convicted of sin. I talked and prayed with her, still she did not find peace, and went home weeping. On Sabbath afternoon she came to meeting and spoke beautifully. Her sister came with her and said 'I, too, have found Jesus.' Some of the boys who have been converted have started a prayer meeting of their own.

"Facts like these show how these meetings continue often in interest and power after the evangelist leaves a place. This is a good indication that the Spirit of God is at work on the hearts of the people. Do we not too often forget the words of Christ, "How much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask it'?"

Of a later mission at Bridgeport The New York Evangelist says:—"On Sunday last Bunnell's Opera House in Bridgeport was crowded by an audience of men only, to listen to an address by Rev. E. P. Hammond. At the close hundreds gathered round him. In the Sunday-school of the South Church he spoke for half an hour, and held an inquiry meeting, at which some professed to find Christ. Among the teachers were found some who were converted in his meetings there twenty-seven years ago. Edward Sterling, who has been the clerk of the church for nearly thirty years, informs us that at that time some seventy joined the church who have held out well, and many of whom are now earnest workers."

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Mar. 27, Matthew xxii. 34-46; Mon., Mar. 28, xxiii. 1-15; Tues., Mar. 29, xxiii. 16-28; Wed., Mar. 30, xxiii. 29-39; Thurs., Mar. 31, xxiv. 1-14; Fri., April 1, xxiv. 15-28; Sat., April 2, xxiv. 29-41.

NEW CITY PREMISES FOR THE Y.M.C.A.—We are glad to find that the Association which has done such useful and extensive work in Whittington-avenue, is removing to a more prominent position—namely, Cornhill House (59 and 60), City. The twelfth anniversary is combined with opening meetings from 12.30 p.m. to-day (Thursday).

David's Threefold Victory.

ADDRESS TO GLASGOW BUSINESS MEN.

BY REV. JOHN McNEILL.

So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone, and smote the Philistine and slew him; but there was no sword in the hand of David.—1 Sam. xvii. 50.

You remember how it came about. All Israel was on one hillside, and the powers of Philistia on the other. On the level ground between was giant Goliath, of Gath, parading up and down for days and weeks, and challenging any Israelite warrior to settle the matter—as was often done—by single combat. Nobody came, for reasons that are easy to see. All the commentators have noticed that when you follow out David's share in this wonderful day's work, you see that he gained three victories in gaining one: a victory over himself; a victory over custom; and third—and that as the result of the other two—a victory over the terror of his country, and the insulter of his God.

We are all called to be soldiers. Military and militant metaphors run all through the Bible description of the life and conduct of the man who would live for Jesus Christ in this evil world. We wrestle not with flesh and blood, but with principalities and powers in high places. We are told to fight the good fight of faith; to watch; to stand fast; to take unto us the whole armour of God. From the ringing Psalms of David to the end of the New Testament you find military metaphors used to describe the Christian's inevitable conflict with sin still unsubdued in himself, and sin in the moral world of men all round about him. Though it gets illustrated here in an Old Testament subject, the New Testament

GLEAMS ALL THROUGH IT.

First of all, David arrived on the scene, and gained a victory over himself. He was sent by his father to see how his brothers fared in the ranks of the army of Israel under Saul. Remember what David had to do a little later, with clear eye and steady nerve, when the giant lifted up his visor for a little and displayed the broad, white disc on his forehead. He had to keep himself well in hand when his elder brother, Eliab—like all elder brothers—talked down to the young fellow: "I know the pride of thine heart, for thou art come down that thou mightest see the battle." What could he have done if he had allowed his blood to boil with passion and his nerves to jar with angry feeling, no matter how just, when his brother collided with him, and did his best, under the devil's agency, to spoil that young warrior for God? David builded better than he knew when he held himself in hand, and, in the words of Peter, "added to his faith self-control." "Ho, ho, what has happened to the sheep to-day," said Eliab scornfully, "that thou hast come down to see the battle?" David could easily have given as good as he got. He could have replied: "Well, it seems to me that if I have, I have come in vain, for there is not much fighting going." In a little while you might have had that scene which the devil has started far too often for his delectation and our sorrow—two brothers flying at each other's throats, either in

A WORDY WARFARE OR SOMETHING MORE.

David gave the soft answer that turneth away wrath. "Is there not a cause?" Greater is he that ruleth his own spirit than he that taketh a city, or killeth a giant. If we are going to be the Lord's men in our day and generation against sin within, and against colossal, rooted, inveterate forms of commercial wickedness and social wickedness that say in their insulting might: "We have been here and will be here, God and the Church to the contrary notwithstanding," we shall need to get better disciplined ourselves. A man's first battle is with himself, and if he win that battle he may become invincible. God will send such a man crashing through the hosts of opposition. Our passions, our tempers, our infirmities and sins, our tendency to greed and grasping covetousness—if all that were overcome, the whole city would relax into greater openness and generosity. We know where our weakness lies, and if we do not the devil does. Our weakness will likely lie alongside of our strength. Let us be familiar with ourselves and set our eyes upon the mark, so that we may live for God and for righteousness; then, no little thing will turn us aside for a moment.

Then David gained a victory over custom. He was introduced to Saul; and Saul, no doubt, thought he was doing a fine thing when he persuaded the youth to put on a suit of armour, and said, "Go, and the Lord be with you." For various reasons, the king thought it better that he himself should stop at home—as we say to foreign missionaries, "The Lord be with you; we will stay at home and watch." After David had put on the armour and "essayed to go" he said, "I cannot go with these; for I have not proved them; and David put them off him." So he gained a victory over custom. That is another giant that needs to be toppled over—the giant of routine, lifeless decorum, and pipeclay generally—ecclesiastical pipeclay, as well as military pipeclay. It is too often a hindrance and an obstruction—

A SWADDLING BAND TO FULL-GROWN MEN.

King Saul cuts a poor figure in the narrative, if we read it with open eyes. It was a sorry day for big men, because there never was one big man but a bigger turned up. Saul was chosen king because he was head and shoulders above everybody else; now there comes this Philistine head and shoulders above him. And Saul petulantly but prudently says, "It is not fair; I will stop at home!" Saul and those trained bands of Israel were paralysed by this pipeclay giant of custom and routine. There were big fellows there, with bursting hearts, no doubt. "Enterprises of great pith and moment" were in their brains and hearts, but they became "sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;" they reflected, and they did not go. To reflect is often to lose; second thoughts are not always best. The first thought may be God's inspiration; the second may be your own. There they stood—those big Israelites and that Philistine giant: so many hundred pounds of muscle and iron. And they were paralysed because they looked at things seen and temporal. This man grew so big in their eyes that they could not see God—the God of Israel hidden behind a trumpery man! When God wanted to get his work done that day he had to take an ingenuous, unsophisticated youth from the hills and get him to be reckless enough to overlook the muscles and inches of the man, and to see God.

God is doing this every day. If we are to be paralysed by custom and routine, saying that things have always been done so, and they must continue to be done so, God will take a man like Mr. Moody from out the shoe-store, and use him to do more good in his day and generation than whole colleges of ministers. In saying this, am I therefore pouring contempt upon the trained soldiers of the Church? By no means. But the very genius of David came out in this, that he

PRESERVED HIS OWN INDIVIDUALITY.

He refused to be David plus King Saul jammed on the top of him.

It is not always easy for a man to strike out for being himself; he will have a good deal to stand. If you look at things with your own eyes and form your own judgments and run the inevitable risk that there is in all enterprises of an original kind, Mrs. Grundy—the commercial, or the ecclesiastical, or the editorial Mrs. Grundy—will be down upon you. What a revival would come to us all to-day if we would only get baptized with the genius of young David, who refused to sacrifice his individuality—even to the armour of a king, and who resolved that he would be himself.

Out of this refusal to yield to custom came the victory. See how naturally this supernatural deed was done. David remembered how, on many an afternoon on the Judean hills, he had spent the time with sling and stone in stripping off the topmost leaf of the topmost twig of the topmost branch of a tree. And he thought to himself he could surely hit a mark the size of the gable of his father's house. The Frenchman might exclaim: "It is magnificent, but it is not war." But it was war—splendid war and splendid tactics. David refused to do what he could not do, and struck out for what he could do. Know what you can do, and in God's name go and do it, and be kept back by nobody. Would that all workers for God could be baptized back into their own individuality; that, after all, is

THE TRUEST CONSECRATION.

You may not be able to stand up and preach in the pulpit, but you may have a perfect genius for button-holing a man. Or you may have a knack of stone-throwing, as David had. It may not be the regular way of cannonading, but what of that if it gains the victory? See David as he goes down to the brook and chooses five smooth stones. Is there not here a parable that suggests "great David's Greater Son?" Five stones, and only one needed; four shots to spare. The Lord Jesus Christ, the Captain of our salvation, will win in this tremendous conflict with the powers of hell—not barely, but gloriously—"more than conqueror." Conqueror is too feeble a word to describe the end of the day! He will be more than conqueror; and poor, feeble you and I more than conqueror in Him. What, then, are we afraid of? Why do we die a thousand deaths in fearing one, and as it turns out, in fearing none? Rise against your own Goliath—your own passions, that seem to defy you. Rise in the strength of God, for greater is He that is in you than all those that can be against you. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even your faith.

David goes out against Goliath, and the giant laughs at the youth. "Am I a dog that thou comest to me with stones?" He pushes up his vizor, and stands there in his pride, when lo! the stone—the happiest little atom in God's universe at that moment—sunk into his forehead, and he fell. Why did the stone sink into his head? Because it was empty; there was no resistance worth speaking about. Do you think I exaggerate? Nay; I could not. The swaggering and blustering unbelief of to-day is like Goliath. Do I speak to any man here who sneers at evangelical religion? He has dabbled a little, perhaps, in science or philosophy, and he sneers at the simple-minded believer—adopts the attitude that Goliath took to David. My friend, God grant that some stone flung between the eyes of your unbelief may bring you down. You sneer at evangelical faith, simply because although your head is not as big as Goliath's, it is quite as empty.

LET THERE BE NO BRAVADO.

If you are going to be a sceptic, be a sceptic; but understand that you, of all people, ought to be a serious man. Be done with mirth and swagger; you cannot afford it. In the day when Jesus Christ meets your contemptible bluster—I need not say God pity you, for there would be no God to pity you. God has sent the shot home, and there is no smiling now. I tell you the powers of darkness are represented by Goliath, and Jesus Christ has struck at the head. "He shall bruise thy head."

I would not have described this scene unless I could have finished up by saying that it was a victory of simple faith. Before David entered the lists, what did he say? "I come to thee in the name of the Lord of Hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied." Thus he gave God the glory. His energy was not the mere carnal energy, or even the splendid patriotism, of this shepherd lad. So in the Christian warfare thou canst not fail, if thou strike the blow in the name of God. Let us each be up and at our own Goliath, in simple faith in Jesus Christ, and we shall gain the victory. And in the great thickening battle let us stand in somewhere for cleanness of speech and morals in business and social life. If you cannot be preacher or orator, do not stand out of the fight on that account. You must be a very poor hand if you cannot fling a stone. God helping, you strike your blow from your shoulder, for Jesus Christ, in your own day and in his all-prevailing Name.

Mr. Henry Cook's Work.

Writing with reference to his English and French Coasting Mission, Mr. Henry Cook, of Gosport, says:—"Our Gospel ship, Herald of Mercy, has this year, by the grace of God, followed up the fishermen to Plymouth and other ports with much blessing. She is now working among the Lowestoft and other fishing boats along Devon and Cornwall. Through this humble agency many a mission has been started at home and in France. Now I am old I cannot bear the strain as formerly, yet if friends will make up the loss of many of my earliest and most valued helpers, I may yet live to work for the Lord Jesus among the toilers of the deep.

"Some warm woollen comforters, overalls for the face and neck, gloves for the poor men steering in this bitterly cold weather, will serve to soften hard hearts and make them more accessible to the Gospel; a tea in our comfortable cabin once a week proves a boon, indeed, by bringing together the profligates to hear the Word. Many of these have been caught in the Gospel net, and are now exercising an influence for good in the various fishing ports of England. Gospel books, illustrated papers, with small bags (eight inches by seven), are much needed."

THE LATE MRS. BARBOUR,

OF BONSKEID.

WITH the death of Mrs. Barbour of Bonskeid a great religious centre has been removed from Scotland. For more than a generation her house has been the home of evangelism, philanthropy, and Christian Missions. No good thing that went on in the country or in the world failed to find from her and her family a sympathetic support, and not the humblest of the visitors who passed in endless stream through Bonskeid, or the winter home in Edinburgh, ever left Mrs. Barbour's presence without carrying away some new belief in the power of a Christian faith and a fresh inspiration for their work. When waning health compelled her latterly, and especially since the death of her eldest son, to live a more retired life, the graces of her generosity and hospitality continued to find expression in forms as large and beautiful as they were original. When the end came, she did not know it. Her death took place in Edinburgh, after a few unconscious hours of illness, on Friday, Feb. 5, when in her sixty-ninth year.

None of the older readers of THE CHRISTIAN can be unfamiliar with the name of Mrs. Barbour. When times of blessing were passing over the land, there was no one more alive to all the movements, and her graphic pen had the power to make readers of this journal feel as if they had been present at the meetings she described. Many will be glad to see the portrait and to know something of the history of the writer who often helped them almost to gaze upon the evangelists and their audiences, to hear the telling points of their addresses, and to witness the thrilling incidents of the after-meetings that came under her own notice in those revival times.

Those who have read her published works, indeed, have already made some personal acquaintance with her; for in all of them she gave glimpses into her own life. Especially is this true of her first book, "The Way Home," and the latest, her "Life of Mrs. Stewart Sandeman." This last unfolds a genealogy embracing names of high renown in Scottish history, and, better still, reveals the happy influences of a Christian home, and the prevailing power of a saintly woman's prayers. It lets us see Margaret, born on March 24, 1823, and six brothers younger than herself, all trained to know the Scriptures, to keep the Sabbath, and to honour the godly. Three of the brothers who predeceased their sister grew up to be active in the service of Christ; and a biography of David, who died as a missionary in China, was written by Dr. Andrew Bonar.

Before she was well into her teens, Miss Sandeman began to exercise her gifts as a teacher among the children from the cottages around her father's home at Springland, in the neighbourhood of Perth. In the garden tower, on the banks of the Tay, she gathered a company of little ones day by day from ten to one o'clock, giving them all the rudiments of an ordinary education as faithfully and diligently as any paid schoolmistress, and gaining, as her reward, such insight into young hearts, and such skill in winning their interest and affection, as can only be attained by teachers of the highest type. Two of the brightest of the scholars, after long years of faithful service with her mother, were privileged to minister to her own comfort in later years.

Two of the years most important in her development were spent in the companionship of her grand-aunt, Lady Nairne. That sweet singer of "The Land o' the Leal" had just lost her only son, the last of his race, at the age of twenty-nine; and it was thought well that, besides her sister and niece, who had been with her for some time, she should also have as a companion the grand-niece, aged fifteen, whose presence would have no association with her heart-breaking sorrow. How these years were passed at Brussels, Munich, the Tyrol, the North of Italy, the South of France, Mrs. Barbour has related in the most interesting pages of "The Life and Songs of the Baroness Nairne," by Dr. Rogers. She came back from that tour not only with expanded intellect and rare linguistic and musical accomplishments, but inspired with interest in what she had seen of some of the Continental churches, and, above all, touched with the tender patience and the brightness of hope that beautified the life of her gifted relative.

She returned to Perth, to find her mother and other Christian friends rejoicing in the revivals at Kilsyth and Dundee, under the preaching of Rev. William Burns. When he came to Perth she attended his services, came under very deep and prolonged conviction of sin, and by-and-by into the sweet liberty of the Gospel. The young convert became one of Mr. Burns' most devoted helpers, and took notes of his addresses, which were afterwards published. From this time onwards her heart's interest centred in the progress of the Kingdom of God. She looked and laboured for it in the individuals around her, and did what she could to advance it in her own and other lands.

She was carried for a short time out of the central current of Scottish life when, in 1845, she married Mr. George Freeland Barbour, who, with his elder brother, established the mercantile house in Manchester that bore the brothers' name. It was a joy to her to be able to assist her husband in extending the usefulness of the Presbyterian Church of England, but it was a still greater joy when Mr. Barbour retired from business, a few years later, and they made their home in the Scottish capital.

(From a photograph by Mr. Ferrier, Dundee.)

It was on one of their journeys to Manchester that the railway accident occurred in which the two little boys were killed whose story is so touchingly told by their mother in "The Way Home." Written at first for the young widow of her favourite eldest brother, after the book had been printed for private circulation, friends insisted on its publication. It soon sped on a wide mission of comfort to mourners, and of instruction to parents in the training of the young; and mothers named their infants after the Freddy and Georgy, who had swiftly passed from a happy home on earth to the happier home in heaven. Fragments of her own history in the work enable us to understand how, during a residence in Italy, she acquired her keen perception of the wiles and wickedness of the Papal system, and was, along with Mr. Barbour, drawn to follow the work of the Waldensian Church with sympathetic interest, and to forward its enterprise by generous help. They show also something of the beginnings of their association with the China Mission of the English Presbyterian Church, which had William Burns for its first missionary, and which found Mr. and Mrs. Barbour among its most loving and liberal supporters to the end of their days.

We have not space even to name the missions at home, such as the Carrubbers' Close Mission, and others abroad, like the McAll Mission in Paris, in which she took a share, sometimes by addressing meetings of women, and always by labouring earnestly in prayer, and giving freely of her means in their behalf. But any notice of her would be incomplete which did not make reference to her quite unique power of winning all kinds of people to see the beauty of her Saviour. From the message-boy calling at the door, to the arch-priest of science in the circle of her acquaintance, all who came within the sphere of her influence felt that she was commissioned by Christ to call out their highest aspirations, and to bring them into converse with their Father in heaven. They were touched by the tenderness of her sympathy, and attracted by a radiancy of chastened joy that constantly lit up her face. If they were seeking after peace, they were sure before they parted with her to be led in prayer into the presence of the King, till, as she poured out her soul in seraphic strains, they seemed to feel the flutter of the wings of attendant angels, and to see in all its beauty the face of the Invisible. In the Memoirs of Sir David Brewster and of Sir J. Y. Simpson we can read how she was thus helpful to them at critical moments in their spiritual history, and in many another life, of which the record is kept only in heaven, she rendered the same happy service.

The one outstanding interest of Mrs. Barbour's life, indeed, was the conversion of individuals. She lived literally on the watch for souls. She never gave up any one, never lost heart, never ceased to pray—would wait for years, and plan, and be defeated, and begin again, with a faith which was as devouring as it was joyous. Almost the only gossip that she cared to hear was that people were coming to Christ. Of telling the story of how God led this one and that one she never wearied. She moved amongst providences. God was more real to her than matter. To pray was almost easier than to speak. Notwithstanding this intensity of religion, Mrs. Barbour was almost with equal intensity human. Her womanhood was large; and a broad geniality enriched and enlightened her disposition, making it easy to carry the graver thoughts, which otherwise might have lain heavy on a heart so earnest. So strong, indeed, was this undertone of geniality that a certain playfulness was never far from the surface, even in the more serious passages of her life, and probably the chief impression of her which the visitor carried away was of her triumphant gladness of heart and simple content.

Writing to Mrs. Barbour's daughter, Mrs. Simpson (wife of the well-known professor), the late Principal Cairns said:—

"10, Spence-street, Edinburgh,
"February 8, 1892.

"My dear Mrs. Simpson,—I have, with many others, been much affected by the death of your venerated mother, following so closely the removal of your dear brother. My very last act of contact with her was in thanking her for her generous gift to our students of Dr. Stalker's Yale Lecture, in memory of her son; and now she herself is gone! What a beautiful life now ended, or, rather, let me say, translated. We will not wrong our religion so much as to speak of anything as ended, but imperfection and weakness and the whole burden of the flesh; while all that was pure and loving and saintly has gone to its own centre, and is safe for ever in its own home, and exalted in its own congenial circle. To depart and to be with Christ is, indeed, far better; though often she may have repeated the Apostle's choice, and desired to abide, as more needful. However, the highest voice has spoken, and in that she has perfectly acquiesced, as we, with whatever deep sense of loss, may be helped also to do. There are not many such to part from in our churches; and to those who stand nearest, it must be a severance not to be repeated.

"How long it is since I first knew her, at her own table, when dear old Isaac Taylor was lecturing here on Hebrew poetry, and I happened to be in from Berwick. The whole scene has been recalled to me, and the friends of that now long-past day. I now regret that in after years I did not meet her oftener, but it was better. She was constant in every Christian work; and it was enough that now and then, in this great whirl of right and useful service, we should come together. Her presence made the atmosphere all around sweeter and more bracing. She was a constant quantity in all the Christian work of this great city.

"It must be a source of trial that your brother is at this time away on that far distant Chinese visit, yet what, after all, could be more consolatory to his own feelings and to yours, when the first shock is over? It is Christ's work, such as is given to few to share in, the making up of what his brother was hindered from carrying out, reminding us of the element of change and sudden alternation that lies in our whole militant state, and brings our life into harmony with that of our Lord. The end will make up for all, and we shall be found to have been all through, if we followed his bidding, in the right place and at the right time.

"May I ask you, my dear Mrs. Simpson, to remember me very kindly to your husband, and to Dr. and Mrs. Whyte, and to your lately bereaved sister-in-law, and also to Dr. and Mrs. Barbour? May a rich blessing come to all with such a sorrow, and turn its shadow into the morning.—I am, my dear Mrs. Simpson, very sincerely yours,

"John Cairns."

HOME OF INDUSTRY WORKERS.

The monthly "Workers' Meeting," which was held last week, was felt by all who gathered to be a solemn time, for the presence of one so much loved, who had been wont with sunny smile to greet the friends, was sadly missed. The thought, however, that she had been called to higher service, in the very presence of the King, was real joy, even to sorrowing hearts, and all felt they must press on towards the goal which their beloved friend had safely reached, realising that the time is short. "A little while, how soon, the coming One will be here!"

Miss Macpherson was enabled to speak on Ps. lxxxiv. 6, "Passing through the valley of weeping, they make it a place of springs" (R.V.), pointing out what a reward and harvest God's children would lose if they did not sow in tears, and how wonderful it was that the very valley of weeping should become to them a place of refreshing springs. Her desire was that spiritual blessing, many souls won for Jesus, should be the outcome of trial; and then she told of two evenings of great blessing among the little East-end children, through a visit of Mr. Josiah Spiers.

Mr. C. Inglis gave a Bible reading on "Wilderness Lessons," in Num. xxi.

Mr. Maxwell Wright spoke a few earnest words on the need of Gospel work in Brazil, remarking that if Africa was the dark continent, South America was the neglected continent. The people were mostly Roman Catholics, sunk in gross superstition, needing the Gospel as much as the heathen.

IRELAND.—Successful Gospel services have just been held at Ballybay Methodist Church, by Rev. G. R. Rea; at Boyle, by Mr. Wm. Elsworth Lawson, of the Joyful News Mission; and at Shankill-road, Belfast, by Mr. Peatt, of the Irish Evangelisation Society.

REV. A. B. HUTCHINSON, C.M.S., who has charge of a province in Japan which contains one million seven hundred souls, is on a short visit to this country. Preaching at Raim's Chapel, Homerton, recently he spoke most encouragingly of the work in Fukeoka, where his own work mainly is, and at places twenty or thirty miles distant, where natives are not satisfied with learning the truth themselves, but are anxious others should know it as well. This is one of the marked traits of Japanese character, as also is their love of simple worship. They say that if gorgeousness and ceremonials were wanted, Buddhism could completely supply that. Mr. Hutchinson has done good work in Biblical and other translations into the Chinese and Japanese languages.

DR. PENTECOST IN MADRAS.

As this wonderful Mission draws to a close it deepens in interest and power, the crowds increasing each day. It has often been said that it is impossible to get an Indian audience to stay long at a religious meeting, and that sermons in India should not last more than fifteen minutes, yet Dr. Pentecost's tent is crowded long before the announced time, and his address is often of more than an hour's duration. At a special morning service in the Doveton Institute, at an hour when most of the places of worship are half empty (for the morning hour is not a favourite one for service in India) the large hall was crowded. Never has Madras seen such a sight, and never have the hearts of Christians been so rejoiced. Relatives are rejoicing over the conversion of those they prayed for; pastors are rejoicing over blessing in their congregations; missionaries are rejoicing over the evident stir among the Hindoos; and the spirit of inquiry evinced by dozens of letters received by the evangelist is a joy to all. The community has been moved, and the most uninterested are beginning to say that they must go and hear Dr. Pentecost, so that when the final report of this Mission is given the good news promises to be even more astonishing. It is like old revival times; scarcely is the invitation given in the after-meeting to come forward, than many come forward to profess their faith.

And not only is this so in Madras, but, as Dr. Pentecost observed, "Salvation is going by post;" for some names have been sent to him by people from another city, who, through the letters of their friends, have been led to accept Christ, and wished him to know how his words could reach even those he could not speak to. Madras, like many other places, is urgent in its petition to him to return if he cannot prolong his visit; which, it is feared, he cannot do, as already his throat has failed several times, and he is in great need of rest.

THE LESSON.

My soul, what is this new-found joy,
This quickening unto service sweet,
This power that claims my hands, my feet,
My being all, in one employ?
"It is the Lord."

But yesterday it was not so;
A laggard and an ingrate, I
Clung to my idols—"Bid me die,
But do not tell me I must go!"
Then came the Lord.

"What is thy life—Creation's whole
Is it a needs-be thou shouldst live?
Were it not better far to give
Thy life, than, living, kill thy soul?
I am the Lord."

It was the Lord—how well I knew
Only the last great day may tell!
Silent before that name I fell,
Till a new heart within me grew
Unto the Lord.

"Lord, I will go!" I held his feet,
Knowing that now I should be led;
Friends, home, ambition, were as dead;
I longed to go, his will to meet,
My gracious Lord!

And then, O wonders of his grace!
He took my gift, but bade me stay;
"Take back thy work anew to-day,
In faith to serve in thine own place."
Thus spake my Lord.

Now I was willing to obey,
My Lord withheld the final task,
The lesson learned. No need to ask
Is life a joy? for all the way
It is the Lord!

And work that I had deemed at end
He gives me back, re-consecrate;
I hold the gift, with soul elate,
For Him, who will the unction send—Christus, my Lord!

MISS ROBINSON'S MISSION.—The evangelistic work has lately been prospered so that Mr. Hogben has felt it necessary to secure a large music hall, The Empire Palace, for Sunday evening services. Mr. Richard Weaver hopes to take the services in April. God has been saving sinners and arousing many through these efforts in Portsmouth.

The Revival in Scotland.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

THE LOTHIAN CAMPAIGN.

In legal parlance, the "venue" of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's work was last week moved from west to east of central Scotland. Glasgow and its populous environs were exchanged for the principal centres lying within easy distance of Edinburgh. The week began with a busy day at Bathgate; at the evening service, for men only, the indications of spiritual concern were unusually plentiful, and the evangelists were greatly cheered.

Monday evening found them facing a great crowd in the People's Hall, West Calder. It is in this building that Mr. Gladstone addresses his Midlothian constituents of that district. It may be doubted if even the eloquence of the right honourable gentleman would have kept the closely-packed audience in their seats so long as they did in order to hear Mr. Moody and his confrère. The people began to flock into the hall at half-past five. The meeting began at seven and was not over at ten; so that many had remained there for an evangelistic service for four and a-half hours. Yet some would have us believe that the Gospel has lost its power to attract in this enlightened and much-belauded generation. Mr. Moody rewarded the congregation with three addresses in the course of the evening, despite the fact that he was suffering from hoarseness. He certainly "earned a night's repose" that day.

Dalkeith, a market-town about seven miles from Edinburgh, was the scene of Tuesday's labours. Two mass meetings were held in the spacious United Presbyterian Church, with an evening overflow in the Free Church. To all human appearance a deep impression was created, and there was a fair amount of reaping done at both the evening meetings.

Wednesday afternoon and evening were given to Musselburgh; both meetings were held in Northesk Parish Church, of which Mr. McGill is the energetic pastor. The ministers of the town, without an exception, had united in desiring a visit from the evangelists. Perhaps the most notable feature of the Musselburgh meetings was the prayer-meeting at the close of the afternoon service. It had a good, old-fashioned Methodist ring of fervour and reality about it, and many spoke out their heartfelt longings for deeper consecration or for blessing on unsaved relatives.

On Thursday the evangelists proceeded somewhat further afield—to Haddington—"the Lamp of the Lowthians," as it is termed. It has the distinction of being and is commonly associated in modern days with the name of Dr. Brown, the Bible commentator. The Corn Exchange, where the two meetings were held, does not furnish a particularly suitable auditorium. The room is long and narrow, and the platform being at the side, a section of those at each end can only hear with difficulty. The afternoon prayer-meeting, following on Mr. Moody's powerful address on Deliverance, was a season of much refreshing, while some anxious ones were led into conscious peace. The after-meeting at night would have been more fruitful if the supply of workers had been equal to the need.

On Friday the evangelists were driven some nine miles, to the pretty and popular watering-place, North Berwick, one of the most famed of Scotland's golfing grounds for jaded senators and city men. An afternoon meeting was held here in the Free Church, and was remarkably well-attended. Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey were then treated to another carriage drive of eleven miles to Dunbar, for an evening meeting. The day, from the weather point of view, was simply delightful, and gave the first real indication we have had in these northern parts that "Spring's delights are all reviving," and the voice of the sower will soon be heard in the land. The Dunbar meeting was in the spacious and ancient parish church, which cannot boast of gas illumination, and had to be lighted up for the occasion with lamps. Mr. Moody's hoarseness had not altogether gone, but he kept the great audience riveted as he unfolded the wonders of the Divine love. The story of how the late Harry Moorhouse preached in Chicago from John iii. 16 on seven or eight consecutive evenings, and how Mr. Moody's own preaching underwent a revolution in consequence, was narrated with telling effect. Many remained for the second meeting and for personal conversation. That service closed the working week, and a very "working week" it had been. The exclamation that one often hears from pastors of "two-sermon power" is, "I can't understand how Mr. Moody gets through so much without breaking down!" No man in these isles more surely earns and deserves the Saturday's respite from mental toil.

THE MUSIC OF THE GOSPEL.

The physical strain on the singing evangelist is, of course, not so great as that on Mr. Moody. But even greater care is needed to keep Mr. Sankey up to the point of efficiency; inasmuch as hoarseness or other affection of the voice would be fatal to his working capacity. He has passed through the severe winter unscathed, and was in capital voice all through the week. He has sometimes sung three Gospel songs at one service, besides a couple more at an overflow, with sundry small addresses thrown in. His homely illustrative talks at the overflow meetings are much appreciated, and most helpful in leading up to spiritual decision.

The singing of these sweet spiritual songs continues to be a vehicle of blessing to many. One of the speakers at an overflow meeting in Dalkeith was Mr. George Macfarlane, president of the Glasgow Y.M.C.A. In his address he made a happy reference to the Gospel songs, comparing them to angel visitants whispering messages of peace and hope. The refrains of many of them, he said, linger in our minds and hearts, and we wake up in the morning to find ourselves humming them.

INSTANCES OF DISTINCT BLESSING

in connection with the singing of the hymns during former visits of Mr. Sankey, now and then come to light. A striking example of this was related to the evangelists last week by one of the persons chiefly concerned. A godly wife attended some of the meetings and received great benefit, but her husband was hotly opposed, and told her that he thought she was becoming crazed. He could not for some time, be persuaded to hear the evangelists. Saturday night came, and it was wholly spent by this woman in prayer for her husband. Early on the Sabbath morning she laid out his "go-to-meeting" clothes, much to his surprise. However, he donned them, this time to his wife's surprise and delight. He accompanied her to the early Sabbath meeting, and one of the hymns sung by Mr. Sankey was "Hold the Fort." The man's heart was melted, somewhat strange to say, for this rousing battle song is not one that would be expected to soften a stubborn hearer. At any rate, the man was convicted and on the evening of the same day was soundly converted. The story came from the lips of the wife herself last week. A hymn, the singing of which has been known to carry comfort with it last week, was the beautiful one in "New Hymns and Solos," "Sometime we'll Understand."

At West Calder, Dalkeith, and Musselburgh, some of the singing friends from Carrubbers'-close Mission were present to assist in the praise. At the last-named place Mr. Sankey had the very efficient aid of Miss Darling and Mrs. Barclay; while at Haddington he was helped by a lady member of the local choir.

MR. MOODY'S HELPERS

during the week have embraced among others Mr. Robertson and Mr. Barclay, of Carrubbers'-close, Mr. L. D. Wishard, Mr. J. M. Scroggie, and Mr. Macfarlane, of Glasgow; beside, of course, the local pastors in the different places. It has already been hinted that in some of the places there was a scarcity of workers for the after-meeting. This want, indeed has been felt in a greater or lesser degree throughout the entire mission. Here and there one or more pastors in a place have entered heartily into the work of the inquiry meeting; but it is only telling the simple truth to say that far more often they have been willing to sit on the platform and to offer up prayer, but not to enter on hand-to-hand dealing with those whose spirits had been wounded by the preaching. Occasionally Mr. Moody has asked a minister to take some case in hand, and has had the disappointment of receiving a decided refusal. Such facts as these go far to explain the Laodiceanism that characterises so many of the Christian Churches in the present day.

THE DRINK CURSE

keeps intruding itself on the notice of the evangelists. At West Calder a man under the spell of liquor interrupted Mr. Moody during his Scripture exposition, and was conducted from the meeting muttering words that showed he was not unacquainted with the Bible. Mr. Moody stopped the flow of his exhortation to comment on the incident and its lessons for the Christians in the neighbourhood. There are a number of oil mines around West Calder, and the miners are credited with being a very rough set. The condition of the place on a Saturday night is reported as being disgraceful, for its scenes of bestial drunkenness. In Musselburgh the evils of gambling and betting are sadly prevalent, and militate greatly against the spread of the Gospel. In this as in other parts of the country the game of football is engaged in on Saturday to such a degree that its abuse is becoming a source of demoralisation, and quite unfits its votaries for any proper observance of the Day of Rest. Local pastors and workers have to contend against these hindrances, and it is difficult to know how best to cope with them effectually and permanently. There is great need for an awakened and purified public opinion with respect to them. In compliance with the urgent desire of the Edinburgh friends, Mr. Moody has consented to have an all-day meeting in the city on Thursday next, March 31. The gatherings will be in the Free Assembly Hall, and it is expected that Mr. Moody will give addresses, chiefly to Christian workers, morning, afternoon, and evening, Mr. Sankey singing on each occasion. These services will conclude the present Scottish campaign. When it terminates the evangelists will take a period of rest, and their future movements will be duly notified.

A SABBATH ON THE BORDER.

Berwick-on-Tweed is the Border town par excellence, and one can scarcely be certain whether it is in Scotland or in England. The greater part of the town lies on the northern side of the Tweed, yet in its Parliamentary representation it is regarded as part of Northumberland. Moreover, it has a "mayor" instead of a "provost," and it also possesses the doubtful English privilege of keeping up its liquor saloons on the Lord's Day. But whether its inhabitants be Celt or Saxon, Norman or Dane, a large proportion of them were extremely anxious to be present on Sabbath last at the services held by the American brethren. The townspeople were reinforced by visitors from the surrounding country, many coming from places as far distant as Newcastle.

Six meetings were held during the day. Soon after eight a.m. streams of people could be seen flocking down town to the Corn Exchange, where the first service of the day was fixed for 9.30. By that hour the large room was filled with some 1500 people or more, many of them standing. Mr. Moody delivered a rousing address on the Bible; maintaining boldly that the Old and New Testaments must stand or fall together. Christians were earnestly exhorted to feed continually on the Word, if they would be strong to suffer and to serve. Some of the leading truths of salvation were lightly touched on, and the audience were refreshed and strengthened.

The original arrangement was to have three meetings in the day, but Mr. Moody, finding that his voice was recovering its timbre, announced an additional service at two p.m. open to all. The Exchange was crowded, and Mr. Moody's words of Gospel appeal were with great power; the waves of feeling seemed to sweep over the assembly as the autumn breeze sways the standing corn. The evangelist had to leave early to address a crowded company of women in Wallace-green Church—the place hallowed by the ministry of the lately-departed Dr. Cairns. Mr. Sankey had meantime been singing and speaking there, and he afterwards proceeded to an overflow meeting in another church. Three meetings were thus in progress at the same time. Mr. Richard Hill, of Melrose, and Mr. Robertson, of Edinburgh, took up the threads that Mr. Moody had dropped in the Exchange, and most of the people waited till Mr. Sankey by-and-by returned for more song and speech ere the gathering finally dispersed.

An immense throng, mostly of men, crowded every nook and corner of the Corn Exchange at the evening hour; while the overflow was accommodated in one of the churches of the town. In the great meeting Mr. Moody discoursed with intense earnestness of temperance, righteousness, and judgment to come, closing up with a plain Gospel exposition. The after-meeting audience more than filled the area of the hall, and there were a good many encouraging responses to his calls for personal decision.

In the evening overflow the chief speaker was Mr. Richard Hill, who declared the Gospel message with much unction and power. Mr. Sankey bore his full share of the work, and had altogether a full and exhausting day. At the early morning meeting he sang a hymn we do not recollect having heard from him before—537 in "Songs and Solos": "Oh, wonderful, wonderful, word of the Lord." It was quite in accord with the tenor of Mr. Moody's discourse. Rev. Richard Leitch, of Newcastle, was preaching at Wallace-green Church the funeral sermon of Dr. Cairns in the forenoon. In the latter part of the day he was present, and took part in the special Gospel meetings. Verily the seed was sown in Berwick last Sabbath with a generous hand! The work is being followed up every evening this week.

REV. JOHN McNEILL IN SCOTLAND.

Mr. McNeill has just closed a four weeks' mission to business men in Glasgow. Never before in the religious history of our city have such gatherings been held by any minister or evangelist. When the meetings commenced the committee were more than satisfied when four hundred gentlemen assembled in the middle of the day. After the third day's service the meetings were held in St. George's Parish Church, and every day between twelve hundred and thirteen hundred men gathered together to hear a simple statement of the old Gospel truths. It is evident that much lasting good has been done by means of these services. The last address was given on Friday, 18th inst., to a congregation that filled the church in every part, many being unable to gain admittance. Mr. McNeill gave a graphic sketch of Paul's shipwreck, and turned it into a parable with such force and aptness that many in the congregation were moved to tears and resolved to lead a new life. Several men were spoken to at the close of the service, and it appears that this address has been productive of much blessing.

Mr. McNeill has also finished a week's services in Dumbarton, and so large have been the congregations that after the first night two meetings required to be held, one for women and the other for men. Many striking cases of conversion have taken place.

Mr. McNeill and Mr. Burke are working this week in Dumfries. Last Sabbath three services were held, and during the week a Bible reading is to be given in the afternoons, and an evangelistic meeting held in the evenings.

The directors of the United Evangelistic Association have arranged a month's campaign in Glasgow, beginning on Sabbath, April 3. Hengler's Circus has been taken for three services each Sabbath, viz., 2 30 p.m. for non-church goers, 5 o'clock for women, and 7 p.m. for men. Every night an address will be given in the Circus at 8 o'clock. On the afternoons of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday Mr. McNeill will give addresses in St. Andrew's Hall, at 3 o'clock.

We ask special prayer for Mr. McNeill and for Mr. Burke, whose singing in Scotland has made a very deep impression.

MR. MOODY AND THE "MIZPAH" MEN

One of the most tangible memorials of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's last visit to Scotland is the Glasgow "Mizpah Band." It was originally a company of men redeemed from the bondage of strong drink, who were associated under this happily-chosen designation for purposes of mutual help as well as of aggressive work for others. The band had held together, and kept on all these intervening years, and had done good service as Gospel workers in and around Glasgow. The annual meeting of the Band was arranged for Thursday week, in the Berkeley Hall, and when Mr. Moody stepped on the platform, shortly after seven, he received a royal welcome, though the male choir were in the middle of one of their rousing songs.

Dr. Stalker having offered prayer, another hymn was sung by the male choir, and then Mr. Moody began to cross-question his brethren of the band. He called for "his friend Baker," who had, ten years ago, presented him with a cane, which he said he still preserved. Baker, a working man well advanced in years, jumped to his feet. In answer to Mr. Moody's questions he said he had been a drinking man for forty years before his conversion, ten years ago. Since then he had and stuck to water, "glory be to God." Baker went on to say that for ten years he had gone on singing all the time, and God had taken away the desire for strong drink and sin of every kind. The reference to singing led Mr. Moody to call on Mr. Sankey for his own favourite hymn, "Then shall my heart keep singing." Mr. Sankey took up the catching chorus first, and drilled the Band till they could sing it fairly well, after which he sang the verses.

Mr. Moody next called on another old friend Andrews, who also rose, and told at length, the story of his sad fall, ten years ago, from an honourable position, through spiritual pride and strong drink; of his wandering one night into St. Andrew's Hall, where Mr. Moody's sermon on "Sowing and Reaping" laid hold of him; and of his ultimate restoration, not only to God's favour, but to useful service as a Christian worker. Mr. Moody next alluded to the proposed month's special campaign in Glasgow, and introduced to the audience. After some humorous pleasantries, happily expressed, Mr. McNeill referred to the suggested services in the East-end of Glasgow, and put it to the Mizpah men whether they would rally to his help in getting the drinking men to go to the meetings. He facetiously claimed ability to speak three languages—English, Scotch, and Irish—so that he would be able to speak to all these nationalities in the East-end. He told an amusing story of the Irish agitator, Dan O'Connell, who once asked a Dublin crowd if they would fight on his side. "We will!" Noticing that the throng in the rear were only catching up the cries of those in front, he asked, "And when the police come, will you run away?" Again the response came, "We will!" Amid much laughter Mr. McNeill said he did not ask for support of that kind, and in a few cheering words exhorted them to unity and perseverance in their efforts to save the victims of the drink.

Shoreditch Iron Room.

Mr. Joseph Knowles has for many years superintended a Gospel Mission in Shoreditch, and the Iron Room, in the rear of the Goods Station of the G.E.R., is the centre of his work. He preaches in the great Bird Fair, and carries on various agencies for the temporal comfort and spiritual enlightenment of the people. Mrs. Knowles and other ladies conduct mothers' meetings; and there is a Sunday-school for the young and a soup kitchen for the poor. Almost the entire population seems to come under this latter designation.

In a brief record of his efforts, Mr. Knowles invites those who are interested in Christian work in London to pay him a visit. He says: "We have to praise the Lord that He has given us to see fruit of our labour. A great deal is being done at a small cost, and our opportunities of materially helping those to whom life is a heavy burden are unlimited." Communications should be addressed to Mr. Knowles, at 21, Benthal-road, Stoke Newington, N.

THE PASTORS' EVANGELICAL CONFERENCE will be held May 2nd to 6th. On Monday a meeting will be held at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. On Tuesday Mr. James A. Spurgeon will deliver an address. The Tuesday-evening meeting at the Orphanage will be presided over by Rev. Charles Spurgeon. On Wednesday morning Professor D. Gracey will deliver an address, and on Thursday morning a memorial service will be held. The usual public meeting will be held in the Tabernacle at night. On Friday morning Pastor A. G. Brown will preach, and after the sermon the communion service will be held. It has been agreed to recommend that the Conference appoint Rev. J. A. Spurgeon President for the ensuing year, but that he be permitted to nominate his own Vice-President.

LITTLEHAMPTON HOME OF REST.—Some four years ago Rev. Darlow Sarjeant opened a Cottage Home at Littlehampton, for Christian workers needing rest. In due course a second was required, but these have now been replaced by one large permanent Home. Shelton House, apparently fitted providentially for the very purpose, has been purchased for £2200, and was opened on Tuesday. "It is," says Mr. Sarjeant, "with great joy we look forward to the increased possibility of offering to Christian men and women relaxation from work and from the weary strain of muscle and brain. Among the many we shall be able to help are not a few who, in happier days, looked forward to a resting time as a necessity; but through failing health, or otherwise altered circumstances, their brighter days are for ever gone. It is no exaggeration to say that numbers of Christian workers permanently lose their health, and some their lives, through want of timely rest." Communications should be made to Rev. Darlow Sarjeant, The Hillyers, Oseney-crescent, Camden-road, N.W.

OBITUARY.

REV. NEIL BRODIE, FREE CHURCH MINISTER.

By many in the north this aged Free Church minister was known and loved as one who for many years did faithful and good service. A pre-Disruption minister, he laboured at Shandon on the Garloch, and later in Pollockshaws, retiring from active duty some eight years ago. He passed away on March 10, at Craigmore, Bute, in his eightieth year.

MRS. J. H. SHOLL, MANCHESTER.

Many will receive with regret the intimation of the death of Mrs. Sholl, the beloved wife of Rev. J. H. Sholl, superintendent of the Radnor-street Circuit, Manchester, a sketch of whom we gave in August last. The deceased lady has been in failing health for a very long time—in fact, for several years, and for many months has been an invalid. Her long illness, which terminated at 67, Withington-road, Whalley Range, Manchester, on Wednesday, 9th inst., was borne with truly Christian fortitude and resignation. In Cornwall, Birkenhead, London, and Manchester, where Mr. and Mrs. Sholl have earned the respect and esteem of thousands, the death of this lady will be sincerely mourned.

PASTOR W. JACKSON,

Mr. Spurgeon's brother-in-law, who was with him at Mentone during the last few months of his life, has not long survived him. Mr. Jackson, who has for some time suffered from cancer, died on Wednesday, March 2, at Waltham Abbey. For forty years he had laboured as a Baptist pastor, marrying Mr. Spurgeon's eldest sister while in a pastorate at Colchester. Rev. D. Russell, at a memorial service, reviewed thus Mr. Jackson's life and labours:—"Of his homiletical outlines he could not speak too highly; his diagnosis of texts was rapid and effective. He had a passion for preaching, and he hoped to the last to resume his labours in the pulpit. He had known him in the Fraternal as a fearless upholder of the old truths as opposed to the new preaching of theosophy and kindred heresies."

REV. PERCY E. COMBER.

Many will hear with deep sorrow of the death of this devoted missionary—the last of the Comber family—six of whom, three brothers, one sister, and two wives, have laid down their lives for Africa—the eldest brother, Thomas, being with Mr. Grenfell, the first Evangelical missionary to enter the Congo country.

Mr. Holman Bentley writes from Wathen Station, Congo, to Mr. A. H. Baynes, under date January 23:—"It is my distressing duty to inform you of the death of our dear brother, Percy Ebenezer Comber, after brief pernicious fever of only fifty hours. At midnight two days ago I was called to him; he was in fever, and hæmaturia was intense. We treated as usual, but no remedy seemed to touch the disease. The temperature rose steadily and surely with but slight remissions—due to sponging—to 103.8, 104.8 115.2, and just after midnight he passed peacefully away. Brother Cameron and I have just laid the dear brother out, and I write hurriedly, before going to bed, in order to have the letter ready for a special courier at dawn, to inform Mr. Davies, who is at Lukunga, and this, therefore, will forestall any other communication that can reach you. I will write by the usual State mail in a few days, when I have had time to realise what has happened. It is so sudden and bewildering I cannot write more."

Mr. Grenfell, writing to Mr. Baynes, says:—"Comber won the affectionate regard and love, not only of all his colleagues, but of all the peoples around Wathen. His sun has gone down while it is yet day, and we must bow in reverent submission to the Divine will under this heavy loss."

MR. J. H. REDMAN.

We have already mentioned the death of Mr. J. H. Redman, at Saadani, on the East Coast of Africa, when on the eve of starting for his post at Mamboia. His work at Reading was so well known that very many will deeply regret to hear of his unexpected call from service to rest.

Mr. Martin John Sutton, whose private secretary he formerly was, writes: "For twelve years, in my absence, he presided over the meetings in our hall, averaging, Sunday by Sunday, some 1500 persons. His zeal and enthusiasm for the spiritual welfare of young men and for evangelistic work generally made him especially suitable as a leader of the work so long carried on at the Abbey Hall. There he was known and loved by hundreds who attended the meetings and Bible-classes, but especially by the band of some three score young men, who, under his lead and direction, nightly preached the Gospel in tents and in the open air in summer, and in cottages and mission-halls in winter.

"Although a member of the Church of England and much attached to the Evangelical doctrines of that Church, he was as greatly beloved by Nonconformists as by those of his own communion, and as hon. secretary of the Reading Town Mission, the Berks Auxiliary of the Church Missionary Society, and the Y.M.C.A., he greatly furthered Evangelical effort. He told me his sudden decision to offer himself to the C.M.S. was the result of something that was said to him at a missionary meeting on March 9, 1891, exactly twelve months to the day his life was sacrificed. His loss to me after so many years of faithful, loving service I dare not speak of; but there are so many who knew and loved him that I cannot withhold this affectionate tribute to his memory."

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, MARCH 27.—3 JOHN .

Gaius is mentioned Rom. xvi. 23, and 1 Cor. i. 14. He seems to have been an earnest Christian, and very hospitable. 2. It is not possible to wish this of all, for did their external condition be in exact accord with their soul-health and spiritual prosperity, some who are now in health would become consumptive and emaciated, and others who are prosperous would go about in the extreme of poverty. 3. When the truth, that is Christ, is in us, we walk in the truth. 5. All Christians should remember the needs of Christian brethren who may be strangers in the towns where they reside, or who may be passing through, extending to them, where possible, such hospitality as is in their power. 6. "Worthily of God." We should treat the servant with the honour which we would pay to his King. 7. "For the sake of the Name." This word recalls the earlier chapters of the Acts, where it was so constantly used of the new sect, who met in the name of Christ. What ought we not to do for the sake of the Name? The early preachers refused to take support from their Gentile hearers, lest there might be prejudice against the Gospel they proclaimed. There was the more need, therefore, that earnest Christians should do their best to help them by hospitality; in this way they would promote the progress of the Gospel. 9. Diotrephes not only refused to receive the Apostle's emissaries, but forbade such as were prepared to do so, and even cast them out of the Church. 11. "Beloved, imitate not," &c. 12. In contrast to him, Demetrius deserved the confidence and love of the Church. How delightful it would be to have such a record borne to us, not only by our brethren, but by the Lord Himself. 14. So in prayer let us often tell Christ of our anticipation of meeting Him, when we can explain, and have explained, all that words refuse to carry.

MONDAY, MARCH 28.—JUDE.

Jude, being the brother of James, was without doubt brother also to the Lord, and is probably one of those referred to (Acts i. 14). It is not known to whom this Epistle was addressed, but it was probably written a little before the destruction of Jerusalem.

1. "To them that are called, beloved in God the Father, and kept for Jesus Christ." 3. We share in God's salvation, and therefore are bound with common interests to all the saved, and we should contend together to keep it against the attacks of evil men. "Once for all," it therefore admits of no change or addition. It is blessed when a man is under the constraint of the Spirit of God, and this is generally experienced most when he is giving all diligence. 4. There is a remarkable similarity between many expressions in this Epistle, and those in 2 Peter ii. Here, as there, ungodliness and lasciviousness are combined with false doctrine. As certain flowers distil poison out of sunshine and dew, so do evil men turn the grace of God into licentiousness. "Denying our only Master and Lord." How perpetually does this conception of the Lord Jesus, as Master, pervade the apostolic writings. 5. Here follow several examples of those who had received condign punishment for treading in the same evil courses. And first the Israelites dying in the desert-march. 6. The R.V. is remarkable: "the angels which kept not their own principality, but left their proper habitation"; which suggests that there is some connection with Gen. vi. 1-4. Fallen angels, apparently, are to stand before the great white throne (1 Cor. vi. 3). 7. In order to prevent the contagion of sin from spreading, God had to resort to very severe measures. "As an example of eternal fire," i.e., in their destruction we may learn the awfulness of the fire that is never quenched. 9. There is only one archangel, "the," but he is not the same as our Lord (1 Thess. iv. 16). He is always represented as the champion of Israel (Dan. x. 13). The dispute probably concerned whether that body was to be handed over to God's special care or not. The argument is that if angels do not indulge in railing, though they have the devil to rail at, and that because there are some vestiges in him of the power with which he was once invested, still less have sinners any right to rail at sinners. 10. There are two verbs translated "know." The former implies a deeper knowledge than the latter, which refers only to such knowledge as may be obtained by the use of natural senses. 11. Sin repeats itself. 12. "Hidden rocks in your love-feasts, shepherds that without fear feed themselves"; "Autumn trees without fruit" (R.V.). In these graphic and terrible metaphors notice that there is in each case the promise without the fulfilment, the appearance without the reality. 14. This reference is from the Book of Enoch, and it, but not the whole Book, is stamped as true by the Divine Spirit. 15. This is Hebrew poetic parallelism, and some think that Lamech's was a parody on it. From the earliest ages there has been the premonition of the Lord's advent to judgment. 16. Those who are adepts at railing are equally so in "showing respect of persons for the sake of advantage." 17. Already the words of the Apostles were quoted as authoritative. 20. Four exquisite injunctions, which comprehend foundation work on the one hand, and the outlook at the oriel window on the other. You are in God's love; abide there consciously. 22. Have mercy on those who are in doubt. Save others by snatching them out of the fire. On others have mercy with fear, lest you should contaminate your own garments (R.V.). 24. "Able to guard from stumbling." Look from your own weakness and temptations, and say constantly, He is able. And He will not stay till He has brought us safe to glory (Ruth iii. 18).

The Book of REVELATION.

Otherwise known as the Apocalypse. Each of these words refers to the unveiling of events which were future, when the Apostle wrote, and of those eternal mysteries which are hidden from common eyes.

The revelations took place when the Apostle John was banished to the Isle of Patmos in the Ægean Sea, by the Emperor Domitian, about A.D. 94.

During the half-century of the Church's history, it had suffered greatly from declension, and it was in the highest degree needful to show that the Lord was still working in the world, watching the condition of his own, and conducting the course of human history towards his return.

We may view this book as the topstone in the structure of Revelation, the summing up of the purposes of God, the outline of the events which are to take place till the setting up of the great white throne. It is the chart, and guide, and inspiration of the bride till the coming of her Lord.

TUESDAY, MARCH 29.—REVELATION I.

Introduction (1-3).—"Of," i.e., from. The Lord Himself is the author of this book, through his servant; it is his last priceless gift to his Church. The Revelation was first made by the Father to the Son, as the Head of the Church, the Man Christ Jesus (John xii. 49). 2. "Signified," i.e., conveyed under the form of signs and symbols, and, therefore, we must penetrate beneath them to acquire the inner meaning. "Bare record," as 1 John i. 1-3. 3. The public reader in the assemblies of the Church, as well as his hearers, may claim this special blessing. And, indeed, there always is a special charm and depth in this book. But we must study it not to speculate, but to keep.

Salutation (4-8).—Asia, i.e., Asia Minor. The perfect number, perhaps, denotes that these words are addressed to the Church of every age. Note the Trinity. The Father, who is not affected by the succession of the ages; the Holy Spirit, seven bespeaking his perfection; and the Redeemer. These three epithets describe his earthly life and death (John viii. 14; xviii. 37; 1 Tim. vi. 13), his resurrection, and his reign throughout the present age. 6. "He loveth us and loosed us." Often through this book we are directed to that precious blood, and the references point so often in the direction of our sanctification. This seems to be an echo of the heavenly anthem, transposed into the language of earth (v. 9). 7. Acts i. 9, 11. This allusion to the piercing reminds us of John xix. 37 and 1 John v. 6. The pierced One pierces the heart. The vision of Christ makes men wail. 8. "Saith the Lord God." This is also the affirmation of Jesus (xxii. 13). What a tribute is therefore given to his Deity in these words. These are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, so God comprehends all events in the mighty sweep of his nature.

The Vision of the Glorified Christ (9-20).—All children of the family have to pass through similar sufferings, though in other forms. The R.V. accurately links these three words together, preceding them all by "in the," because they are inseparable. If we suffer, we shall reign, and for the trial we may claim his endurance. 10. A testimony to the practice of the early Church (Acts xx. 7; 1 Cor. xvi. 2). Though severed from the meetings of God's people, we may experience what even they know not of, if we keep still in sympathy with them and with the risen Lord. 10. He was worshipping in spirit in the Holy of Holies, and therefore the candlesticks were behind him (Heb. x. 19). 12. Not the one candlestick of the Jewish dispensation, but the clustered, though separate, light of seven. 13. "A son of man" (R.V.). The garment, emblem of priesthood. The ordinary girding was at the loins, but Josephus says the priests were girt higher, as more befitting calm and reposeful movement. His golden girdle betrayed the King (Is. xi. 5). 14. The white, not of age or decay, but of purity, as of incandescent fire. The priest's eyes (see Lev. xiii. 3, 5, 10, 13, &c.). 15. The fire of purity and judgment. Many waters, this expresses a great multitude (Dan. x. 6). It is as if all human experiences and faculties speak through Him. 16. "Had"—i.e., held firmly (1 Tim. i. 19). The sword, see xix. 15 and Heb. iv. 12. 17. The touch of Jesus! (Dan. viii. 18, x. 10; Matt. viii. 3, 15). "I am the first and the last, and the Living One" (R.V). The peculiar expression used of his death indicates that it was a voluntary act on his part—"I became dead." 18. "Keys" are emblems of authority. Hell is Hades, the Unseen. Souls pass into the Unseen only as Jesus unlocks the doors. He has wrested all power from him that had the power of death. 20. "The mystery," in opposition to the things which thou hast seen, indicates the obscurity in which the meaning is veiled. "The angels"—i.e., the presiding ministers or elders. How safe are these in the right hand of their Lord!

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30.—REVELATION II.

The names of these towns are recited in their geographical order. The Epistles are arranged on precisely the same plan. The introduction refers to some characteristics of Christ, taken from the preceding vision, and appropriate to the general bearing of the Epistle. A description of the leading characteristics of the Church addressed. And promises of reward which ascend as they proceed. Only one Church escapes reproof. The lessons inculcated are deeply needed in every age, though some have traced analogies to the seven ages of the inner history of the visible Church during the present age. These letters are addressed to the minister, because his condition is closely bound up with that of the Church.

The Letter to Ephesus (1-7).—There may be strict orthodoxy, and watchfulness against false teachers; and there may be also the patient bearing of trial; and yet a decadence in the early warmth of love. And in Christ's judgment nothing can possibly compensate for that. 4. The germ of all subsequent evil is contained in this first sad change. 5. Memory will sometimes stir the dying embers of love. We must do the first works with the first love. The old love will be restored if we put away the evil which choked the work of the Holy Spirit. Churches are removed when their love wanes. 6. Nicolaitans means the same in Greek as Balaam in Hebrew. They turn the grace of God into lasciviousness, and their spiritual unfaithfulness is often connected with actual impurity. 7. Paradise regained. Though but one overcome, he shall win a great reward. What Adam lost the second Adam regains for us. Is not Jesus that tree of life? Oh to feed on Him more—even here! Warm love leads to life.

The Letter to Smyrna (8-11).—How fitting it was that those who were to suffer should have such a vision of Him who had died, but lived. 9. Poverty in earthly possessions is so often associated with spiritual wealth (Jas. ii. 5). The Lord knows the blasphemy which is being uttered continually in the ears of his own. Jews (Rom. ii. 28, 29). 10. The devil had still power left to persecute, but there was a limit placed to it, only ten days. Faithful unto death, like the sentry found at his post at Pompeii. 11. Our true life is beyond the devil's reach (Matt. x. 28; Luke xii. 4).

The Letter to Pergamos (12-17).—This city, the centre of idolatry and sinful indulgence, was as it were the very metropolis of the devil's power. "Even in the days of Antipas, my witness, my faithful one." How inexpressibly precious those possessive pronouns. 14. Those who are most true to Christ will find Him quick to perceive that in which they might be better, and to incite them to it. 16. The words of Christ cut like a sword and slay our sins. 17. Those who resist and conquer feed on hidden stores (Ex. xvi. 32-34) and have unique revelations of the name and nature of the Lord. Perhaps this white stone is the Urim and Thummim stone; or the great crystal in which the Shekinah flashed Yes and dimmed to No.

The Letter to Thyatira (18-29).—The fire of purity in his eyes and goings. 19. There had been growth in these Christian graces. 20. This woman may have been a prophetess or priestess of the unhallowed idolatry, who had contrived to gain a considerable influence over members of the Church. Under the appearance of inspiration she led them astray into libertinism and idolatry. 22. Adultery is constantly used of unfaithfulness to God, the husband of his chosen people (Jas. iv. 4). How careful we should be to search our hearts, lest we be inveigled into it? 23. He is not satisfied with a merely outward devotion. He is the King of hearts that love Him in their depths. 24. The double duty of resisting further inroads of evil and holding fast. Sometimes this is all we can do. Having done all, we can only stand. 27. The saints are to be allied with Christ in his empire. 28. He is the Morning Star (Rev. xxii. 16), the herald of the coming day. Throughout these chapters remember that Balak, Balaam, Jezebel in the Church answer to the Beast, the False Prophet, and the Great Harlot in the world.

THURSDAY, MARCH 31.—REVELATION III.

The Letter to Sardis (1-6).—It is easy to get a name for life, a little activity and philanthropy will do it, but Christ knows whether or not the name and character agree. 2. "I have found no works of thine fulfilled before my God." Works need to be filled up with spiritual life and power. 3. 1 Thess. v. 2. The stealth and unexpectedness of the coming of Christ demands our constant heed and preparedness. 4. The Lord is quick to notice the few that are worthy of his kingdom. It is possible to live even in Sardis without defilement, but we need the constant application of the blood of Christ. Mark the reward, those who have so loved purity here as to cultivate it at all costs shall have it there for ever. 5. Here, as always, it is the white raiment which is bright and lustrous, like the robes of the Lord in the Transfiguration.

The Letter to Philadelphia (7-13).—There is no blame here, all is praise and love. All power is his in heaven and on earth. He can open hearts, homes, closed doors, and continents. In his hands is the master-key. 8. Use the little strength which is yours, and you will find open doors of usefulness (1 Cor. xvi. 9; 2 Cor. ii. 12; Col. iv. 3). 9. See ii. 9. God will vindicate his saints. 10. One hour of trial ushering in an eternity of glory. But when the trial comes, it will find us sheltered. The Gospel is the word of his patience, because it teaches us patiently to anticipate his coming. Keep it and He will keep you. 12. Steadfast as a pillar; and for ever reckoned a part of the city of God. Consigned and labelled for the New Jerusalem, and destined to be some day delivered and set up in the temple. But in the meanwhile there is a good deal of chiselling to be done.

The Letter to Laodicea (14-22).—Amen, because He is the ratification of all God's promises (2 Cor. i. 20). Mind that your prayers are such that He can say Amen to them. He bore witness to the truth on earth, but He was before all things, and by Him all things were made. 15. Christ would rather do with the cold than the tepid, with atheism than a mere nominal piety. 16. If all the heat of the Gospel has done nothing more than make you tepid, it has failed indeed. Christ is sickened with such. 17. The people who have least to be proud of are generally the most boastful and talkative. "The wretched one," &c., R.V. Oh, to see ourselves as He does! 18. Wealth, purity, vision are in His gift. 20. This is addressed to professing Christians. There must be something seriously wrong when Christ prefers the doorstep. Admit Him. He will bring his own provender for thee and Him. 22. We share with Him as He shares with God.

FRIDAY, APRIL 1.—REVELATION IV.

The Glory of God.—This "hereafter" refers back to i. 19. As the seven epistles were introduced by a splendid vision, so with the seven seals. 2. He who opens the doors gives special communications of his Spirit. The imagery is borrowed from the Jewish temple. 3. The appearance of God's glory is depicted, but nothing is said of his form, since He is a spirit. The rainbow here is a semicircle; there the circle is complete, "round about the throne." This book is not of Fatherhood, but of government; therefore God is upon the throne, encircled, however, by the rainbow of the covenant made with Noah. Jasper, clear as crystal, his mercy. Sardine, judgment. 4. Either referring to the twenty-four courses of Jewish priests, or twelve for the tribes of Israel and twelve for the Apostles; see xxi. 12, 14, and so representing all believers. 5. Here is the Holy Spirit, and in the next chapter our Lord; so that the Trinity is here. Note the comparison of the Holy Spirit to fire. 6. Sea for depth, glass for calm. No storms ruffle it. The living creatures are the same as the cherubim, i.e., the redeemed animate creation. Lion, royalty and majesty; calf, patient labour; eagle, soaring flight and undazzled vision; man, intelligence. They seem to act as the Divine executive, carrying out God's decrees. 8. This is the song of worship. Next we have that of creation. Finally, of redemption. 11. "Because of thy will" (R.V.). This is the sufficient reason for all, and God's will is ever good will.

SATURDAY, APRIL 2.—REVELATION V.

The Sealed Book.—This book probably stands for the sum of God's purposes. One skin was wrapped over another, each securely fastened, so as to be hidden from prying eyes. 2. Denoting not only the power to know, but the power to accomplish. 4. A strange sight for heaven. 5. This is heaven's perpetual message to earth, Weep not. "Hath overcome," i.e., the word so often used in the preceding chapters is here applied to Christ, and his power is the reward of his suffering. These majestic designations remind us of Isa. xi. 1 and iv. 2 and Gen. xlix. 8-10. 6. He looked for a lion, and behold a little lamb, for the Greek is the diminutive; he looked for a conqueror, and behold one who bears the tokens of defeat. And yet for all that, what signs of Divine greatness; perfect in power; perfect in vision and knowledge; perfect in his all-pervasiveness. In heaven Calvary is well remembered, and surely the wounds of Jesus make and claim our peace. 8. See where the saints' prayers go; they make heaven sweeter. 9. Always the same theme, but new emotion, new rapture, new depths, new singers. "Didst purchase unto God with thy blood men of every tribe," &c. (R.V.). The sweet side of redemption, never to be lost sight of, that we have been bought. Always remember the purchase-money (1 Peter i. 18). 10. "They reign on the earth" (R.V.), as though our rule had already commenced. We shall for ever share in Christ's empire—nay, we share in it already. 11. The song begins with the redeemed, but it is contagious, and spreads to angels, who love our Saviour, and are glad to see Him exalted. 13. And from angels the song spreads throughout the universe of God, till to the anointed ear all created things join in the chorus and swell the mighty anthem. And there is a deep sense in which all the universe has been affected by the death of Christ (Col. i. 20). It is to be remarked that the Lamb shares in Divine worship, as the fellow of Jehovah. Behold the mighty harvest, of which Jesus in his resurrection was the first-fruit sheaf!

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 3.

THE WAY OF THE RIGHTEOUS.—Psalm i.

GOLDEN TEXT: Verse 1.

It is impossible to determine with certainty who was the author of this Psalm. It may be regarded as a preface to the whole collection of Psalms, and summarises the teaching of all. Its theme is the blessedness of the righteous in contrast with the misery of the wicked. In enforcing its teaching it should be remembered that all people belong to one of these two classes. There is a sharp division between those who are God's people and those who are not. A neutral position is impossible; so that every scholar we teach must experience either the blessedness or the misery of which the Psalm speaks.

THE GODLY MAN (1-3). True happiness depends not on what we have but what we are—not on our circumstances, but our character. The most favourable surroundings cannot make an ungodly man truly happy; the most unfavourable surroundings cannot destroy the real blessedness of the godly. Be more concerned to be what you ought than to have what you wish.

The negative side of the godly man's character is put first (1). He must not be as others are. True godliness never has been popular, and never will be in this age (Exod. xxiii. 2; Matt. vii. 13). Young men who are content to drift like dead logs down the stream cannot be godly. Note the gradations of evil:—walking in the counsel—not yet in the company of the wicked, but adopting their plans, pursuing their pleasures (Mic. vi. 16). This leads to standing in their way, laying ourselves open to their temptations, so that we become companions in their evil doing. He who seeks to live the godly life must avoid the place of temptation (Prov. iv. 14, 15). The lowest grade is sitting in the seat of the scornful, as one at home among those to whom sacred themes are a subject of mockery (Jer. xv. 17). The appearance of scoffers in these last days is an evidence of the truth of Scripture (2 Pet. iii. 3); but a man has reached the lowest depth when he makes these his boon companions. The lesson all this teaches is: to beware of the small beginnings of evil. A little leak may sink a vessel; a single spark may destroy a city. The first step in sin makes other steps more easy. Dare to be not what the ungodly are.

The positive side of godliness is described first as to its root (2). Has the godly man nothing to compensate for the loss of the pleasures of sin? In the law of God he finds "delight" greater than sin ever yields. To that word he owes everything:—his new birth (1 Pet. i. 23), his assurance of salvation (1 John v.13), his growth (1 Pet. ii. 2), and his complete equipment (2 Tim. iii. 16, 17). Yet some Christians do not find delight in it. Perhaps because they do not meditate in it. The treasures of the Word, like the treasures of the earth, do not lie on the surface. We must dig for them (Prov. ii. 2-5). Careless, forgetful reading leaves the soul unblessed. We must eat the Word (Jer. xv. 16), and like the cows, must chew the cud.

Next, its manifestation (3). Every word is significant, especially when compared with Jer. xvii. 8. A tree—not a bit of desert heath, but something beautiful in appearance, comfortable for shade, and useful for fruit bearing. A tree planted—therefore having an owner to care for it, and to ensure its being in the right position (Isa. lxi. 3; Matt. xv. 13). Rivers—the Word of God, through which the Spirit nourishes and sustains the life of the godly. Its fruit is seasonable—the right fruit at the right time (contrast Matt. xxi. 19). The leaf is the adornment of the tree. Neither winter's frosts nor summer's droughts cause its beauty to wither. Shall prosper—like Joseph (Gen. xxxix. 3, 4). Such is the character which will be manifest in the true man of God (compare Josh. i. 8, 9). Faith, by which we receive the blessedness of sins forgiven (Psa. xxxii. 1, 2) is not a substitute for practical holiness, but a means to it.

THE UNGODLY (4). "Not so" (1) in their character. What can be more worthless than the chaff? "In the East threshing-floors are placed on a height; the threshed corn is thrown aloft for the wind to carry the chaff away." As the chaff to the wheat so are the ungodly to the people of God (Matt. iii. 12). Deeply impressed on the writer's memory is a lesson received by him from a godly father years ago. This Psalm was the subject. How worthless appeared the character that was like the chaff—empty, light, vain, and blown hither and thither by the wind. "Don't be like the chaff, boys." The lesson is not forgotten yet.

(2). "Not so" in their present experience. The godly are blessed even now; "not so" the ungodly. The wicked may prosper, as the world counts prosperity (Psa. xxxvii. 35, 36; lxxiii. 3, 12); but without the conscious favour of God they cannot be blessed (1 Tim. iv. 8). An accusing conscience puts bitterness into the sweetest cup, and thorns into the softest pillow.

(3). "Not so" in their destiny (5, 6). Their way leads to "judgment," from which there is no escape (Ecc. xii. 14, Heb. ix. 27), and in which they shall not be able to "stand," that is, they shall be condemned (Mal. iii. 2; Rev. vi. 17). Contrast the privileged position of the godly (John v. 24; Rom. viii. 33, 34). "The congregation of the righteous" is that from which everything ungodly is excluded. Men choose their company down here. If they are not among and of the righteous now they cannot gather with them when the Lord shall come.

The way (6) of both righteous and wicked is before the Lord, but He knows—that is, approves the one, and condemns the other. The two are closely mingled together now, but God distinguishes between them.

The two are put before us. To which do we belong? If you would have the end of the righteous, you must have the way of the righteous. This requires deliberate choice,—have you made it? determined resistance of opposing influences,—are you willing not to be and do what is popular?

Personalia.

Bishop Bardsley has now bidden farewell to the Isle of Man.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Stanley are now on their voyage home from Adelaide.

Canon Bell, D.D., of Cheltenham, has gone for a few weeks' needed rest in Sicily.

Mr. Eugene Stock and Rev. R. W. Steward sailed for Melbourne on Friday, per s.s. Britannica.

Dr. Chaplin, of the London Jews' Society, has started on a mission visit to the Society's stations in North Africa and Rome.

Rev. A. McCaig, B.A., LL.B., has accepted a tutorship at the Pastors' College, vacant through the resignation of Professor Ferguson.

Rev. T. R. Stevenson, the well-known and beloved pastor of Union Church, Shanghai, has been laid aside by serious illness and has been ordered home.

Mr. W. R. Lane is, many will rejoice to hear, now so far recovered as to resume work. During the past week he has been holding at Plymouth his first mission since his recent illness.

Rev. Dr. Bullinger, incumbent of Brunswick Chapel, Upper Berkeley-street, W., is recovering, we are glad to report, from a very severe cold, which has for the past week or two incapacitated him from attending to some of his public engagements.

"Mr. C. H. Spurgeon." Such is the simple inscripton on a marble slab, which has been put upon Mr. Spurgeon's grave, in Norwood Cemetery. It is stated that at Mrs. Spurgeon's desire, one other word, "waiting," is to be added to the inscription.

Mr. Charles Edwards, of the Soldiers' Home, Winchester, who has been very seriously ill, is now much better. After such a long and dangerous illness recovery will be very slow, and some time must elapse before he will be able to take any active part in the Lord's work.

The Faith Mission.

A MISSION conducted by Mr. Horace E. Govan and Pilgrim Corsie has just been closed at Blackrock, co. Dublin. The meetings were only announced for four days, but the interest and attendance were so encouraging that they were continued for four weeks, and even then the people expressed much regret that it should close, as the blessing deepened each week.

The surrender to Christ on the part of the converts seems to have been definite and full. Not only have the unsaved been blessed, but Christians have been really awakened to realise and respond to God's claims upon them.

At the close of the Mission a testimony meeting was held, at which a spirit of true thankfulness and joy led very many to rise and tell of the wonders God had wrought for and in them.

In order to lead on the converts, a weekly Prayer Union Meeting, in connection with the Faith Mission, has been established, with the view of helping those who have received blessing to go "from strength to strength," so that God's working through the visit of the Faith Pilgrims shall be felt far and near.

GLENVAR.

THE FRATERNAL UNION for the defence of the Old Faith held its monthly meeting at Upton Chapel, Lambeth-road, on the 15th inst., under the presidency of Rev. W. Williams, whose anniversary was celebrated that day. The afternoon was devoted to prayer and conference, followed by an address by Dr. Pierson, which will be long remembered. A public meeting was held in the evening, Revs. J. Douglas, M.A., W. Fuller Gooch, Dr. Pierson, and G. D. Hooper taking part. Mr. Gooch bore witness to such vital doctrines of the Evangelical Faith as the infallibility of Scripture, our Lord's propitiatory sacrifice, the personality and work of the Holy Spirit. Dr. Pierson gave powerful testimony to the finality and authority of Revelation, and to the eternity alike of bliss for the saved and woe for the lost. The church secretary gave a most encouraging report of the church and its work, as well as of the value and success of their much-loved pastor's labours.

Letters to the Editor.

LORD'S DAY OBSERVANCE.

Dear Sir,—In large towns there is so much Sunday trading, Sunday pleasure-seeking, and Sunday travelling, that Christians get accustomed to it, and, I am afraid, do not think about it as they should. In fact I believe Christian pleasure-seeking on the Lord's day has a far-reaching influence in favour of worldly pleasure-seeking on that day.

How seldom do we hear attention called to the evils that befel the Jews for profaning the Sabbath, or the manner in which God desires his day to be kept, as shown in the following verses: "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord, and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Is. lviii. 13, 14.

I hope that you will try to keep the subject before God's people, so that a decided opinion may be formed on it, as it has upon the Drink question, and is, I hope, being formed on the Opium and Purity questions. I am, your obedient servant, T. C. M.

Dear Sir,—After prayerful consideration, I feel that Christians ought to battle against the evil of Sunday travelling on the part of Christian workers, side by side with Romanism and Ritualism. Travelling by any means involving labour by others is a tremendous obstacle to the progress of Christian work. The drivers and conductors of our 'buses and trams say:—"If it were not for parsons and religious people riding on Sundays, we should at least get the morning off."

Can we for one moment imagine our Lord doing anything to cause one of the weakest to stumble? See Isa. lvi. 2, 4, 5, 6, 7; and lviii. 13, 14. Though we seek not to fulfil this in a legal sense, yet we ought to look at our duty from the standpoint of 2 Cor. v. 14, or Rom. xiv. 13. Surely, it does not help our ministers to have to catch a certain train in order to take a service, but a quiet waiting upon God would. Depend upon it, if we sought the teaching of the Holy Spirit more, we should get blessings showered upon us, and there would be no need to invite Mr. So-and-so in order to get souls saved, or means to carry on the Lord's work; but men and women would be used, however humble.

"For we have this treasure in earthen vessels"; and the Lord is always willing to use the empty, waiting soul.—Respectfully yours, London, W., March 7, 1892. E. Townshend.

"A QUESTION OF CONSCIENCE."

Sir,—I have wondered that the difficulty referred to by your correspondent "Inquirer," as to investing in railway stocks, has not oftener agitated the conscience of some of our Christian magnates. In my experience, I have sometimes met with investors who would not hold railway stocks where the directors were in the habit of running Sunday excursion trains; and, in investing their trust funds, I believe that even now the Society of Friends will only select those public funds which have no connection with loans raised for warlike purposes.

Possibly "Inquirer" might be conscientiously enabled to draw a distinction between work that was necessary to some extent on a Sunday (such as a certain amount of train service, maintenance of gas and water, and other works), and the work represented by pleasure traffic, excursion trains, &c. Supposing "Inquirer," if troubled with a surplus of unearning cash, were to extend his inquiries, he would probably find opportunities of employing it in helping on many a concern, large or small, that is at present languishing because the wealthy select the Government funds of the country, or help with their money to increase the two hundred millions of deposits in the Joint Stock Banks, which is thus, to a great extent, practically withdrawn from the trade of the country.

How far Christians are justified in hoarding up the large sums which have been entrusted to them, might also be taken into consideration.—I remain, yours very truly, Stockbroker.

London, March 21.

THE BEST MONUMENT TO SPURGEON.

Dear Sir,—His family will sweetly tend his grave; his congregation will erect a statue to his memory; his denomination will honour it in many ways; but the best monument to this man of men for united Christendom to raise would be for Christendom to become united. It is as he said himself, in the last paper he ever wrote, a thing hardly to be believed, that he, a simple Baptist minister, steadfast and unmoveable too in that faith, should have been called on by bishops and dignitaries, referred to in synods, prayed for in St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey. That all this interest should have been shown, and that it should have been continued, so that from the Archbishop of Canterbury downwards members of the Church of England showed a real desire to do homage to the humble sectary, was something to make us feel that after all the English heart is one, that some of the Master's spirit has come to the Church of Christ.

But then to this clear-cut medal, bright with the lines of Christian charity, there is a sad obverse. Had Mr. Spurgeon lived, not one of the clergy that delighted to do him honour could with safety have received him to his pulpit. Nay, the Bishops themselves, the very men full of a sympathy, perfectly unaffected as we believe, with Mr. Spurgeon in his illness, would have come down regretfully but firmly on any incumbent who would have ventured on such a step. Does that prove all the seeming interest then only a pretence? By no means. But it proves that we live in the midst of a great anomaly. We are kindly at heart, but our hands are legally bound. Is it not time that Christian earnestness rose to demand that such anomalies should cease; time that English common-sense should break such legal fetters, by any needed alteration of our laws? Personal salvation comes first, personal holiness next, but after these to pant and pray and labour for the manifestation of Christian unity would, some of us think, be "the best monument to Spurgeon."

Brighton, March 15, 1892. J. B. Figgis.

USE HOSPITALITY.

Dear Sir,—The message of Gospel love is carried by many servants of the Lord to distant lands, where their children cannot remain with them on account of education or health, and they are unavoidably separated from each other for lengthened periods at that time of life when a parent's watchful care is most required. As their children grow they generally embark in life at a distance from their parents.

The Christian worker abroad has many trials from opposition, loneliness, enervating climate, and not seldom from sickness and poverty; should not the Lord's people in England do what they can to help and sympathise with him in his family responsibilities? It is not so much a question of money as of sympathy and watchful care, which may produce most valuable results.

There are many Christians who have for years done much in this way, but doubtless there are many more who have not noticed what need there is for this useful work, and who would gladly enter this field of service for the Master if the opportunity presents itself of caring for and helping the children of missionaries abroad.

I would, therefore, propose that any workers abroad who would appreciate this should be invited to give the names and addresses of their children who are not living with them to Mr. R. Caldwell, Missionary Bureau, 1, Gresham-street, London, E.C.; whether they are at school or starting in business; and that all the Lord's people who have houses of their own, and whose hearts are made willing, should communicate to him their readiness to entertain the young people occasionally. Mr. Caldwell could then make the necessary introductions with tact and discretion, and thus many a Christian would have the opportunity of asking a missionary's son or daughter to his house to spend a few days or an afternoon or evening. Children may be invited for the holidays; this is, of course, both a tie and an expense, but very much may be done by asking them occasionally for a few hours at a time if they live in the same neighbourhood. A missionary's son starts in business in a large city, where perhaps he knows no one; what a help to have a Christian household where he may occasionally stay from Saturday to Monday. Sunday is apt to be a very dull, unprofitable day to a young man living alone, but it is the best day to reach him spiritually in the way proposed.

A worker abroad wrote to us about his son the other day, to say that if we could care for him it would materially help them, and encourage them in their successful work, in which they have been engaged for the past twenty years. Let us hold up our brethren's hands in this way! We who have comfortable homes in our own country, and whose children grow up under our own care, hardly realise to what dangers those are exposed who are separated for years from their parents; a direct blessing also comes to those offering their hospitality, as personal interest and love is drawn out by this personal service.

All missionaries have their own Christian friends, but they are not always in a position to help in this way, as they may not live in the same place as the children, and a missionary who is abroad for many consecutive years is apt to lose his friends by death, and personal touch with others may not always be maintained—care for the children should form a connecting bond.

As one who was cared for with hospitality as a young man by older Christians, and who has tried in some small way to seek out young men in their first start in life, I would commend this subject to the prayerful consideration of the Lord's people, with a hope that more and more may be done in this direction, as there is increasing need of this service.—Yours very truly, George Mackinlay, Major.

Books for Soldiers.—Mr. George Wratten, Army Scripture-reader, 114, Sandy-road, Seaforth, near Liverpool, appeals for sound Christian literature, periodicals, or tracts, for distribution among the nine or ten thousand troops annually encamped at Altcar Camp, Lancashire. The season lasts from May till October and sometimes as many as five regiments are encamped at one time. No meetings are held, not even Sunday evening services. There is simply a "Church Parade" for all troops on Sunday morning.

Foreign Missions.

The Martyrs of Blantyre. A chapter from the Story of Missions in Central Africa. By Rev. William Robertson, M.A. (2s. 6d. Nisbet.) This is a simple memorial of Henry Henderson, Dr. John Bowie, and Robert Cleland, who were not martyrs in the popular sense of the word, but courageous and devoted witnesses for Christ, who did not count their lives dear to them that they might make the Gospel known in Central Africa. All three of these successors of Livingstone were Scotchmen, and in the service of the Church of Scotland's Mission at Blantyre. Their lives were as fruitful as their deaths were much lamented, and the record of their work should incite others to serve Christ with like zeal and energy.

The Life and Labours of John Wray, pioneer missionary in British Guiana. Compiled chiefly from his own MSS. and diaries, by Thomas Rain. (5s. J. Snow and Co.) Before he died, half-a-century ago, John Wray undertook to write the history of the great work in which he spent many years of a valuable life. The book was not finished when the missionary was called to his rest. Though belated, the story is very welcome. Mr. Rain has been judicious in dealing with the large amount of material at his disposal, and the pages are full of life and interest. Negro emancipation was one of the many important events witnessed by Mr. Wray, who endured great hardships in the course of his missionary career of thirty years.

The Divine Enterprise of Missions. By Arthur T. Pierson, D.D. (4s. 6d. Hodder and Stoughton.) This volume contains a course of lectures delivered in the early part of last year before the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church in America, at New Brunswick, N.J. Opening with the Divine Thought, Dr. Pierson proceeds to expound the Plan, the Work, the Spirit, and the Force of Missions; then, in glowing terms, he sets forth the Fruit, and powerfully presents the Challenge. The duty of believers and the obligation of the Church are Scripturally stated and logically enforced. The pages are a mine of information and a quiver of arguments for all who advocate the mission cause; and the language is glowing, as befits the inspiring theme. Indolent disciples of Christ should be stirred by reading this volume, which will assuredly intensify the zeal of all earnest workers in the great vineyard. There is a good index, and we have no doubt the Master will use the book in the glorious enterprise which it has been published to promote.

C. H. Spurgeon: His Life and Ministry. By Jesse Page. (1s. 6d. Partridge). A valuable addition to the excellent series of "Popular Biographies." The outstanding facts have been well presented, and there are many illustrations.

Dr. Clifford on "Inspiration," criticised by Henry Varley. (3d. Holness.) This vigorous tractate will be welcome to those who are unable or indisposed to read large volumes in which present-day speculation and perversity are exposed. Some will doubt whether the article here criticised was worth so much attention, but those who know and love their Bibles will be generally disposed to thank Mr. Varley for his earnest defence of fundamental truth. At the same time, the pages do not seem to have been written with that judicial calmness which a subject so important requires.

A Ride Across Iceland in the Summer of 1891. By Rev. W. T. McCormick, F.R.G.S. (2s. 6d. Digby, Long & Co.) Though not envying Mr. McCormick some of the inconveniences and disappointments here described, we nevertheless confess to a strong desire to go over the ground he covered with so much intellectual profit and enjoyment. The wonders of nature and the peculiarities of the inhabitants of Iceland, are the staple of these chatty pages, which, while interesting to all, will be of special value to those who intend paying a visit to an island which, as viewed from a distance, Mr. McCormick speaks of under the designation of "a huge Arctic cinder, awful-looking in its barren grandeur."

Temperance Notes.

It is proposed to form an East London Church Officers' Total Abstinence Society.

Sunday being the day approved by the Bishop of Norwich, sermons on the subject of temperance were preached in the churches of the diocese.

At the annual meeting of the Temperance Hospital, it was stated that, shortly after Easter, a Children's Ward will be opened by the Duchess of Westminster.

Rev. J. H. Bateson, general secretary of the Army Temperance Association, states that 17,500, or a quarter of the total British force in India, are total abstainers.

A Band of Hope was inaugurated last week at Stamford-hill Congregational Church, under the presidency of Rev. J. M. Gibbon, when 138 young people gave in their names as members.

It is computed that no less a sum than £15,000,000 is annually spent on Sunday drinking alone, in the United Kingdom. From a merely economic standpoint, what a boon would Sunday closing be to the British workman.

Belgium, with a population of only six millions, has a yearly drink bill of 135 million francs, spent principally upon Geneva, by the artisan classes. And it is estimated that twenty thousand persons are annually ruined in consequence.

Mr. W. S. Caine points out that if we had the Maine law for this kingdom to-morrow, we should require every public-house for some other trade. And the other trades, let us remember, would require many more workmen than does the liquor traffic.

A lady on board a Pacific Coast train asked a young man where he was going; he replied, "Pasadena"; "Oh, for pity's sake, don't go there," she cried; "the Salvation Army is so bad there that they can't get anything to drink—not even wine!"

Dr. Richardson's "Temperance Lesson Book" has had a larger circulation than any similar book of the century. In Holland it has been admitted into the prisons with the Bible, and it is said that 25,000 copies have been distributed among the black population of America.

The Monthly Meeting of the St. Pancras Total Abstinence Association, on Monday week, was devoted to the "Political Side of Total Abstinence;" and the chairman, Mr. Bowen Rowlands, M.P., spoke of the County Council Election as being decidedly encouraging to temperance reformers.

In the Province of Quebec the study of physiology and hygiene, with special reference to alcohol, is compulsory in all the Protestant schools. In Ontario and New Brunswick there is the same obligation to teach temperance and hygiene as to teach other subjects. British Columbia and Nova Scotia are moving in the same direction.

Mr. Matthew Burnett presided the other day at the annual meeting of the Queen-street Total Abstinence Society, Scarborough. Mr. Josiah Nix, of London, had a most cordial reception, and delivered a powerful address. Mr. Burnett has recently addressed five meetings in this neighbourhood, at which 114 persons signed the pledge.

A great Temperance Mission has been held by Mr R. Coad in Bradford during the past week. There has been a large gathering each night in the Temperance Hall. On Friday and Saturday the place was crowded. The testimony meeting on the Saturday was a glorious time for the Temperance workers.

A conference of the Birmingham Band of Hope Union was held at the Friends' Meeting House, Bull-street, on Monday afternoon week. Mr. H. Bisseker, who presided, said Band of Hope Unions would do well to keep together both youths and adults who had once joined them by finding some entertainment to prevent them visiting music-halls, theatres, and public-houses.

Temperance work is going forward in the Navy. Miss Weston has addressed a circular letter to the Committees of the Royal Navy Temperance Society on board all Her Majesty's ships, in which she pleads for more thorough and systematic work among the boys constantly drafted into our warships, of whom she believes quite 50 per cent. are abstainers on drafting, but who drift away under temptation.

A Midland Railway guard writes:—"From the time I left London with my train—an express one—to the end of my journey, I was asked to drink no less than thirty-one times; each time I was asked I made a mark with a bit of chalk in my brake-van. One would tempt me to have a drop of whisky, another a drop of brandy, and others a glass of ale or stout; but, thanks be to God, by his strength I was able to refuse them all."

Presiding at a recent Band of Hope anniversary at Dewsbury, the Mayor of Leeds (Mr. Aderman Boothroyd) said: The temperance movement, to his mind, was one of the finest movements of the present day. They might speak about shorter hours of labour; that would be good in itself. They might try to get better wages and less work; these were desirable. His opinion was that if throughout the world not more than six hours labour per day were required from the working-man it would be a good thing. Suppose every penny earned by the working-man—whether his wages were large or small—was spent in providing that which was necessary, instead of that which was not necessary, what a benefit it would be to his wife and children and home.

Evangelistic Notes.

Newcastle.—Special missions have been held at St. Anthony's and Walker with cheering tokens for good.

Rev. W. Barnes has just concluded a series of special services at Carthorpe and Morton with encouraging results.

Hull.—A fortnight of special Gospel services have been held in St. George's-road Chapel with many indications of blessing.

Mr. W. H. Dawe has just completed an eighteen days mission at the Baptist Chapel, Lifton, Devon. The meetings throughout the mission have been well attended.

Mr. William Sampson has held an interesting and stirring mission in High Wycombe, and many profess to have been awakened to flee from the wrath to come.

Mr. Henry Thorne has just concluded a mission at Margate. Night by night some were found seeking the Saviour, and not a few profess to have passed from death to life.

Littletown, Yorkshire.—Mr. C. Wickerson has just concluded a fourteen days' mission here. The Lord's people have been blessed, backsliders restored and sinners saved under his earnest preaching. —T.C.

Mr. John Harris, of the Evangelisation Society, has been holding an eleven days mission at Wix, Essex, which has been owned and blessed of God. Sinners have been converted, and backsliders recovered.

Sheffield.—Special meetings have been held by Mr. Henry Collins during the past three weeks in the Cambridge Mission Hall. Hundreds have heard the Gospel in the open air and indoors, and many have confessed Christ.

Mr. Matthew Burnett, having concluded a series of evangelistic and Gospel temperance meetings in Yorkshire, commenced, on March 5, a mission in Waterhouses. After a fortnight's services great blessing has been given, and some remarkable answers to prayer have taken place.

Rev. G. C. Grubb has, we learn from the Melbourne Spectator, paid a remarkably fruitful visit to Sydney. The Centenary Hall was densely crowded night after night, and especially at the closing Convention. A minister writes: "The influence in the meetings has been very often overwhelming. Mr. Grubb's addresses have been the most wonderful and powerful I have ever heard. Ministers and members of the Anglican, Presbyterian, Independent, Baptist, and Methodist Churches were all in earnest about the blessing." At the closing meeting over a hundred young men and women intimated their willingness to be sent anywhere the Lord may will in his service.

Mr. Wm. Grove has been conducting a three weeks' Gospel Mission at Malden Hall, Kentish Town. The meetings were preceded by a week of special waiting upon God for much blessing, and truly He has answered prayer. Night by night large numbers came together to hear the Word preached, and on Sunday nights the large hall has been crowded. The presence and power of God were manifest, and many stayed to the after-meetings for personal conversation. Many have professed conversion, backsliders have been restored, and the hearts of God's people have been rejoiced, especially those who were brought to the Lord during our brother's previous visits.

Mr. J. H. Moodie, soldier evangelist, recently conducted a most successful mission under the auspices of the Perth City Mission. This is the third mission Mr. Moodie has conducted in Perth during the past year, and never has his ministry been more highly appreciated than on this occasion. His Bible readings in the afternoons were largely attended, and many of the Lord's people testified to the help they had received. The meetings were held in the new Mission Hall, South-street, but on the Sabbath evening in the City Hall, when a congregation of not less than two thousand gathered to hear the Gospel. Mr. Robert Pullar, of Tayside, President of the City Mission, presided, and was supported by a number of the Directors and prominent Christian workers. At all the meetings there were many who professed to decide for Christ.

EAST LONDON INSTITUTE. — Dr. Grattan Guinness writes in the March issue of Regions Beyond: "The Institute was never so large and, on the whole, so prosperous as to day. It has lately added two houses to its premises in East London, and has beneath its roof no fewer than one hundred and forty-five missionary students, devoted men and women preparing to go forth for Christ's sake and the Gospel's to all parts of the world." In view of the serious illness of Mrs. Grattan Guinness and the lamented deaths on the Congo, Dr. Guinness says: "The waves are running high just now with us, but there is One very close at hand, who walked of old upon the stormy waters and stilled the tumult of winds and waves with his almighty word. A very present help is the Lord in the day of trouble! We have often believed and said He was so, and we feel it now."

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

A fruitful mission for young people has just been concluded in St. Stephen's, Walthamstow.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, replying to a letter on Sunday postal labour, says that "for the last thirty years he has never had his letters delivered to him on Sunday."

Archdeacon Blakeney, addressing, last week, a company in the Church Institute, Sheffield, on "Modern Criticism," made a strong point of the very incompleteness of the Mosaic and prophetic systems as a proof of their Divine authority.

Some three months ago the rector of Hackney (Rev. F. E. Gardiner) commenced a series of special services for the crowds who throng Mare-street each Sunday evening. Large audiences have been attracted.

Rev. A. Lyne, vicar of St. Saviour's, Westgate-on-Sea, has instructed the local postmaster not to deliver letters to him on the Lord's day, and he has lately given notice in church that he has taken this step and invited his parishioners to follow his example.

A clergyman, having asked the Bishop of Worcester for a dispensation from fasting during Lent, Dr. Perowne replies in terms which might profitably be pondered by many. Being, as he says, not aware that the Church has prescribed a fast during Lent, he does not see how he is to "grant a dispensation (even if I possess the dispensing power) from a law of the very existence of which I am ignorant." The Bishop, in conclusion, wishes people would study carefully Isa. lviii. 1-9.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. H. H. Carlisle, of Eccles, has accepted an invitation to South Cliff, Scarborough.

Vines Church, Rochester, is about to lose its pastor, who has been with them thirteen years.

Sunday morning services, for men only, have been commenced in the Co-operative Hall, Greenacres, Oldham.

Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes, M.A., has just concluded a nine days' mission under the auspices of the Nonconformist Association at Redcar.

At Milborne Port a fortnight's special services, conducted by the pastor, Rev. E. A. Arthurs, have been made a great blessing to the church. The services were well attended.

Rev. J. E. Hodge states that some of the worst characters in Baddeley have been drawn to mission services through bills circulated in the public-houses with the consent of the landlords.

Rev. Andrew Mearns has published a brochure on "The New Census and the Responsibility of Congregationalists," dealing with the increased population of London, and its bearing upon the accommodation provided by the Congregational churches.

Percy Chapel, Bath, has been renovated at a cost of £634, and the whole amount raised within a year from the commencement of the work. A thanksgiving meeting has been held, presided over by Rev. E. Simon, who is now fully restored to health, and stirring addresses were given.

Canon Bardsley took part in the farewell meeting to Rev. A. Holborn, who has resigned the pastorate at College Chapel, Bradford, and said Mr. Holborn would be missed beyond that congregation; his connection with movements for the benefit of the town had been such as to endear him to many.

In connection with the various mission agencies carried on by the Lyndhurst-road Congregational Church, Hampstead (of which Mr. R. F. Horton, M.A., is minister), in the district of Kentish-town, new mission premises have just been secured in Warden-road, Kentish-town, at a total cost of about £5400. The opening meetings of these premises, known as Lyndhurst Hall, were held last week.

BAPTIST.

Bloomsbury Chapel, W.C., reports 792 members, and large and flourishing Sunday-schools and other mission work.

The annual meetings of the Metropolitan Strict Baptist Association were held last week in Mount Zion Chapel, Dorset-square.

The friends working at the Athenæum, Shepherd's-bush, have now secured a good site off the Uxbridge-road, and are about to build.

The members of the Baptist Social Union had at their last monthly meeting an interesting address from Dr. Booth on "Up the Nile and What I Saw."

Fuller Chapel, Kettering, is undergoing renovation preparatory to the gatherings which are to be held in the summer, in connection with the Missionary Society Centenary.

A new chapel and Sunday-school are to be erected at Fenny Stratford, at a cost of £2,100. The chapel will seat 500; the schoolroom, to be called "The Spurgeon Memorial Hall," will accommodate 300.

At the last meeting of the committee of the Baptist Missionary Society, Mr. G. D. Brown, of Bristol College, was accepted for missionary service on the Congo, and it is anticipated that Mr. Brown will leave for Africa at the close of next month.

Pastor A. G. Brown has been staying in St. Leonards on his homeward journey from the Continent, and on Sunday evening he took part in the service at the Baptist Church, preaching the sermon from 2 Chron. iv. 21, "Gold, and that perfect gold."

The Centenary of the Missionary Society is to be observed by special meetings on May 31 at Nottingham, on June 1 at Leicester, and on June 3 at Kettering, these three places being historically associated with the foundation of the Society. At Liverpool there is to be a united gathering in Myrtle-street Chapel, and a reception by the Mayor in the Town Hall on March 21.

METHODIST.

The work in Skegness has been greatly revived during the past few weeks.

Mr. Josiah Nix has just paid a visit, of which much fruit will be found, to Blyth.

Interesting meetings on behalf of the London Mission have just been held in Halifax.

The Poole Adult Bible-class numbers 250 members, and continues to grow and prosper.

Revs. Peter Thompson, H. P. Hughes, and W. D. Walters held, the week before last, stirring meetings in Leamington.

Great gatherings have just been held in the Hengler's Circus, Liverpool, addressed by Revs. C. Garrett, H. P. Hughes, W. D. Walters, and others.

The Liverpool Wesleyan ministers meeting has been carefully considering the offertory system, coming to the conclusion that its advantages outweigh its disadvantages.

Mr. W. S. Clark, J.P., of Millfield, a member of the Society of Friends, has presented to the trustees of Street Chapel, Glastonbury, a valuable site in the Leigh-road, a quarter of an acre in extent, for a new chapel and schools.

The annual report of the Wesley Hall Mission, Newcastle, for 1891 is interesting reading. The hall is situated in the midst of a large artisan population, generally supposed to be the most difficult to reach. The congregation on the Sunday night is, however, one of the best in the West-end of Newcastle.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The Presbyterian missionary anniversaries are fixed for Friday, May 13.

Good foreign missionary meetings have lately been held in and around Liverpool.

A very practical Sunday-school convention has just been held in Canning-street Church, Liverpool.

Rev. D. Eades, of Aston Tyrrold, has been invited to Silverton Church.

The mission work of the Presbyterian missionaries in Hak-ka (South China) is warmly reported on by Mr. McIver.

Mr. Smith, speaking last week, at the Bristol Presbytery, described the evangelistic work as specially encouraging.

The paper by Mr. Robert Thomson, of Hull, on "The New Testament Elder," to which we lately referred, has been published at 14, Paternoster-square.

A series of Bible readings is being given in South Kensington Presbyterian Church, on Wednesday afternoons at three o'clock. The first was delivered on Wednesday week by Dr. Monro Gibson, on "Power with God and with Men," based on the incidents in the life of the Patriarch Jacob.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

A cheap Salvation "weekly" (one pice) is advertised for early publication in India, called the Mukti Semachar.

A private letter from a missionary in China to a friend in England, urgently appeals to the Salvation Army to assist in the work of evangelising its "three hundred" millions.

A pressing appeal has been received by the Salvation Army, within the last week, to commence operations in Malta, a lady offering a furnished house, rent free.

A hall in New York City, seating five hundred hearers, with living rooms attached, has been handed over to the Salvation Army by the Board of Missions, rent free for one year.

A converted cab-driver in Brussels, belonging to the Salvation Army, recently fell asleep in the Hospital. Even when driving he was always about his Master's business, speaking to his "fare" about eternal things. His zeal a few days since led him to preach from his box to the bystanders, and to sell some War Crys, and thus he brought himself into trouble. The gendarmes, thinking him to be insane, arrested him, and lodged him in the hospital. Here he addressed all the patients, going from bed to bed, entreating them to be saved. The agitation, however, caused by his arrest brought on an attack of apoplexy, and he passed away next day.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

A Methodist new church is being erected at Rathmines, Dublin, at a cost of about £6000.

The Dublin University Mission, which has now five ordained missionaries in India, has just held its second annual meeting, and has had an encouraging year.

Last Thursday being St. Patrick's Day, special united prayer-meetings on behalf of Ireland were held in Dublin, Belfast, and other places under the auspices of the Evagelical Alliance.

On Sunday week disturbances were renewed in connection with the Arklow open-air services. The police tried to prevent Rev. Mr. Hallowes from preaching, and several unseemly scuffles ensued.

The Dublin Needlework Guild, organised for the useful purpose of supplying clothes and other articles for the poor in hospitals and charitable institutions, has 2862 lady associates, fifty vice-presidents, and received last year 5861 useful articles.

The Bible and Colportage Society of Ireland has twenty-five Colporteurs in the South and West of Ireland, and is doing an excellent and most encouraging work. The annual meeting was held last week in Belfast, Mr. R. L. Hamilton, J.P., presiding.

The Protestant Orphan Society of Down, Connor, and Dromore, which has been twenty-five years in existence, has now 635 children under its care, and its receipts last year were £3815 4s. 5d., or, taking the whole of Ireland, the Society has charge of 2628 orphans, and its income last year amounted to £24,000.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Shrewsbury Mrs. John Barker, aged fifty-eight, well known as a devoted Christian worker; at York, Mr. Wm. Carter, aged seventy-nine, a helper of many; at Aberystwith, Mrs. John Morgan, an aged saint, whose sweet character and earnest spirit had for many years been used of God to win many; at Southport, on March 4, at Highfield, Macclesfield, Alderman Wadsworth, J.P., a leader in Christian work; on Monday, March 14, at 22, Bloomsbury-street, W.C., Rev. Joseph Heaton, a well-known Wesleyan minister and author; in the Falkland Isles, Rev. Lawrence Good, who went from the Pastors' College some eighteen months' ago; at Bridgnorth, aged eighty-seven, Mrs. Mary Brown, a devoted Christian and helper of many; at Sligo, Rev. F. Hamilton, formerly incumbent of Estersnow, aged eighty-eight years; at Downpatrick, Mr. J. Waterworth, an earnest Presbyterian elder; at Durban, Natal, after twenty-seven years of faithful service in the Lord's work as minister of the Baptist Church at Durban, and a long, consistent, godly life, Pastor Isaac Cowley, who passed to his reward and rest on February 11, aged seventy-eight years.

Toys for Hindu Girls.—Mrs. McCulloch, of the Free Church of Scotland Rural Mission, Bengal, writes:—"Last year we were able to make over 500 little girls happy with dolls and toys sent from Britain for them. Hindu girls do not have much to brighten their lives, and the little gifts they get for attending school are all the more valued on that account. Almost anything that an English child likes will be suitable, but dolls are best for the greater number of the girls. We live in a hot country, and wax dolls never reach us in a state fit to give away. Mrs. Cleghorn, of 26, Queen-street, Edinburgh, kindly undertakes to send the dolls off at the beginning of July, and will give any information required as to suitable articles. Parcels should be marked outside 'Mofussil Mission.'"

Notices.

Several correspondents having inquired respecting "The Invalid's Hymn-Book," now out of print, we have been informed that most of the contents of that highly-esteemed volume are found in "Selections from the Poems of Charlotte Elliott." 4s. Simpkin, Marshall and Co.

A correspondent would like to know where to find a hymn beginning—

"Blessed are the dead,
In Jesus' arms who lie."

Another asks for the source of a piece with the verse—

"There is no rose without a thorn,
Who has not found it true?
And knows that griefs of gladness born
Our footsteps still pursue?"

British Syrian School, Cairo.—Under this heading, a letter appeared in our issue for March 3. As must have been perfectly clear from the letter itself, the word "Syrian" was printed in error for "Mission." The British Syrian Schools are, of course, a wholly distinct organisation.

Appeals.

Wesleyan East-end Mission.—The very cold weather has brought much suffering to the destitute poor around us. Help of all kinds will be most welcome in the midst of our distress.—Peter Thompson, 242, Cable-street, E.

Children's Friend Mission.—Through the death of several warm supporters of the Mission, the funds have fallen off. The work has been much blessed. Left-off clothing, Bibles, tracts, and also gifts, should be sent to the Superintendent, Mr. Geo. Fuller, Brunswick Hall, Brunswick-road, Poplar, E.

The Gospel in the Public-house.—Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness writes:—"Many of our deaconesses at Doric Lodge visit the public-houses in the neighbourhood on Sunday evenings, and in nearly every case meet with a kindly reception from both landlords and customers. For this work a large number of visits is required, and we should be happy to receive parcels of Gospel tracts from any Christian friends."—28, Bow-road, E.

Railway Men at Bristol.—The work among the railway men of Bristol and neighbourhood commenced in 1877, and has been much blessed of God. The monthly packets of periodicals, tracts, &c., are greatly appreciated. Owing to the lamented death of one friend, and the inability of another to continue the work, two stations, containing altogether about twenty-four men, are unsupplied. I should be very thankful to hear from Christian friends who would undertake to send monthly to these men, or some of them.—(Miss) L. Stevenson, 65, Hampton-park, Redland, Bristol.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing upon a special meeting, Mar. 31, for barmen and publicans in King's-cross Theatre, in connection with London City Mission.—For a week's special services, by Mr. J. Croffon Rainey, from Mar. 26, at Miss Daniell's Soldiers' Mission Hall.—For special mission in Coldstream, N.B., from Mar. 20, by Mr. C. G. Rogers, Evangelisation Society.—For Sabbath evening meetings in Crosses Hall, Monaghan, and praise for past blessings.—For Mr. Matthew Burnett's last meetings at Waterhouses.—PRAISE.—For answers to prayer in connection with Mr. Matthew Burnett's work at Waterhouses, Deesham.

HOW TO REACH THE MASSES? GO TO THEM.

The Committee for Special Religious Services in Theatres, Halls, and Mission-rooms, have the following buildings open every Sunday:—Queen's Theatre of Varieties, Poplar; Pavilion Theatre, Whitechapel-road; Agricultural Hall, Islington; Town Hall, Shoreditch; Town Hall, Holborn; Town Hall, Kensington; Morley Hall, Cambridge-heath; Homerton Hall, High-street; Queen's-park Hall, Harrow-road; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Bethnal-green; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Union-street, Borough; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Kirby-street, Poplar; South Norwood Hall; Railway Arch, Bermondsey, and various City mission-rooms in poor and destitute districts. Cheques and P.O.'s can be remitted to the Secretary, Charles M. Sewell, 3, Bridewell-place, New Bridge-street, E.C.; or to the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.

ALL-NIGHT RESCUE WORK.

ALREADY, since this work began, 33,000 poor Homeless and Starving Men have been gathered from the streets in the dead of night, Sheltered, Fed, and otherwise assisted, with most gratifying results.

This season has commenced with more than usual pressure, and from present appearances a very hard season is apprehended, making our appeal all the more urgent.

The continuance of this much-needed work must depend upon the liberality of those having the means to support it. Contributions will be gratefully received by the Secretary; the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or by Messrs. Morgan and Scott, office of The Christian.

EUCALYPTUS AND PINE JUJUBES
C. R. LAWRENCE, ORIGINATOR.

The pure oils of Pine and Eucalyptus, which alone enter into the composition of these Jujubes, possess remarkable antiseptic properties, and have been found most efficacious in the treatment of diseases of the Throat and Respiratory Organs. For Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, Loss of Voice, Catarrh, Influenza, and the Throat troubles common to public speakers and singers, they are being used with the most satisfactory results.

Lawrence's Eucalyptus and Pine Jujubes have won the approval and recommendation of the Medical Profession who prescribe them as a pleasant and convenient mode of administrating these medicines. A jujube placed in the mouth is a sure safeguard against infection.

Prices 1s. 1½d. and 2s. per box (post free 1s. 3d. or 2s. 3d.). Of all Chemists, or from the Sole Proprietor, C. R. LAWRENCE, M.P.S., Pharmaceutical Chemist, EBYL. London Agents: Barclays, Newberys, Sangers.

Presentation Edition: Cloth extra, 3s.; cloth bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"This book is full of thought and palpitates with life. It is the work of a Christian, a scholar, and a man of genius; while none have ever brought to the theme a larger measure of love and reverence. It is not only admirably adapted for the mature and thoughtful, but it is also peculiarly fitted to give a right direction to the thoughts and lives of young, earnest, and inquiring persons."—Newcastle Daily Chronicle.

New and Enlarged Edition, greatly improved.

The Bible Remembrancer:

A Valuable Handbook to the Old and New Testaments.

Tinted Covers, 2s.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

The whole of the work has been carefully revised, and a large portion entirely re-written; while several new features have been introduced, rendering this Edition one of the most comprehensive companions to the Bible extant.

Among the prominent features are:—A Complete Modern Atlas of Bible Lands—An Analysis and Summary of the Entire Scriptures—The Words of Christ; the Miracles and Prayers and Thanksgivings of Christ, &c., &c.

For Liver Complaints.

There is no medicine that so speedily restores this organ (however gravely or chronically affected) as Guy's Tonic. Congestion and other biliary derangements are cured with unerring certainty. The complete and permanent restoration resulting from a short continuance of this valuable remedy causes universal wonderment, a cure invariably taking place although all other remedies have been used without benefit.

Albert-st., Wednesbury, Staffs., Sept. 18, 1891.

Dear Sirs,—Having suffered from severe liver complaint for the last three years, with pain in the back and mental depression, I have tried nearly everything without benefit; but after taking three doses of Guy's Tonic the pains in the back have entirely gone. I now feel as I have not done before for years. I shall recommend it wherever I go.

Yours truly,
J. H. KIGHT.

TO ANY ONE DESIRING to test our remedies, we will send, securely packed in a special box, a bottle of Guy's Tonic, together with a free sample box of Guy's Fruit Pills and complete "Guide to Digestion," containing simple instructions as to the Guy's Tonic Treatment, post paid, for 2s. 9d. Address all letters to Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C. Guy's Tonic is sold retail of all Chemists at 2s. 9d. per bottle, and Guy's Fruit Pills at 1s. 1½d. per box.

A CLERGYMAN

Writes: "I am so convinced from my own experience and that of others of the real value of your WIND PILLS, in complaints arising from a disordered state of the STOMACH, BOWELS, or LIVER, that I wish much to promote the use of the Medicine in this parish, and I now inclose Postal Order for a large box, and should be glad of some papers for circulation among my parishioners, and if I may ask for them, a few Pills gratis to enable my people to try them for themselves. In my own case have been of the greatest use. I have no objection to your publishing my communication, provided you divulge not my name and address, which you may give, nevertheless, to those who require such a verification."——Vicarage, Sept. 12, 1891.

All Sufferers from INDIGESTION, LIVER COMPLAINTS, WIND ON THE STOMACH, COSTIVENESS, SICK HEADACHE, HEARTBURN, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, BILIOUSNESS, &c., should avail themselves of this most excellent Medicine.

☞THE WIND PILLS being PURELY VEGETABLE, TASTELESS, and MILD and TONIC in their action, may be taken with perfect safety by the most delicate of either sex.

Of all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., or Post Free for 14, 33, or 54 Stamps, from PAGE WOODCOCK, LINCOLN.

Be Up To Date.

It is a tradition with you that brimstone and treacle is a good Spring medicine, eh? And that Spring brings feverishness, eruptions, and a general disturbance of the system. Quite so. You accordingly proceed to dose yourself and dose your children with brimstone and treacle. But why? The mixture is messy and nauseous. It does good, but stomach colic is apt to ensue. But no matter. Those before you believed in it and so do you.

You might just as well stick to the farthing rushlight, and ignore paraffin, gas, and the electric light. But you don't do so because you know better.

Carry the principle farther, and give Frazer's Sulphur Tablets a trial as a Spring medicine. They are more efficacious, and far safer than brimstone and treacle, and much nicer to take.

Don't be bigoted nor sceptical. Live and learn. Think of Frazer's Sulphur Tablets as the best of all Spring medicines, and a valuable blood purifier. Why not test them free of charge? Samples will be sent gratis and post free on application. Name The Christian.

THE STARVING AND HOMELESS POOR OF LONDON.

One of the most difficult problems of this or any other age is how to help the Poor without pauperising them, or being imposed upon. Both of these difficulties are now easily avoided, thanks to General Booth's "Darkest England and Way Out" Scheme. Any generous or philanthropic resident may now effectually help the homeless and destitute without giving them money, which, alas! too often is spent in drink.

FOOD TICKETS varying in value from ½d. to 2d. may be purchased, which entitle the bearer to Food of the value marked on the ticket.

SHELTER TICKETS, value 4d., entitling bearer to Supper and Bed, also Breakfast next morning, or 2d. Tickets entitling to Bed only, may also be had.

BOOKS OF THESE TICKETS, containing assortment of each (for those desiring them), may be purchased, value 5s. Packets of either kind will be sent on receipt of P.O. to value.

Applications to be made to Commissioner CADMAN, 101, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

THE SUFFERING POOR.

While the recent mild change has wrought much, yet over many the cloud of daily want and enfeebled health still hangs with sorrowful intensity. Our doors are still crowded with hungry ones, and in our visitation dire need prevails.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY MISSIONARY UNION.

Patron—Rev. CANON CHRISTOPHER, M.A., Rector of St. Aldate's.

PROPOSED

HANNINGTON MEMORIAL HALL,

OXFORD.

COMMITTEE:

President—Rev. H. C. SQUIRES, M.A., Rector of St. Peter-le-Bailey.
Vice-President—Rev. F. J. CHAVASSE, M.A., Principal of Wycliffe Hall.
Hon. Treasurer—Rev. J. HEWETSON, M.A., Vice-Principal of Wycliffe Hall.
Hon. Secretary—T. W. KETCHLEE, Exeter College.

F. R. H. SOPER, B.A., Merton and Wycliffe Hall.
E. J. WOODHOUSE, Oriel College.
T. E. ALVAREZ, Jesus College. A. P. BIRCH, Christ Church.
E. H. ELWIN, Merton College.

OBJECTS.

1. To raise funds to purchase a site and erect a Hall, with Library and Reading-room, for the use of the Oxford University Missionary Union, which is carried on in connection with the Church Missionary Society.
2. To secure in this way, not only a centre of Missionary Influence, but also to provide suitable headquarters for all efforts connected with the Evangelical cause in Oxford.

NECESSITY OF SUCH A BUILDING.

1. There is no suitable place of meeting for the Union or for the Daily Prayer Meeting, Special Addresses, or Missions to the Undergraduates, or other kindred undertakings.
2. There is danger lest the present greatly-increased Missionary zeal and activity among the Undergraduates wane, unless such a centre of influence is provided to sustain and increase it.
3. The usefulness of the Henry Martyn Memorial Hall at Cambridge shows how great the advantages of such a building would be in Oxford.

JUSTIFICATION FOR THE APPEAL.

1. The supporters of the Missionary and Evangelical causes in Oxford feel that they may reasonably look for support from sympathisers throughout the country, as it is obviously impossible for the necessary funds to be raised in Oxford only.
2. There is a prospect of obtaining an admirable freehold site, IF FUNDS BE IMMEDIATELY PROVIDED, but negotiations cannot be commenced until a definite offer can be made. For this purpose about £1,200 will be required, while it is estimated that the further cost of providing suitable premises will be from £2,500 to £3,000. It is hoped that it may be found possible to vest any property that is acquired in the Church Missionary Society.

NAME.

The Committee feel that since the late Bishop Hannington was an Oxford man, and in fullest sympathy with the objects they have in view, they may without impropriety associate his name with the proposed building.

HOMES OF HOPE,

4, 5 & 6, Regent-square, Gray's Inn-rd., London, W.C.

Special efforts are made on behalf of Mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.

A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women, before they become Mothers, as are unfitted, from their previous good character and position, to mix with others.

The Committee are obliged to make an urgent appeal for contributions—

1. For the General Fund; the expenses of which amount to about £5 a day.
2. For the Child's Fund; a guinea or two to pay the nurses would in many cases rescue a mother and child. Five Shillings would pay for a child for a week.
3. For law expenses; in every case where it is possible the men are compelled to pay the sum allowed by law for the child's support.

The applications are so distressing and urgent that every shilling has been spent.

Bankers:

"There is nothing clearer than the author's English, more musical than the rhythm of his simple sentences, more spiritual than his tone, or more refreshing to devout minds than his addresses. They glow with fervour and pant with the highest aims; and yet their exegesis is sound and their commonsense and practicability strong and supreme. The volume before us is charming, welcome, and enriching as the balm-filled air of dawning spring."
General Baptist Magazine.

Christ Lifted Up.

By REV. ROBERT GILCHRIST.

Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

"Right well has the author done his work in this charming book. In the first part he exhibits 'Christ Lifted Up' on the cross; and deals in an inexpressibly sweet and tender manner with the words and spirit of Jesus while nailed to the tree. In the second part, Christ risen from the dead, and exalted to the right hand of the throne of God is evidently set forth before our eyes. In both sections there is much sound exposition, and the book from beginning to end sparkles with fresh, and beautiful, and inspiring thoughts."

"An interesting sketch of the life and work of this lamented gentleman, with whose music lovers of sacred song are well acquainted. He rendered an immense service to the religious world, his whole life being devoted to the work of his Master; and the sudden and terrible death which befell him and Mrs. Bliss while on their way to aid Messrs. Moody and Sankey at Chicago has added considerably to the interest attaching to so noble a life."

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon wrote in The Sword and Trowel:—"Preachers abound; but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter; but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. James Culross; and in his work entitled 'John, whom Jesus Loved,' we have found a book. Many writers are mere echoes of other men's voices—they imitate the good steward in bringing forth things old, but things new are quite out of their way. One of the excellences of Dr. Culross is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way."

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."

"Thy First Love:"

Christ's Message to the Church of Ephesus.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly. We heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."

Children's Meetings And How to Conduct Them.

A Book For Sabbath-School Teachers, Parents, and Preachers to the Young.

By LUCY J. RIDER and NELLIE M. CARMAN,

Assisted by many well-known Writers.

With Introduction by Rev. J. H. Vincent, D.D.

Containing 60 Outline Lessons, 48 Diagrams for the Blackboard, and 25 Children's Popular Hymns, with Tunes. 220 pages, crown 8vo, tinted covers, 2s.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"We do not hesitate to affirm that the very best Sunday-school worker in this country may learn much from this book. It deals with the nature, essential elements, and methods of the teaching process; and also with the Sunday-school teacher's other work than teaching—the shaping and guidance of his scholars. There is certainly no existing teacher's manual worthy to be placed by its side."—Methodist Times.

"We give this book a hearty welcome. Anything that will stimulate the instructors of our young people to greater freshness and force in their teaching—as this volume is well fitted to do—is to be hailed with great satisfaction."—Nonconformist.

WORKS ON ROMANISM.

"Popery can find no favour where 'Foxe's Martyrs' is studied."—Christian Progress.

MORGAN & SCOTT'S EDITION.

FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS.

A COMPLETE AND AUTHENTIC ACCOUNT OF

THE LIVES, SUFFERINGS, AND TRIUMPHANT DEATHS, OF EARLY CHRISTIAN AND PROTESTANT MARTYRS, IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

WITH TWELVE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Complete in One Handsome Volume, cloth, bevelled boards, 10s. 6d.
Presentation Edition, cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 12s. 6d.

"We are glad to see our old friend John Foxe in this new and handsome form. Of all the editions that we have seen, this of Messrs. Morgan and Scott's is decidedly the best. The additions of the Editor's, bringing the history down to recent date, help to show the unchanged nature of Romanism, and the need of watching its insidious encroachments. Rev. Ingram Cobbin's introductory essay on Popery is of a very vigorous and instructive character. The numerous engravings lend additional interest to the book, and its excellent 'get up' renders it an ornament worthy of any drawing-room."—Methodist Recorder.

"A new edition of this useful and standard work; and a most masterly exposure of what Romanism really is, and what it can do when it has the upper hand. The perusal of this book should form part of the education of our youth. Heads of families should purchase it for their children to read. Popery can find no favour where Foxe's Martyrs is studied."—Christian Progress.

THE CATACOMBS AT ROME:

Their Contents and Teachings.

A Vindication of Pure and Primitive Christianity; and an Exposure of the Corruptions of Romanism; Derived from the Sepulchral Remains of the Early Christians at Rome.

By the late BENJAMIN SCOTT, F.R.A.S.,

Chamberlain of the City of London.

Fourth Edition. Revised and Improved. With many Illustrations.

Tinted Covers, 2s. Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Scott's volume possesses great antiquarian and historical interest."—Word and Work.

"Most people have heard of these famous Catacombs; but nowhere have we met with a more graphic or instructive account of their contents than in this book. The many wood engravings help to make the whole thing quite plain. We advise our young ministers, or more educated Sunday-school teachers, to study this volume."

Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"A valuable little work. We wish we could place it in the hands of thousands; and more, we wish we could induce that hapless multitude who are now given over to a blind infatuation of Romanism and Ritualism, under a glossed and gilded form, to 'read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest' what the author has here advanced upon this all-important subject."—The Gospel Magazine.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE OF ROMAN CATHOLICISM:

With Incidents of Convent Life.

Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"Now, more than ever, ought books like this to be diligently circulated, for not only is Rome as busy with her wiles as heretofore; but in what was once a Protestant Church we have convents and the confessional too. As for the book of Miss Richardson, we can answer for the accuracy of many of its details."—Evangelical Christendom.

"It was a dark page in my experience, when first I knelt at the feet of a mortal to confess what should have been poured into the ear of God alone. I cannot dwell upon this; but a brief time before it would have for ever put to rest my longings after Romanism. But the mantle of evening had already cast its shadowy folds around me, and they were fast enveloping me in darkness as of midnight."

THIRTY-NINTH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

CASE of a YOUNG MAN (J. T. LUNHAM) at HORTON-in-RIBBLESDALE, YORKS.

The patient is engaged on the Midland Railway. His illness was ushered in by nervous prostration, palpitations, hectic flushes, followed by decided symptoms of lung disease, such as cough, spitting of blood, impeded respiration, &c. The face became thin, and there was every apparent probability of his falling a victim to the fell disease.

I sent him medicine with letter of advice in April last.

In one month he writes: "I have spat no blood since I commenced your treatment. All say I am improving in appearance."

Two months later on he says; "I am not like the same man; I am wonderfully improved, both mentally and physically. I am truly thankful to God and you."

In September he writes:—"I am now in the best of health. I was never better in my life. I have joined the Church choir."

In November he writes again, and to expressions of unbounded gratitude he adds:—"Use my case and any of my letters for the benefit of the public.—J. T. LUNHAM, Midland Railway, Horton-in-Ribblesdale, Skipton, Yorks."

Pure Concentrated FRY'S COCOA

BUMSTED'S TABLE SALT.

CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS AND ASTHMA.

I will demonstrate to the whole world, and to sufferers from these unfortunate maladies, how they can be permanently cured by an entirely New Method of Treatment, without the chance of failure. All afflicted may write with full confidence to Mr. WILLIAMS, 11, Burwood Place, Norfolk Crescent, London who will send full particulars to any person free of all charge.

PEPSONYMIN TONIC

THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely from its use." MRS. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dyspepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SPITE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. The trade supplied with Pepsonymin Tonic by LYNCH and Co., MAY, ROBERTS and Co., F. NEWBERY and SONS, London, E.C.; GOODHALL, BACKHOUSE and Co., Leeds, &c.

DORCAS THIMBLE
HORNER'S PATENT
STERLING SILVER

"THE QUEEN," May 8, says:
"The 'Dorcas' Thimble is more durable than the generality of these almost indispensable work table implements; it is made in three parts, the inner and the outer being Silver, and the intermediate Steel; these three are all struck up together, forming a resisting power not obtained in silver only. What is more uncomfortable than sewing with a thimble that has seen service to such an extent that it has holes in its sides? With the 'Dorcas' Thimble this annoyance vanishes."

WORKS BY F. B. MEYER, B.A.

Scripture Biographies.

ABRAHAM: Or, the Obedience of Faith.

With nine original illustrations. Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"The contents are such that no one can rise from their perusal without feeling consciously strengthened in God, and inspired afresh for the godly life. Our teachers may learn from this biography how to draw out the spiritual lessons of the Sacred Word."
Sunday School Chronicle.

ISRAEL: A Prince with God. THE STORY OF JACOB RE-TOLD.

With nine original illustrations. Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"MR MEYER has great descriptive power. This subject in his hand glows with life, and the scenes and events in the history of his hero pass vividly before you, and are ever being used to force home some important principle."—British Messenger.

JOSEPH: Beloved—Hated—Exalted.

With nine original illustrations. Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition. Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s 6d.

"A wonderfully-interesting Scripture story is wrought out with great literary skill, and the whole is suffused with a spiritual influence which could only come of close communion with God."—Methodist New Connexion Magazine.

ELIJAH: And the Secret of his Power.

With nine original illustrations. Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition. Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"Good, exceedingly good! The tone, spirit, and aspirations of the author are of a fine Gospel sort. In all his books there is a sweet savour; and in this one it is specially prevalent. The work is nicely got up, and will be a good exchange for half-a-crown."
—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon in Sword and Trowel.

Expository Volumes.

The Life and Light of Men: Expositions of John i.—xii.

Cloth boards, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition. Cloth, bev. boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"Whoever would understand the vital force and practical bearings of John's Gospel would do well to procure this series of studies."—Congregational Magazine.

Tried by Fire: Expositions of the First Epistle of Peter.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bev. boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"Full of tender Christian wisdom. There are many unobtrusive signs of thought and culture throughout; but the chief charm of the book is its earnest simplicity."
British Weekly.

The Psalms: Notes and Readings.

Demy 8vo size, tinted covers, 1s., cloth limp, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
Special Pocket Edition: Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.; cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s.

"An admirable volume of Notes on the Book of Psalms, which should prove very helpful to any preacher or evangelist; while as the companion of the private student it would be invaluable."—The Quiver.

Devotional Volumes.

Christian Living: Chapters on the Christian Life.

Cloth boards, 1s.
Presentation Edition: Cloth bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

"A choice book of nine chapters, into which is condensed a mass of helpful instruction and wise practical counsel on various topics relating to the Christian Life."
Footsteps of Truth.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

Cloth boards, 1s.
Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

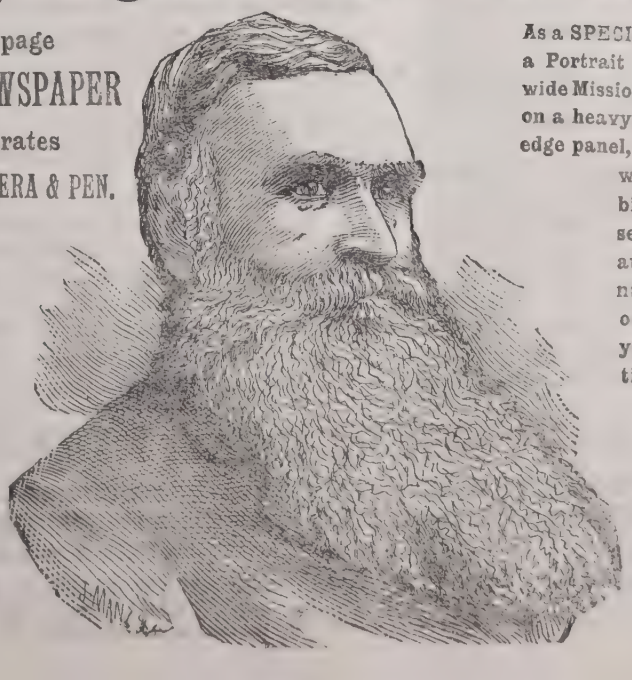
Life More Abundant:

And Other Addresses.

By Rev. THEODORE MONOD.

Tinted Covers, 1s.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards 1s. 6d.



"There is nothing clearer than the author's English, more musical than the rhythm of his simple sentences, more spiritual than his tone, or more refreshing to devout minds than his addresses. They glow with fervour and pant with the highest aims; and yet their exegesis is sound and their commonsense and practicability strong and supreme. The volume before us is charming, welcome, and enriching as the balm-filled air of dawning spring."

A UNIQUE HOLIDAY FOR MINISTERS & CHRISTIAN WORKERS

The Review of the Churches

"REUNION"

CONFERENCE AT GRINDELWALD.

A TWELVE DAYS' HOLIDAY IN SWITZERLAND FOR TEN GUINEAS,

WITH THE OPTION OF PROLONGING THE HOLIDAY TO A MONTH.

PROGRAMME FOR JULY.

(With the exception of the day given up to the "Reunion" discussion in the middle of the month, the mornings and afternoons will be entirely devoted to mountain-climbing and other recreations. The first object of the gathering will be to secure for all who are present a genuine rest, and this would be prevented by meetings during the day. In our winter party we found discussions on alternate evenings to be sufficiently exciting, and I have adhered to this plan as a rule. It is possible that some of the party may even find the programme with this proviso appear too much like work. To reassure them I may say that there is no compulsion about attendance at these discussions. I have no doubt, as a matter of fact, that when we get to Grindelwald the discussions will prove too tempting to be neglected by any excepting those who have been doing very hard mountain-climbing on any particular day.)—Gen. Ed., Rev. Ch.

The Christian.

☞ It is particularly requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan & Scott, and not to individual members. Communications for The Christian should be addressed to the Editor. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

All Advertisements for The Christian should be sent to Messrs. John Haddon and Co., Central Advertising Offices, Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, London, E.C., accompanied by remittance. (For Terms, see Page 2.)

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Rabbi Lichtenstein, Synagogue minister and confessor of Christ, Tapio-Szele, Hungary.

Probably the Poet Laureate had no mental reference to anarchists and murderers when he wrote his progressive poem, "Locksley Hall;" but The Times does not speak extravagantly when it includes these untoward classes among "the heirs of all the ages, in the foremost files of time." Of the Rainhill murderer the leading journal says:—

However the criminal may be named, it is plain that he is one of those exceptional monsters who appear from time to time, as if to remind us in a striking and forcible manner that the automatic development of scientific and social organisation, commonly called progress, is not necessarily correlated with ethical advance. Everything perfected by civilisation for its own purposes is equally employed by its enemies, and, by a sort of irony not infrequent in the natural world, the very schools of thought that divide the civilised portion of mankind can equally be traced among the criminals who prey upon it. The Rainhill criminal is an Individualist. He fights for his own hand and pursues his own ends with undeviating singleness of purpose.

But not only by individuals, but by organisations, are the powers of modern science and the processes of modern thought turned to mischievous account:—

The Paris dynamiters are the criminal representatives of the other great school of modern thought. They are organised for common purposes, to which individual wills are subordinated, they fight for an idea which with them takes the place of the State, and they are firm believers in the necessity for enforcing by any needful amount of violence the will of the chaotic organisation which they themselves obey. Both classes of criminals make free, and often very dexterous, use of the latest results of scientific discovery. Both may boast themselves, in common with the most virtuous among us, "heirs of all the ages, in the foremost files of time." Both call for prompt and merciless suppression by the strong arm of the law.

Whether the arm of the law, however mercilessly applied, will be strong enough to suppress the crime of the days on which we are entering may well be questioned. The nihilism and anarchy which are the terror of society are the outcome of the abuse of governmental power, which began with the times of the Gentiles, under Nebuchadnezzar, and has been continually checked by the growing power of the people, until these last days, when we are seeing that the kings and the people do not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay.

We are often told that the rack and the stake, the Inquisition and the torture-chamber, have been left behind by the spirit of the age; but the daily newspaper is terribly assuring us that the Inquisitor and the torturer, as well as the anarchist and the murderer, are "heirs of all the ages, in the foremost files of time."

An awakening of altogether a remarkable character has taken place at Cincinnati in connection with the labours of Rev. B. Fay Mills, and, according to a writer in the New York Independent, this great and wicked city has been stirred from its centre to its most distant suburb. It is stated that—

Thousands of Christians have been quickened into new life; thousands of others have been converted to Christ. The largest churches have been crowded with the multitudes. The Music Hall has been packed in every corner, and thousands turned away. No one who witnessed it will ever forget the sight when within the doors of this magnificent edifice nearly eight thousand people pressed into the seats and aisles and platform and doorways and corridors, and when, before the evangelist had announced his text, at least six thousand others had failed to obtain entrance, and had reluctantly gone home. No one who saw it will ever forget the strange scenes of the remarkable "Mid-week Sabbath," when Cincinnati, a city noted for her Sabbath desecration, for her Sunday saloons, and Sunday theatres, and open Sunday stores, closed her places of business by thousands, from her great wholesale and retail houses and factories down to the smallest shops and offices, in the midst of the busy week, at the request of the churches, and out of respect for the great religious movement, and sent her employés in multitudes to hear the Gospel preached.

All classes appear to have been reached—from the wealthy merchants down to tramps and criminals; and, according to the accounts given by Rev. Drs. J. J. Francis, W. McKiblin, and other ministers, nothing like it has previously been known in Cincinnati. On page 14 we give some account of this remarkable movement.

We regret to find in the current number of our useful and valued contemporary, The British Workman, an article on "Timothy's 'Little Wine,'" which contains statements that must pain all who reverence and love the inspired Scriptures. The writer asserts that Paul's counsel to Timothy (1 Tim. v. 23)

Is evidently a thought that occurred to him on the spur of the moment, for it is thrust right into the midst of a paragraph with which it has no sort of connection, and without even parenthesis marks. I suppose he thought he might forget it if he didn't put it down then and there. It was very good of Paul to take thought for Timothy's infirmities, but I guess he has felt sorry a good many times since that he ever put that down in writing.

Shallow flippancy like this is unworthy of the excellent periodical in which it appears and of the Temperance cause which it advocates We can only suppose it was inserted inadvertently, and we hope that the influence which this periodical possesses is not to be used in aid of the assault upon the inspiration of the Bible.

An able writer in The Leisure Hour points out that it is really the Minister of Worship, Pobiedonestzeff, "a nineteenth-century Laud," who is responsible for the anti-Semitic movement and the religious persecutions in Russia, that minister having obtained so much influence over the Czar as virtually to have overshadowed the throne. The writer says:—

A narrow-minded man, unscrupulous in misrepresenting his opponents for the sake of the orthodox cause, fiercely ambitious, he is convinced that he is doing his duty; that it is he who has been called of God to save Russia from that breaking up into rival creeds which exists in the rest of Europe. To him Russia is a church—she is primarily a religious communion, and only secondarily a secular community... The religious persecutions which had been undertaken at his instigation, have since been carried on with redoubled vigour now that he himself superintends their execution...It is he who keeps alive in the Czar the belief that he is the Anointed of the Lord, the representative of God upon the earth, and that the population of the endless Empire only exists in order to obey his will.

Neither persecution nor philanthropy will solve the Jewish question; but the merciful providence of God will, in due course, bring the seed of Abraham to acknowledge Christ, and realise before the nations of the world the Divine utterance by the mouth of the prophet Isaiah: "This people have I formed for myself. They shall shew forth my praise." The teaching of Scripture on this important subject is lucidly outlined by Rev. David Baron, of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, in a small volume just published: "The Jewish Problem—its Solution; or Israel's Present and Future." (1s. 6d. W. G. Wheeler, 21a, Warwick-lane, E.C.)

The duty of the Church of Christ to pray and work for the enlightenment of the Jews is Scripturally enforced by Mr. Baron. We read:—

In spite of a few recent, inadequate, and not always wisely-directed efforts, the great mass of the Jewish nation is left in perfect ignorance of the holy name of Christ, and of the very existence of such a book as the New Testament.

You believe that Gentiles can only be born again by the Spirit of God, yet you do not expect those to whom the Gospel has not been preached to believe and call on the name of Christ! Those among Israel who have heard the glad tidings of salvation through their crucified and risen Messiah, have not all disbelieved it; and it is a matter of fact, which, however, those not informed on this subject may be surprised to hear, that there is no modern mission so hopeful, or which has produced such glorious results in conversion, or the converts from which have, by their usefulness and service to the Church Universal, so abundantly rewarded all the efforts put forth, as the Jewish field.

In all the centuries there have been Jewish confessors of Christ, notwithstanding the many cruelties that have from time to time been perpetrated upon the scattered nation by such as have claimed to be Christ's representatives upon earth.

The case for the opium traffic was influentially stated on Thursday last at a meeting at the Society of Arts. When we consider the weight of the facts suppressed, and the un-Christian character of the apologies presented, we are compelled to estimate the "case" as essentially immoral as well as extremely weak. Some friends of national righteousness attended, and made the most of the scant opportunities that were afforded them to reply to speeches in which the wicked traffic was not only condoned, but actually advocated as contributing to the social well-being of hundreds of thousands of people! The Echo has well expressed its indignation:—

The history of the Indian opium trade with China is, without exception, the darkest chapter of British annals, as it is one of the deepest blots on British civilisation. We hardly know which is the most infamous—the systematic production of the drug for revenue purposes, or the opium wars waged by this country against the Chinese to compel them, against their own customs' regulations, to take and pay for the opium so produced.

The whole story, from beginning to end, is hideous and humiliating. Fortunately, for the sake of our name, stained as it is, and the moral basis of the Empire, weakened as it has been, by opium production and opium wars, a portion of the conscience of the country has been aroused, and the traffic in the drug has been condemned.

One of the official opium advocates described those who are agitating for the suppression of the traffic as "an irresponsible party of philanthropists seeking to obtain their ends by the despotic action of the Parliament of the United Kingdom." We remember that similar taunts were ineffectually levelled at the men who demanded the abolition of slavery. Such shafts, however, must be utterly powerless when directed against the leaders of a cause which is unquestionably based upon righteous principles, and animated by human compassion and the spirit of Christ.

Mr. Cheok Hong Cheong delivered a lecture against the opium traffic a few days ago to Members of the House of Commons, in the Palace of Westminster. According to The St. James's Gazette of March 22—

Dr. Farquharson asked the lecturer rather an awkward question when he inquired whether the use of opium shortened life. The lecturer replied somewhat lamely, that not being a medical man he could not say, but he knew it could not be given up without suffering.

The question would appear to have been prompted by settled hostility to the cause to which Mr. Cheong has of late rendered such valuable service, and not to any desire to gain practical information on an important subject. This appears by a letter we have received from Mr. W. A. Edgar, F.R.C.V.S., Dartford, in which we read:—

Had Mr. Cheong gone down to the House of Commons fortified with a copy of Dr. Farquharson's "Therapeutics," 5th edition, 1891, he might have answered that learned physician by saying, "Out of thine own mouth will I condemn thee."

Summarizing Dr. Farquharson's statements on the physiological effects of opium, admitting the ruinous consequences of taking the poison, our correspondent transcribes "cautions" including this: "We must be very careful to warn our patients from time to time of the absorbing nature of this practice [taking opium], and of its enervating effects on mind and body." The legislator is less humane than the physiologist. Mr. Edgar well concludes:—

It having become necessary to schedule ether under the Poisons Act in Ireland, in order to protect the people of that country from the rapidly-growing curse of ether-drinking, may not the same generous act be justly claimed from the Government of our country in respect of opium for the protection of the natives of India?

A fresh expulsion of Jesuits seems to be threatening in France. Two Jesuits—one described as a "Scotch Jesuit," and the other as a "revivalist and political incendiary"—have been creating serious trouble and uproar, and the Government feels it necessary to expel one or both. So once more the Order is discovered as the deadliest of foes to the peace and safety of society. Few, we venture to think, are aware of the extent to which the Jesuits—these insidious foes of faith and freedom—are working in our own land.

The Accuser Cast Out.

[CONCLUDED.]

Last week we showed the reality of the bondage which oppressed the heirs of God in the time of their minority—that is, as long as the heir was a child, differing nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all (Gal. iv. 1, compare Rom. viii. 15; Gal. ii. 4; iv. 9, 24, 25; v. 1).

In pursuing the subject, we would ask special attention to this consideration (viz., the reality of the bondage in which the saints lived under the legal dispensation), and then to the necessity of discussion primarily on the ground of doctrinal truths upon which all are agreed, and not first with reference to the prophetic interpretation of Rev. xii., on which there is a large divergence of view. Moreover, if the question we are considering can be decided on the ground of definite doctrinal teaching, this will go far towards deciding the true meaning of Rev. xii.

In Judaism Satan was specifically known as the Accuser. Job i. and ii. and Zech. iii. have been regarded as affording glimpses of his deadly work and purposes against all who seek to serve God. The pious in Israel lived in continual fear, because of the great adversary, and their prayer has been, in the words of Elihu, "If there be a messenger with Him, an interpreter (or mediator)!" Yet peace with God seemed unattainable; until "God found a ransom" his graciousness was not enjoyed (Job xxxiii. 23, 24). Professor Stevens, of Yale, summarising the true state of things, says:—

Two facts stand out prominently in the Talmudic doctrine of salvation—the multitude of means for securing righteousness and atonement, and, in spite of these, perhaps rather on account of them, the constant uncertainty of the sinner concerning his relation to God. As illustrating this variety of means, we have, in addition to deeds of obedience to the law, a system of works of supererogation; in addition to one's own merits, we have the vicarious merit of the fathers; to daily repentance must be added special penitence on the Day of Atonement; we have the atonement for sins by a variety of sufferings, especially by death. Yet with all these, the certainty of salvation is not attained, peace with God is not won, and fear pursues the Israelite to the grave; nay, haunts him in the realm of the dead. The dread of death and judgment is ever present. It is only to the greatest saints that there come peace and confidence in death, and this by special revelation, and not because of a consciousness of being justified and reconciled with God.

Contrast with this Paul's—"Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ," and with Luther's—"Learn to sing the new song—

Thou, Jesus, art my righteousness;
I am thy sin.
Thou hast taken on thyself what was mine;
Thou hast given me what was thine.

When Satan accused Luther to his own conscience about his sins, saying he had done this, that, and the other, Luther allowed it all, and told him to add yet more and more, and then to write across it all: "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." Luther knew that he was a justified man, and that God was justified in justifying him. All accusations must be made against his Surety, and the idea of Satan being in heaven, laying charges against HIM before God, day and night, only needs to be mentioned to be disproved.

With this Rev. xii. perfectly agrees. It was fitting, in the light of the fear of death above described as being the habitual condition of those under the Old Covenant, that the ejector of Satan should be Michael, the prince who stood for Daniel's people—the Jews. The exultant shout, "Now is come salvation," was in harmony with the declaration that Jesus became partaker of flesh and blood, that through death He might render powerless him that had the power of death—i.e., the devil, the accuser;—it was on the ground of an accomplished salvation that Satan was cast out, and it was consistent with this that in heaven they cried, "Now is come the salvation and the power and the kingdom of our God and the authority of his Christ: because the accuser of our brethren is cast out, who accused them before our God day and night!"—just as the Apostle speaks of our salvation being already accomplished to the uttermost even to our glorification (Rom. viii. 30).

Old Testament and New Testament agree in connecting the expulsion of the accuser with the atoning work of Christ. Apart from the exigencies of systems of prophetic interpretation, the natural reading of Rev. xii. is in absolute accord with this. Otherwise, John the Apocalyptist would contradict Paul the Apostle, and the Revealing Spirit would contradict the Son of the Father (Luke x. 20; John xii. 31). M.

The Apostolic Speeches.

Acts x. 33-48.

As regards nationality, the speech related in Acts ii. was made to Jews. The one now to be considered was addressed to Gentiles. They were well-disposed persons, who were partially enlightened and devout. They had also been specially prepared by Divine action to hear the way of salvation. The passage is, therefore, very suitable to bring before true-hearted persons, who, though not far advanced in the knowledge of the truth, are nevertheless conscious of the working of God's Holy Spirit in their own souls. Happy the audience and happy the instructor of those who can say, "We are all here present in the sight of God to hear all things that have been commanded thee of the Lord."

How many leading truths of Christianity can be embraced in a short passage! Let us just notice them ere we pass on:—Peace by Jesus Christ; his character; his anointing with the Spirit; his death; his resurrection; his lordship; judgment; remission of sins; the gift of the Spirit.

(a) The speaker, although an Apostle, frankly acknowledges that he himself had only recently, and after some resistance, come to a right understanding of the present aspect of God towards mankind in general. He had thought that all other nations besides his own were of a lower order, and unfit for fellowship with God. But God had showed him that he was not to call any man common or unclean. God is not drawn to any of us because we possess external advantages. He looks to the inward condition, so that in every nation he who has a reverential awe of God, and who acts in a right-minded way, is acceptable to Him.

(b) The Apostle briefly recapitulates the facts which the Assembly already knew, so that the further instruction might become attached to the existing knowledge—a simple yet important principle in speaking, without which hearers do not perceive the drift of what is being said to them.

1. God had sent the Word unto the Children of Israel.
2. Whereby He preaches peace by Jesus Christ.
3. God anointed Him with the Holy Spirit and with power.
4. His outward life is pointedly described as of one that went about doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the devil.
5. For God was with Him. Then the Apostle leads them on:—

(c) As in a parenthesis Peter introduces the fact that Jesus Christ is "Lord of all"—words that to a Roman centurion, the servant of a Cæsar exercising almost universal sovereignty, would convey the idea of marvellous exaltation, dignity, and greatness. And they should do so to us also.

(d) Next the Apostle states further facts concerning the Lord Jesus Christ, and he speaks as a personal witness.

1. The Jews slew Him—and by crucifixion;
2. God raised Him up the third day;
3. And made Him manifest to chosen witnesses, the speaker being one of them.

(e) Then the commission:—To preach and testify that Jesus is ordained of God, Judge of quick and dead. Jesus, as Judge, should certainly be more set forth than is sometimes the case; not, indeed, as if his judgment would only lead to condemnation, but as showing forth the investigation, the manifestation, and the revelation of our inmost lives, and that in their entirety, our hidden self, our life, our privileges, mercies used, mercies neglected, our works, our fruits, all are to appear in their reality, and will meet with a corresponding award (2 Cor. v. 10). The Apostle Paul expressly includes judgment in his preaching. He says (Rom. ii. 16): "In the day when God will judge the secrets of men according to my Gospel by Jesus Christ."

(f) All the prophets had given witness to Jesus that through his name (as the meritorious foundation) every one (not Israel only, but from all nations) that believeth on Him shall receive remission of sins.

(g) Lastly, we are told of the first bestowal of the gift of God's Holy Spirit on such persons irrespective of nationalities. And that gift on this occasion preceded baptism, and, in fact, became to the Apostle and his followers the credential for it.

Let us in our own spirit dwell on the two special blessings of the Gospel dispensation which believers receive—the forgiveness of sins, and the gift of the Holy Spirit; and give God the glory of his wondrous grace, and yield a loving allegiance to Him who is "Lord of all." James Van Sommer.

CHARACTER GROWS; it is not something to be put on, ready made, with manhood or womanhood; but day by day, here a little and there a little, it grows with the growth and strengthens with the strength, until, good or bad, it becomes a coat of mail.—Selected.

THE TRAVELLERS' NATIONAL TOTAL ABSTAINERS' UNION has been at work for the past eleven years among show people with encouraging results. The free teas given on the Lord's Day by so many kind friends during the annual fairs have brought thousands under the sound of the Gospel. Miss Millington writes from Layerthorpe Grove, Yorks: "We are hoping to place a copy of God's Word in every caravan in the United Kingdom. Schools are opened on the fair grounds for the children, and many of our members are working in the cause as they travel up and down the country. May I bring before Christian workers in the country the great need of Sabbath meetings amongst the vans. I shall be very glad to give every information respecting the mission, and forward a report and copy of 'The Caravan' to any address."

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.—The usual quarterly meeting for conference and spiritual edification was held in the Council Room, at the Alliance House, on Friday last. The attendance was not large, but it was a representative gathering, and remarkable, as these meetings generally are, for the large proportion of gentlemen attending. Rev. D. MacEwan, D.D., spoke on, "I come quickly: hold fast that which thou hast, that no one take thy crown" (Rev. iii. 2). His powerful and lucid address included an exposition of the messages to the seven churches, and was greatly appreciated by all who were present. Captain Charlton, Revs. Philip Colborne, C. H. Field, Mr. J. E. Cooke, and Sir John Field took part in the proceedings. Several friends suggested that these opportunities for spiritual refreshment might be provided oftener than at present—monthly instead of quarterly.

The World's Young Men.

INDIAN STUDENTS AND CHRISTIANITY.

Continuing his remarks to our representative in Scotland on his Eastern tour, as intimated in our last issue, Mr. L. D. Wishard said he supposed that English people were naturally interested in questions relating to Association work in India, for which country they are peculiarly responsible. In some respects India is accessible to Christian work in a way that other Eastern lands are not. Young men who go there as Association secretaries do not need to wait while they learn a foreign language. Millions of the natives understand the English tongue, which is being taught very vigorously in the lower schools, and which is likely to be widely known within the next twenty years.

The great problem to which the Y.M.C.A. ought to address itself in India is that of reaching the educated class of young men. They ought to concentrate effort on this class because of the fact that a mere fraction of the educated young men of India are accepting Christianity. Mr. Wishard says he was unable to learn that many conversions among students are resulting from the system of higher education in the country. Doubtless something is being accomplished in connection with primary education among the children; but personally he saw little evidence that the missionary colleges are doing much in the way of Christianising the young men who study in them.

THIS IS A DEPLORABLE FACT,

but it is a fact, nevertheless. In one city the professors reported that among the students in two of the leading colleges there had been scarcely any conversions for a number of years past. Out of a thousand students in these two institutions there are not more than twenty-five professing Christians, and nearly all of these are said to be sons of Christian parents, and have not received Christianity in the schools.

The professors in the Indian Christian colleges are fully alive to the existing state of things with regard to results, and they deeply lament it. But it appears that all they can do at present is to hold the fort, and hope for a change for the better. Mr. Wishard expresses the feeling that these professors are overworked school-teachers. They go to their professional tasks every morning, and work for some hours in the hot, enervating climate. After the exertions of the day, they really have not the physical strength to follow up the impressions that may be made in a general way, by close individual contact with the students. If the home churches desire to continue the system of higher education—and Mr. Wishard is strongly of opinion that they ought to continue it—they must man the institutions with a larger corps of teachers, so that the educational work may be more widely distributed, and each teacher may have more leisure for personal evangelistic work, in whatever way he may be able to undertake it. That is the strong feeling of the teachers themselves. Mr. Wishard declares that he has never met a more earnest-minded class of men, but they are overladen with scholastic work. In India, an Englishman cannot do more than half the amount of work he could accomplish in a temperate climate. Having lived in their homes for days at a time, Mr. Wishard says he does not know a more hard-working class of men than these teachers in the colleges, but the conditions of their work, as at present arranged, are too much for them to enable them to engage sufficiently in personal and public evangelistic work pure and simple. Yet the educational work

MUST BE SUSTAINED.

The Scottish missions have the strongest educational work in India. Their colleges in Madras, Calcutta, and Bombay, are four of the best known and most widely influential institutions in all India. The American and English missions have also several very good colleges.

If the Y.M.C.A. is to help materially in the solution of these pressing problems in India, it ought to send out at once several very carefully selected young men. They must be men of rich spiritual endowment, and men of good executive ability. It is also indispensable that they be men of University education, so as to be in touch with the students of India. They should also have had experience in Christian work among young men. For the filling of such important posts it is useless to send out young men without practical training to enter on this pioneer work, and grapple with these new questions, in a land like India. No doubt the men who are needed will be hard to find, but it is the first duty of the Association in Great Britain and America to meet this call; for the problem of Christianising the students will not ever be solved until some such special movement in their behalf is inaugurated. Of course there is need of work among less educated young men in India, but those who reach the educated classes and help to raise up leaders among them will do a much more fruitful work than they could by working only among the uneducated.

When the first call came to the American International Committee, it sought to find a man who possessed these four principal qualifications. They selected Mr. McConaughy, General Secretary of the Philadelphia Y.M.C.A. He was a man of University training, of good administrative ability and fine spiritual endowments, and a leading man in the work of Bible training. He had enjoyed ten years' experience before he went to India, and had been successful as a secretary in one of the most difficult centres in America. He went out to Madras two years ago, and took hold of the work among young men there. In Mr. Wishard's opinion, he has grappled with the difficulties of the work, and has had good success. He has organised an Association, largely composed of the student class. He has a building right in the centre of the student population. The work carried on is fourfold—spiritual, social, educational, and physical. The Association methods in Madras are modelled closely on those that experience has shown to be best in America and Great Britain. There is not a man in Madras to-day better known by students and educated Indians than Mr. McConaughy, or one who sustains closer relations with them.

The Scotch and English and American missionaries in Calcutta have asked the American Committee for some one to take up similar work there. A very successful Y.M.C.A. among young Englishmen in India has been organized in Bombay. It was initiated by the late Rev. Dr. A. N. Somerville, about fifteen years ago, under the leadership of a man of splendid business qualities, the General Traffic Manager of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway, Mr. Conder. He has given much time to the development of the work, and has had associated with him a young civil engineer, Mr. Clark, who has thrown all his enthusiasm into organization. Mr. R. McCann, of Belfast, is considering a call to act for two years as Y.M.C.A. travelling secretary for the Bombay District.

While it is right that the young Englishmen should be attended to, a great and important work has to be accomplished for the Indian young men. It must be done through the educated young men of the country, and these must be reached by the educated young men of Britain and America. A national organisation has been formed in India, the first of its kind in Asia. Its second National Convention is to be held in April.

STRAY NOTES.

Mr. Wishard visited, among other places, Siam and Burmah. He thinks the time is not yet ripe for the extension of Y.M.C.A. work to these lands. In Egypt he found scarcely any organised work for young men. In Cairo something might be done in the near future, but an experienced secretary from Britain or America would be needed. He need not necessarily be a University man, as the system of higher education is not so far advanced in Egypt as in India.

A small Y.M.C.A. work has been started in Jerusalem, and is making slow progress. One branch is intended to reach the Anglo-Hebrew element, and another works among the Arabic-speaking young men. The latter centres in the school of the Church Missionary Society, and will probably have fair success.

Mr. and Mrs. Wishard, on their journey westward, made a lengthy tour through portions of Persia, Khurdistan, and Asia Minor, visiting a number of educational centres at stations of the American Missions. There is no Government education in Persia, and the Government schools in Turkey are Mohammedan. Several very successful Y.M.C.A. movements were found away in the very heart of Asia Minor. In Aintab, Association work has been so well maintained for ten years past, that a well-adapted building has been erected, and a young Armenian has been acting as general secretary for some time. There is a little Association in Tarsus; one has lately been organised in Athens; and a small one is doing a limited work in Constantinople. The leading missionaries feel that several men might very profitably be allotted to Association work in Turkey, to develop and extend the movement, as organising secretaries; two could be located in Turkey in Asia, and one in and around Constantinople. The Association work among Armenians, Mr. Wishard thinks, will probably yield greater immediate fruits than in any other country outside of Japan. A strong Christian element is already developed among them. The work will, no doubt, be subjected to many difficulties, as all missionary work is under Turkish rule. The authorities are continually crowding the missionaries closer and closer, and throwing every possible hindrance in the way. The Russian empire was also visited, but there is so much restriction, and even persecution, in that country, of those who do not conform to the Greek Church, that little is being accomplished.

LETTER FROM BISHOP TAYLOR.

The African Conference of the M. E. Church met at Careysburg on January 20. There had been no deaths of members of Conference during the past year, nor of our missionaries, except that of our dear old Captain Borella. We had an unusually large attendance of our people; preaching at early morn and night of each day; church thronged at all the services, and a deep, joyous religious life pervaded the assemblies all through. The testimonies, about a hundred at love feast, were short, clear, and emphatic, and altogether we had a harmonious, profitable session.

We got to seat of Conference by small boat twenty-three miles up St. Paul's river to White Plains, thence fifteen miles on foot to Careysburg, the most easterly Liberian town on that parallel, situated on a high ridge, bounded north and south by very steep sides and deep hollows. Most of the country round about, and on both sides of the path out from St. Paul's River, is covered with orchards of coffee-trees, now in full fruit, in appearance like red cherries, each cherry containing two grains of coffee. Properly cleaned, it is the "best coffee in the world," and a special boon to Liberia. The Liberian seed has been introduced into fifteen different coffee-growing countries, in all of which it produces well, but inferior to its native flavour.

A new industry has sprung up during the year 1891, which is now absorbing the attention of many thousands, comprising all classes of this coast. The product is called "bamboo fibre," but is really from a species of the palm, and known by the name of "Piassava." The fibre is very coarse, and as tough as rattan, and is used in the manufacture of scrubbing brushes, brooms, and chair bottoms. It abounds in African woods, and though often difficult of access, is easily prepared for the market, and is quoted in Europe at seventy pounds per ton.

Our missionaries are all well, and the spiritual work on this coast more hopeful than ever before. I am in perfect health. Hallelujah!

Bible Stand, Crystal Palace.

Nearly thirty years have passed since the commencement of this work, during which period more that twelve million copies of Gospels, Testaments, and Bibles have been disposed of, also eleven million Scripture cards and leaflets. The report just published is for the past two years, and is deeply interesting to all lovers of the sacred Word. Readers will here learn, through numerous testimonies, how great and widespread is the good that is being done through this simplest of all evangelistic agencies—the free circulation of the Divine Revelation. This is being effected not only from the Bible Stand itself, from which grand centre a large number of cards and leaflets are gratuitously handed to visitors, and portions of the Scriptures to foreigners in their own language, but also through clergymen, missionaries, and Christian workers in London and elsewhere, including Italy, France, Egypt, and Africa.

A vast amount of good is evidently being done through the Bible Carriage in France; and the accounts written by the agent, M. Pointet, telling of successful encounters with the clericals and others in public debate, are well worth reading. The suppression of the Word by the Church of Rome is equally clear. "I read yesterday some of the Gospel you gave me," said a young French girl; "and how surprised I have been to learn of many great things of which I had never heard a single word." Mr. William Hawke, Secretary and General Manager of the Stand, pleads strongly the cause which he so well represents, and evidently looks to God to prompt his stewards to continue or even increase their subscriptions to the work.

CITY MISSION INCIDENTS.

WORK AMONG BAKERS.

To bring the Gospel before journeyman bakers is a work requiring much tact, prayer, faith, and zeal for God. The missionary has first to gain the confidence of the proprietors, and then admission to the baking department, after which suitable times in the day must be fixed for visitation, so as not to hinder the men in their work. The London City Mission has at present three missionaries specially appointed to the North, West, and East of London. The following incidents come from West London:—

SAVED AND WORKING.

I have long been interested in the young men who were working in a bakehouse at Notting-hill, although one of them was a Roman Catholic he always read the German Christian papers which I left for him and his master. The second hand is a young man from the country, not having been long in London. I noticed that he listened as though he was receiving the truth in the love of it. I urged him to connect himself with some Young Men's Bible-class in the neighbourhood; and, finding that he had been accustomed, when in the country, to attend such a class at a Baptist chapel, advised him to go to the Talbot Tabernacle. He did so, and was brought into the enjoyment of peace with God. He thanked me for my visits to him in the bakehouse. I urged upon him to confess Christ both by lip and life. In a subsequent visit to this bakehouse I found that another young man from the country—a friend of his—was at work. In order to benefit his friend, this converted baker had undertaken to accompany him to church to save him drifting away, as so many had done.

HE IS SO HAPPY.

In a bakehouse in Camden-town, one out of four workmen to whom I had often spoken had been brought savingly to Jesus since my last visit. I had frequently dealt very pointedly with him. Just before the close of the year a young man that he knew died suddenly. This event, with other considerations, led him to go to a Watch-night service, where he was struck with some things that the preacher said, confirming statements that I had previously made. He was led to see himself and his unreconciled condition towards God, and subsequently found the peace which Jesus gives to the soul that trusts Him. He is so happy, and promises to be useful in Sunday-school and other Christian work. The shopwoman—a decided Christian—was delighted to tell me the glad news, and assured me that she often prayed for me and my peculiar work.

STORY OF A GERMAN.

Near Manchester-square I had a most encouraging interview with the foreman, who is a German. When I first met with him he was a Roman Catholic, and would have nothing to do with me. I gave him some German papers, which led us to become friends. Although he has worked at different shops, he has kept within my boundaries, and so, from time to time, we have been brought into each other's company. I have never dealt with him as a Roman Catholic, but as a sinner, and have taken care to keep before him the leading truths of the Gospel. When I first knew him he had no Bible, but has since bought one, and I think he must love its truths as he is instructing a young German who works with him to read and love it too. The papers that I give him he reads first, and then sends them to his brother, who lives at a distance. He is always delighted to see me, and is never in a hurry to get rid of me. I trust his name is written in heaven.

A GERMAN SOCIALIST.

At a bakehouse in Edgware-road I met five hands, one a German with strong Socialistic tendencies. He kept aloof from me; but kind words work wonders. I offered him a British Workman, but he refused it and said, "Something of a freethought character would suit me better. I have had enough of religion drilled into me in my younger days, now I have gone to the other extreme." I assured him that I had not come to speak about religion, but of Jesus, who found me twenty-seven years ago; of my joy in God, and God's joy in me, and kindred truths. I offered him something in German to read, which he accepted. I also asked him to select anything he liked from my bag, and turning over my papers, he saw, "Is the Bible a True Book?" This led me to speak of the Book and its contents, pointing out the difference between a heart-knowledge of God and mere theories. The man looked at me and listened while I unfolded something of the riches of God's grace. On the next visit he was delighted to see me, and said: "I thought so much about you and your former visit; I have been wanting to see you. I have the conviction that you are a happy man. I have read that pamphlet, and you may be surprised to hear that I have bought a Bible, and am reading it through. Can you tell me what I can do to be happy like you?" I then explained fully the plan of salvation and left him. On a subsequent visit he assured me that he had lost that feeling of antipathy and indifference to the teaching of the Bible which, until recently, had possessed his mind. This cheered my heart, and led me to praise God for his glorious grace.

SUNDAY BAKING.

I am glad to say (writes the missionary) that the Sunday baking of dinners for the public is not continued to the same extent as formerly. I believe I am warranted in saying that each year there is an improvement in this direction. Where this is the case it gives a man a longer time out of the intense heat, and more time with his wife and family. It also provides him an opportunity of going to a place of worship, or to some open-air service where he may hear words whereby he may be saved. Still, I believe that personal dealing with men is the work upon which God largely sets his seal; indeed, I find this to be so year by year.

REMARKABLE REVIVAL IN CINCINNATI.

Rev. John Junkin Francis, D.D., describes an altogether remarkable evangelistic movement which has just closed in Cincinnati. Rev. B. Fay Mills began a special mission toward the end of January, and the increase growing and deepening in an exceptional manner, the mission was continued till the middle of March, the services being held in various churches, and in the closing weeks in a great music-hall, capable of seating six thousand, and in which some eight thousand persons were crowded night after night. Another remarkable fact has been the closing of most of the business establishments of the city on Wednesdays, in order, according to announcements, to permit their employés attending the special meetings.

Humanly speaking, much of the success has been due to the admirable plan of organisation whereby local committees were formed all over the city, and every street and district systematically visited.

There were (says the New York Independent) several features which are peculiar to Mr. Mills, two or three of which may be mentioned. One of the most striking of these is the "Mid-week Sabbath," or business-house closing day. A second is a kind of mathematical demonstration to which Mr. Mills occasionally resorts, and which is remarkably convincing. For instance, at a great meeting for "men only," he wasspeaking of the two great opportunities which come to men for entering the kingdom of God; first, in their youth, enforced by the text, "Those who seek Me early shall find Me"; and, secondly, in a time of revival. He said: "Some people say that a revival season is not a good time to come to Christ. Far from this being true, I say that for those who have grown to manhood it is almost the only time. I solemnly declare, from my observation, that to you who are men, a time of revival, a revival season such as this, is almost your only chance to get into the kingdom. If you are not saved during a revival, there is an awful risk that you will never be saved, and I am going to prove it. I want to ask every man in this great audience who is a professing Christian, who was converted after he was twenty-five years old and who was not converted during a time of revival, to rise to his feet and remain standing until I count." In the entire audience of several thousand men, just twenty men stood up. "Just twenty," said Mr. Mills. "It is an awfully slender chance, my brothers." He then said: "More than this, I affirm that the great majority of men who are converted at all, at any period of life, are converted in seasons of revival. Now, I want all the men in this house to-night who are members of the Church to rise." Fully two thousand men arose. "Now I want all these two thousand Christian men who were converted and came into the Church in a season of revival to sit down; and all of you who came into the Church when there was no special revival to remain standing." All sat down except two hundred. "Here," said Mr. Mills, "is the proof; of the two thousand Christian men in this house, eighteen hundred were converted in times of revival, and only two hundred when there was no revival."

TEMPTED BOYS:

HOW THEY ARE SAVED.

The preventive work of the St. Giles' Christian Mission in saving boys, committed on their first offence, from prison taint and a probable life of crime becomes increasingly important as its usefulness and fruitfulness wins recognition. Valuable as are the other branches of the Mission's work for prisoners, no part is more hopeful and profitable than that among the lads. Indeed, the present three Homes are full, and unless boys seeking help to escape from temptation are to be refused aid at a critical moment, an additional Home has become absolutely necessary.

A friend writes as follows of one morning's observations at the Mission Office, 29, Brooke-street, Holborn:—There were many brought to Mr. Wheatley—boys just released from prison; boys committed to the care of the Mission, that is handed over by magistrates for the Secretary to do the best he could with; boys snatched from temptation.

There was the pale-faced boy, physically and morally weak, by his mother's side, who in her love had known no peace, no rest whilst he was in trouble. She was a poor, respectable widow, whose earnest thankfulness none could doubt, as the loss of time she could so ill afford was made up to her, and her boy was retained in the Mission Home, where clothes, shelter, food, and work would be given him. There was a bright-eyed, good-mannered lad, whose very daring and love of mischief, aided by bad companions, had led him into offence, and who had accepted the invitation to breakfast in the Mission room, given at the prison gates.

Then there was one case of peculiar interest to me, where the friend of a boy, himself a working-man, had given up a day to bring this boy to the Mission, to beg that he might be taken in, and saved from the moral depravity and squalor of the place he had known as home.

Many others appeared seeking a way of escape from temptation and danger; but these given must suffice to illustrate the value of such service and the imperative necessity, unless help is to be refused and the lads left to drift, of increased accommodation. In giving such boys a fresh chance in life, removing them from vile tempters, and pointing them to the only abiding Helper, the St. Giles' Christian Mission is doing noble service on behalf of the Church and nation.

The Distress in South India.

When I left Madras in May last the distress was very keen among the labouring and poorer classes. After my arrival in London in June last I was deeply grieved to see the telegrams from India Office announcing the failure of the monsoon. Knowing that this would aggravate the distress felt by classes among whom I work, I appealed to the English public, and the result was £30, which was at once remitted to my brother, Mr. Samuel Israel, who is now in charge of the nine hundred pupils in our twelve ragged schools in Madras, with an instruction that he should select the most destitute cases and give them free dinners. This has enabled him to provide meals daily for seventy starving children for seven months. Now the amount is almost exhausted, whilst the distress is steadily increasing.

The scarcity of food has caused increased prices of all necessaries of life, whilst wages have decreased owing to the over-stocking of the labour market through the migration of the country population to Madras. The distress will continue till September next, at best, and £30 is urgently needed to maintain the present relief. The English honorary secretary of our work is Mr. James Carter, The Elms, Illingworth, Halifax, Yorks.—I am, very sincerely yours,

G. Joseph Israel.

SOUTHWARK Y.M.C.A.—The eighteenth annual meeting of this Association was held on Thursday at Christ Church, Westminster-bridge-road, Mr. Sheriff Foster presiding. Mr. Charles Woollard (Sec.) read an abstract of the annual report, from which it appeared that the past year had been a most successful one. The Chairman said there were many movements which had for their object the benefit of the people, but, after all, these social endeavours touched but the fringe. The Y.M.C.A. was founded on a spiritual basis, and having made this its keynote all the other works associated with it had been grafted on the original tree. Addresses followed by Revs. Newman Hall and W. J. Dawson, Messrs. P. Esslemont, M.P., and E. Putley.

For the Young.

WHO ARE YOU FOR?
OR,
THE TEMPERANCE BOAT-RACE.

By William Luff.

As all the boys and girls are excited over the Oxford and Cambridge Boat-race, let us see if we cannot gather some good lessons from the event.

Have a good beginning,
And go in for winning.

In a race a great deal depends upon the start; so life depends greatly upon a good beginning. "Well begun is half done!" Mrs. Hilton, who has a nursery at Stepney, tells of a little girl she had, who at five years of age would scream for brandy. That was a bad beginning. To be a young total abstainer is to start well, and to be a young Christian total abstainer is better still. The tube of a cannon is not very long; yet the direction of that tube decides the whole course of the cannon-ball for, perhaps, a mile. So, "have a good beginning."

Then, "go in for winning." If the crew are down-hearted they will not half row, nor shall we. The cause of temperance is God's cause; we are in his boat, so we are sure to win. "Moderation" is a leaky boat; it lets in little drops, while the boat "Intemperance" has a drunken steersman, and will never reach the goal. Still, we shall not win without exertion. If Band of Hope boys and girls fold their arms, success will not be gained. Somebody once asked, "What is the best coat of arms?" A sharp worker replied, "Arms without a coat!" Shirtsleeves win the race. A little girl had a heap of coals to carry in with a very small shovel. A passer asked her if she ever hoped to finish her task. "Yes, sir," she replied, "if I keep on long enough." Keep on, and you will win.

Be united,
But never excited.

If the crew of the boat kick, and pinch, and stick pins in each other, they will not get on; they must pull together if they would win. So must we. Conductor and children, speaker and listeners—must all help! "Unity is strength." A robber once had a gang of men; they were rebels and knew if caught they would have a rope put round their necks: so their leader said, when they were pursued, "Men, we must all hang together, or we shall all hang separately." We want boys and girls, fathers and mothers, preachers and congregations—all to be united in this Temperance race.

"Never excited." How calmly good rowers row! The crowd may cheer or hiss; they keep cool. When we see what harm the drink does, it is enough to make us excited; but we must remember what a steady brother once said to an excited orator: "Friend, stop! It is the lightning that kills, not the thunder." Steady pulling wins the race. How does a hen hatch her eggs? By running about, and getting impatient? No; she sits calmly on the nest and does her work.

Avoid all collisions,
Make void all derisions.

When the Oxford and Cambridge men are rowing up the Thames, barges, and boats, and bridges come in their way; so it is important who holds the yoke-lines and steers the race. Companions, temptations, oppositions will float across our course; we must avoid such, and the best way is to let Jesus steer.

As for derision, who cares for that? Do the men say they will not row, because some one laughs at their form and training? I have noticed that those who hoot at the hindermost boat are quite ready to cheer it if it happens to win. Are we laughed at in our home, at school, or at our work? Let us make void the derisions by avoiding all collisions, and so winning.

Take backward glances,
Make forward advances.

In ploughing, it does not do to take backward glances. Jesus said so (Luke ix. 62). He told us, too, to "Remember Lot's wife," who looked back; but in rowing it is different. The crews see their progress as they look back; see what they have passed, and where they are. As we look back we can see our progress in the Band of Hope race, progress among Sunday-school teachers, ministers, doctors, and all sorts of people.

While taking backward glances we must also make forward advances. It would be very silly if either Oxford or Cambridge were satisfied when they had passed Hammersmith-bridge and took "an easy." We must not rest on our oars, or we shall become mere passengers. There are some great black monsters that always follow the Race, and threaten to swallow up the boat that lingers behind—I mean the big steamers. Destruction follows us if we stay; so we must make forward advances.

Show your blue,
And have the right end in view.

Boys are not ashamed to show what side they are on in the Boat Race; why should they be ashamed to wear the blue for Jesus? Some people try to wear both colours at once; they condemn the drink, and yet drink it. Some show a red colour, generally upon their face. Sailors would call it a "port light," and often it means port-wine, or some other intoxicating liquor. Show your blue, boys and girls, and stick to it. It is the winning colour. At election times children like to let people know what is their favourite colour, and who they are for. A little fellow put on some yellow ribbon. A big boy said, "What colour are you?" "Yellow," he replied, and received a thrashing. "What colour are you now?" said the bully. "Yellow," persisted the brave youngster.

Have the right end in view. Perhaps you take sides for Oxford or Cambridge without any particular reason. We want you to wear the blue of total abstinence for a right reason. What is the right end? Because it will help you to save money? No. Because it will be good for your health? That is not all. Because it will set a good example? That is a good end; but the best of all is, God's Word says, "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red" (Prov. xxiii. 31), and to obey God pleases God. Nothing short of this must be our end, and this is the only winning-post for which our boat must make.

After all, the Boat Race is not the great object in life of the Oxford and Cambridge men. Some look forward to being learned men in Law and Church; rowing is only a part of their training. Temperance, though a glorious race, is not in itself our end. Salvation is the true goal, and it is found in Jesus. Trust Him, and so have a good beginning. Go in for winning; be united, but never excited; avoid all collisions, and make void all derisions; take backward glances and make forward advances; show your blue and have the right end in view!

Work Among Soldiers in Cyprus.

In the Church of Scotland Mission Record, Rev. W. Ferguson, Presbyterian chaplain at Cyprus, gives an interesting account of his work there among the soldiers, telling how the great need for a reading-room, library, and refreshment bar induced him to allow the chapel to be used for this purpose during the week. Such an arrangement, however, could necessarily only be of a temporary character, and Mr. Ferguson makes an earnest appeal for help in erecting a new chapel, so that he may be able to devote the present building entirely to work among the soldiers.

He writes: "As those who enjoy the benefits of the chapel and reading-room are of all denominations, so this appeal is made to all alike—be they Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Wesleyan, or others—to all, indeed, who believe in the utility and need of our work." Again, "As a rival of the canteen, the refreshment-bar has helped not a little in the promotion of temperance, and it has helped also towards an increased attendance at the religious meetings...." From Mr. Ferguson's letter it is evident that if funds for a new chapel are not forthcoming the only alternative—and a most deplorable one—will be to abandon these special efforts.

Mr. Ferguson further informs us that the Cyprus Government have already given a beautiful site for the proposed building, the estimate for which, in substantial material, is only £200! Communications may be made to Mr. G. B. Wilson, 22, Queen-street, Edinburgh, or Rev. W. Ferguson, Limassol, Cyprus.

"CASTING ALL YOUR CARE UPON HIM."

1 Peter v. 7.

"Casting all your care upon Him,"—try Him
ye who doubt and fear, Psa. xxxiv. 8.
With the cares of life so burdened, in the progress of the year. 2 Cor. i. 20.
Strive no more that load to carry—leave it with Him, He is true,
And He says that He will bear it—why? because He cares for you.

"Casting all your care upon Him," light will be the feet that tread Isa. xl. 31.
Through the gate that now is opening as the eastern sky grows red.
Once a load of sin we brought Him, and He bore it all away— John i. 29.
Can you think that Arm will fail us for the cares of Time's short day?

"Casting all your care upon Him,"—Ah! we fail Him hour by hour: Matt. xiv. 31.
Weep and pray, and bring our burden, asking great things from his power;
Then we rise and clasp it closely—to the heart the sharp thorns press— Phil. iv. 6, 7.
Burdened—leave the presence chamber—though the King was there to bless.

"Casting all your care upon Him,"—is it thus that we obey,
Fretting sore, and sore discouraged, for the troubles of the way? Num. xxi. 4.
Just to trust Him with the tangle! just to trust Him with the fear, Nahum i. 7.
As the crew can trust the Captain 'mid the rocks and shoals to steer.

"Casting all your care upon Him,"—does the hand take back again Rom. xi. 29.
What it casts into the ocean, what has sunk beneath the main?
Ah! it cannot. In the ocean of the Father's love, cast in Micah vii. 19.
Every weight that thou are bearing, every sorrow, every sin.

"Casting all your care upon Him,"—is it that you cannot trust?
Stretch the withered hand to Jesus—He remembers we are dust; Psa. ciii. 14.
Say not when the word is spoken, "Ah, the power is not there"—
Life flows out to him who ventures, all upon his word to dare. Mark xiv. 5.

"Casting all your care upon Him,"—step by step, and day by day. Deut. xxxiii. 25.
Does the soldier plan the battle, or his Captain's plan obey?
Raise the banner as ye ask it—soldier of the Lord march on, Psa. xx. 5.
Weighted only with the armour, every other weapon gone.

"Casting all your care upon Him,"—Ah, the child forgets to weep,
Who, altho' the ship is tossing, in the father's arms can sleep. Psa. iv. 8.
This the shelter of each spirit, who believes the message true—
"Casting all your care upon Him"—Wherefore? "For He cares for you." 1 John iv. 10.

LONDON CHINESE MISSION.—Mrs. George E. Piercy held last week a successful meeting, in the Public Hall, Pickering, in support of the Mission to the Chinese in the East of London, winning the sympathetic attention of the audience by her simple and effective narration of facts concerning the work. Mrs. Piercy held similar meetings in York, saying, in the course of her address, that about 2500 Chinese come to London every year, remaining here only for a short time. The aim of the Mission is to befriend these, sow the seed of Gospel truth, preserve them from the deadly dangers to which they are exposed; in a word, to show them such Christian love and help that when they return to China they shall carry back a good report of this land. The working expenses of the Mission are about £400 per annum. Should any of your readers wish to help, communications should be sent to Rev. George Piercy, 276, Burdett-road, E.

GIBRALTAR AND ITS NEEDS.

TEMPERANCE ON THE ROCK.

The Band of Hope in connection with the Soldiers' Institute, Gibraltar, recently celebrated its fifth anniversary. About 120 children, representing both the military and civilian elements, sat down to tea.

Mr. Marshall, superintendent, gave an abstract report of the year's work, and expressed his thankfulness to God for the blessing vouchsafed, the Band of Hope having increased in membership from seventy-six to 128. Lieutenant Stileman, H.M.S. Mariner, then gave an interesting address, telling the children that he had just returned from a slave country, where he had frequently seen one hundred human beings packed together in a tenth of the space that they occupied that evening, but he rejoiced to be able to say that he had been able to assist in liberating these poor creatures. He then spake of an even worse slavery, that of strong drink and sin in every form, and pointed the children to the only One who can break its chains.

A LADY'S WORK.

Mrs. Joseph Hannington writes:—Whilst passing the winter of 1890 at Gibraltar the great need of a branch of the Y.W.C.A. there presented itself to me. The work thus begun was taken up the following winter by my friend, Miss Squire. Her appeal for sympathy in her more extended labours amongst the native population of the Rock I venture most warmly to support. It speaks for itself. Any communications may be addressed to me at La Corbinière, St. Servan, France.

Miss J. Squire says: We came out last winter to carry on Y.W.C.A. work among the English and English-speaking girls, but we were appalled to find a dense population of Spanish-speaking people as dark spiritually as the heathen in Africa, and for whom literally nothing was being done. It seemed incomprehensible how such a state of things could exist, Gibraltar having been a colony of Christian England for so many years.

I suppose that hundreds of missionaries touch here in the course of the year, for places not more needy, but Gibraltar is always passed by. Does it not seem a disgrace to Christian England that the mass of the population of a place in our own possession should be so neglected? As we see the numbers of native funerals week after week our hearts ache, knowing that most probably the soul has passed into eternity without having once heard the Gospel message.

My own soul was so stirred within me as these facts dawned upon me gradually after I came here, that I felt I must learn Spanish and do what I could. We had no funds for work among the Spanish people, and I could find no one to take up the responsibility of forming a regular Mission; but we laid the matter before the Lord, and He sent us enough to make a small beginning. So in November last we took a little room in one of the worst slums and commenced, with the help of an English lady who resides here, who speaks Spanish, and one of my own Y.W.C.A. members, who can interpret. But this is only like a little rushlight in one tiny corner, there are thousands yet unreached. We want more workers and more funds to enable us to extend the work, and we want the Christians at home to pray for us.

Our English work, too, is greatly needed here; the young girls brought out by the officers' families are exposed to terrible temptations, and need a home to which they can come when out of place, and someone to whom to come for counsel and sympathy. Only last week an English girl was sent away from her place at an hour's notice, a complete stranger in Gibraltar, not knowing a soul here. Mercifully someone sent her to us; we took her in and found her a situation, and she was grateful indeed for the shelter and help we were able to give. We have Bible-classes for these girls, and besides this, children's meetings, ladies' Bible readings, meetings for young ladies, and also for younger girls of the upper class.

We have had tokens of blessing, and we are looking for more, in all branches of our work; but we do want more help from Christians at home—more prayer and sympathy and practical help in the form of contributions to our funds. We earnestly pray that the knowledge of the sore need of this place may awaken in many a desire to assist us.

THE GOSPEL IN PERU.

Rev. Dr. Wood, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, Callao, Peru, writes:—"An interesting field in the Western Hemisphere is this old Empire of the Incas. Three religions are found here, like three great strata of superstition and perverted truth. The most recent is Roman Catholicism, of a grossly idolatrous type, brought here by the Spaniards, and enforced by the power of the sword on the millions of the aboriginal race. The next oldest is the sun-worship which prevailed for centuries, under the Incas, being enforced throughout their dominions by imperial authority. Older still are the remains of an idolatrous paganism, which the Incas attempted to exterminate, but without success.

"All classes of the people are open to the Gospel, and would hear it gladly, but for the dominant priestcraft—which has acquired such power in the civil and social, as well as the religious life of the people, that it can stir up mobs, control magistrates, rule governments, make revolutions, imprison and kill its enemies, and hinder the preaching, to a degree unknown in other parts of the continent. Despite these difficulties, the Gospel is establishing itself in the land. The murder of José Mongiardino, and the long imprisonment of Francisco Penzatti, have not been in vain. Native converts have been inspired with the zeal and bravery necessary to face the extraordinary difficulties, and have already proven their high calling by enduring persecutions.

"What is needed now is money for securing places of worship, Sunday-schools, and day-schools. Crushed by foreign war, and paralysed by domestic strife, without immigration, without credit, without moral power—Peru is the most poverty-stricken country in all America. There is no other in which local resources are so hopelessly inadequate for the material and moral enterprises indispensable for the country's progress. Penzatti could not have held his ground but for the generous support of the American Bible Society and the influence of foreign diplomacy. The present work, which is the outgrowth of his labours and sufferings, would find all aggressive lines untenable, but for the moral and financial backing of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"English engineers are making plans for irrigating the desert lands of Peru, and converting them into tropical gardens. The Andes are full of water, and all the enterprise needs is sufficient capital and adequate management. The Gospel is the water of life for these unfortunate people. We sigh for means to get to them. The preachers and teachers that God has raised up are ready for work on far-reaching lines. But how shall they preach except they be sent?"

MISS READE'S WORK in CUDDALORE.

Writing from Fort St. David, Cuddalore, towards the end of January, Miss Reade makes thankful mention of a Christian Library she has been able to open for inquirers and converts needing instruction, and adds:—"It is mainly for Brahmin and educated natives. Several have entered already their names as members, and have taken out such books as Matthew Henry's 'Commentary on Genesis.' Two or three feel themselves confronted with the subject of baptism. It is not an easy matter to them, for it means, humanly speaking, the closing of every earthly prospect, the loss of everything dear, public contempt, and perhaps hard usage as well. The library is situated on the bridge over the Guddelum, a shed being rented at 18 rupees a month; but a shed is precarious in case of opposition. I have engaged a man on probation as librarian at 10 rupees a month, and have given about 70 of my own books.

"I would be most grateful if any one felt led to give a good book or periodical (1) on Christian Evidences, (2) Expository, (3) Ethical, (4) specially for young men, (5) Instructive, (6) Religious biographies, also good Gospel tracts, especially such as point out the impossibility of works having any saving efficacy, the absolute necessity of an Atonement and Mediator, Christ as a Saviour from the power of sin, the new birth, the holy life of those who trust in Christ. The demand for reference Bibles and commentaries has been most remarkable, and it has been so interesting the way they bring questions ready prepared—Bibles, New Testaments, and portions marked all over here and there. Often they ask for pencil and paper to take notes of what I say and go home and talk together over it."

A NEW Y.M.C.A. CENTRE.

The City Y.M.C.A. has, as we have noted ere now, a sphere peculiar to itself in the tens of thousands of City clerks who throng the City during business hours. Amongst these Mr. Hughman and his helpers have been doing a good work, albeit the rooms at Whittington-avenue were, as a centre of Christian work, at some disadvantage by reason of being in the basement. Now, however, the association has secured premises worthy of the name, and may well be expected to attract larger numbers.

Cornhill House, the new premises, is planted right at the corner of Cornhill and Gracechurch-street, and is within half-a-minute's walk of Lombard, Leadenhall, Threadneedle, and Old Broad streets. Thus the position is all that can be desired, and so with the interior. We remember the King William-street rooms, where the association started; the Gracechurch rooms, on an upper floor; then the Whittington-avenue; and, in contrast with these, the new rooms seem ideal. The entrance belongs to the Y.M.C.A. only, which has secured the entire five floors. The first floor is the reading-room, employment agency, &c.; the second floor the prayer-meeting and spiritual room; the third the restaurant; the fourth the Bible-students' and Bible reading-rooms; and the fifth floor the dwelling of the restaurant manager. Possession of these premises was gained on Wednesday in last week, and within twenty-four hours the removal had been effected and the informal opening was being held.

At 12.30 on Thursday the first meeting in the place was held — an earnest, bright prayer-meeting. Then, at 1 p.m., came luncheon, presided over by Mr. Causton. Thereafter a short meeting was held, when addresses were delivered by Messrs. Fry (chairman of the City Y.M.C.A.), H. W. Maynard, J. Hughes, Larminstine (Amsterdam), Hatch (South Carolina), W. H. Mills, Head, and others.

In the evening a large company attended a reception, after which a public meeting was held in the Lecture-hall, Whittington-avenue, Mr. Macgregor presiding.

Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., congratulated the members on having such a new building, and congratulated London on having a building in its very midst devoted to such a purpose. There were four great critical periods in human life. First, birth into the world; secondly, childhood, which was the time when impressions were received that went towards the formation of character; thirdly, manhood, when character assumed a definite shape; and, fourthly, mature age, when final ripening took place. Life took its complexion from surrounding influences, therefore arose the necessity of imbuing young men with Christianity. The most important period of life was from sixteen to twenty, when character was formed. In his church in America he had some hundreds of young men under his care, and during the eight years he spent among them every one of them did some active Christian work. Any pains taken to equip young men for Christian labour were well spent. The condition of London thirty years hence would be determined by the way in which the young men of the present day were trained.

Mr. J. Hughes, of the National Y.M.C.A., spoke of work in France.

Prayer for Revival.

The meeting of Christian men to pray for the revival of God's Church and for the awakening and conversion of others, took place, as announced, in the lecture-hall at 186, Aldersgate-street, last Monday, from two to three o'clock. A similar meeting will be held there next Monday at the same hour. It has been thought well to maintain for the present its character as a meeting for men only; all such as feel the need are cordially invited. It is hoped that believers in other places—in numbers, few or many—will meet for the same purpose, and that the much-desired showers of blessing may soon fall abundantly.

BLACKGANG MISSION.—This interesting work in the Isle of Wight goes on well and steadily. Mr. C. W. Smith, in sending the annual statement, mentions that fruitful special services have lately been held, that a hundred German and Russian Gospel and books were distributed amongst the salvage crew of the s.s. Eider, and that the mission work among the villagers has been blessed of God.

BISHOP OF CARLISLE.

THE name of Bardsley is associated in many localities with zealous and unsparing devotion to the work of the ministry in the Church of England. Bishop John Wareing Bardsley is the eldest son of the late Canon Bardsley, of Manchester, who, it has been said, was, under God, the means of introducing to the ministry no fewer than forty clergymen now actively at work.

The late Canon Bardsley in 1834, while curate of Keighley, married Sarah, daughter of Mr. John Wareing, of Greenacres, Oldham. Their family consisted of seven sons, who grew to man's estate, and a daughter, who died in infancy. All seven sons followed in their father's steps, and became clergymen. Three of them, however, pre-deceased Canon Bardsley.

Bishop Bardsley has, therefore, three brothers in the ministry, viz., Canon Jas. W. Bardsley, Vicar of Huddersfield; Rev. R. W. Bardsley, Vicar of Skelton, Yorkshire; and Canon Chas. W. Bardsley, Vicar of Ulverston. Canon Joseph Bardsley, Vicar of Bradford, Yorkshire, is an uncle, as was also Rev. Samuel Bardsley, Rector of Finchley, N. It is, therefore, not surprising if confusion occasionally arises, and if the Bishop's ministrations be sometimes mistaken for those which should be more correctly attributed to his relatives.

Born, in 1838, at Brierley, near Bradford, the future bishop was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his B.A. degree in 1859. In the same year he was ordained deacon by the late Bishop Graham, of Chester, and licensed to the curacy of St. Anne's, Sale, near Manchester.

In 1861 Mr. Bardsley was appointed Curate of St. Luke's, Liverpool, but soon left this important sphere for London, having accepted the secretaryship of the Islington Protestant Institute. In 1864 he returned to Liverpool, being appointed incumbent of St. John's, Bootle. About this time he married the sister of Mr. Francis Sharpe Powell, M.P. for Wigan At Bootle there was a wide field for his administrative energies, and for the use of those gifts which it speedily became apparent the new incumbent possessed. Bootle was all but destitute of parochial agencies, and he exerted himself with the commonsense and sound judgment which have made him one of the best organisers and most respected dignitaries in the Church.

During the seven years of his vicariate at Bootle he effected a wonderful improvement in the parish organisation. By the establishment of working men's clubs and lectures, and Bible-classes for men, he vigorously kept himself in touch with the masses, and wielded considerable influence, which was speedily demonstrated by the remarkable attendances of men at his Bible-classes. At the end of his seven years' work at Bootle, he was able to leave behind him the largest schools in the neighbourhood and other useful institutions in a most satisfactory condition. Speaking of his work at Bootle, the Bishop recently said: "There is nothing I value so much as an oak chair and silver plate, presented to me—from whom? When I was a vicar of a parish in the north of Liverpool, I had a Pastoral Aid Society there. The curate and myself were amongst the population of seven thousand, and we established a working-men's Bible-class; and seventeen years after I had left that parish, when I was appointed Bishop of Sodor and Man, I was astonished to receive a letter by post, with a tremendous chair accompanying it, to say that, although in the seventeen years that had elapsed since I left the parish some of the working-men members had passed away, and others were scattered in different parts of the world, yet seventy-four were still members, and met together in that class to wish their old pastor success in his new sphere of life, and to beg his acceptance of the chair."

In 1871 he was appointed to the living of St. Saviour's, Falkner-square, Liverpool, and here his exceptional qualifications as a preacher, and his force of character, promptly gained for him a crowded congregation and a wide reputation. In 1880 the Bishop of Liverpool appointed him his chaplain and Archdeacon of Warrington, subsequently transferring him to the Senior Archdeaconry of Liverpool. In 1887 he was appointed Bishop of Sodor and Man. A year previously he had declined the important vicarage of Islington, London.

The Bishop belongs distinctly to the Evangelical school of thought, and he soon made his mark on his little diocese. By his personal piety, his winning earnestness, his administrative capacity, he infused new spiritual life and vigour into the island. His open-air evangelistic addresses to large crowds during the summer were a feature of his work.

Bishop Bardsley has devoted a good deal of energy to the promotion of the temperance cause, and, as a lifelong abstainer, has taken an active part in supporting the Church of England Temperance Society since its foundation, thirty years ago. Many years ago, in response to the question: "What made you an abstainer?" he wittily replied, as a life-abstainer, "I never was made a teetotaller; 'specs I growed,' like little Topsy!" When a Liverpool branch of the Society was formed, in 1876, he and the present Bishop of Newcastle (Dr. Wilberforce) were the honorary diocesan secretaries, and his interest in the Society has never flagged. In his own diocese he is, by virtue of his position, and by his natural bent, chairman of the Diocesan Executive Committee. Amid his multifarious duties, and the pressing claims on his time and attention, he has even been most regular in his attendance at the numerous committee meetings of the Society, and his services as a deputation have been given most ungrudgingly.

As an author, the name of Bishop Bardsley is not unknown. As a result of his frequent visits to Palestine, we have his lectures on "Those Holy Fields"; and his series of papers to The Church Sunday-School Magazine, entitled, "Bible Details Verified," contains an inexhaustible store of materials on the land and the Book. Dr. Bardsley's "Origin of Man" is a paper, republished in popular form, read before the Victoria Institute. It contains a vast amount of scientific thought in small compass.

The Bishop has just entered upon his duties in the See of Carlisle, in succession to the late Dr. Harvey Goodwin.

The change from the snug little Isle of Man, with its twenty-eight beneficed clergy, to the scattered diocese of Carlisle, with its 293 beneficed clergy and eighty-four curates, will be considerable. But Bishop Bardsley will rejoice that in the larger sphere there is full scope for his administrative gifts, and for the continuance of that work amongst men of all sections in which he so delighted when in Liverpool. In the new diocese he will be amongst friends. His youngest brother, the Vicar of Ulverston, and the author of several interesting religious tales, is already a canon, and the bishop has several friends and connections in various parishes in the diocese. Yorkshire and Lancashire both claim share in the Bardsleys, for though the present bishop and his father, the late Canon Bardsley, were both of them born in Yorkshire, most of their lives and most of their work were in Lancashire. And the experience gained amongst the Lancashire folk will be of great use in dealing with the hard-headed men of Cumberland. Nor will Bishop Bardsley be very far from his old field. His diocese includes Barrow, from which steamers ply daily to the Isle of Man, making the passage in less than four hours.

Taken as a whole, we fear the spiritual tone of the diocese is not as high as some other dioceses we could mention. Keswick, of course, is synonymous with spiritual life and power, and our own columns bear witness to the periodical gatherings at Carlisle for the deepening of the spiritual life. But at Keswick, since the old days of Canon Battersby, the movement now draws its strength almost entirely from without, from those who are attracted to the spot from a distance, and though Cumberland undoubtedly shares in the reflex blessing from the Keswick Convention, it does not so share to a greater extent than do many more remote counties. The broad influence of Bishop Goodwin and Dean Oakley have left their marks upon the diocese, but there can be no question that these will now be counteracted by the true ring of Gospel teaching, so far as Bishop Bardsley is concerned.

We exhort our readers to remember the Bishop at the Throne of Grace, and trust that in this way his hands may be strengthened and his usefulness increased in his new sphere.

SIGNOR CAPELLINI'S WORK.

Signor Capellini, of the Military Church at Rome, writes:—"This is the twentieth year of the Military Mission in Italy. Thanks to Divine Providence, the Mission has grown to a large and flourishing church, with branches in other cities. In Rome, where we have nine hundred members, the hall is lent to us by the Methodist Church; but we have to bear the other expenses.

"On September 1 next the garrison of Rome will be entirely changed. I was in hopes that the Government would choose regiments from cities near the capital, and that, with relations already formed with these men, I might have hope for a full church. Instead of that the regiments are coming from Sicily, with strict orders to make no friendship with the people of Rome, on account of the Socialist spirit abroad in the city. All this gives me great anxiety. How can I reach these men and convince them that I wish their spiritual well-being?

"Whilst thinking the matter over this thought came into my mind: If I could take a journey to Sicily before the regiments are moved! If I could become acquainted with them in their present quarters, then, when they come to Rome, I should only have to renew the acquaintance to invite them to the meetings and refill the church! Yes, this is the best means to adopt, but without funds I cannot do it. If now I have not enough for my needs from month to month, where can I get the sum (£100) required for a journey to Sicily, accompanied, as I must be, by my colporteur? The time is very short; I ought to start directly after Whitsuntide, when I have paid my pastoral visit to my six stations. I have prayed and sought counsel from God, and now, in his name, I turn to my friends."

Signor Capellini's address is: 14, Pozzo delle Cornacchie, Rome.

MR. SPURGEON AS AN OPEN-AIR PREACHER.—Mr. Gawin Kirkham, secretary of the Open-Air Mission, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, W.C., informs us that he is about to write an article on Mr. Spurgeon as an open-air preacher; but that, never having heard him preach in the open air, he must necessarily depend upon the testimony of others. He will value communications from those who were privileged to attend any of those vast gatherings "under the blue sky," which the famous preacher addressed in the earlier days of his ministry.

THE RUSSIAN OPPRESSION.—A correspondent who recently visited a Russian prison writes:—"I found among the inmates a true Christian hero. He had been in solitary confinement for five months without trial, some of the witnesses having been prevented by illness from bringing accusation against him. The dear man had his joy and comfort in the Word of God. It was a privilege to minister to him some help, and to cheer and encourage him by telling him that other members of the Body of Christ seek to share his burden. Lord, how long?"

ON THE UPPER CONGO.

Mr. J. B. Ellery, of the Congo Balolo Mission, writing from Ikau, Upper Congo, on October 1, says: Mr. Whytock and myself go to various towns every Lord's day and hold services; then also we have services daily in the chapel. We are busy employed during the week with the building, farming, and other work, as at all our other stations we are making sun-dried bricks and building.

On September 13 we visited some far-away towns, Mboma, Bokata, and Bongundanga, where the Gospel had never before been preached. After a sail or pull up the river in a canoe for three miles, and three-quarters of an hour's walk, we arrived at Mboma. After resting awhile and taking a little food, we had a meeting in one of the houses. We sang and preached to the people, who listened with rapt attention. Arrived at Bokata, we found long streets crowded on every hand. Before proceeding very far, Brother Whytock said we must have another service, so we sat down and commenced singing the words of Jesus. With mouths open the people afterwards listened to the "wonderful words of life," spoken by Brother Whytock. The people were very kind, and gave our men plenty of sugar-cane.

When we continued our journey, crowds followed us. We had not gone far when our boys stood before a house, and looking at us, laughed loudly. Here was the "devil doctor," casting out devils. The house was full of people, and a poor woman lay flat on the ground with her arm in the "doctor's" hands. He had brought out several, so he claimed. After some discussion Brother Whytock showed the people that it was the "doctor" who had the evil spirit. The people looked around amazed, and I really believe their faith in the "doctor" was shaken. Our way to Bongundanga led through fields of rich manioc, maize, and sugar-cane. The sun is low down and we must be at home before sunset. So we determined just to see the king, who, poor man, caught us by the arm and begged us to come early and preach in his town. So we learned that the fields around are "white unto the harvest," and there are doors wide open for Christ's servants to enter. After reaching home, by road and canoe, we had dinner and a meeting for our boys. Thus the day finished, and we had great reason to praise God or all his mercies to us throughout the day.

Women's Temperance Home.

The Brownsland Temperance Home for Working Women was opened some sixteen years ago. Amid difficulties and discouragements peculiar to such a work, there have been many tokens of the Lord's blessing in saving souls, and in recovery from the evil of intemperance. The Home is undenominational and under the superintendence of a committee of ladies. There is accommodation for twelve women; seven shillings per week for board is required for each inmate; and they are expected to remain one year at least for permanent reformation. But something more than reformation is looked for. Whilst in the Home they are not only shielded from temptation to drink, but a wise, kind, and Christian influence is exercised. In many cases there is a turning from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, so that, as "new creatures in Christ Jesus," many of these women have returned to their homes or employment, and the letters received from them and their friends are often most gratifying, proving the reality and permanence of the change in their lives and hearts.

The great difficulty in carrying on the Home is want of funds, and help would be gratefully received. Women are admitted from all parts of the United Kingdom. Communications should be addressed to Mrs. Wilson, Barclay Manse, Edinburgh.—Yours faithfully, M. Brown Douglas.

The Revival in Scotland.

(From our special correspondent.)

A WEEK IN THE BORDERS.

Throughout the past week Messrs. Moody and Sankey have been moving about on classic soil. The Border country has been made immortal in story and in song by the writings of Scott, Burns, Wilson, Hogg, and other of Scotia's sons of genius. The shade of the great Sir Walter has seemed to follow the evangelists day by day, till Saturday, when the traces of his eventful and chequered career headed up in a visit to Abbotsford with its many relics of the part he played in the social and literary life of his time.

As noted in our last issue Berwick-on-Tweed had only one day allotted to it—Sabbath, March 20—but the interest and the influence of the meetings were by no means confined to the town itself. The people came from far and near, and not a few, it may well be hoped, carried back with them impressions and impulses that will colour all the rest of their lives. As samples of the fruit that was gathered, two cases met with by one experienced worker may be mentioned. A farmer drove in some miles, and several of his family accompanied him. At the evening service for men in the Corn Exchange a son was brought to decision for Christ. The father was overflowing with joy at the outcome of the day's services, and declared that it was "better than two farms." Another parent, a missionary, had a son with him who entered into joy and peace in believing, and the father went away full of tearful gladness.

FLYING VISITS

were made on Monday and Tuesday to Duns, Kelso, Coldstream, and Jedburgh, with a single meeting in each town. At three of these places the meetings were convened in the parish churches, as being the most commodious. It was cattle market day at Duns, otherwise the shops would have been closed for the time of service. Many drove in from the country, in every case, drawn by the fame of the evangelists, and also, we trust, by a desire to share in the blessing. At Kelso there was an overflow in the United Presbyterian Church, where Lord Polwarth and Mr. Richard Hill exhorted, while Mr. Sankey did his best to mitigate the disappointment of those who failed to hear the preaching evangelist. At the Jedburgh meeting, on Tuesday evening, there were some very encouraging cases of decision.

SELKIRK,

picturesquely situated in the Vale of Ettrick, had Wednesday all to itself, and both meetings indicated the unmistakable workings of the Spirit of God through the labours of his servants. In the evening there was a good overflow in the U.P. Church, with several addresses by Mr. Moody's helpers. The second meeting in the parish church at night was very large, and even when this was weeded out, many remained for the third or conversational meeting, which Mr. Moody regards as "the very cream of his work." A number of quite interesting cases were met with among the inquirers, and there seemed a general and hopeful readiness to "step over the line" that marks the boundary between dreary doubt and gladsome assurance.

One interesting fact in connection with the Selkirk meetings was the closing of a large tweed factory for the afternoon, to enable the workers to be present.

TWO DAYS AT HAWICK.

Thursday and Friday were spent in this busy centre of manufacturing industry in the soft goods line. The way for the American brethren had been well prepared by a previous fortnight's earnest Gospel effort by Mr. Merton Smith, whose labours were reported to have been very fruitful. He was aided in the singing of the Gospel by Miss Stewart, of Leith. Mr. Smith himself is a very capable musician, and varies his spoken testimony with an occasional song.

The meetings of Thursday were held in the Exchange, the architect of which, if he be yet alive, ought to be roundly censured for the wretched arrangements for ventilation. It was a real tribute to the fascinating virtue of the Gospel that the crowds sat patiently through long meetings breathing such vitiated air. There was an immense overflow in one of the parish churches on Thursday evening, conducted by Mr. Merton Smith. In both meetings the workers had a busy season of converse with individuals. In the Exchange after-meeting the people seemed hard to move at first, but the reserve was ultimately broken down. Some were met with who had come very long distances to be present, and it seemed as if they had not made the journey in vain.

The Exchange could not be had on Friday, as it had been taken for a ball in connection with the football club. The meetings were shifted to the Free and U.P. Churches, and three were held during the afternoon and evening—one being for women and another for men only. Mr. Walker, an evangelist, follows up at Hawick with a week's meeting, and it may be that he and the local pastors will have much of the joy of reaping which the shortness of the time did not permit with the American brethren.

SOME HYMNS, AND THEIR BIRTHPLACES.

There is not a spice of exaggeration in the remark that by his Sacred Songs and Solos Mr. Sankey has opened up a new region of spiritual experience and created a powerful agency in heralding the Gospel story among the peoples of the earth. Some day, if God spares him, he means to write and to publish the stories of some of these hymns, and how they found a place in his popular collection. Nothing is more interesting to our singing friend than to note and trace the genesis of the songs which have proved such effectual messengers of God's grace to sinning men. Last week he had the pleasure of visiting the places where some of the best and most useful of his songs were born. At Kelso he made pilgrimage to the house in which Dr. Horatius Bonar lived when Free Church pastor there, and where many of his earlier hymns were penned, such as that grand anthem of the soul:—

I heard the voice of Jesus say,
Come unto Me and rest,
Lay down, thou weary one, lay down,
Thy head upon my breast.

The later hymns by Dr. Bonar, and those written specially for Mr. Sankey's collection, were, of course, written in Edinburgh; but for some of its finest sacred lyrics the Christian world is indebted to the inspiration that God's servant experienced while he sojourned on the banks of the beautiful Tweed, after there had mingled with its waters those of the Yarrow and the Ettrick, both of them renowned in the minstrelsy of Scotland.

At Melrose, last Saturday, Mr. Sankey found himself at a spot specially rich in holy hymnal memories. Of all the sacred strains that he has sung these twenty years in two hemispheres, no single song has been sounded out so often, or has carried such saving comfort to sin-burdened men and women as

"THE NINETY AND NINE."

The story has often been told of how Mr. Sankey casually discovered it in a stray newspaper sheet, on a railway journey, and how it first sped its musical flight on the spur of an inspired moment in the Edinburgh Free Assembly Hall. Miss Elizabeth Clephane, the lady who wrote it, resided at Bridgend, in the environs of Melrose, and she has years since gone to join the heavenly choir. She was taken home at the early age of thirty, but that one song—not to speak of

Beneath the Cross of Jesus
I fain would take my stand, and others from her gifted pen—had given her a place among the immortals in sacred poetic literature. Mr. Sankey and a few friends paid a visit on Saturday for the first time to what was Miss Clephane's restful earthly home, and where two surviving sisters still abide. It was deeply interesting for the evangelist to be under the roof where she dwelt and wrote; to see the garden where she often walked and meditated in the cool of the day; and to stand in the chamber whence her spirit left its frail earthly tenement and soared to that God who gave it, and around whose throne there circles the echoing joy that greets the bringing home of the lost one, as portrayed in the last verse of her hymn. Mr. Sankey sang it throughout in the house, and we fancy there will be an added strain of pathos in every future rendering of it, now that he carries in his mind a vision of the place where it was sent forth on its wondrous and fruitful mission. The hills lie plentifully enough round Melrose, and their slopes are not too "wild and bare" to prevent the sheep from seeking pasture there. So that one can easily imagine the Divine parable shaping itself in poetic form in another's mind, and being crystallised into the stately, rolling stanzas that have become so familiar.

Another, and still more widely-known, hymn-writer associated with Melrose, is Mrs. Cousins, whose husband was at one time pastor of the Free Church there. She is now resident in Edinburgh, but some seventeen years ago she had her home in Melrose, and there she wrote the famous hymn that has thrilled so many devout hearts:—

The sands of time are sinking,
The dawn of heaven breaks,
The summer morn I've sighed for,
The fair, sweet morn awakes.
Dark, dark hath been the midnight,
But day spring is at hand,
And glory, glory dwelleth
In Immanuel's land.

Another fine hymn by Mrs. Cousins, that has a place in Mr. Sankey's collection, is—

Oh, Christ, what burdens bowed thy head?
Our load was laid on Thee;
Thou stoodest in the sinner's stead,
Didst bear all ill for me.
A victim led, thy blood was shed;
Now there's no load for me.

The house in which Mrs. Cousins lived stands next to that of Miss Dunn, the lady who entertained the evangelists on Saturday, and Mr. Sankey was kindly permitted by its present occupants to see the little room that did duty as a boudoir for the hymn writer, with its bow window specially placed there to enlarge her outward view. By request, Mr. Sankey sang a verse of "The sands of time are sinking" in the room where it was written. Melrose people ought to feel honoured in the fact that it has been the natal place of nobler and more elevated strains than were ever chanted in the dim aisles of its venerable Abbey, the ruins of which attract so many shrine worshippers in these days of universal travel.

A stay in Melrose would not be complete without the home of Sir Walter Scott, on the banks of the silver Tweed. Under the guidance of Mr. Richard Hill, the evangelist (whose residence is in Melrose), Mr. Sankey and his companions viewed the house where the great litterateur and poet evolved from his teeming brain those wonderful creations that have placed him in the very front rank of the world's story-tellers. The study (with its chair and table at which Sir Walter sat and wrote), the gigantic library, the drawing-room, the armoury, and the hall are all preserved in much the condition as that in which their illustrious proprietor left them. Each is filled with articles that could speak, if they had voice, of persons and events which helped to mould Scottish, and in some cases European, history during the early years of the present century.

LAST SABBATH IN SCOTLAND.

One by one the weeks and months have slipped away; and the evangelists have come to the last Sabbath of their third visit to Scotland. On Saturday evening they came on to Galashiels from Melrose in a snowstorm. Sabbath morning dawned with several inches of snow on the ground. The early morning meeting for workers was held in the drill hall, which is said to be seated for over two thousand. In spite of the heavy walking, there was not a vacant seat when all had gathered; some had to stand. In addition to the local pastors on the platform, there was the local M.P., Mr. A. L. Brown, who has the distinction of being one of the small band of preaching Members of Parliament. Mr. Sankey's first solo was the inevitable "Life Line"; it has become so popular during this campaign that it has to be sung wherever the singer goes. His second song, if not new, was one of the best and most enduring in his book. Never, in all the writer's lengthened experience of our brother's musical ministry, has he sung more finely, and with more swelling pathos and thrilling power, than when he sounded out on Sabbath morning this timely exhortation:—

There's no time for idle scorning,
While the days are going by;
Let your face be like the morning,
While the days are going by.
Oh, the world is full of sighs,
Full of sad and weeping eyes;
Help your fallen brother rise,
While the days are going by.

The song was an admirable prelude to Mr. Moody's address from Dan. xii. 3: "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever." The preacher was in his most characteristic vein, the fire seemed to burn in his very bones, and it came out in impetuous, red-hot speech. These words, he said, were the dying testimony of the old warrior-statesman, Daniel, whose fame has outlived and outshone that of Nebuchadnezzar, Darius, Cyrus, Alexander, and all the other mighty generals of ancient empires. Many throughout Scotland have said that their particular town was a specially hard field for Christian work. Think of the hard field that Daniel had in heathen Babylon. Yet he commenced to shine for God early in life, and he shone on right to its close. No cloud veils the brightness of his testimony. It was the spirit of unselfishness that made him shine, and that is the spirit that we need to-day.

Early in his discourse Mr. Moody let fling very vigorously at the whisky traffic, and at the supine indifference in the churches which allows men to go down to death through this evil, and never reaches out a hand to save them. He said he had been told that if he was so outspoken on this question, the churches would be closed against him. "Well, the warm weather is coming, and I will take to the open air. If our Christianity does not prompt us to try and save some one else it is a sham. 'The set time to favour Zion' comes when we are ready; God is always ready. These dark waves of sin and damnation that are rolling through the towns and villages of Scotland can be driven back."

The two words "concentrate" and "consecrate" formed a basis for a fervid appeal, in the course of which Mr. Moody told of his visit to Scotland in 1867 to hear the venerable Dr. Duff speak, and of the devoted missionary's thrilling speech in the Free Assembly of the previous year, when he said: "If it be true that Scotland has no more sons to give to India, I will go back to the shores of the Ganges and let these Indians know that there is one poor old Scotchman who will die for them if he cannot live for them." Mr. Moody closed with a graphically powerful presentation of the consuming zeal and singleness of purpose shown by the Apostle Paul, who was not to be daunted by stripes, persecutions, shipwrecks, or imprisonments, but in the midst of all said, "This one thing I do."

In the early afternoon the evangelists were

where a largely-attended meeting was held in Dr. Herdman's parish church. Mr. Sankey of course sang "The Ninety-and-nine," which was fitting in the place of its birth. Mr. Moody preached with great liberty and power, and if time had permitted the holding of a second meeting, there were signs that much fruit would have been gathered from the single service. The workers straight to a mass meeting of women in the Drill Hall, where there was a great breaking down under one of Mr. Moody's most tender and earnest utterances. A very large after meeting was held in the Free Church close by, and numbers were conversed with individually about salvation. Meantime Mr. Sankey had been singing and speaking to a crowded mixed company in the U.P. Church. Here, also, there was much manifestation of anxiety, and the workers had a busy time. The experiences of the afternoon were to a large extent repeated in the evening. Mr. Moody had a magnificent audience of men in the Drill Hall and a good inquirers' meeting in the church. In the overflow one of the speakers was the second son of Lord Polwarth, who, in a simple and manly way, told the story of his own conversion ten years ago, his soul-awakening having been brought about through the singing of the hymn, "I have a Saviour, He's pleading in glory," by a lady in his father's drawing-room. Altogether, the last Sabbath of the evangelists in Scotland was one of the very best they have had throughout their campaign. On Monday they received news of a great Gospel temperance meeting at Hawick on Saturday, when 350 persons were enrolled as abstainers. Large and fruitful meetings were also held there on Sabbath. Mr. J. M. Scroggie has had a successful time in following up at Dunbar.

At close of the meetings in Edinburgh this day (Thursday), Mr. Moody will leave for the Continent, where he will rejoin his family for a season of rest. Mr. Sankey will be joined by his wife, who expects to sail from New York on April 9, and they will spend some time visiting in England.

THE GOSPEL IN AUSTRIA.

The Evangelical Church of Austria may be described in the words of the prophet Isaiah (i. 8, 9): "a cottage in a vineyard, a lodge in a garden of cucumbers. Except the Lord of Hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah." We are like the poor, wretched man who went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, who stripped him of his raiment and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead! Who will become our merciful Samaritan to bind up our wounds and pour in oil and wine? The history of the Protestant Church of Austria is one of a long trial and martyrdom.

I hope God will soon give me the opportunity of telling our history to the English Christian public. I should like now to say a little about my work. In the small Austrian province of Silesia there are living about fifty thousand Poles, and a few thousand German Protestants. My parish consists of fourteen thousand Poles and four hundred German members, and the Gospel is preached in the Polish and German languages. Our Poles are native in the country, being small farmers and workmen, whose fathers, centuries ago, found safe shelter in forests and caverns, while they testified for the faith during cruel persecutions. The inhabitants of the plains and the gentry were compelled either to turn Roman Catholics or to leave their native country. The Protestant inhabitants are therefore very poor.

The little town of Teschen is situated in the heart of the province, and is the centre of the evangelical life. Although the people once professed the Protestant faith, the Jesuits and soldiers have got them back to the Roman flock. Nevertheless, there is in this town the oldest and largest evangelical church of the whole Empire, built up in the time of the severest oppression of our fathers. In summer, 1707, Charles the Twelfth, King of Sweden, passed ahead of his military through Silesia, driving before him his adversary, August II., King of Poland and Elector of Saxony. A poor Protestant farmer went up to the Swedish king, fell upon his knees, and begged him with many tears to make intercession at the Emperor of Austria for the persecuted Silesian Protestants. Charles sent directly a courier for the Court of Vienna, expecting the answer, and the Protestants of Silesia were permitted to build up six churches. One of them is ours, the others are altogether in the Prussian part of Silesia.

We preach the Gospel in the Polish language Sunday by Sunday before an audience averaging four thousand souls. Residents in outlying villages in some cases leave home as early as four o'clock in the morning, in order to attend public worship. On Good Friday and Easter there are often eight thousand persons crowd and overcrowd the church. Within the Teschen parish, two hours distant from the town, is a large iron factory, where more than eight hundred Protestant workmen are employed. Some of these workmen are in the habit of coming to church on Sundays after having spent the whole night in the factory. When they return home on Sunday in the afternoon it is to resume their "night shift" at six o'clock. For these workmen and their families we long to erect a place of worship in the village of Trzynice. The owner of the factory has built a church for the Roman Catholic workmen, but he has done nothing of the kind for the Protestants. The workmen themselves have made heroic efforts for several years, they have every month put by the small wages of one day, but this accumulation is very slow.

Our farmers get poorer and poorer, and I fear for the future of our churches and schools. It would be lamentable that the torch of the Gospel, which was kept lighted for so many centuries, should at last be extinguished.

I intend visiting England soon, to inspect the many Christian institutions, in order to profit thereby in my work, which, indeed, is not mine, but the work of the Great Shepherd, who, for the present, leads us through the shady valley.

SPECIAL SERVICES COMMITTEE.

The committee for the holding of special services in theatres, halls, and mission-rooms have issued their annual report, showing that the rapid growth of London, together with the constant tendency of many to give up attendance at places of worship, makes such special services in places where the people willingly go a matter of great importance.

In the larger buildings services are held during the winter and spring months for Sunday services for the non-church-and-chapel-goers, while in the mission halls meetings are held throughout the week as well as on the Lord's Day. The services are, for the most part, held in the very poorest localities in London. The report is full of incidents of blessing resulting in the various buildings under the earnest preaching of the regularly-ordained ministry, and godly and gifted evangelists, who have rendered gratuitous service.

The buildings in which these services have been held include the following:—Queen's Theatre of Varieties, Poplar; Pavilion Theatre, Whitechapel-road; Standard Theatre, Shoreditch; Agricultural Hall; Central Temperance Hall, Great Eastern-street; the Town Halls, Shoreditch, Holborn, Kensington; Morley Hall, Cambridge-heath; Homerton Hall; the Golden Bells Coffee Palace, Notting-hill-gate; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Bethnal-green; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Borough; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Poplar; South Norwood Hall; and Railway Arch, Bermondsey.

The work to a great extent is hidden. Nobody goes to see it, and hence, being "out of sight," it is apt, also, to be "out of mind" of the Christian public. The committee conclude their report as follows:—In one of the many speeches delivered during the past year on evangelistic efforts, Dr. Monro Gibson is reported to have said: "The respectable sinner needs the Gospel as much as one of the submerged tenth." But this committee, while fully admitting the truth of the remark, think that already sufficient has been spent on means to secure the salvation of this class of London's population. Costly churches, the most elaborate ritual, the most ornate services, whether wisely or not, invite the attendance of the well-to-do in the sanctuaries scattered throughout the land. If such are still without the Gospel, it is not because of insufficient outlay. But until within the last few years, what has been done to provide places for the poor and industrious classes, such as experience has shown are suited to their needs, and which have not, as the Archdeacon of London puts it, like the churches, "the reputation of being the place for best clothes"? What they want is, as this committee have for years pleaded with the Christian public, "comfortable places for meeting and earnest men to preach."

Funds are needed to carry on this work. Communications may be sent to Mr. C. M. Sawell, Secretary, 3, Bridewell-place, E.C.

SOCIETY of CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

Rev. Dr. Clark, founder of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavour, writes:—

"Numerically the societies are growing faster than ever before. An average of over one hundred are known to be formed every week, while the latest report showed one hundred and fifty-five in one week. There are now over nineteen thousand societies with considerably over eleven hundred thousand members. The growth is remarkably uniform in all parts of the United States, and, indeed, throughout the world.

"I have just returned from the South, where, in almost every State, the work has obtained a good foothold, and is found to answer the needs of churches as well as in the North. In England there are now nearly two hundred and fifty societies, and in Australia hundreds more. But the numerical growth is the least significant part of the movement. Testimony comes from all sections that the young people are growing in spirituality, evangelistic power, and in fidelity to their own churches. Recent statistics, compiled from the reports of a large number of societies, show that sixty-four per cent. of the active members of the societies (and they are average societies) attend the mid-week prayer meetings of the church, that eighty-one per cent. of these active members habitually attend the Sunday evening service, while in the same churches less than forty per cent. of all the church members are reported as attending these services.

"This growing sense of the loyalty of the young disciples to their own churches has very materially affected the attitude of the evangelical churches toward the Society, and increased their cordiality toward it. With but few exceptions it is to-day heartily favoured by denominational leaders and by pastors generally. The Methodists of Canada have added the title Christian Endeavour to their Epworth League name, the Free Baptists have added it to their Advocates of Fidelity. The Friends have done the same thing, while the Baptists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Methodist Protestants, Disciples and Lutherans give the Society a warm place among the children in their household of Faith."

"OPIUM REVENUE" v. ASIA'S MILLIONS.

What! call ye England "Christian,"
When this curse lies at her door?
When she so unconcernedly
Beholds this festering sore!—
When, 'mid death and degradation,
Of two vast and mighty lands,
'Mid their misery and sorrow
She calmly folds her hands!

Hears she not the mother's weeping?—
Heeds she not the children's cry?—
And the prayer of souls in anguish
Who in thousands fade and die?
Is her conscience seared and deadened?—
Has her once warm heart grown cold?—
Cares she not that millions perish—
Die in wretchedness untold?

* * * * *

With all the joy of Heaven's light—
The Gospel light of God—
That shines around the pathway
In which your feet have trod,
Shall the souls in heathen darkness,
Who of you this Gospel crave,
Be accursed, for paltry millions
Your "revenue" to save?

* * * * *

O England, wake! arise! beware!
Stretch forth thy hands to God!
Break down that deadly thing that dooms
The sons of Asia's sod!
Oh, hear that awful Voice that warns
Your apathetic ears—
For Nations, as for men, the Lord
The Sword of Judgment bears!

If, in the light of God, you still Refuse to lend an ear,
To the wailing cry of those who die
In thousands every year—
Beware! lest, in his righteous wrath,
His pestilential breath
Spread o'er your happy English homes
And still your sons in death!

Arise, ye Christian people!
And, by the might of God,
Drive out this demon evil
That sways your Empire's rod!
Go forth in panoply of faith;
Lay not your armour down,
Till England's Opium sin and shame
Degrade no more her crown!—

Till over all her wide domain
Shall break the Gospel light;
And 'neath the sway of England's Queen
Henceforth shall right be might!
Cease not your strife and warfare,
Sheathe not your battle sword,
Till o'er our Kingdom's deadly crime
We're conquerors through the Lord!

LIVERPOOL.—The Liverpool branch of the Railway Mission has just held its Annual Conference in the Y.M.C.A., Mount-pleasant. On Saturday evening there was a meeting in the Association Hall, which was crowded to its utmost capacity. The Bishop of Liverpool (President) took the chair, and, referring to the importance of steadiness in those employed by railway companies, said if they wished to make men sober, the first thing to do was to bring them under the influence of the Gospel. Rev. Dr. Harrison preached the Annual Sermon on Sunday afternoon, and various meetings were held during the day, all of which were characterised by spiritual power.

Moses, the Man of God.

Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Regent's-park Chapel.

THE TRUE NURSING-FATHER.

A CONTRAST.

Num. xi. 12; Deut. i. 31; Acts xiii. 18.

It was but three days' march from Sinai, and the people encamped on a site which was ever memorable in their history, as recalling one of the gravest, saddest scenes in the experiences of the wilderness journey. We are only, however, now concerned in the incident so far as it affects the character of Moses, and suggests a striking contrast between human frailty and the Divine sufficiency.

I. The Test beneath which Moses broke down.—A great mixed crowd came up with the people out of Egypt. It was largely composed of Egyptians who joined the exodus from various motives. They had no ancient traditions of a religious ancestry, no national hopes or promises, no right to count on any share in the land of promise. Some came to escape the bitter bondage of the Egyptian kings, some to traffic with the people, some because swept by a sudden awe into the current of that great movement. And in all probability they were a loose, coarse, common, and heterogeneous company; mere riff-raff, loafers, hangers-on; who had mingled freely with the people when they, too, were somewhat disorganised, but had perhaps been driven out of the camp, when the host was properly marshalled under its respective standards. Then, congregating together, as they were compelled to do, they were better able to assert themselves, and make their power felt for evil.

It is said of them that the mixed multitude fell a-lusting. They despised the manna which God gave them so bountifully, "nought save this manna." They talked with gusto of the luscious vegetables of Egypt, "the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick," without saying a word of the miseries under which they had groaned, and from which they had been only too glad to escape. They cried, Who will give us flesh to eat? Their discontent spread like a contagion throughout the camp, and the children of Israel also wept again, and Moses heard the people weeping throughout their families, every man at the door of his tent.

Imagine that, six hundred thousand footmen (21) weeping for food! How the desert air must have been laden with their complaints, like the murmur of the autumn sea, moaning and sighing under the pressure of the rising gale. It seemed as if Moses could bear it no longer. Overstrained, overwrought, utterly dispirited and depressed, he said unto the Lord, Wherefore hast Thou evil entreated thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that Thou layest the burden of all this people upon me? Have I conceived all this people? Have I brought them forth that Thou shouldest say unto me, Carry them in thy bosom as a nursing-father carrieth the sucking-child?

It was very pitiful, that complaint, especially when he spoke as if he had to provide the commissariat and to find flesh for them all, and to bear them alone. His bitter complaint and prayer to be killed out of hand is marvellously similar to that other cry of one who was to stand in after years with him beside the Lord on the Transfiguration Mount. "Elijah went a day's journey into the wilderness, and came and sat down under a juniper tree, and he requested for himself that he might die, and said, It is enough now, O Lord, take away my life, for I am not better than my fathers."

In each of these cases something was due to physical and nervous overstrain, the reaction, in the one case, from the burdens of government, and, in the other, from the excitement of that day on Carmel. And in each case this was recognised by that pitiful heart which pities us as a father his children, because of the frailty of our frame. "He knoweth our frame, He remembereth that we are dust." To Moses He gave seventy elders to share the burdens and responsibilities of office, and to Elijah He gave Elisha.

But in the case of Moses there was surely an outbreak of impatience which was hardly justifiable. He loved the people, but his love was not strong enough to sustain the terrific test to which it was exposed. He pitied them, but beneath the scorching sun of their repeated provocations that pity dried up like waters which are absorbed in the desert heat. For twelve months he had been grieved and fretted with their murmurings; now he could stand it no longer, but gave notice that he must resign his position of nursing-father if ever he had been supposed to hold it.

II. The Parallel in Christian Experience.—(1) We also have need to beware of the influence of "the mixed multitude." Had it not been for these, Israel had walked with God, and been satisfied with his provision on their behalf. It was from them that the discontent proceeded, it was they who spoke about their souls being dried away. There are many professing Christians who have the form of godliness but deny its power, and who pass freely in and out among the children of God. They cannot tell their pedigree, they are not part of the redeemed host, they do not encamp under one of the standards, but they are carried along in the skirts of the Church. It is among these that we may expect to hear complaints that religion is dry and irksome, or rapturous descriptions of the food of Egypt, or special pleadings that there should be a mingling of the delights and frivolities of the Egyptian world, which should have been left behind for ever, with the manna which God lays on the dew of the desert floor.

We must be carefully on our guard against all such. There is no earnest body of people among whom persons of this description may not be found, and their influence is all the stronger in that they appeal to tendencies within us, which are so susceptible to their call.

(2) We must distinguish between appetite and lust. The appetites have been implanted within us to maintain the machinery of life. If it were not for their action, we should neglect food and rest and exercise, and many other things necessary to our well-being. They are like alarum bells ringing when the time has come for us to make provision in these respects. And God is pledged to supply all these — the manna from heaven as bread to our hunger, and the waters of the rock for our thirst.

But in us all appetite is apt to run up into lust. In other words, we seek satisfaction, not for the necessary supply of our physical needs, but for the momentary pleasure which accompanies the gratification of appetite itself. Our motive is not the obtaining of some lawful and necessary end, but the titillation of taste and sense. Appetite has, therefore, to be curbed with a strong hand, lest it become inordinate passion, for the moment we take pleasure in the indulgence of appetite for its own sake, and apart from the legitimate end for which it was intended by the Almighty, we begin to tread a path that leads swiftly down to the bottomless pit. We have no hand strong enough to curb these fiery steeds, so fit to draw the coach of life, but so apt to run away with it. Nought can help us here save the grace of the Holy Ghost, who lusteth against the flesh, so that we may not do what otherwise we would.

(3) Let us guard against the resurrection of easily besetting sins. Often had the people murmured about their food at their first setting out, and talked of the flesh-pots of Egypt, where they had had flesh to the full (Exodus xvi.). But they had learnt much since then. They had seen the cloud on Sinai's brow, and heard the voice of God; had been organised into a host, and had started full of joy and zeal and courage for the land of promise. We can almost hear them say, as they hear the blast of the silver trumpets, and start forth, "We love the delicate angel food. We care not for the luxuries of Egypt. We are glad for the privations and toils of the desert march." And perhaps they no more expected that they would murmur again than that they should see the forms of their Egyptian taskmasters.

We often comfort ourselves thus. We say to ourselves that certain forms of sin have died down within us, and will never trouble us more. We have grown out of them. We may have to fight other battles, but not this, never this, no, never more. But at that very moment the ghastly shape of that temptation is at hand, mocking, and ready to lay its hand on the shoulder to assert all, and perhaps even more than all, its olden force.

You can never be sure of yourself. The suggestion that a certain form of temptation can have no further power over you is of the devil, and should excite you to greater watchfulness, for you may be sure that under the covert of the suggestion you are to be more tempted than ever. And yet, though we are forewarned against these things, how apt are we all to fall under the power of lust! And beneath the ravings of its brief delirium, we speak against God and say, "Can God prepare a table in the wilderness? Behold, He smote the rock and waters gushed out, and streams overflowed, can He give bread also? Will He provide flesh for his people?"

Inordinate desire, murmuring and mistrust, are linked in the closest association. When one of these enters the window of the heart, it goes round to open the door to the other two. We want what we have not got. The tendrils of our desire reach over the wall of God's order; we murmur at our lot; and we end by distrusting the love and care of our Heavenly Father.

Oh, how often have we grieved Him! Have we not had days of provocation and temptation in the wilderness? Have we not tempted Him, proved Him, and seen his work? Have we not erred in our heart, despised the pleasant land, and turned back in our thoughts to Egypt? Look back on the desert way and see your Massahs and Meribahs and Kibroth-Hattaavahs, the cairns of stones raised to set forth the stages of your pilgrimage, and the infinite anguish caused to the heart of God.

III. The Contrast between the Servant and the Father.—Moses repudiated the office of the nursing father. He could not sustain its responsibilities. But his failure only serves to bring out into distincter relief a touching conception of the Fatherhood of God.

Forty years afterwards, as the aged law-giver, at the foot of Pisgah, was summing up the results of his experience, he said, "Thou hast seen how that the Lord thy God bare thee, as a man doth bare his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came unto this place" (Deut. i. 31).

Some centuries after this, in one of his noblest sonnets, the great evangelical Prophet tells us, that in his love and in his pity God redeemed his people, and bare them, and carried them all the days of old (Isa. lxiii. 9).

And, again, in the first sermon of his first missionary tour, the Apostle Paul told his audience, gathered in the synagogue of the Pisidian Antioch, that for about the time of forty years, God bare his people as a nursing-father in the wilderness (Acts xiii. 18, R.V. marg.).

Moses' patience gave out in a twelve-month, God's lasted till his work was done, and the people were safely deposited in the land of promise. Yea, moreover, through the ages there has been the same unwearied bearing of his petulant and sinful children, untired and untiring, patient and tender, strong and sweet.

If only the true story of our lives were written, it would be the most astounding record of God's forbearing and pitying love. Truly, "He hath not dealt with us after our sins, nor rewarded us according to our iniquities. For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great his mercy" has been toward us. The story of the desert wanderings and murmurings has been the literal record of our behaviour toward our heavenly Father, who has had enough ingratitude to wear out any patience short of infinite. But He faints not, neither is weary. He loves us still, and by his love He will yet subdue us to Himself, and secure that glorious result on which He has set his heart.

But let us beware: there comes a time in the history of besetting sin when God ceases to strive against it. He gave them the quails they asked, flesh to the full. Over a territory of fifteen or twenty miles across, the wind of the Lord brought up quails from the sea. They flew two cubits high above the earth—that is, breast deep, so that they would be easily knocked down by the club and caught by the hand. And the people rose up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and gathered the quails, and they spread them all abroad around the camp on the sand to dry.

This is a terrible example of how God will sometimes grant us our heart's desire and give us what we have passionately asked, not because it is the best thing, but because of our importunate desire. If a man will grovel when God gives him wings, will adopt a prone position when God lifts him up to set him before his face, will clamour for flesh when the manna which God gives lies rejected beside him, then God may leave him to his choice. "Ephraim is joined to idols, let him alone." "He gave them their heart's desire, and sent leanness into their souls."

You may be mad for gold, and gold may pour in; mad for pleasure, and the golden barges wait to waft you on the swelling current; mad for applause, and it is yours till you are surfeited. God does not curse you, He leaves you to yourself, and that is curse enough. You may press against the barriers He has erected, till you will find them all swept away, and your path clear. "Flesh, flesh," you cry, "give me flesh." "Yes," is the terrible reply, "here it is, as much as you like. Kill and eat. See it is falling around you in showers."

But the end of that is a grave. "The name of that place was called Kibroth-hattaavah, the graves of lust, because there they buried the people that lusted. We, however, do not need graves in the desert: men are their own graves. How many a man is simply an animated sarcophagus, carrying within him a dead soul, which has perished whilst he was gorging his inordinate passion. The miser, a grave! The woman of fashion, a grave! The sensualist, a grave!

Oh! it is well for us when God steps in to dash away our bowls of pottage, with their savoury steamy seduction, lest we barter for them the precious birthright of communion with the Father.

It is best to let our Father choose. His choice as to route and manna and length of daily journey, must be the best. And when our yearnings are in opposition to his evident intention, his wise provision, let us quench them back, let us yield our will about them, let us ask that the ocean of his fulness may flow up into the babbling brook of our desires quieting and stilling them, so that there may be a great quiet in our heart, as when the Severn pours its tidal wave far up the babbling Wye, and there is a great silence in the hills.

Let us get more alone with our Father who is in secret. There passion cools, and desire dies down, and the heart is satisfied, and the will is magnetised by the Will of God, and the nature attains its perfect balance.

LADS' REST, DULWICH.—A meeting was held last week in St. John's Parish Room, Sandown, I.W., in connection with work amongst the street arabs of East London. Mr. W. H. Dalton made a powerful appeal on behalf of these poor destitute waifs. It is surely a Christ-like work to rescue these poor lads and to teach them the fear of God and the love of Christ. The vicar of the parish, Canon Whitby, took the chair, and a collection was made at the close in aid of the Lads' Rest, West Dulwich.

REV. JOHN WILKINSON'S ANNUAL.

THE MILDMAY MISSION TO THE JEWS.

Israel and all that concerns her welfare have now happily become matters of real interest to the Church at large, to an extent, at all events, unknown for ages. Whatever other means have been used of God in bringing about this awakening from the neglect of centuries, few will deny that the testimony borne by Mr. Wilkinson and the work of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews have been important factors. Hence the annual summary of the work of this Mission has for many a special interest. The sixteenth year of the Mission will close on June 1, and looking back on these past years it must be owned that God has blessed this institution wonderfully. The record for the year extends to over eighty pages, the branches are many and the incidents numerous; hence we can but briefly note a few leading points which may commend the deeply interesting report to many.

Details are given of Mr. Wilkinson's personal work, which has now extended over forty years, and in the matter of funds it is stated that,

Without sending deputations over the country to collect funds; without advertising and without personal solicitation, the needs of the Mission and of its director have been supplied from its commencement in June, 1876. God has sent through his children, during the sixteen years and a-half of its existence, about £75,000. This sum has come from all evangelical denominations of Christians from all parts of the world, and from all classes—from the domestic servant to the nobleman.

During the past year the freewill offerings have amounted to £9500, sent in in sums varying from two farthings to one thousand pounds. As to spiritual results, it is stated:

We have never measured results by baptisms, although we have had several this past year. Numbers in the course of the year voluntarily confess their faith in the Messiahship of Jesus, and many seem to give evidence of real trust in Jesus for salvation who are still unbaptized. Obedience to our blessed Lord is what we are concerned about, and that is the true road to blessing. In the reports from Russia, further on, our friends will find that not only has the ploughshare of persecution prepared the ground for the seed, but the reaping time is appearing.

The individual labourers are permitted each to report on their special branch. Thus Drs. Dixon and Rocha, and the deaconesses tell of good work at the Medical Mission, while Messrs. Adler, D. Baron, Barnett, S. H. Wilkinson, Keys, Clancy, Goodman and others tell of labours at home and abroad,

"CHRIST, MY PASSOVER."

Amongst the many testimonies given, we find the following borne by a Christian Israelite:—

"Jesus has saved me from the misery of sin and from the iron yoke of Satan, and given me peace. Judaism never satisfied my soul with all its ceremonies. I used to read my Bible then, but could not understand it as I do now. My brethren commemorate the deliverance from a physical bondage when the Passover was instituted, but they are still under the bondage of Satan, which is not merely physical—Christ is my Passover!" "What effect has your becoming a Christian had upon your daily life?" "It has made a great difference; God has taken away the stony heart and given me one of flesh. I am in a worse temporal condition since my conversion, but I am far more happy."

HEBREW NEW TESTAMENT WORK.

The stories of New Testament distribution work in Russia and Eastern Europe generally, Syria, Palestine, India, Persia and Arabia, Northern Africa, America and South America, and the Antipodes are deeply interesting, and show the remarkable way in which this work has aroused a spirit of enquiry all over the Jewish world. The total distributions in 1891 are returned thus:—

Hebrew New Testaments; Judeo-German Portions; Russian New Testaments and German New Testaments, 331,952. Total during the past five years, 465,824. We have purchased and paid for already, Hebrew New Testaments and Judeo-German Portions, Russian and German New Testaments, about 575,000. We purpose, the Lord permitting us, to go on to the purchase and distribution of a million copies; and if the Lord tarry, and we be spared, we shall go on to a second million copies.

Neither the Jewish nor the Gentile world will ever get the Scriptures if the principle of selling be insisted on. God's principle is giving, and we cannot improve on God's way of doing things. God sells nothing, but gives everything. Let us work on God's plan, and we shall soon sow the field, which is the world, with the seed, which is the Word.

The central Jewish mission-hall in Philpot-street, E., will, it is hoped, be opened shortly. Progress has been slower than expected owing to unforeseen difficulties.

Doubtless much interest has been felt in many quarters in regard to the exceptionally large bequest left to the Mission. As to this matter a full statement is made by Mr. Wilkinson, who gives the history of the facts, the amount of the legacy, and the objections raised. Two points are emphasized, first, that not a penny of this has yet been received; second, that when received it will be expended on special work. It would be (comments Mr. Wilkinson) nothing short of a calamity to the Christian Church should she be led, from any cause, to lessen her interest in the evangelisation of the Jews throughout the world.

We trust these few notes on this interesting work will stir many to deeper concern and warmer sympathy on behalf of God's chosen people. Communications should be made to Rev. John Wilkinson, Mildmay Mission to the Jews, 79, Mildmay-road, N.

CONVENTION IN JERUSALEM.

A correspondent at Jerusalem, writing on March 16, says:—

"The Lord has been pleased to give us a time of spiritual blessing during the past week. There had been a great desire for a time of waiting on the Lord for fuller blessing, and this desire was graciously granted by the way being opened for Rev. Evan H. Hopkins to come into our midst.

"The attendances increased during the three days, till on the Friday evening the room, which holds a hundred, was overcrowded, and many were obliged to sit outside. All societies and workers in Jerusalem participated—clergy (English and native), missionary ladies, Bible-women, and teachers; while Bethany, Bethlehem, and Jaffa were also represented. The first meeting began, as usual, with the hymn, 'Search me, O God,' and then followed a solemn time of finding out our own weakness, and seeing sin as 'exceeding sinful' in the sight of God. Indeed, this was true of all the meetings, and seemed to be the special feature of the convention. In the words of the speaker, it was a time 'when the tools are taken aside into the workshop to be adjusted and fitted for fuller service.' It was shown that capacity to receive belongs to us, while ability to accomplish belongs to God. Knowledge sees what God has provided; faith puts out the hand and claims it.

"Before the close of the last meeting on Friday, Mr. Hopkins asked all those who were seeking the blessing for the first time to stand, when several rose; and, second, all who had received definite blessing during the past days were asked also to rise. Solemn words of prayer followed, and the meetings closed with a burst of praise in the words of the hymn, 'All hail the power of Jesu's name.' It was fitting we should thus crown Him in the city where He was crucified. The following morning such as loved to remember his death until his coming again were gathered in the C.M.S. Church."

The Lichfield Soldiers' Home.

We have just received the second annual report of the Lichfield Soldiers' Home, from which it appears that the work grows and deepens, that the redcoats are finding their way to the Home in increasing numbers, and being there hear the Gospel plainly and pointedly. "Having once broken the ice, and having found a bright, attractive place together with a warm welcome, men often come again, and are not afraid to attend the more distinctly religious gatherings."

Amongst the many interesting incidents recorded we find the following letter from one who had been a "hard drinker," which indicates the reality of the change:—"Two of my old mates came to see me on Saturday evening, one was drunk, and the other half-and-half. I told them to come into the house, they came in, and I said, 'Now, lads, what do you want?' One said that he would pay for a quart to start with, and the other said, 'I will pay for another one.' 'Mates,' I said, 'just you sit you down a bit and listen to me,' so I reached the Bible down from the side-shelf, and knelt down, and opened the good old book, and I read the eighteenth chapter of St. Matthew. They looked at me, but not one said a word till I had finished reading. Then the one that I have been working so long for the devil with, said, 'Bill, thee baint the same Bill that left us to go to Lichfield, thee promised us when you came down that we should have a spree together.' I said, 'No, Jack my lad, I am not the same Bill that went away from home a sinner, but I am now a child of the Lord Jesus.' So he said 'Good night, Bill,' and went out, the other following."

The Nightingale Psalm.

By the REV. JOHN MCNEILL.

NOTES OF AN ADDRESS.

I WANT to talk to you a little about the twenty-third Psalm. If I had my friend Mr. Sankey's gift, I would sing it instead of preaching it. No wonder that all the commentators break out into raptures over it, when we think of its quiet, tender, inexpressible beauty, and of all that it has done to comfort God's people. You who have come far along life's journey know how it has comforted you, and how it comforted your father and your mother before you. Our heart fills as we think of it, and we feel that silence would be the truest praise, both of the psalm itself and of the God whose grace it so wonderfully celebrates.

This Psalm has been described as being among the psalms what the nightingale is among singing birds. It is small, and of a homely feather; but what a singer it is! How it fills the night with the throb and the pulse of its music! How it has sung itself, through the night of darkness and sorrow and trouble, into the hearts and homes of God's people; and how it will go on singing until the last pilgrim is gathered home! Then it will spread its wings and fly away back into the bosom of the God from whom it flew out at first when it came down here to exercise its ministry of healing and of comfort.

The Lord help us to begin and sing it at once—to catch the keynote; to sing our sorrows to sleep, and sing our very sins out of sight, as we praise Him who is our Shepherd and our all.

One of the great charms of the Psalm is that

IT IS A PERSONAL AND INDIVIDUAL SONG.

Martin Luther said that the heart of religion lay in the personal pronoun. Certainly that is illustrated by the Psalms, and especially by this one: "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want. He leadeth me," and so on. It is God and me—"as if, besides myself, nor man nor angel lived in earth or heaven." You have lived for little if you have not begun to sing in such fashion and make melody in your heart unto the Lord. Cast out the dumb devil of doubt and unbelief, and let your heart begin to hum and croon this twenty-third Psalm. God will never stop you and say it is not for you.

"The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want." These two things always go together; and what God hath joined let no man put asunder. What is unbelief but the tendency in our hearts to take these two truths and violently divorce them? "The Lord is my Shepherd; yet I will go to rack and ruin one of these days." Is that the twenty-third Psalm? Nay. Because the Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. Sing it again, my doubting brother; you were flat last time. Sing it again, and of faith, and hope, and confidence will come out without a jar and without a false note in it. Bless God! I see it better than I can express it; it is all right for time and for eternity—

A King of love my Shepherd is.

What can ail me or fail me? Argue it out thus with the devil. Bring your doubts—even your sceptical doubts and your scientific doubts as well as the deeper doubts of your heart, and instead of arguing on other grounds, try the first verse of this psalm: "The Lord is my Shepherd." Do you hear that, devil? How do you like that, Mr. Ready-to-Halt? Heaven pity us, we have forgotten the situation: I the sheep, and He the mighty Maker and Sustainer of all things, my Shepherd. Is it not time we were beginning to understand what doubt and misgiving are? There is nothing grand or dignified about unbelief. It spoils everything.

I was speaking to a Scotchwoman in London one Sabbath. She had been in some difficulty, but at length she had got a situation, and I saw her at the service in Regent-square. After shaking hands with her, I said, "How are you getting on?" "Oh, I have got a nice place; I have £25 a-year and all found." She spoke the last words, "all found," with a kind of smack, which seemed to indicate that that bulked more largely in her view than the pounds sterling. I could not help thinking of it in the vestry, and this psalm came into my mind: "The Lord is my shepherd and all is found; I shall not want."

Eighteen years ago I woke up one day to the thought that

I HAD A BIG WANT:

I wanted to be saved, to have my sins blotted out, to get eternal life. I stand here to say that I asked God to supply that want, and He did it. I have never had as big a want as that since, but I know that whatever want I have to-day and on to the judgment day, He will help me through, right along.

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures. He leadeth me beside the still waters." We might almost take this first clause literally; we need to be made to "lie down." The trouble with many Christians to-day is just this—God cannot get them off their legs, so to speak. He cannot get them off the wing to take their needed rest. "Return unto thy rest, O my soul." "He commanded them to sit down," when He wanted to feed them. So to-day He makes us to lie down that He may look after us.

"He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness." For all our daily walk and conversation God leads us, just as David led his sheep day by day. He knew what shepherding was. He had spent years at it. And one day it broke upon his mind, "Dear me! what I am to my sheep, that God is to me." He could not but sing about it. It made him a poet. He saw that just as he went before his sheep to lead them in the best way, so the Lord led him in the paths of righteousness.

"He restoreth my soul." Shepherding has far more of the veterinary surgeon's work in it than some people would think. I used to imagine that it was a very romantic kind of life. You have seen pictures of the sheep lying round about, and the shepherd playing on the flute, with somebody dancing in front of him. So shepherding has come to have that mediæval, far-away, Chloe-Phyllis-and-Daphne look about it. But it is all nonsense.

KEEPING SHEEP IS HARD WORK.

The shepherd has to be a man of stout limb, good wind, and strong arm and nerve; patient and loving. For he has got to care for the stupidest kind of animal that man can deal with. He needs to be a man of many qualifications. Long ago when God wanted a king for a stupid kind of nation he took a man from this training-college. He took David from following the sheep and appointed him to be shepherd over his people.

So it is with Jesus Christ; He restoreth my soul. He is my doctor. It was only after I went out with a shepherd several times that I found out how much of the veterinary surgeon the shepherd needs to be. There is nothing very romantic about it, but much that is the very opposite. I said to myself: Is not that like Jesus Christ in his dealing with us? The only genius we have is genius for going wrong—an infinite capacity for stupidity; for mistaking the right hand for the left; for getting torn among the briars and lost in the wilderness. Our Lord is a great strong powerful shepherd, with his crook in his hand and a love which never tires. "He restoreth my soul."

"Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." That is a colossal idea—"Thou art with me." How many more than God do we want? If we have got Him, what are we grumbling at? "The valley of the shadow"—we are apt to make that refer to the deathbed; but with some people it is a long process. David had sometimes to lead his sheep through deep defiles and narrow gorges, where there was very little sunlight; but they had to be led that way to get to the sheepfold. God is pleased sometimes to lead his people down darksome valleys and through lonely places, by waterfalls and rushing rivers, and by dens and caves where wild beasts are lurking. If the shepherd were not there with his strong arm and his ceaseless vigilance, it would be all the worse for the poor sheep. This valley of the shadow is not only the deathbed, but the life of poverty and toil and care, or the life of ill-health. Perhaps you have married a workingman, and the wages are uncertain; or the business is failing; or the family is going wrong, and you are losing hope. My dear mother was twenty-five years a-dying; she lay in the valley of the shadow of death for a quarter of a century in poverty, pain, and hardship.

ONE OF MY OLDEST MEMORIES

is the waking up at nights in the wild wintry weather, with the wind whistling about the gables and through the chimney tops and hearing a voice that came plainly to me in the silence of the night. It was the voice of my mother as she sat up in her bed, crooning a song and reading the twenty-third Psalm, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." I seem to hear it in my ear now; sweetest sound a man's ear can have—the voice of his mother reading the Word of God. It was a long while for her to be in the shadow, but she got to the sheepfold at the end. Yes, it is true in poverty, ill-health, struggles, trials all around, in death even, "I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." A young Scotchman lay dying. A minister called upon him and found him fast passing away. The minister repeated these lines:—

> When gathering clouds around I view,
> And days are dark, and friends are few
> On Him alone——

"Stop," said the dying man; "that half line is eneuch—'On Him alone.'" I believe that is true. "Thou art with me; I will fear no evil."

I cannot go further, as time is gone; but I trust we have gone far enough to make us feel brighter and better. I hope every soul here can say, "Yes, preacher, I am ready to go, I have got a grip of the Shepherd, and He has got a grip of me. I am going to trust Jesus; to let Him keep me and support me, and make this blessed psalm a great reality in my life."

A GOOD DIVINITY SCHOOL.

I.

Four saints of God in silence fed my youth,
And still in silence lofty converse hold,
Whose lives flashed forth afresh God's ancient truth,
Whose words on earth's rough counter rang like gold.
Hail, thou seraphic Rutherford! who wrought
In prison wings that time and space defy;
Hooker, whose mighty masonry of thought,
Cathedral-aisled, hid truth mid tempests high!
Next holy Leighton, star-pale, purified,
Wooed me with studious soul divinely stored;
And meek George Herbert, who still singing died
Self-hid, while angels listened as they soared.
George Herbert, Leighton, Hooker, Rutherford,
These held high converse with my soul unheard.

II.

BISHOP BUTLER'S ANALOGY.

Strong thinker, rare, incomparable seer!
Subtlest prose-poet this world ever saw;
Thou, at Truth's high springs bowed with mortal ear
Rapt, didst profound analogies thence draw.
Imagination, star-eyed pioneer,
Piercing life's veiled first principles with awe,
Cried, Secrets of the universe are here.
See, Nature mirrors back Heaven's moral law.
Go, write, the Voice said. Straight there streamed sublime
Words close-knit, rugged, strenuous and bold—
Words that have wrestled with the winds of Time,
Yet root the more in minds of rocklike mould!
Truth's long-lost sword flashed blazing from its sheath,
Nature's worn sheath, dinted and dimmed with death.

CHARLES A. FOX.

The Newmarket of France.

THERE are about twelve hundred English residents in the district of Chantilly, Lamorlaye and Creil, department of Oise, France. In January, 1890, I received my marching orders from the Wesleyan Church of Paris, aided by the Paris City Mission, to come here and "do the work of an evangelist." I have found a great door and effectual and many adversaries. After two years' hard work we can truly say, "The Lord hath done great things for us." I believe He is ready to do greater.

The chapel at Chantilly is a very good and useful building, where, in addition to Sunday and weekday services, we have succeeded in establishing a good Sunday-school. But at Lamorlaye we are compelled to hold our meetings in most unsuitable places. It is therefore laid upon my heart to build a small chapel at a cost of about £200. A piece of land has been given for this purpose, and a subscription list opened. For a large proportion of the sum, however, we are looking to English friends, who may address communications to Mr. James Crump, "St. Cyres," 104, Stockwell Park-road, London, S.W.

"ON THE BRINK."

THE HOMES FOR WORKING BOYS.

By PEARL FISHER.

In days gone by, as every reader of Dickens and many another annalist of old London knows, the City apprentices lodged with their masters. Rough enough at times was their bed and board; still, they were looked after in a fashion. But the old order passeth, and under the new circumstances of modern life, boys employed in the City are left to shift for themselves. Certain large houses have boarding arrangements for assistants and apprentices, but the vast majority of boys have to live as best they may. Many, of course, have parents and homes, but very many have not; and with scanty earnings to begin with, are sorely put to exist at all. It is, indeed, no rare thing to find in miserable common lodging-houses boys employed in the City, who, when questioned how they come there, reply: "We have six shillings a week only, and we can't get lodging and meals for that, and we have to come here." What evil they learn in such resorts needs no description. Such are, indeed, ever on the brink of a plunge into moral ruin.

Years ago the evils ensuing from this state of things pressed on some earnest minds, amongst the earliest to move in the matter being the Mr. A. (now Lord) Kinnaird, Messrs. Quintin Hogg, A. O. Charles, G. Hanbury, and Samuel Morley, M.P. About 1870 the first Home for Working Boys was opened in Spital-square; now there are in various parts, accommodating 350 homeless lads. Moreover the whole work is, while certainly philanthropic, essentially a Christian undertaking, for every possible means is adopted to place before the inmates the joy and strength of personal salvation. Outside such a Home these boys would rarely hear of spiritual things; inside, while made happy and at home, they have Christian teaching and Christian example constantly before them, and this frequently with the best results. Outside they are peculiarly exposed to temptation, inasmuch as evening hours are spent usually at the street corner; inside there are good books, and many innocent and harmless ways of passing pleasantly the hours of leisure.

Haddo House, 88, Blackfriars-road, may be taken as a good specimen of the other seven Homes. Here there is accommodation for sixty boys, under the superintendence of Major Collier, whose long experience and personal qualities fit him admirably for such a post. Genial and kindly in his dealings with the boys, he can be firm enough when need be, and takes full care that due and proper discipline is preserved, while the inmates enjoy that amount of freedom demanded by the fact that it is and that they pay, and are thus on an independent footing. The happy medium is not always easy to hit, but, so far as I have seen in repeated visits, and heard from others fairly familiar with these Homes, it is well exemplified in their internal management.

After their day's work the boys may read (and there is a capital library), or write (a separate room being provided, for the sake of quietness), or play, under careful oversight, various games, or exercise on the gymnasia, or, permission being obtained, go out for a walk. Summer has its cricket club, winter its mutual improvement society; while, apart from these, pleasant evenings, musical and the like, are arranged by various friends. It should be added, that evening-classes, under certificated teachers, are held in the various Homes, for the improvement of the inmates.

As to terms, the fixed charges are 4s. 6d. per week for food, plentiful if plain, and 1s. and upwards for accommodation. Even this minimum is, however, beyond the means of some young fellows just starting on small pay, and in such cases the committee make an allowance on behalf of these boys. The principle is thus maintained that it is for working boys who pay their way, while elasticity is introduced when really necessary.

Turning over the carefully kept case-book, I noticed many instances of the kind just mentioned. Two poor boys (13 and 14) are found deserted, one is earning 4s. 6d., the other has a chance of a place at a small wage to begin with;

BUT WHERE AND HOW ARE THEY TO LIVE?

Admitted, at first, on exceptional terms, these are now doing well. Another boy was brought to the door at ten at night by a working man. He had been turned out of doors by a stepmother, and though he had a situation, must walk the street all night, unless admitted. The compassionate fellow-workman kept him that night; next day he was admitted, and is still in the Home doing well. But a hundred similar facts might be cited, and I may not enlarge further. Suffice that any boy willing to conform to the reasonable rules is admitted, if he is in a situation or going to one; though, also exceptionally, situations are often found for unhappy boys. About the age of eighteen, when they ought to be able to do for themselves, they are expected to turn out to make room for others in greater need.

The boys come to the Homes in various ways. Some have come up from the country to make their way in London, others have been in orphanages or workhouse schools, while many are simply found in London. For example:—

One lad was found by a Christian worker in a very low lodging-house. He had been well brought up, and had been educated in France. On his return home his father's circumstances had become so altered that the poor boy was compelled to seek a situation and provide for himself. His wages were so low that he could not afford to pay for a better shelter than a common lodging-house. Unfortunately, he had innocently been directed to a very low one. Had he remained there the consequences would doubtless have been deplorable. Finding himself in such happy surroundings, he requested the superintendent to be allowed to bring to the Home his younger brother, who was in a similarly destitute and forlorn condition. Now both are in situations and doing well. They speak French fluently.

Speaking generally, the Homes for Working Boys are to a large extent self-supporting, but (besides rent, taxes, repairs, &c.) the imperative necessity of saving at a critical time young beginners, unable as yet to pay their own way, implies a certain need for financial support, and this no one who knows the sad case of such boys can possibly refuse. Apart, however, from this a special necessity has arisen.

THE OLDEST OF THESE HOMES,

Pelham House, in Spital-square, must imperatively be rebuilt. The lease expired at the end of 1890, and the ground landlord offered on reasonable terms the freehold, which, after careful consideration, the committee accepted. Towards the £9500 required for site, building, &c., the committee have raised over £2000 among themselves, and a few friends (including the late Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., who gave £250), looking to those who understand the urgency of the case to aid them in raising the remainder.

They are, they say, anxious to have a comfortable and suitable building rather than an ornamental one. They desire to accommodate as many boys as possible, having due regard to comfort and health. The larger the number of inmates the larger will be the weekly income from the boys' payments, and with eighty boys it is anticipated that the Home will be almost self-supporting.

The upper part of the building will be arranged in dormitories, some open, and some divided into cubicles, for the use of the elder boys, who will pay a higher rent in proportion. In the lower part of the house will be a dining-room, a meeting or reading room, and a moderate-sized gymnasium, as well as kitchen, bath-room, lavatory, &c.

The foundation stone will be laid in June next by H.R.H. Princess Christian. In providing and maintaining such Homes for friendless and struggling boys on the brink of danger, exposed to much temptation in this great city, the committee may surely reckon on the hearty sympathy and help of London's merchant princes, as well as of all in every part who know that from town and village boys going up to the metropolis find themselves sorely in need of just such paces of safe and happy shelter.

UNION HALL MISSION.—The thirty-second of the annual gatherings of this Mission were held at Union Hall, Carlisle-street, Edgware-road, on Thursday last. In the afternoon addresses were given by Dr. T. Neatby, Messrs. E. Ives, R. Paton, and J. E. Taylor. In the evening nearly three hundred people sat down to tea; afterwards the large hall was well-filled with friends and helpers. Mr. Robert Paton presided, and Mr. Robert Bilke gave a statement of the work during the year, regretting that the balance-sheet showed a deficiency of £61 2s. 1d. Addresses followed by the Chairman, Major Windham, Mr. T. B. Miller, and others.

SCUTARI MEDICAL MISSION AND HOME

Dr. and Mrs. Alexandrian continue their deeply interesting work, which is still full of vitality and promise. The fifth annual report states that during the past year our labours have been more widely extended among the Mohammedans than any others, though Jews, Greeks, and Armenians always attended in considerable numbers. Strange to say, Jews and Jewesses are the most indifferent; Greeks and Armenians are rather proud on account of their ancient Christian profession; but the Moslems hear the Word with warm interest and profound attention.

I once invited the Baptist minister of Pera to address my patients, who was so much taken with the eager attention of Moslems and others, that he said it was the most interesting audience he had ever addressed, and that this Mission was doing a more valuable work for the Lord than many ministers do through their pulpits. "This is Christ-like preaching," he said, "hence most suitable for Bible-lands. We cannot think of a better arrangement than this to reach Moslems and indifferentists." While he was speaking a few began to wipe their tears away, which moved the minister to prolong his address with fiery zeal, and so the service became a great blessing both to the hearers and the speaker.

Over five thousand of all ages have been attended to during the year in the dispensary, to all of whom the pure doctrine of Salvation, with the best medicine, has been supplied, and about four hundred in their own homes. Among these were some heartrending cases.

One morning I was called to see a patient. On arriving at the house I found a girl lying in a miserable room upon a bed hardly a yard long, half a yard wide, and three inches thick. She was suffering acutely from tubercular disease of the intestines, and had kept this painful bed for six months. She was reduced to a mere skeleton, and her breathing was short and quick. The only friend she had on the face of the earth was her old mother, who was blind of one eye, and the only diet the poor mother could supply to her dying child was some stale bread and a few olives. No medical man had ever seen her, and when we saw her her speech was intelligible, but only for a day. We did our best to provide some nourishing food and a comfortable bed for her, with the necessary medicines, but it was too late. She soon left all, and slept in the sweet arms of the Redeemer, I trust, as she expressed a desire to be with Jesus.

The story of the securing and opening of a new hall is full of interest, as told in the report; while of a most encouraging account is given, and that has already become fruitful for Christ. "Girls who were slaves to ill-temper and living in misery and sin when they entered, have, in a few months or a year's time, been altogether altered. Wartoohy was a selfish and ignorant girl; but now she is wonderfully changed; she has a ready heart to help any one, and tries to keep a pure conscience, and her daily life leaves no doubt in our minds that she is a truly converted girl. We have reason to expect a great deal of good from many of them in their future lives. Akaby, an intelligent and interesting girl, who is supported by the Misses Haig, is one of those who promise to be very helpful in the orphanage in a year or two. The number of the orphans at present is twenty-eight; they are of three nationalities, and from six different countries of Turkey."

DUBLIN.—The annual meeting of the Dublin White Cross Association has just been held in the Gregg Memorial Hall. Lord Plunket presided, and congratulated the association on the progress of the movement. The objects of the Association are threefold — firstly, purity among men; secondly, a chivalrous respect for womanhood; thirdly, a higher tone of public opinion in the matter of purity. A paper was read by Mr. Dix, and Rev. H. B. Kennedy, hon. sec., read the sixth annual report, which showed that considerable advance had been made during the past five years. Five new branches have been formed, and arrangements made for starting others. Twenty-three disorderly houses have been closed. Much has also been done in the way of prevention and rescue, and at tracing missing girls at the request of friends. M. E. A.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, APRIL 3.—REVELATION VI.

The Opening of the First Six Seals.—The seals seem to indicate the great features of the present age, so far as concerns the history of the world, viewed in relation to the Church and Advent of Christ. They are the vivid pictorial counterparts of Matt. xxiv. 6, 7. It is difficult to assign them to any specific portion of the history of the age, because they are the perpetually recurring features of all ages. The R.V. properly drops and see, 1, 3, 5, 7.

2. The white horse is emblematic of the progress of the Gospel of Peace, which is destined to lasting victory. This is assured, whatever else may happen. Amid all the sorrows and convulsions of human history, the Gospel of the Grace of God has continually been riding forth. 3. This typifies the wars, as the next does the famines and scarcity, which, from time to time, have visited the world. 6. Amid all the scarcity, it would seem that a Divine limitation were insisted upon, so that a "choenix" (two or three pints) should not cost more than a penny. God tempers mercy with judgment. Even the luxuries of life are spared for the refreshment of the sufferers. 8. Death by God's four agents, Ezek. xiv. 21. Hell is Hades (R.V.) "With death," better "with pestilence" (R.V. marg.).

9. The Martyr Host (Matt. xxiv. 9, 10).—The scene changes from earth to heaven, where we see another argument brought to bear on the King to hasten his advent. Every age has had its martyrs. The red line of blood has followed the history of mankind. As the blood of sacrifices was poured at the foot of the altar, so the souls of martyrs. 10. "How long, O Master." Such vengeance as they long for is surely like the Pentecostal blessing which vindicated the righteousness of the first Martyr, the Lord Jesus. 11. The full blessedness of the saints is not realised until the whole family is gathered (Heb. xi. 40).

12. Convulsion and Revolution (Matt. xxiv. 29-30).—The shaking of all things is a necessary preparation to the establishment of that Kingdom which cannot be shaken. The present age has been repeatedly rent by national and spiritual earthquakes, the unrest and chafing of human wills, before which the stoutest as well as the frailest have quailed. 16. How often men have thought that the great day had come, but it has still been postponed. How terrible its advent will be if its premonitory signs have been so awful. Let us shelter in the Rock of Ages, that we may not have to cry at last in vain for the shelter of the rocks and dens.

MONDAY, APRIL 4.—REVELATION VII.

Before times of great trial God prepares for the safety of his own people (Gen. vii. 1, xix. 16; Exodus xii. 13; Ezek. ix. 3-5; Matt. xxiv. 15, 16). What a majestic conception this is, and how comforting the thought that the winds are held by angels, and that the storm is beneath the Divine control. 2. God's people are not always safe out of trial, but they are kept in the midst of it. Sealed, i.e., the likeness of God stamped on yielded hearts (Eph. i. 13). 5-8. As Jews in ii. 9 signify those who are Jews inwardly (Rom, ii. 29), for this is a book of symbols (i. 1), so here the tribes of Israel in our view represent the elect—the Israel of God (Gal. vi. 16). 9. The multitude of the redeemed draws its contingents from all tribes and peoples and tongues, and the aggregate defies the power of human arithmetic, as the stars of heaven, and as the sand-grains of the sea. There is one focus on which they all converge—the throne, amidst which stands the Lamb. The palm-branch bespeaks their victory. 10. All praise for salvation is ascribed to God the Father, equally with the Lamb. This is the theology of the New Testament. 12. The blessing, the glory, &c., a sevenfold doxology. 14. When we stand perplexed before some great mystery, how comforting to look up and say, Thou knowest. The great tribulation; this term covers all the special trials to which all the followers of Jesus have been exposed during their earthly sojourn, in conflict with sin and Satan; but their sufferings for the Redeemer do not constitute their claim for salvation: that becomes theirs only through his precious blood. The washed robe is the emblem of the stainless soul, in which is neither spot, nor wrinkle, nor any such thing. This may be ours even here (iii. 4). 15. The Beatitude of the redeemed is their face-to-face fellowship with God, their perpetual and unbroken service, and their safety, for "He that sitteth on the throne shall spread his tabernacle over them." 16. This exquisite description of heaven is largely composed of negatives. There will be an exclusion of the adverse conditions of this life. Perfect satisfaction of the entire nature; no scorching trial; no fear of lion or wolf; no finality, because, under the guidance of the Lamb, they will visit an endless succession of "fountains of waters of life." 17. To no other hand will the Eternal God entrust the work of stanching the very sources of grief and removing each trace from the cheek.

TUESDAY, APRIL 5.—REVELATION VIII.

The Trumpets.—The trumpet is a martial weapon, and these visions have to do with the desolations by which the kingdoms of the earth are disintegrated and overthrown in anticipation of the setting up of that Kingdom which shall never be moved. 1. This silence corresponds to an interval which occurred in the Jewish service, when the musical instruments and singing which accompanied the first part of the service were hushed during the offering of incense (Psa. lxii. 1 marg.; Luke i. 21). 2. The seven angels, those of his presence-chamber. 3. As the Angel of the Covenant Jesus ministers at the Golden Altar, mingling with our prayers the sweet incense of his merit. 5. In the stern retributions of eternity the prayers of the redeemed receive as answer the judgment of their foes. Sooner or later God must avenge his own elect, who cry day and night unto Him. 7. The first four trumpets affect natural objects, the last three, the woe trumpets, affect men. The language is borrowed from the plagues of Egypt (Ex. vii. 19; ix. 24; x. 12, 21; xi. 18). The first plague is fire, "burnt up"; in the second water is turned into blood; the third is bitterness; the fourth darkness. All of these may stand for spiritual equivalents, or for those various agencies before which the most stable empires are afflicted, disintegrated, and destroyed.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6.—REVELATION IX.

This is one of the most difficult of interpretation of all John's visions. Many attempts have been made, none wholly satisfactory. But as all outward wars arise from the lusts within, and as all outward history springs from the human heart, we will look at this vision, not on the scale of nations, but of a man only. It may be that the thoughts thus obtained may assist in leading to the true outward solution. Read Matt. xv. 19; James iii. 6.

The fallen star, Satan, by his temptations opens the bottomless pit within us, the heart deceitful above all things. Then arises a smoke as of a great furnace—(compare Hosea vii. 4-7)—which darkens the sun and air (see Rom. i. 21; Acts xxvi. 18; 1 Peter ii. 9). The locusts typify the fleshly lusts which war against the soul (see Joel ii.).

Dr. Pusey, in his "Minor Prophets," speaks of the four kinds of locusts enumerated by Joel (i. 4), and quotes S. Greg. Mor. xxxiii. 65, p. 614, Oxf. Tr., as follows:—

> Morally, also, four chief passions desolate successively the human heart. For what is designated as the palmer-worm, which creeps with all its body on the ground, except it be lust, which so pollutes the heart which it possesses that it cannot rise up to the love of heavenly purity? What is expressed by the locust, which flies by leaps, except vain-glory, which exalts itself with empty presumptions? What is typified by the cankerworm, almost the whole of whose body is gathered into its belly, except gluttony in eating? What but anger is indicated by mildew, which burns as it touches?

Like scorpions, they sting—at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder (Prov. xxiii. 22). Only those men who have not the seal of God (Eph. i. 13; iv. 20) in their foreheads are hurt by them.

They are like horses prepared for battle, and as the horse carries his rider, so the lust carries the man (see Job xxxix. 19-25), who, throwing the reins on the neck of passion, is impetuously borne along.

Crowns like gold denote their despotic rule (Dan. ii. 37, 38; v. 19). With faces as of men, they speak us friendly as one of ourselves; they take human views of things, reason with us, persuade us, as for our good; as the old prophet did the man of God (1 Kings iii. 18). They fascinate us; they hold us, as women do, in the tresses of their hair (Cant. vii. 5, R.V.). But they tear us afterwards, as with lions' teeth. They are mail-proof against law and grace. No arrow of conviction can pierce the joints of their iron breastplates. The sound of their wings is as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle. Each several lust is like the war-horse in Job; but the great and terrible army of them, their despotic rule, their friendly faces and deceitful dalliance, their cruel teeth and iron breasts, their wings and wheels, their innumerable multitude and tumultuous noise:—well may the pitiful God beseech us as strangers and pilgrims to abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul (see Rom i.; Jas. iv. 1-3.)

This mighty and terrible army is generalled by superhuman experience and skill. Their Wellington is Abaddon, their Napoleon is Apollyon.

Sixth Trumpet (13-21).—This second woe differs from the former in that it is a direct infliction from the hand of God through the instrumentality of the four angels who are loosed. At the appointed hour, of the appointed day, of the appointed month, of the appointed year (see Dan. iv. 29, 31, 33). But in spite of all the plagues the survivors do not repent.

THURSDAY, APRIL 7.—REVELATION X.

1-4. The Covenant Angel—Christ. The rainbow upon his head, which in chapter iv. was seen encircling the throne. 2. The Scriptures are opened by his death and resurrection (Luke xxiv. 25-27, 44, 45). He claims earth and sea which He had redeemed. 3. Cried—against those who would destroy (or corrupt) the earth (xi. 18). 4. Seal up the thunders of the law, because He is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (Rom. x.).

> He has hushed the law's loud thunder;
> He has quenched Mount Sinai's flame.

5-7. God vindicates his people, and repents himself for his servants when He sees their power is gone, and no resource shut up or left (Deut. xxxii. 36). When He shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished (Dan. xii. 7). When the kingdom becomes the Lord's and his Christ's the mystery of God is finished (comp. Rev. x. 7 and xi. 15). The fall consisted in man acting on his own judgment and disobeying God. When his people are reduced to helpless dependence, and God in Christ reigns, all is made plain, the mystery is done.

8-11.—But this cannot be until the Gospel of the Kingdom has been preached for a testimony among all nations; then shall the end come. Therefore John, who is our brother and companion in the tribulation and Kingdom and patience in Jesus, is made in his vision to eat up the little book, for a sign to himself and all the servants of Jesus. "The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits" (2 Tim. ii. 6). Observe in Luke xxiv. how the opening of their understandings to understand the Scriptures is followed by preaching among all nations, after tarrying to be endued with power from on high.

FRIDAY, APRIL 8.—REVELATION XI.

1, 2. God distinguishes between the true and faithful, and the false and only-professing Church. The time of the Gentiles and the Beast is forty-two months—i.e., seven times six, a fulness of imperfection and labour, as seven times seven is fulness, completeness and rest. The same period, applied to the witnesses, is counted by days, for we are of the day; we pray for our daily bread. 3. Ye shall receive power and be witnesses unto Me (Acts i. 8). In sackcloth—And we are his witnesses, . . . rejoicing to be counted worthy to suffer shame for his name (Acts x. 32, 41).

4. The two olive-trees were Zerubbabel the Governor, and Joshua the High-priest (Zec. iv. 3, 11, 14), perhaps representing the Church as kings and priests. Lampstands holding forth the Word of life (Phil. ii. 15, 16). The church in chap. i. is symbolised as seven lampstands; the witnesses here only as two; yet every member of the Church should be a lightbearer.

5. Cp. ch. xix. 15; Hos. vi. 5; Rom. xii. 20.

6. Referring to Moses and Elijah. It might seem that such authority as this did not belong to this dispensation; but see Acts v. 1-11; xiii. 11; and the effect of prayer (Rev. viii. 3-5). 7. This has happened again and again. 8. Great city—Jerusalem, symbolic of degenerate Christianity or Christendom. 9, 10. A living testimony torments them that dwell on the earth, but when the life is gone out of it they keep its dead form. 11-13. But God vindicates his witnesses and judges their enemies, who, if not converted, are affrighted, and give Him glory.

14. The second woe ended with ch. ix., but its ending is more appropriately stated here as introductory to the third woe.

15-19.—The third woe is the judgment of the quick and dead more fully unfolded in succeeding visions.

SATURDAY, APRIL 9.—REVELATION XII.

1-6.—This vision is retrospective. The woman is the Church, not of Israel only (Isa. ix. 6, 7), but of all time, as symbolised by Eve (Gen. iii. 15). The child is Jesus. 3, 4. The dragon. Satan, the prince of this world in the Roman period. To devour (Matt. ii. 13). 5, 6. A male son—a son of man's sex—emphatic. This Son, caught up in resurrection to God's throne, is God's allusive contrast to the pagan worship of the male (Ezek. xvi. 17 mar.) This is the true Hero (as against all the deified dead men) who is to rule all nations with a rod of iron. 7-12. Satan, as the Accuser, had been an incubus in heaven. When Jesus entered, by virtue of his own blood, the Accuser's occupation was gone. It was fitting that Michael should cast him out, for he was the great prince who stood for Daniel's people (the Jews), and it was they who, under their legal dispensation, had been in bondage through fear of death (10, 11). Now is come (cp. Heb. ii. 14). They overcame him because of the blood of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. 12. He still has access to the heavenly places (Eph. vi. 12), but not to heaven itself, where Christ appears in the presence of God for us (Heb. ix. 24). A short time—compared with his past existence, and with the coming eternity.

13, 14. Eagle (Ex. xix. 4; Deut. xxxii. 11; Psa. xxxvi. 7).—The eagle's wings are God's wings. "What is good, what is Divine, has not in this world its Canaan. It is still in the wilderness, but it is preserved there by the loving care of the Most High." —Milligan. 15, 16. Floods of ungodly men, swallowed up like Korah (Ps. xviii. 4; Num. xvi. 32). 17. The rest of her seed—the faithful remnant, the witnesses of ch. xi.; the saints of xiii. 7; xiv. 12.

PASTOR W. STOTT having announced his intention of conducting missions in various places, writes us (too late for this week's issue) his reasons for now accepting the pastorate of the Baptist church at Battersea.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 10.

The King in Zion—Psalm ii. 1-12.

Golden Text: Verse 12.

The authorship of this Psalm has been attributed to different persons. Of its theme there need be no doubt. Lowth says, "The establishment of David upon his throne, notwithstanding the opposition made to it by his enemies, is the subject of the Psalm. David sustains in it a twofold character, literal and allegorical." As applied to David literally, the language of the Psalm would be too exaggerated. That its chief reference is to the Messiah is evident from the New Testament quotations from it (Acts iv. 25, 26; xiii. 33; Heb. i. 5). It is being fulfilled now in the establishment of the Kingdom of God, in spite of the opposition of men; and is yet to have a more literal fulfilment when Christ comes to inaugurate his millennial reign. The Psalm divides itself into four parts of three verses each.

The Opposition of Men (1-3). The description is very graphic. First the multitudes combine (1), and with unrestrained fury rush against the kingdom of God. If majorities must rule what chance has the anointed King against such a company? Then their leaders (2) appear, and act with not less malice, but with greater deliberation. The zeal and persistence and unity of the wicked in seeking their evil purpose are an example and a reproof to the righteous.

The question "why?" is significant. Nothing is more irrational than rebellion against God. (1) It is without any just cause. For why should men refuse such a yoke as that of Christ? His are "the bands of love and the cords of a man" (Hos. xi. 4, Matt. xi. 28-30). To refuse his authority is to subject ourselves to one more painful by far. (2) It is utterly futile. Rebels against God are attempting "a vain thing." Who has resisted Him and prospered? Pharaoh tried it—did he succeed? Herod, Pilate, the Gentiles, and the people of Israel tried it (Acts iv. 27, 28)—did they succeed? A medal was struck by Diocletian bearing the inscription "The name of Christians being extinguished." In Spain two monumental pillars were raised to commemorate the overthrow of "the superstition of Christ." Did they not imagine a vain thing? As well attempt, like Canute, to control the waves of the sea, as to resist the accomplishment of the Divine purpose. Every one is either for or against God. If you are against Him, is it not wise to at once cease from such an unequal warfare?

The Derision of God (4-6). God laughs, not in pleasure, but because He knows the impotence of man's opposition to Him. Matthew Henry says, "Sinners' follies are the just sport of God's infinite wisdom and power, and those attempts of the kingdom of Satan which in our eyes are formidable, in his are despicable." It is mercy towards the rebellious that prompts Him first to allow their fury to spend itself, then to trouble them with his Word. If He sought nothing more than their defeat and destruction, how easily could He accomplish that. But He neither smites them nor is turned aside from his purpose of blessing. The King is established upon his throne, so that they who now oppose Him may yet share the results of his beneficent reign.

Learn two lessons: (1) Be not discouraged by the apparent triumph of the wicked. If God can view it calmly and without alarm, we, who have much less at stake than He, can be confident too. (2) Let not the opposition of men hinder your effort. While they rebel against Him they need Him. Continue your testimony until He finds a throne in their heart.

The Divine Decree (7-9). The Son speaks here and proclaims God's decree concerning Himself as King. The opposition of man may well be silent before this, for the council of God shall stand. Certain overthrow awaits all those whose devices are against the Divine decree.

The Person of the King (7). The Sonship of Christ is eternal (Jno. xvii. 5). It was attested by the Father at his incarnation (Heb. i. 6), during his life (Matt. iii. 17; xvii. 5), and especially at his resurrection (Acts xiii. 33; Rom. i. 4). It was then that He became "the firstborn among many brethren." The dignity of his person increases the guilt of those who rebel against Him.

The Possession of the King (8). "It was a custom among kings to give favoured ones whatever they might ask" (Esther v. 6; Matt. xiv. 7). It is important to remember that the Son receives his possessions in answer to prayer. What emphasis this fact gives to his teaching upon prayer.

The Power of the King (9). It will be used for the certain overthrow of those who continue in rebellion against Him (Rev. ii. 27; xix. 15). There is unmistakable reference to his second coming, when enemies shall be destroyed, and his own kingdom established (Luke xix. 27; Dan. ii. 34, 35, 44).

A Merciful Exhortation (10-12). "Be wise." Ignorance and folly underlie all ungodliness. Truest wisdom consists in fearing God. Note the word "therefore!" All that is terrible in this Psalm bids men cease to war against God. Yet note how fear and joy are combined (11). A devout life is not an unhappy life. The joy of the Lord is not frivolity. Deepest seriousness may unite with fullest happiness. [282]

Kiss the Son (12). It is the token of subjection (1 Sam. x. 1.); of religious worship (1 Kings xix. 18); and of reconciliation. We are urged to this by a threat and a promise. Choose your portion. Will you perish from the way (Psa. i. 6); or will you be blessed with those who trust Him (Jer. xvii. 7, 8)?

Evangelistic Notes.

Harrold.—Rev. H. Trueman, of Chesham, has concluded a mission here. Many persons who have not attended a place of worship for years have attended the services, and several have professed conversion.

Mr. H. Powers has been holding missions in Bulwell, Hucknal, Newark, Nottingham, Lisburn (Ireland), Cheadle-heath, Crook, and Hunwick, and the power of God has been manifest, both sinners and backsliders having been awakened.

Rev. W. Haslam has just held a mission attended with much blessing at Clapham. In the afternoons addresses were given to believers, when Mr. Haslam dwelt much on the necessity of speaking to others, and telling them of the good things the Lord has done for us. Mr. Haslam's next mission will be at Richmond, April 2 to 11. M. P. C.

Coalsnaughton, Tillicoultry. — Mr. Charles Galletly, of the Evangelisation Society, has just had a five weeks' mission in this village. On the closing night all who had given themselves to Christ during that time were asked to stand up, and 81 responded. The work still goes on, and some of the most careless in the place have professed conversion.

Martin (Wilts).—We are glad to learn that this village (lately mentioned in these pages) enjoys the earnest ministry of Rev. Eardley W. Michell, that the Gospel is faithfully preached, while at special services held in the schoolroom addresses are delivered by godly and gifted preachers—this week, for example, Captain Henslow, and next, Miss Gorham. Hence while many villages are neglected spiritually, this cannot be said of Martin.

Mr. John Elliott, who has spent several years evangelising in Wiltshire, holding services in tents, barns, public halls, &c., has been requested to undertake similar labours in Devonshire, where it is felt such special work is much needed. For this purpose he hopes to use a tent belonging to the Evangelisation Society during the summer months. The first mission will be at South Molton in connection with the Y.M.C.A., and will be held in the Assembly Rooms, commencing on Sunday next. The tent work will be started in May.

Aberdeenshire Ploughmen.—A friend writes: In Aberdeenshire there has been a great attraction for a large class of working-men in the preaching of Rev. Norman Macfarlane, who has been addressing crowds of agricultural labourers, who, though very hard to reach, have shown an eager interest in his services. While freely exposing many evils and touching upon life at many points, the grand doctrines of grace are the main part of his preaching. As he said lately in a sermon to farm workers, "the life of Christ is a big white lighthouse rising high on the stormy cliff, but his death is the blazing lamp at the top that flashes its piercing light over the seas of darkness."

West Kent.—A series of Evangelistic Services and Bible Readings has been held at the Baptist churches, Plumstead, Sidcup, and Deptford, by Revs. F. B. Meyer and F. C. Spurr. The meetings have been well attended, have proved a great help to Christians, and have been the means of bringing many undecided ones to Christ. Rev. D. Honour writes: "We rejoice very much that our brethren visited Octavius-street. A good number professed to find Jesus, and all God's people speak of untold blessing received. It has been a soul-quickening time. I believe all the churches of the district will reap a rich harvest as a result of these services." R. E. C.

Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes has concluded a successful mission at Redcar. The services were conducted under the auspices of the local Nonconformist Association, and were held in the Central Hall. The mission was inaugurated by a children's service, when upwards of four hundred children assembled from the Nonconformist Sunday-schools; three other meetings specially for the young were held. On Sunday evening a large company gathered to hear the missioner, and through the week numbers assembled and listened with close attention to the Word. On Saturday afternoon Mr. Hallowes gave a special address on "The Work of the Holy Spirit," to lay preachers and Christian workers. And on Monday evening a meeting was held in the Congregational Church to advocate the claims of foreign missions.

Spitalfields Lodging House Band. — The Superintendent and members of this Band often come in contact with young women who, by giving way to temptations, have been forced to take refuge in the common lodging houses. Some of these cases are very hopeful, but, on account of not having homes to send them to, many drift away and become irreclaimable. We shall be glad to hear from any Christian ladies willing to take one of these under their charge. The Superintendent would investigate each case, and place the facts before the ladies willing to help. We have now under our care two young women who, we believe, are sincere, but if some employment or home cannot be found for them, will, we fear, drift away and probably be lost for ever.—G. F. Ward, Hebrew Conference Hall, Old Montague-street, Whitechapel, E

Temperance Notes.

Mrs. Wynford Philipps and Sir Wilfrid Lawson have consented to speak at the annual meeting of the B.W.T.A., in St. James's Hall, on May 5.

Mr. Justice Grantham, speaking from the bench at Durham Assizes, said that "more than half the crime in that county was caused by drink."

At a recent meeting of the Caterham Valley B.W.T.A., Miss Orme, of the London Temperance Hospital, spoke of the advantages of total abstinence in illness.

"If," says the Union Signal, "one would form an idea of what the saloons are doing, let him visit the police-court; in almost every case liquor is the cause of arrest.

A successful seven days' Gospel Temperance Mission, under the auspices of the Tunbridge Wells Temperance Society, has been conducted by Mr. Thomas Barker.

Temperance conferences have been held in various towns and districts in Ireland under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church, and are expected to prove the means of doing much good.

Judge Kimball, in a recent address before the Washington Y.M.C.A., averred that, year in and year out, the great majority of those who came before him were brought there by liquor.

At the last quarterly conference of the B.W.T.A., Mrs. Phillips said that—"As Temperance workers; we must not be discouraged by seeming failures, remembering that we must be defeated till we conquer, and that our opponents will conquer till defeated."

"Talk about the evangelisation of the world in this century! (says a West African missionary). The world will never be evangelised so long as this death-dealing liquid is manufactured and sold by Christian(?) nations and shipped by the millions of gallons to heathen shores."

Some one recently put this question to Whittier: "What, in your opinion, is the secret of sustained earnestness in a great cause?" He replied, "If a man once has had a true vision of the necessity of exertion and labour, in behalf of Temperance, freedom, or any great cause, he can never lose that feeling."

It is stated that an appeal is to be entered against the recent decision of the Queen's Bench in the case of Smith v. the Justices of Cavan, in which the court issued a mandamus directing the justices not to refuse to grant a transfer of a licence to the prosecutor on the ground that there were already a sufficient number of licences in the district.

A movement has been begun in Liverpool for preventing the supply of drink to children under sixteen, whether wanted for consumption on or off the premises. The desire, in fact, is to interdict young people from entering the public-house at all. A society has been formed under the designation of the "League for the Prohibition of the Sale of Intoxicants to Children," and a meeting in pursuance of its purpose is to be held shortly.

The twentieth anniversary of the District Band of Hope Union in Leeds was a brilliant success. The Town Hall was crowded. Mr. Moses Atkinson, President of the Union, occupied the chair, and addresses were given by Rev. C. Garrett and others. The Union does good work in the interests of Temperance. It sends speakers to various Bands of Hope, issues a monthly paper, and has just engaged Mr. Thompson to devote his whole time to the Union.

The tenth annual meeting of the Tabernacle Total Abstinence Society was held last week in the lecture-hall of the Tabernacle, the chair being occupied by Colonel H. M'Gregor, C.B. Addresses were delivered by Mr. Stubbs, Rev. Canon Leigh, and Mr. William Noble, who denounced Christians who took the money of publicans to build chapels and churches as being highly inconsistent. The abstinence question was the burning one of the hour, and no doubt the flowing tide was with them.

Temperance reformers may take heart from the progress of the struggle with the liquor saloons in America. In the State of Massachusetts Local Option is in force. Some five years ago a vote was taken in Mr. Moody's native place, Northfield, when there was a majority of fifty for license. The anti-liquor people commenced to agitate, and two or three years ago managed to get a majority of six for no license. This year's vote was recently taken, with the result that ninety-five voted for no license and only sixteen for license. This is a sample of what may be done by persistent education of public sentiment.

The most defiant and destructive power on the earth (says The Lutheran Observer) is the liquor power. It enslaves nations, perverts governments, degrades homes, and seeks to entrench itself even in the sanctuary. This power is subtle, deceptive, persistent, insatiable, and when compared with other human powers, well-nigh omnipotent. In this land there is but one power that is stronger, and that is the Christian Church. If this monster evil, this giant of iniquity, is to be overthrown, it must be done by the Christian Church. Even railroads and large corporations are many of them declining to take into their employ those who use intoxicating liquors. Shall the Church allow a lower standard of moral obligation than that which commerce demands solely for business consideration and pecuniary gain?

Letters to the Editor.

LORD'S DAY OBSERVANCE.

Dear Sir,—I think the Lord's Day question ought to be taken up by Christians. Is it right to encourage Sunday travelling? Do not those who are engaged during the week look forward to Sunday as their right? They should then be released from their daily duties, to engage themselves more especially in the Lord's work. Such is surely the will of God concerning all.

Putting on one side altogether the observance of the Jewish Sabbath, which, as far as I understand, the Church has had no part in—"Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty"—let us not abuse our liberty, but from motives of love let us secure to all the opportunity of hearing the Gospel.—Faithfully yours, Sissie Steele.

Birmingham.

Dear Sir,—For myself, I am fully with your correspondent A. B. Clementson; but, unfortunately, I find myself under the protection (shall I say?), or teaching, of two "travelling ministers," who, with a number of local preachers many years my seniors, always take train on Sunday to their appointments. When I dare to differ from them, I am told that we are not under law, but under grace. One told me to go and fulfil all the other Jewish laws, if I did the commandments.

I am sorry to have to admit, that while in my own mind I am fully persuaded, I am unable to handle the questions or arguments of my opposers with anything like satisfaction to them or myself. Perhaps some of your correspondents will kindly help me.—Yours faithfully, Exhorter.

Dear Sir,—The question of Sunday Travelling, which has been raised in your correspondence columns is, I think, one which deserves far more attention on the part of Christians than is generally given to it.

I suppose it is impossible for all to see "eye to eye" on the subject, many thinking that in order to get good, or do good, Sunday travelling is at least permissible. To my mind, however, the point at issue is chiefly arguable from the broad general standpoint that God intended the Sabbath for all men, and not merely for the great majority of men, and that consequently it is not right for Christian people to deprive others of its benefits, even in order that they may carry on the Lord's work.

Christ declared that "the Sabbath was made for man" (i.e., for the whole race.) It is thus his inalienable birthright and possession, and this being so, it seems to me that nothing short of absolute necessity can justify Christians in Sunday travelling, or indeed in doing anything which results in their brother man being robbed in whole or in part of the Day of Rest. "Works of necessity" on the Sabbath Christ fully recognised, but surely no necessity is laid upon Christians to make the free and constant use of Sunday conveyances which they now do.

The statement which is often made that the trains, &c., would run whether Christians travelled by them or not is one which cannot be seriously advanced as an argument any more than the assertion that the men are fully aware that Sunday labour is involved in their taking situations as railway and tramcar employes, &c., can justify Christians in availing themselves of the opportunities thus given for Sunday travelling. If "Esau" is willing to "sell his birthright for a mess of pottage" (and the temptation to do it in these hard times is very great), let Christians at any rate have no part in the miserable bargain, and see to it that their hands are clean in the matter.

The humblest of those engaged in Sunday traffic has as clear a right to the Day of Rest as I, and surely there is nothing in the Bible which entitles me to take it from him. We cannot compel him to spend it in a Christian way, but we can at least refrain from depriving him of the opportunity of so spending it.

This naturally necessitates the exercise of personal sacrifice and self-denial; but do not these virtues lie at the root of the Christian life and character?

I feel that much more could be said in opposition to the practice of Sunday travelling, which is now so widely prevalent among Christians, but I fear I have already too greatly trespassed upon your space.—Yours truly, H. R. B.

Addiscombe.

Sir,—The first argument usually brought against the practice of Sunday travelling, whether engaged in necessarily or for pleasure, is, that "it is contrary to the Law of Moses." Then when it is shown that this either proves too much or too little, it is averred that obedience to an iron legal mandate is not expected, but that the new dispensation merely requires subjection to a moral principle. The third argument is as to expediency.

With regard to the first argument, as so few Evangelical Christians admit the position, it is only necessary to say that, if the first day of the week is to be observed in place of the Jewish Sabbath, then not only is travelling on Sunday by vehicle out of the question, but travelling on foot as well, and all other, even necessary, work is prohibited, not to speak of keeping the Sabbatic year, &c.

As to the second argument, there are more objections to it than space will allow me to point out. But a very important one is, Shall aught be allowed to hinder the clear and urgent command to carry the Gospel to the unconverted? One of your correspondents says, "If we sought the teaching of the Holy Spirit, more blessings would be showered on us." But the Holy Spirit never teaches apart from the Word, and nothing as to travelling on Sunday, by vehicle or otherwise, or any general teaching covering such travelling, is to be found in the Scriptures. There is not even a suggestion as to an "unrepealed moral law." The whole of the teaching is deduced from passages which relate solely to the Jewish Sabbath, and these deductions are all brought to bear, not against Sunday labour generally, but against "Sunday travelling." The New Testament teaches freedom, and the preaching of the Gospel at all costs. This middle position is really legalism with a glove on its iron hand.

The last argument is expediency. "Drivers and conductors say, If it were not for parsons and religious people riding on Sunday, we should at least get the morning off." This is untrue. Christians are reproached, and will be, just as much whether they ride, or walk, or stay at home. The only true way to look at the matter is thus: If the train, 'bus, or cab is running, I am free to travel. The lamps are lit on Sunday, our churches and chapels are lighted and warmed by gas, all entailing Sunday labour, and no sound Scriptural argument, I judge, has been brought against them. Further, there are thousands of clergy and pastors whom Sabbatarians are listening to, that do their hardest work on Sundays.

The speech of those who disagree with "Sunday travelling" often betrays the inconsistency of legality in heart. I know some rich Christians who will not allow a preacher to come to their house from London on Sunday. He must come on Saturday and leave on Monday; but when they have him there they care not how he labours, Sunday notwithstanding. They march him to two meetings in their hall, and between these they expect him to walk three miles to a village to take another meeting, and then walk home again; and this in rain, wind, storm, frost, or what not. And they have strong horses in their stable that it would be God-service to lend the preacher, and spare him his wearying task, undertaken after a week of hard toil at his business to earn his bread.

The first day of the week holds a peculiar place in Scripture, and has the most precious and sacred associations. Thank God for such a day! No time for worldliness, no time for luxurious rest, nor riding (or walking) to distant places to enjoy the pleasures and excitement of eloquence. But a time for worship, self-denial, and obedience, for it was on this day that the Risen One said to the fearful, stay-at-home disciples, "As the Father hath sent Me, even so send I you."—Yours faithfully,

F. W. Pitt.

EMIGRATION TO AUSTRALIA.

Several years ago, when labour in England was in a most depressed condition and men were out of employment by the thousand, I was led to take an interest in emigration, and in 1885, through my personal friends in Canada, work was found for a large number of men, who were carefully selected from the ranks of the unemployed. In after years the work increased to such an extent that it was necessary for me to make two visits to Canada, for although I had lived in that country for ten years, and had travelled more than 120,000 miles in connection with my missionary labours, I felt it was necessary to reorganise with a view to the extension of the work. This I had no difficulty in doing, and, the fact that in the following few years a very large number of men were placed in employment is an evidence of the success of this method.

In relation to Australia I have always felt some difficulty, owing to the cost of passage and the lack of correspondents to whose care emigrants might be sent. I have pleasure, however, in now informing those interested in well-directed emigration, that I have lately returned from Australasia, having appointed correspondents in all the Southern Colonies, including Tasmania and New Zealand. Emigration to Australia must be conducted with great caution. At present things are not very encouraging, and it would be utter folly for any man to abandon a living here, however precarious, on the mere chance of bettering his condition in Australia, unless, indeed, he had a definite promise of work, or were going to friends who could provide him with a home until he found employment.

That Australia has been "the Paradise of the working-men" few will deny, but the exclusive policy that would keep it forever for the Australians is as short-sighted as it is selfish, for no country can progress without population. Those desiring information or advice may communicate with me or call upon me at my office, 36, Lime-street, E.C.

March 21, 1892.

REV. B. SENIOR will ere long leave Surrey Chapel, where he has laboured hard and well; feeling unable longer to bear the burden and strain involved. He removes to West Brighton.

OBITUARY.

MISS EMILY TANNER, C.I.M., WENCHOW.

We regret to hear of the death, on Tuesday, February 8, of Miss E. Tanner, of Winchester, who sailed for China in November, 1890, in connection with the C.I.M., and was placed with Mrs. Stott, of Wenchow. Some five months ago, when walking on the city wall, a strong gust of wind blew her over, and in the fall one arm sustained serious fractures. She was taken to Shanghai, to the house of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Taylor, where she received the best medical care and nursing. After consultation with two skilful surgeons, it was found necessary to amputate the arm. With her full consent the arm was removed, while many pleaded for her in prayer. But her work was done. All went well for a few hours, but towards evening she became rapidly worse, and gently passed away.

PROFESSOR JULES DE LAUNAY.

We regret to announce the death of Professor de Launay, of Paris. He was brought up in the Church of Rome, and while parading the catacombs with Jesuit companions, realised the simplicity of the faith of the early Christians. Boldly renouncing the errors of the Papal system, he went to America, and after a period of professorial work entered the pastoral office. He subsequently returned to Paris, the city of his birth, as a Christian missionary, and his labours were attended with blessing to many. We gave his portrait and sketch on June 17, 1887. In England and America Professor de Launay was well known for his lectures on the Catacombs of Rome, whereby he at once enlightened Papists and instructed Protestants regarding the primitive faith. A Paris correspondent writes: "Dr. de Launay has left a wife and two young children entirely unprovided for. He succumbed to pneumonia following upon influenza. He lived for God and the faith of Christ."

The Abbey-street Mission.

In the dense and dark district of Bethnal-green, many good workers are endeavouring to witness for Christ, and relieve the suffering around them. Amongst these the old Abbey-street Sunday and Ragged School Mission and Institute has its own special sphere, and is rendering good service. The Sunday-schools and Bible-classes have been remarkably well attended, and many from these have united themselves to the Christian Church. A good work is going on amongst young men and young women, as also in the working-men's Bible-class.

The Christian Band, somewhat analogous to the Christian Endeavour Society, holds weekly meetings, and these have been the means of leading out many to work and witness for Jesus. The Sunday-evening Ragged-school has lately proved most encouraging.

Owing to the severe weather and the distress in the district, the free breakfast provided for really starving children before going to school, has been thronged with hungry little ones, of whom we read in the latest report: The condition of the children is, in many cases, most distressing; scarcely any clothes to cover them, and quite shoeless; their pinched and pale faces tell their own story. Hundreds of these children, we know, would be without food all day if it was not for this timely meal. In some cases the children are brought to the breakfasts by their parents, so that they, with their little ones, might receive the early meal, there being nothing at home; thus helping them in a time of difficulty and distress during the winter months.

Another useful branch is the Holiday Home opened three years ago at Pitsea, and removed last year to a larger home. Here many little ones have found health and spirits, and many this year, it is hoped, will enjoy its benefits.

We believe these earnest and busy workers are greatly in need of help. Communications should be made to Mr. Benjamin Wire, 50, King Edward-street, Hackney, E., from whom also copies of the new report may be had.

MR. EDWARD HURDITCH has just concluded a successful series of evangelistic meetings at Bignold Hall, Forest-gate. The meetings have been well attended. Christians have been greatly stirred and others have been led to decide for Christ. He will be glad of the prayers of fellow Christians for his month's work in Belfast.—J.H.C.

THE SOLDIERS' HOME.—The second anniversary meeting in connection with this Home in Buckingham Palace-road was lately held at the Grosvenor Hall, Mr. Alexander M'Arthur, M.P., in the chair. Rev. R. W. Allen presented a report, which stated that the home had been very successful during the past year, and had been largely frequented. Major Smith, speaking on the temperance question, pointed out that the Indian Army contained no less than nineteen thousand total abstainers, and expressed a hope that they would soon see a British Army Temperance Association on unsectarian lines. One battalion of the Guards contained 535 abstainers. Sir G. H. Chubb, treasurer, wished it to be known that they had to raise about two hundred pounds per annum, in addition to the income of the home, in order to keep it going.

The Book World.

Story Books.—The Orphans of Merton Hall is a capital story of village life by Emily Brodie. (Religious Tract Society). Much Coin Much Care, by Rev. T. S. Millington, M.A., is an animated illustration of a patent fact. (1s. 6d. "Home Words" Office.)

Hand-book of the Book of Common Prayer. By Rev. H. M'Neile, M.A. 1s. 6d. Nisbet. Evangelical adherents of the Church of England will find this little work full of historical and explanatory information, and expressing their own views on most controverted matters.

Parting Memorial of John James Bonar, D.D. (Greenock: James MacKelvie and Sons.) All too brief and fragmentary this memorial of a devoted life. It consists chiefly of sermons preached by personal friends, and while these are full of interest, they can but pave the way for the more complete biography we yet hope to see.

The Christian Year.—Messrs. Bagster have published a pocket edition of Keble's celebrated work. (1s. 6d). The collects from the Book of Common Prayer are added, and the notes placed in an appendix at the end. The printing and binding are tasteful in the extreme, and as a "Christian classic" the book will be heartily welcomed by most.

Christian Pharisees and Other Poems. By John Bate. (Kensit.) These are poems with a purpose. The inconsistencies and reproaches of the present time are depicted in vigorous language in the long poem which supplies the title. The miscellaneous pieces breathe sound evangelical doctrine, and some of them are well suited for recitation.

The Merchant's Children. By Eleanor Stredder. (T. Nelson and Sons.) This story of two English children, who, going with pitying hearts after a poor neglected Chinese baby, get lost among river thieves, but after many adventures are found and brought home, has much interest for young folk, and illustrates admirably the life of the poorest classes in China.

Life Abundant, and Other Poems. By Sarah G. Stock. (Shaw.) A choice collection of pieces by a charming writer. Poems for sacred seasons and missionary hymns are among the gems of the volume, which is characterized by an intense spirituality. The pages are calculated to inspire hope in despairing hearts, and to speak of rest and peace to such as are weary and troubled in soul.

Mr. Holness's London Series of Penny Life Stories form attractive and wholesome reading for young and old. Over forty have been published, and all are admirably illustrated. Two bright shilling volumes are: Rose, Robin, and Little May, a story of country life, by Mrs. Drewson; and The Wicket Gate and Some Who Found It, by H. N., a book that should prove helpful to many in finding peace with God.

Prayers for the Home. A month's cycle of morning and evening family worship, with some occasional prayers. By H. C. G. Moule, M.A. (Seeley and Co.) The esteemed author of this work does not wish to discourage personal and extempore prayer; his endeavour is to render help to some in the observance of regular united worship. Evangelical members of the Church of England will specially value the volume, in the compilation of which spiritual discrimination has been exercised, and earnest, practical purpose ever kept in view.

Under the title of Follow Me (D. Bryce and Son, Glasgow), our esteemed friend, Mr. W. T. McAuslane, has prepared and published a loving tribute to the memory of his only son who died two years ago, soon after he had crossed the threshold of his life-work as a minister of the Gospel. The biographical sketch reveals many a pathetic touch of paternal fondness, but the son well deserved to be thus remembered. The outline sermons and other products of his pen show great promise, intellectually and spiritually. We trust the little volume will have a wide-spread mission among British youths.

A Gentle Life. Notes from Diary of Leila Roberts, of Manchester. Edited by A. M. Page. (Manchester, W. Neill.) The subject of this fragmentary memoir has many sweet traits of character, and though dying at the early age of 17, displayed many truly Christian graces. The book is too exclusively introspective to be, in our judgment, strengthening and bracing. The peculiarities of Wesleyan teaching are very prominent. Those who knew Miss Roberts, and those whose activity is hindered by frail health, may learn from one who was > Content to fill a little space,

> So Christ was glorified.

America and the Americans. A Narrative of a Tour in the United States and Canada, with Chapters on American Home Life. By Alexander Craib, F.S.A. Alexander Gardner. These are entertaining pages from the pen of a keen observer. Much is said of religious and philanthropic work; conversations are recorded, and incidents narrated. Mr Craib's visit was paid several years ago, when Rev. Henry Ward Beecher was yet alive. We do not always agree with the author's judgment; yet we do not doubt that those who know Canada and the United States will enjoy his book; and those who contemplate travelling in those spacious lands will do well to read their guide-books in the light of these interesting and instructive pages.

The Problem of Immortality. By E. Petavel, D.D. Translated from the French by Frederick Ash Freer. (10s. Elliot Stock.) This is the English edition of a work which has excited considerable attention in France and Switzerland. Sublime as it is, the theme has ever been the subject of human speculation, but we rejoice to find it fully solved in the Gospel of Him who "brought life and immortality to light. Dr. Petavel's contention is that immortality is not inherent in man, but is a gift offered to all in the Gospel. This is the view commonly designated "Conditional Immortality." It is fair to say that the pages display much learning and research in the fields of Theology and Philosophy; and that Universalism, which in its several forms is so seductive to-day, finds in Dr. Petavel an uncompromising opponent.

The Genesis of Genesis. By Benjamin Wisner Bacon. (2 dollars 50. Student Publishing Company, Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.) This work professes to be "a study of the documentary sources of the first book of Moses in accordance with the results of critical science." There is no more authentic statement of the case of the Higher Criticism, for by means of several diverse types Mr. Bacon shows at a glance the "processes and results of Pentateuch analysis." We do not believe in the method, and have no sympathy with its outcome. Yet the author has doubtless done a good service by illustrating in this manner the criticism in which he so thoroughly believes. We are satisfied that it will follow into well-merited discredit and contempt other literary theories which, in effect if not in outward form, have been hostile to Holy Writ.

Christ Crucified. Remarkable Sermons preached (from the the same text, 1 Cor. i. 23) by Rowland Hill and C. H. Spurgeon, the former at the opening of Surrey Chapel in 1783, and the latter at the opening of the New Surrey Chapel in 1888. Both discourses are of full weight, and we thank Rev. B. Senior, the pastor of the church, for the treat afforded by their publication. Surely the preacher's duty has never been urged with more cogency and force than in these pages, wherein, moreover, the Gospel is defined with a precision that cannot but delight evangelical souls. There are portraits of the famous preachers, and in an introduction Mr. Senior says he desires to publish a hundred thousand copies of the booklet. We trust friends will assist him to do this, and that the sermons will have a large circulation by free distribution. (3d. Passmore and Alabaster.)

"A Godly Seed," is a thoughtful discourse by Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe, preached on behalf of the Society for the Rescue of Young Women and Children. (1d. From the Offices of the Society, 79, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.)

The "Finger Post" Series of handbills, issued from the Gospel Depôt, Exeter, may be had from Partridge and Co. (100 copies in a packet for 6d.) Each bill gives Scripture statements and invitations on the subject of personal salvation.

How Do I Know that the Bible is True? is a sound and useful booklet, belonging to a striking series which have had a very large circulation. The author generously devotes the proceeds to the support of Christian agencies. (6d. per doz. Nisbet and Co.)

Precious Portions is a booklet giving extracts from addresses to believers, by Robert C. Chapman, of Weston-super-Mare. No one who has heard of the author needs to be told that the matter is of a highly instructive order. Our only regret is that the pages were not many instead of few. (Hawkins.)

Willing's (late May's) British and Irish Press Guide is a very useful manual. The nineteenth annual issue, just published, is a concise and comprehensive index to the Press of the United Kingdom, and, with other information, gives lists of the principal colonial and foreign journals. (1s. Willing, 162, Piccadilly, W.)

Theosophy and Christianity; or, Occultism Contrasted with Revelation, is the title of a paper read before the Medico-Chirurgical Society, Andersonian College, Glasgow, by F. J. E. Lakshman Rao, Mysore, India. The pages are a statement of essential truth, as well as a warning against dangerous error. (J. E. Hawkins.)

Gypsy Children; or, a Stroll in Gypsydom, with Songs and Stories. By George Smith of Coalville. 6d. From the Author, The Cabin, Crick, Rugby. The curious, as well as the philanthropic, will find these pages attractive. The songs are set to music, and Gypsydom is described with unvarnished simplicity by one who has long been the advocate of the gypsy's best interests.

In connection with Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh's Anti-Infidel Tract Enterprise, 70, King's-cross-road, W.C., two striking pamphlets have been published. The Coming Scramble, by Rev. F. C. Fowler, M.A., dealing with Atheism and Socialism; and The Dream of the Atheist, by Rev. G. Litting, M.A., is at once an exposure of error and an argument for the truth. These capital penny boooklets should be freely circulated among those who claim to approve infidel opinions.

How to be Satisfied; or, the Anxious Sinner's Manual. By Rev. Thomas B. Harpur. 6d. From the Author, Ardmore Rectory, Lurgan, Ireland. Not all Evangelical Protestants will follow the author in what he says regarding public worship and the Prayer-book, and in his references to baptism. He has, however, written especially for adherents of the Church of Ireland; and by those who labour in connection with that branch of the universal church these earnest pages will prove helpful, as they have in the author's own parish.

Carrying the Lamp is an illustrated booklet in which Helen C. Reid tells the story of the Foreign Mission of the Women of the Church of Scotland. The pages will have a special interest to those who feel for the woes of the women in the Zenanas of India; for that very beautiful work is described in detail. This third edition of the booklet records the departure of two lady missionaries from the Church of Scotland "carrying the lamp" to Africa and India. (6d. Office of the Church of Scotland Ladies' Association for Foreign Missions, 22, Queen-street Edinburgh.)

Personalia.

Rev. Henry Simon, of Harecourt Chapel, has gone to Italy for a month.

The Bishop of Bedford, who has been seriously ill, is now recovering strength.

Dr. A. T. Pierson addressed last week the C.M.S. Younger Clergy Union at the Mission House, Salisbury-square.

Bishop Bromby has been appointed by the Bishop of Bath and Wells Assistant-Bishop of that diocese; he will reside in Clifton.

Mr. Henri Merle d'Aubigne (son of the famous historian) is resigning his pastorate in order to work in connection with the McAll Mission.

Rev. W. Fuller-Gooch has resolved to resign his pastorate at Chatsworth-road. His intimation of this intention has been received by his people with deep regret.

Dr. Griffith, Hon. Sec. of the Zenana Medical College, is recovering from his long and tedious illness, although still very weak. He hopes in a short time to be able to resume his duties.

Rev. A. R. Goddard, of Ipswich, who has been incapacitated from illness for six months, being advised by several medical men that there is no hope of his recovery for a long time to come, has sent his resignation to the church.

Mr. Henry Hull, who for nearly seven years has been labouring among the soldiers at Sandgate and Shorncliffe, has been appointed on probation by the committee of the London City Mission to the Royal Artillery district, Woolwich. His address will be The Soldiers' Home, Hill-street, Woolwich.

Rev. Walter Baxendale, in entering on his new charge at West Norwood, said that his mission was to preach to sinners and build up the church. He should preach his certainties and not his doubts. His chief topics would be the Atonement, the indwelling Spirit of God, and conversion. The words, "He bare our sins in his own body on the tree," had been and would continue to be the central point of his theology.

Rev. R. J. Ward, whose successful work at St. Helens is well known to many, has offered himself for foreign mission service, has been accepted by the London Missionary Society, and will probably leave for India in June. It is stated that a few years ago he developed great interest in foreign missions, and seldom concluded a service without fervent prayer for missionaries abroad. When the L.M.S. made lately a special appeal, a contribution of £1000 was sent by a member of Mr. Ward's church. Two years ago Mrs. Ward died, and now the husband has resolved to devote his life to the heathen.

Notices.

The piece beginning "There is no rose without a thorn," is by Miss F. R. Havergal, and may be found in her book, "The Ministry of Song."

The other poem mentioned last week was presumably that by Bishop Bickersteth:—

> "Hush! blessed are the dead
> In Jesus' arms who rest,
> And lean their weary head,
> For ever on his breast."

It may be found in the "Hymnal Companion."

HOW TO REACH THE MASSES? GO TO THEM.

The Committee for Special Religious Services in Theatres, Halls, and Mission-rooms, have the following buildings open every Sunday:—Queen's Theatre of Varieties, Poplar; Pavilion Theatre, Whitechapel-road; Agricultural Hall, Islington; Town Hall, Shoreditch; Town Hall, Holborn; Town Hall, Kensington; Morley Hall, Cambridge-heath; Henderson Hall, Bethnal-green; Queen's-hall Hall, Harrow-road; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Bethnal-green; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Union-street, Borough; Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Kirby-street, Poplar; South Norwood Hall; Railway Arch, Bermondsey, and various City mission-rooms in poor and destitute districts. Cheques and P.O.'s can be remitted to the Secretary, Charles M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, New Bridge-street, E.C.; or the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.

DUM VIVIMUS VIVAMUS!

Which, being interpreted, is, "While we live, let us live," and to interpret it further, let us live as we should live. Martial has truly said, "Life is not to live, but to be well," and one need not be a sage to know that to be well enables us to live to some purpose. Sick folks have often accomplished great works. Suffering men and women have done much to benefit humanity, and to enrich "the treasures of the mind;" but these have been gifted with genius that mounted superior to the restraints of pain and suffering. Numbers of those who would gladly bear a part in work for their fellows are kept in the rear when they would be in the van, solely because of infirmities which they have not physical power to overcome. To them the cry, "While we live, let us live," is bound up with a yearning to be up and doing; and who would not help them to realise their longing desire? Help is often a nearer possibility than many such sufferers think. Numerous erstwhile invalids are now, thanks to the adoption of magnetised clothing, strong and active in the work of life; even those who were once fast in the grip of paralysis have been restored, while the prisoners of less rigorous but equally exacting complaints have in large numbers been enabled to cast off the fetters of disease and suffering.

There is nothing in the least artificial about the strength thus gained. The garments, or Appareil Magnetique above named, are simple in themselves, but they are the embodiment of an energising power which directly strengthens and assists our recuperative forces, and when the recuperative processes of the human system act normally and fully, the balance of health must be speedily restored and maintained.

The following are quoted in evidence of this:—

Mrs. ELWYN, 19, Burlington-place, Eastbourne.

March 13th, 1892.—"The magnetic apparel I am wearing was obtained from you about 16 months ago. I suffered from extreme sensitiveness to damp and wet and also from coughs and colds, and was also liable to bronchitis. Having been in India for many years my constitution had suffered much from Indian fever, and I suffered, too, from suppressed gout and rheumatism in a mild form. This winter I have had no coughs or colds, nor have I had the least tendency to bronchitis. Indeed, I have occasionally been out in the damp, and I have been none the worse for it. In former days I should have been laid up with a cold had I done so. Altogether, I feel quite well, and can now do things which I could not do formerly, and I am told that I look quite well. I tell my friends of your treatment and also about your Appareil Magnetique, and I hope some will try it."

Mr. E. J. PARKER, 73, Gossett-street, Bethnal Green, London, E.

Sept. 23, 1891.—"I think it only just to write and tell you how well and free from pain I am at the present time, after having suffered since my earliest infancy from dreadful bilious attacks, which grew worse and worse as time went on. Before I consulted you the attacks became so violent that they would prostrate me for nine days at a time, then a fortnight's freedom would ensue, but this was not sufficient to admit of recovery, and with pain and weakness I stooped like an old man. If I tried to stand or sit upright, it caused a severe pain in the breast-bone as though it would break. However, all this is changed now, as a result of your Treatment. I feel quite young, I am quite upright, and my business is a pleasure to me, whereas formerly it was a trouble, a heavy weariness, a wishing-myself-out-of-the-world sort of feeling being continually upon me. What I suffered with headache during the bilious attacks no tongue could tell nor pen describe. My friends have watched me to see that I did myself no harm, for they were afraid I should injure myself. Can you fancy what it is to be free from all this?"

A BAPTIST MINISTER writes:

"I have just resumed work again, after eighteen months' rest, and feel sure that your Treatment has done more to bring this about than anything else. For a long time it had no effect whatever, indeed my life was despaired of six months after, but from then until now I have been improving, and I am almost well. My wife and I feel very grateful to you for your kindness to us in the time of our greatest need. We have done what we could to recommend your Treatment wherever we can."

Sufferers of every class are cordially invited to lay their cases before Mr. B. Copson Garratt, 16, Finsbury Square, London, E.C., who will be pleased to advise gratuitously in any instance. A thoughtful and candid opinion is always given. c77

For Liver Complaints.

There is no medicine that so speedily restores this organ (however gravely or chronically affected) as Guy's Tonic. Congestion and other biliary derangements are cured with unerring certainty. The complete and permanent restoration resulting from a short continuance of this valuable remedy causes universal wonderment, a cure invariably taking place although all other remedies have been used without benefit.

Albert-st., Wednesbury, Staffs., Sept. 18, 1891.

Dear Sirs,—Having suffered from severe liver complaint for the last three years, with pain in the back and mental depression, I have tried nearly everything without benefit; but after taking three doses of Guy's Tonic the pains in the back have entirely gone. I now feel as I have not done before for years. I shall recommend it wherever I go.

Yours truly,
J. H. Kight.

TO ANY ONE DESIRING to test our remedies, we will send, securely packed in a special box, a bottle of Guy's Tonic, together with a free sample box of Guy's Fruit Pills and complete "Guide to Digestion," containing simple instructions as to the Guy's Tonic Treatment, post paid, for 2s. 9d. Address all letters to Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C. Guy's Tonic is sold retail of all Chemists at 2s. 9d. per bottle, and Guy's Fruit Pills at 1s. 1½d. per box.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Rev. Marmaduke Hare has been appointed to the important rectory of Bow.

The new Bishop of Sodor and Man (Dr. Straton) was consecrated at York Minster on Friday, Dean Lefroy preaching.

In view of the announcement of Mr. Wilmot Brooke's death, it is noted that the Niger Mission has suffered sorely of late. Bishop Crowther is dead: Mr. Robinson is dead; Mr. Brooke is dead; Mr. Eden has resigned.

Rev. W. Tyndale Hollins, of St. Peter's, Bristol, has been appointed to the vicarage of St. George's, Tufnell-park, vacant by the transfer of Rev. M. Washington to the incumbency of Portman Chapel, in succession to Rev. H. N. Sherbrooke.

The Bishop of Saskatchewan and Calgary has a diocese the area of which is 300,000 square miles, and as this important and attractive part of the Canadian North-West is developing with great rapidity it is no wonder that Dr. Pinkham finds it rather large for one diocesan. The object of his visit to England is to raise funds for the endowment of a separate bishopric in Calgary.

Rev. John Bullen, preaching on "The New Criticism," at Bootle, questioned the correctness of the term "new criticism"; it was really old. He refused even the credit of originality to the adverse criticism of the Old Testament Scriptures—their present opponents were merely brightening up the weapons of a bygone day. He described the nature and methods of the assault upon God's Word, pointing out by several remarkable instances the untrustworthiness of the German critics. As for their English followers, some of whom were ordained clergymen, he observed that the anomaly of their position as enemies of the truth, while at the same time its sworn defenders, was quite enough to discredit their opinions in the eyes of all reasonable and right-thinking men.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. W. H. Harwood was publicly welcomed last week as co-pastor at Union Chapel, Islington.

An eight days' mission has just been held at Offord-road, Hornsey, by Mr. W. A. Meaton.

Mount Pleasant Church, Hastings (Rev. Arthur Hall), reports 100 members, 246 Sunday scholars, and 25 teachers.

At the ninth annual tea given to the aged inhabitants of Soham on Friday, 78 attended, the average age being 72½ years.

The bitter cry of the villages was anxiously considered at the annual meetings, held last week, of the Gloucester County Union.

A week of mission services, conducted by Mansfield men at Cowley-road Church, Oxford, has just been brought to a conclusion.

Rev. G. S. Barrett, speaking at Manchester, on the "Congregational Idea," showed how it imposed a sacred responsibility on each individual member.

A service in memory of the late Professor Griffith was held on Sunday morning in the church at High Barnet, where he was at one time pastor.

A series of monthly services for the people has been commenced at Meyrick-road Church, Sheerness, various ministers of the town being asked to conduct the services.

Wycliffe Chapel, Stepney, has celebrated the first anniversary of the settlement of Rev. C. James. "The work," writes a correspondent, "has brightened since the advent of the present pastor, the congregations have nearly trebled, all the societies are most active."

BAPTIST.

Rev. S. Mann has entered on his ministry at Wotton-under-Edge.

A successful mission has just been concluded by Rev. R. A. Burrows in Burnley.

By the last Congo mail comes news of the death of Rev. R. D. Jones—another Congo missionary.

An eight days' mission has been conducted at the Baptist Chapel, Rayleigh, by Rev. John Burnham.

Interesting services have just been held at Morice-square, Devonport, in connection with the reopening of the chapel.

Rev. W. H. King, who has been pastor at Highbury-hill for twelve years, has just resigned, much to the regret of his people.

Rev. Z. T. Dowen has just conducted a four days' mission at Semley, Wilts. It is hoped that permanent blessing will follow.

Revs. Dr. Angus, Maclaren, and Glover addressed, last week, large meetings in Liverpool, in connection with the Missionary Centenary.

Last week the annual meeting of members and workers of the mothers' meeting at John-street, W.C., was held. The secretary stated that there were now 150 mothers on the books, with a good average attendance. During the year several of the mothers have decided for Christ. Addresses were delivered by Sister Francis and Messrs. Deighton and Williams.

METHODIST.

Rev. W. D. Walters and Mr. Nix have had good meetings at Sheffield and Canterbury.

A fresh and vigorous start has been made in part of Norwich hitherto untouched.

Lantern Services in the Temperance Hall, Bolton, on Sunday evenings attracted numbers of working people.

The anniversary of the vigorous mission in the Brunswick Wesleyan Circuit, Sheffield, was successfully celebrated recently.

The students of the Primitive Methodist College, Manchester, held on Thursday a good foreign missionary meeting at the Central Hall.

At the anniversary meetings of the Surrey Chapel, held under the presidency of Mr. George Williams, interesting details were given showing good and fruitful work for the past year.

There is some probability that the important pulpit in the Blackfriars-road Surrey Chapel may be filled by the appointment of Dr. Ferguson, the President of the Primitive Methodist Conference for this year.

A new mission-car has been opened in Bristol in connection with the "Out-and-Out Band" Gospel Mission Cars Association. This car, named not inappropriately "Peace," is intended for the North of Ireland, and is the fifth sent forth by the Association.

The Sunday Evangelistic services at both the Central and Free Trade Halls, Manchester, are very largely attended. Gipsy Smith, at the latter on Sunday evening, had an immense audience, and Rev. D. L. Pawson had a large congregation at the Central. The results were most encouraging.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The annual meeting of the Clapton Church showed much cause for encouragement and hopefulness.

The cause at Woolwich goes on well. God is blessing the work, and the agencies are in a healthy condition.

The work under the care of Rev. Thomas Curry, in Southwark-bridge-road, makes steady and cheering progress.

The church at Longsight, Manchester, continues in a flourishing and vigorous condition, reporting good work all round.

Mr. R. P. Wilder, of the American Volunteer Missionary Movement, has been addressing students at Marischal College, Aberdeen, under the auspices of the University Missionary Society.

In Edinburgh sixty students are looking forward to foreign mission work, while in Glasgow over fourteen have signed the covenant to give themselves to such service should the Lord open the way.

Rev. G. M. Smith, of Gloucester, has held a fortnight's mission at the Presbyterian Church, Nechells, Birmingham. The meetings are largely attended, and there are many tokens of spiritual awakening.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

The Friend gives a very interesting account of a small congregation of native Friends existing in Calcutta during the last thirty years. Isaac Sharp and Dr. Dixon have just paid them a welcome visit.

Dr. Kingston Fox is paying a visit to Friends' mission-stations in Syria, much to the refreshment and help of the ever-increasing band of workers on and around "The Goodly Mountain."

The Russian Famine Fund amounts to over £31,000, and out of the shipment of flour from America seventy trucks, worth £6000, have been placed at the disposal of the committee. More money is needed.

We regret to learn that Robert J. Davidson, of Chung-King, China, has been laid aside temporarily through illness owing to overstrain and anxious labour. The recent increase of helpers from home, however, affords some much-needed relief.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

A new mission car, to be worked in the North of Ireland, has been fitted out by the Out-and-Out Mission Band.

A very successful Sabbath School Convention has just been held under the auspices of the Presbytery of Templepatrick.

Rev. F. W. Gason, late rector of St. Thomas, Dublin, has accepted the position of mission preacher to the Home Mission of the Irish Church, and will enter on his duties on 1st May.

The Dublin Woman's Work Association has now six Bible women, and one hundred other workers, and has been for over twenty-five years in existence, during which it has been doing a good and useful work.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey intend, we hear, not only to visit Feenaghy, but also Belfast, Derry, Dublin and Cork, spending a day or two in each of those places, where, during their former visits to Ireland, they were permitted to reap such a rich harvest of souls.

The Moderator of the General Assembly—Rev. Dr. Brown—has issued an address to the people of Ulster, in which he pleads for the closing of shops and places of business not later than seven o'clock each evening, on the ground that late closing is injurious to the moral, intellectual and physical health of the young people employed.

The Belfast Y.M.C.A. is in a very flourishing condition. At the annual meeting, which was held on Tuesday week, it was stated that the membership, which is now the third largest in the United Kingdom, with the exception of Glasgow and Manchester, is about 2600; that during the past year it sent out seven of its members as missionaries to India, China, or Africa; and that it has a Sunday morning Bible class, with an average attendance of over two hundred.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Sackville-place, Leeds, aged eighty-seven, Rev. J. J. Poulter, long known as a useful minister; at Kingswood, Rev. Owen Corbett, aged seventy-seven, for many years a faithful pastor; at Sutton-in-Ashfield, Mr. W. Starr, aged fifty-seven, an active Christian worker; at Killina, Carbury, co. Kildare, John Rice, for more than forty-seven years a faithful and devoted agent of the Scripture Readers' Society; at North Thoresby, Rev. R. E. Bassett, aged seventy-six, an earnest clergyman; at Steeple Claydon, Mrs. C. M. Gough, beloved wife of the vicar; at Tiverton, Devon, Rev. G. Hadow, on March 20, aged seventy-four, a faithful and devoted Evangelical; at Dublin, Rev. Marshall R. Clarke, incumbent of Mountfield, co. Tyrone; at Oughal, co. Tyrone, Mr. T. Henderson, aged eighty-eight years, for fifty years a devoted Sabbath school teacher, and for forty-two years an earnest elder in connection with the Presbyterian Church.

Appeals.

Mrs. Meredith appeals earnestly for the necessary funds to send at once a doctor and two extra nurses to the Holy Land, the need being great.—Address 143, Clapham-road, S.W.

West Sandwick Mission, Shetland, N.B.—Rev. John Love, minister of the parish of Mid Yell, writes:—"West Sandwick is a district distant six miles from the parish church, with a fair population. The people, who are all crofters and fishermen, belong, with one or two exceptions, to the Church of Scotland; and as the only place for meetings—viz., the Public School—is found to be far too small, it has been resolved to build a mission church and house. Help is urgently needed. The treasurer is Mr. Hugh Sinclair, West Sandwick, Ulsta, Shetland, N.B."

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For six days' services by Mr. Opie Rodway, at Primitive Methodist Chapel, Chedworth, Gloucestershire, from April 2.—For three weeks' special mission at Brancaster Staithe, King's Lynn, from April 3, by Mr. F. W. Walter, Evangelisation Society.—For mission services during April, at Greville-place, Kilburn (Rev. Francis Sloper).—PRAISE.—For blessing with a mission at Oulton Broad, Lowestoft, by Mr. Ernest Bailey, Evangelisation Society.

PEPSONYMIN TONIC

THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely from its use." Mrs. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dyspepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SPITE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. SEARCHING THE SCRIPTURES:

In Order to Abiding Communion with God. Also Suggestions for Bible Reading and Study; and a plan for Consecutive Daily Reading. By Dr. J. Anderson, M.R.C.S. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A scholarly, accurate, suggestive, and wise work on the study of the books of the Bible; how best to get at their teaching, and how best to turn that teaching to practical account. Preachers and teachers will find it a treasury of thought, beautiful expositions, and fruitful suggestions. The volume is nicely got up, and is suitable for a prize or a present."—Oldham Chronicle.

"IN THE VOLUME OF THE BOOK:"

Or, The Pleasure and Profit of Bible Study. Being an Introduction to the Study of the Holy Scriptures. Ninth Edition. By Rev. George F. Pentecost, M.A., D.D. With Introductions by Rev. Joseph Cook and Bishop J. H. Vincent, D.D. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; cloth limp, 2s.; cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"There are few popular books about the Bible that we are more heartily prepared to recommend than that of Dr. Pentecost; for hardly one could be named that is so likely to lead to a thorough and life-long use of the Bible itself. . . This is high praise, but anyone who makes the acquaintance of the volume will find that we have not exaggerated its merits."—Christian Leader.

For Bible Readings.

NOTES FOR BIBLE READINGS.

A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects Carefully Compiled and Arranged. By S. R. Briggs and John H. Elliott. Suitable for Bible Readings, Cottage Lectures, Sabbath School Lessons, &c. Tinted covers, 2s. 6d.; cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

This work contains Introductory Matter by D. L. Moody, consisting of Useful Hints on "How to Study the Bible," and "How to Read the Bible."

"This is a book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the Class Teacher, and an assistance also to the Preacher. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation; and those who conduct Bible Readings will find it most suggestive."—Christian Progress.

BIBLE READINGS

On Eleven Different Subjects. By Henry Moorhouse. Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards 1s. 6d.

"Very searching in style; at the same time old truths are put in a new light. 'Bible Readings' is a charming gift-book, and a profitable companion."—Preacher's Analyst.

A Handbook and Help for Bible Classes, Lay Preachers, Sunday-school Teachers and Evangelists. By Henry Thorne. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; cloth boards, 2s.

"Mr. Thorne is a man of wide reading and also of sound judgment. He has evidently spared no pains to make his book complete. We have been much struck with the modesty and sincerity of his work."—Christian Leader.

"Teachers and preachers will find Mr. Thorne's Lessons on Mark very helpful. They cover the entire Gospel, and are arranged in fifty-two lessons, each of which has been prepared with conscientious care."—The Lay Preacher.

LIFE, WARFARE, AND VICTORY.

Being Notes of Bible Readings Specially Written for Young Converts. By Major D. W. Whittle. Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"Is a nicely got-up volume, of good, Scriptural, and plain teaching as to spiritual life, its impartation, its enemies, and its friends. The book was designed originally for those led to Christ by the author's ministry, and is refreshing, stimulating, and replete with anecdote."
Irish Baptist Magazine.

RUTH, THE MOABITESS.

A Series of Bible Readings on the Book of Ruth. By Henry Moorhouse. Tinted covers, 6d.; cloth limp, 1s.

"Containing many fresh and original remarks, all tending to practical usefulness. A capital sixpenny worth of commenting on a favourite book."—The Sword and Trowel.

New and Cheaper Edition, greatly improved.

CHRIST AND THE SCRIPTURES:

The Living Word and the Written Word. By the late Rev. Adolph Saphir, B.A., D.D. Crown 8vo, tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition. Cloth extra, 3s.; cloth bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"This book is full of thought and palpitates with life. It is the work of a Christian, a scholar, and a man of genius; while none have ever brought to the theme a larger measure of love and reference. We know of no volume that we more earnestly desire to see in the hands of persons of every age who are pondering the religious questions of momentous importance, so much agitating men's minds at the present time. It is not only admirably adapted for the mature and thoughtful, but it is also peculiarly fitted to give a right direction to the thoughts and lives of young, earnest, and inquiring persons."
Newcastle Daily Chronicle.

PEARLS OF WISDOM

From the Parables. By A.L.O.E., Author of "Rescued from Egypt," "Exiles of Babylon," &c. 256 Pages. Illustrated with twenty-four Full-page Original Drawings. Handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards. 3s. 6d.; with gilt edges, 4s. Special Cheap Edition: Tinted covers, 6d.; cloth, 1s.; cloth boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

"Never were the parables seen to better advantage, never did they seem so full of meaning, purpose, point, and never were their details made so winsome and stimulating. Religious teachers of all denominations will find the volume exceedingly suggestive and stimulating."
Oldham Chronicle.

"We commend the volume to the special attention of ministers, lay preachers, and Sabbath-school teachers, as a most helpful auxiliary to the elucidation of the Saviour's parabolic teaching."—The Primitive Methodist.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

A Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Eight Chromo-Lithographic Views. Tinted Covers, 2s.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d.; Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon wrote in The Sword and Trowel:—"Preachers abound; but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter; but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. James Culross; and in his work entitled 'John, whom Jesus Loved,' we have found a book. Many writers are mere echoes of other men's voices—they imitate the good steward in bringing forth things old, but things new are quite out of their way. One of the excellences of Dr. Culross is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way.

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."

"BEHOLD I STAND AT THE DOOR AND KNOCK."

Christ's Message to the Church at Laodicea. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Another 'gem of purest ray serene' from the deep waters of our brother's teeming mind. He possesses a ripeness of thought and a beauty of expression which, in our judgment, are scarcely equalled, and in not one instance surpassed, by those of any other living teacher known to us."—The Sword and Trowel.

"THY FIRST LOVE:"

Christ's Message to the Church of Ephesus. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly. We heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."
The Sunday-School Chronicle.

CHOICE SAYINGS.

A Collection of over 800 Striking and Profitable Comments on almost every Subject Relating to Christian Faith and Practice. By Robert C. Chapman. Tinted Covers, 9d.; Cloth Limp, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d. Presentation Editions: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.; Morocco, 3s.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon wrote of Mr. Chapman's book:—"Here we have gold dust, 'and the gold of that land is good!' Some of these brief 'Sayings' contain whole sermons. Personally we expect to gather many discourses while studying this little book. A dew from heaven rests on Mr. Chapman's expositions."—The Sword and Trowel.

MANY INFALLIBLE PROOFS:

The Evidences of Christianity; or, The Written and Living Word of God. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D. With Portrait of the Author. Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d. Superior Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"An invaluable work. The price is low at half-a-crown. It is the book which the present period needs. It is solid, plain, conclusive argument. To spread such a treatise as this will be a very gracious work, and the results must be beneficial."—Sword and Trowel.

"The work is one of the very best we have seen for the people, and may be eminently useful also to young preachers and Sunday-school teachers."
Christian Commonwealth.

"Dr. Pierson's style is simple, terse, manly, and full of soul; and he has at his command a singular fertility of illustration."—Literary World.

THE TABERNACLE, THE PRIESTHOOD, AND THE OFFERINGS.

With the Spiritual Lessons Derived from the Ritual and Ceremonies of the Old Dispensation. By Henry W. Soltau, Author of "The Holy Vessels of the Tabernacle," &c. With Four Beautiful Coloured Plates, and numerous smaller Engravings. Cloth Boards, 5s.; Library Binding, Gilt Edges 6s.; Tinted Covers (without Coloured Plates), 3s.

"This is the best book on the subject we have seen. Concise, complete, and evangelical, it affords all readers of the Holy Bible the help which they need in appreciating the services and ritual of the wilderness worship."
Preachers' Analyst.

"We heartily commend this work to all students of the Bible, and especially to young Christians. Its teaching is calculated to root and ground them in the faith."
Footsteps of Truth.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MOSES.

As Seen in the Tabernacle, and its Various Services. By Rev. George Rodgers. With Frontispiece, and numerous smaller Illustrations. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.

"No young Christian, and especially no preacher, should be ignorant of the truth which this small volume very simply but very forcibly enunciates."—The Christian.

"We cordially recommend the short and very suggestive treatise."—The Bulwark.

THIRTY-NINTH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

"INSIDIOUS WASTING of the LUNGS—A COMPLICATED CASE."

Between two and three years ago, I received an earnest letter from Mr. D. (whose address I will willingly give to any bona fide enquirer). The letter referred to his wife, and this is what he says:—

"I have written you for several patients to whom I have recommended your treatment. This time, I am sorry to say, I have to write for my wife. She had been ill, and we had no idea she had Consumption until she was examined by Dr. T., of S., who pronounced her to be suffering from a complication of complaints, and now he tells us that the lungs are insidiously wasting away."

Mr. D. then goes on to describe the symptoms, which fully corroborated the opinion thus declared.

Advice and medicine were at once sent, and directions to take a tonic in conjunction therewith.

In less than four weeks some improvement was reported (night sweats less, appetite better, a little strength gained). Letter after letter reported some fresh progress. In the course of a few months she was fairly well. "She is so far recovered that she can attend to her household duties. The doctor had said it was impossible for her to get better. I am thankful to God, also, for the important part you have taken in her restoration."

A severe cold, taken in April of the next year, caused a slight relapse of some of her symptoms, which were again removed in a short time.

Writing me in January of this year he says:—"My wife is in good health, but the medicine is to keep by us, which we like to do. It is so useful for coughs or colds."

"Very good. Cannot be better. The very thing for distribution."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

BRIDGE OF HOPE

Ratcliff Highway, E.

THE BRIDGE OF HOPE MISSION has now been carried on for nearly fourteen years in one of the Poorest Districts in the East of London. The work is especially among YOUNG WOMEN and LITTLE GIRLS, and is both RESCUE and PREVENTIVE. The doors are Open Night and Day, and Applicants are as numerous in the summer as in winter.

The various branches of the Bridge of Hope are

1. THE REFUGE.
2. THE NIGHT SHELTER.
3. THE MOTHERS' HOME.
4. THE SERVANTS' LODGE.

and for the work among the Children,

5. BRIDGE HOUSE, LONDON.
6. HOPE LODGE, REDHILL.
7. REGENTS' PARK COTTAGE, LEIGH.
8. THE CHILDREN'S COTTAGE, HIGHGATE

AND

9. THE HAVEN, TICEHURST.

There are 220 beds, which are always full. Sixty little destitute children from the neighbourhood come to akfast five mornings each week.

THE BRIDGE OF HOPE has a very special claim upon the support of the Christian public. It is quite undenominational only are girls from the neighbourhood taken in, and workers all around in the various East End Missions helped with their icult cases, but applications to receive Young Girls come from all parts of England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland.

In consequence of the change that has come over public opinion regarding grave moral and social questions, and the reased efforts of Christian Workers to rescue the younger ones, such Homes as ours are more needed than ever.

To give to the BRIDGE OF HOPE is to help those who try to help themselves. The young women in the Refuge rned during last year £608 by Laundry Work, Knitting, and Needlework. It is for the very young girls and children n into evil surroundings, and so circumstanced that, humanly speaking, if not rescued and saved NOW there is no other nce in life but for them to swell the numbers of lost girls on the streets that we now plead.

HELP US TO SAVE THESE LITTLE GIRLS!

The money given goes very directly to the benefit of those for whom it is sent. There is no doubt as to the economy h which the work is carried on. At the present time our need is very great.

TIRETTA BAZAR MISSION, CALCUTTA.

EDWARD S. WENGER is desirous of erecting a PLACE of WORSHIP for 100 persons, as also a SCHOOL for 100 children in connection with this Mission. A central spot in the Chinaparah is essential. An estimate has been prepared, and it is reckoned that at the very least some 7000 Rupees will be required for the erection of the building. To this will have to be added the cost of land and cost of furnishing, so that at the lowest figure 16,000 Rupees will be required for the work. The amount already subscribed is only 670 Rupees. It is therefore necessary to raise

ABOUT 15,400 RUPEES MORE.

Any contributions towards this sum will be thankfully received and duly acknowledged by Mr. E. S. Wenger, 31.1, Chattawalla Lane, Calcutta, or may be sent to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of the late Mrs. Mentor Mott, Honorary Directress of the British Syrian Mission.

A correspondent writes:—

There is a great deal of preaching and teaching, but it seems to me the disciples do not walk to Emmaus as they used to do together, so they miss the heart-burning as they "spake one to another," and they do not tell us what the Lord said to them personally as they "walked by the way." The simple accent of the wayside traveller has often set my soul on fire. So few care to hear anything but a good sermon. The Accuser is cast out; but he still accuses the brethren to themselves and to each other.

With reference to a paragraph which appeared in this column last week, we are assured by the Editor of The British Workman that that periodical will most certainly not be used "in aid of the assault upon the inspiration of the Bible," or in any way to weaken the authority of the Scriptures. The Editor deeply regrets that, in the article on "Timothy's Little Wine," a paragraph giving colour to the suggestion should have been inadvertently admitted. In the June number (the May issue being now at press) a disclaimer of any such intention will be published.

It has been agreed to raise a "C. H. Spurgeon Memorial Fund," in aid of the Stockwell Orphanage and other institutions connected with the Metropolitan Tabernacle, and founded by the late Mr. Spurgeon. Mr. George Williams and Mr. Thomas H. Olney, who have each contributed two hundred guineas to the fund, will act as joint-treasurers.

The late Mr. Spurgeon was wont, full often, to speak strongly against money-hoarding; hence some, since his death, may have been asking how he, with his many and exceptional opportunities, would be shown by his will to have acted; and especially as from time to time considerable legacies had been left for his personal benefit. This will has now been published; its total amount is a little over £10,000, including copyright valuations, &c., and with an actual personalty of about £2000. In view of such facts it will be felt that Mr. Spurgeon practised what he preached: that the warnings against the love of money, which he addressed to others, he was himself careful to heed.

Dr. Harry Guinness has returned safely to our shores, after a year's absence in Africa. Readers of Regions Beyond will have followed with deep interest his perilous journey to the heart of Congo-land, and rejoice that, in spite of many serious fevers and imminent danger of death at the hands of the N'Gombe savages, he has been spared to return in safety to his family and to his work in this country. He bears the mark of wearing travel and wasting fever, and still evidently carries the seeds of malaria in his system. A severe attack of hæmaturic fever prostrated him within twenty-four hours of his reaching London. But prayer was heard on his behalf, and he is now recovering. The news he brings of spiritual blessing on the Congo is of a most encouraging kind. Not only in the Cataract region, but even in the heart of the continent—in Balololand—the Gospel is proving its power to save the people from their sins.

We are glad to say that Mrs. Guinness, sen., continues to improve in health, and is slowly regaining the powers of which she was deprived a month ago by a stroke of paralysis. Dr. Grattan Guinness wishes us to say to any friends who may have refrained from writing to the Institute of late, fearing to burden him with correspondence at this trying season, that one of the kindest and most effectual ways of lightening his burden just now, is to send help to the Missionary Training Institute, for whose support and management he is responsible. Nearly 150 missionary students, men and women, are now under his care, and £300 a-week are needed for their support and training, and for the Home and Foreign missions connected with Harley House, Bow, E.

As Merchant Lecturer for the present month, Rev. Edward White has courageously entered the lists against the so-called "Higher Critics" of the Old Testament. The first of a series of four addresses was given on Tuesday. While modestly disclaiming any special qualities of scholarship, Mr. White was very trenchant and thoroughgoing in his treatment of the subject; and before he concludes his examination he is likely to put the "handful of cloistered Europeans," as he described the critics, into some tight places. After a splendidly eloquent tribute to the services which the Bible has rendered to humanity in every clime and in every age of the Christian era, the lecturer showed the consequences that must inevitably result from a general acceptance of the conclusions at which the critics are arriving; this he described as "the rapid disintegration of faith in historical Christianity altogether."

Mr. White did not mention by name Professor Cheyne, of Oxford, but the severest portion of his address was directed to the destructive theories of that scholar, who, he said, had "sawn Isaiah asunder" and expelled David from the ranks of the Psalmists. He maintains that it needs much more than learning to understand or appraise the sacred writings; and, in closing, called for "some delay" in accepting the theories and speculations now sought to be foisted on the Christian world. These lectures are sure to constitute a most valuable addition to modern apologetics, and we heartily advise all to attend them who can conveniently do so. They are given in the Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, at 1 p.m. on the Tuesdays of April.

"We garnish the tombs of the prophets, and stone their successors still." So remarked a well known London minister on Sabbath evening last in an exposition of Matthew xxiii. He remarked upon the opposition with which modern reformers, such as Wilberforce, Shaftesbury, and others, had to contend in the early days of their battle for justice and humanity; and added, as a note of personal experience, that he had been denied access to several pulpits, because of outspoken advocacy of the social purity movement. Those who are now labouring for the suppression of the Indian Opium Trade, have an equally uphill task, and they need the hearty support of all lovers of national and international righteousness. We would direct the attention of our London readers to a series of missionary addresses on the Opium question on the Wednesday evenings of this month at Burlington Hall, Savile-row, W.

Firmness and tenderness are equally apparent in the terms of the motion, of which Rev. F. B. Meyer, B.A., has given notice at the forthcoming Baptist Union meetings. The discussion will be watched with eager yet painful interest. It may confidently be expected that those ministers who believed that Mr. Spurgeon had reason for his protest, while they might not approve of his methods, will loyally support Mr. Meyer. That there is need for action is proved by the fact that Rev. H. C. Leonard, M.A., has given notice of a counter proposition, in which Unitarian churches are described as "Christian communities." This language is all the more serious, in view of Mr. Meyer's description of Unitarians as those "who do not hold the Deity of our Lord Jesus Christ." Mr. Leonard is therefore contending, not only against interference with the liberty of separate churches, but in favour of the recognition of those who deny the Divinity of Christ as in some true sense Christians. This is very serious. If the Unitarian is right, the Evangelical is an idolater and a blasphemer; if the Evangelical is right, the Unitarian is an unbeliever, and a denier of the Father because a denier of the Son. Can both these be "Christians"? Or is it possible for one to fraternise with the other without impairing, if not altogether destroying, our testimony to Evangelical truth? We deeply grieve that such a discussion should be necessary; but we earnestly pray that those who are seeking to "contend for the faith once for all delivered to the saints" may be enabled to do it in the spirit of love, and that God may lead back to the truth those who have gone astray.

Cigarette-smoking is a very dangerous form of a very objectionable habit, and we are glad to note that measures are being adopted in several countries for its repression, if not suppression. The United States Congress has been urged to impose a special tax upon the cigarette, which is stated to have caused the deaths of a hundred American young men last year, post-mortem examination showing that phosphorus and arsenic had been absorbed from the paper wrapping; while a hundred other victims have found their way into the insane asylum. The Legislature of Ontario has read a second time a Bill prohibiting the use of paper-wrapped tobacco by any one under eighteen years of age. It is sad to reflect that a practice attended with results so disastrous to health and injurious to moral fibre should have become popular among women in some circles of society.

In the language of The Jewish World, the Hebrew population of Russia is, for the present, "penned in." The Austrian frontier has been practically closed for some time; Turkey refuses to receive Jewish refugees in Asia Minor; and now Germany has resolved to close the frontier against Jewish emigrants of every description. With no other channels of escape than the Baltic and the Black Sea, and then the prospect of long and expensive voyages, the oppressed people are in great perplexity and sorrow of heart. The only crumb of comfort in the present situation is the report that the Russian Government will shortly give official sanction to the statutes of the Society for Promoting Jewish Emigration, founded by Baron Hirsch. As soon as this is done, the Russian Jews who wish to leave the country will be able to depart, after observing the prescribed formalities, with a view to settlement in the Argentine Republic. In any case, there is not likely as yet to be emigration on a large scale, for it is expected that when the Hirsch scheme gets into full operation, those who wish to leave Russia will have to encounter many obstacles, in the way of vexatious formalities imposed by minor officials, and especially by the police. The exodus from the lands of the north threatens to partake of a character similar to that from Egypt thousands of years ago, when for a time the king "would not let Israel go."

An esteemed friend, who has been interesting himself in the relief of the famine-stricken in Russia, writes as follows, on March 31:—

I have in hand a considerable amount of money, and communication in Russia is somewhat difficult and uncertain. It might be well to say in The Christian that for the present no more money will be required, as free-will offerings for suffering Stundists have been received largely. Not only through The Christian, but from many other sources, money has been sent in for them, a gracious manifestation of the oneness of the Body of Christ.

The East-end factory inspector, Mr. Lakeman, unconsciously, the other day, threw some light upon at least one of the causes of the absence of so many of the working-classes from Divine worship on Sundays, for in his evidence before the House of Commons Committee on the Shop Hours' Bill, he stated that from eighty to ninety hours a week are usually worked in North London by shop assistants. When it is borne in mind that this attendance is only too often given under very unsanitary conditions—a fact strongly borne out by Mr. Lakeman's evidence—it is not difficult to see what the mental and physical condition of the worn-out workers must be on the Lord's Day. That the Bill before Parliament should be simply an endeavour to reduce the hours to twelve a day on weekdays shows what the state of things must be.

Some of the evidence which has recently been laid before the Labour Commission is indescribably painful, and it is to be hoped that the wide publicity which has been given to some of the evils complained of may result in drastic remedies being applied without avoidable delay. One witness from the Black Country, referring to bolt and chain makers, &c., stated:

> The women work in the sheds scantily covered, and in the summer time have to divest themselves of nearly all their clothing while hammering nuts and bolts. They bring their children to the factories, and cover them up to prevent them being burned by red-hot sparks. Often they have to carry iron weighing half a hundredweight. For such work they earn four or five shillings a week, while the men earn about fourteen shillings.

Years ago the Legislature interfered and prohibited the employment of women in mines, and surely the condition of things pointed out in the above evidence must be not less injurious to health and morals than that which was then so sternly suppressed.

Anything more pitiable than the condition of things revealed under most of the prosecutions at the London Police-courts the other day, in connection with the Compulsory Education Act, it would be difficult to conceive, and after reading a number of the cases it is impossible to avoid harbouring doubts as to the wisdom of legislation which involves the starvation of families in order to secure a smattering of education to children who are old enough and able to be bread-winners. One case may be taken as an example of hundreds of others none the less heartrending, the reports stating that the Courts were not large enough to hold the offenders, batches of whom had to wait outside until there was room. One poor woman was for the fifth time fined for not sending her son, who was at work, to school, and was ordered to send him regularly, and, crying bitterly, she said:—

> I can't do it, it's no use. I'd rather do away with myself, and be done with it all. You've had my home off me with fines. I sold the boots off my feet last time to pay, and now you've got everything. Nine children at home, and the boy earning five or six shillings a week. I can't do without it. I'd rather do away with myself, and have less trouble.

In one of the provincial cases of the kind, a labourer at Dunmow stated that the girl had no boots to wear, and that he could not provide them, as he had nine people to provide for out of only eleven shillings a week. Despite this the magistrates—three clergymen, it is stated, being included in the number—ordered him to send the children to school, and fined the offender one shilling, "with four shillings costs," to be paid within a fortnight. In such a case comment is needless.

English friends who may be visiting Paris at Easter-time will be glad to know that they can find excellent accommodation at the central office of Miss de Broen's Belleville Mission, 205, Rue St. Honoré. Strangers in the city will there receive good advice, and every help with the language.

Stirred into activity and some show of interest by the success of the Protestant evangelists who work among the troops in Italy, the Pope is credited with having given directions for military "clubs" to be established for the soldiers in all the large centres in the Peninsula where regiments are stationed.

Messrs. Moody & Sankey in Scotland.

Our readers have been kept fully informed from week to week of the movements of these brethren, during their Gospel tour throughout Scotland, now concluded. Some notes and reflections, by way of summing up the characteristic features of the campaign, will be of interest to those who, in spirit, have followed the evangelists from place to place.

It may be remarked, at the outset, that nothing would be more foolish than to institute comparisons or contrasts between this visit and the two that have preceded it. The circumstances of the former missions in Scotland were entirely different; fewer centres were touched, and the stay in each place was much longer, generally speaking, than on the present occasion. Mr. Moody was led to the conclusion, on commencing the work last November, that the best way to fill up the brief time at his disposal would be to devote special attention to "the young men of the provinces," leaving the great seats of population out of account. This plan was faithfully adhered to, with the exception that Inverness and Aberdeen had each a week allotted to them. We think the results have proved that the decision of the evangelist, which was endorsed by the two co-operating committees at Glasgow and Edinburgh, showed wisdom and foresight.

It may be said by those who are desirous of criticising, that the stay in most of the places was so short that comparatively little fruit could be expected. When all the factors in the situation are taken into account, this contention will not hold good. Mr. Moody often remarks that he would much rather set a hundred men to work than attempt to do it all himself. He and his colleague have acted on this sound principle during their sojourn in Scotland, and they have certainly been justified. All they really aimed at was to infuse a fresh spirit of realised responsibility and of consecrated zeal into the Christian churches wherever they went, leaving it to work out its natural result in a quickened practical resolve on the part of those churches to care for the spiritually lapsed or semi-lapsed in their own communities. That is the ideal state of matters, and the conviction of its necessity has, at any rate, been sharply brought home to the professed Christians throughout Scotland. If they have not fully risen to the height of their recognised privilege and duty, that is not the fault of the evangelists.

But much has been done in this direction. It would be very difficult to estimate the number of earnest and competent workers who have been stirred up to special and more or less prolonged effort in connection with this Scottish missions. Among the places visited by Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey, numbering almost a hundred, there are very few that have not had a season either of preparatory and united prayer and work, or a time of "following up"; in many cases there have been both. Our earnest hope is that these special endeavours by local or other friends will be kept up, and that the fires will spread into corners untouched by the influence of our American brethren.

While urging this, we thankfully record that the direct and ascertained fruits of the meetings held and addressed by the evangelists themselves, have been by no means small. We share Mr. Moody's deep-rooted objection to any numbering of the converts. All movements of the kind have their residuum of unsatisfactory cases; but the good reports everywhere heard as to the stability of the converts brought in on former visits of our brethren, lead us to the confident belief that a like result will follow the mission just terminated. The Scottish people, as a whole, are so conversant with the doctrines of the Christian faith, that no prolonged preaching course is needed to prepare them for an intelligent saving acceptance of the truth. What is mostly wanted are a few such sharp and telling strokes, directed to the conscience and the heart, as will induce men and women to act up to the fulness of head knowledge they possess. Mr. Moody has aimed at bringing this about in his brief and almost flying visits from district to district. Many have unmistakably been the slain of the Lord, and the responsibility of the local under-shepherds will be great if the many young believers throughout Scotland are not confirmed in the faith, and if the still wavering ones are not led to the point of definite decision. Mr. Moody has no patent process. He certainly has open vision as to the state of the unregenerate man, and the absolute need of the new birth, and the Spirit of the Lord has anointed him with a burning zeal that is too uncommon, with a pathos that sometimes seems irresistible, and with great persuasive powers of utterance. But all these gifts are equally at the disposal of every servant of God who craves their possession.

As in the two previous missions of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey amongst us, a great outstanding feature of the meetings has been the spirit of unity shown by those of diverse denominational names. Indeed, it exceeded anything experienced by our friends before, and went far beyond their most hopeful anticipations. It has been conspicuously shown that Jesus Christ and his great salvation form a rallying ground for common effort among all who hold evangelical views of truth that no other theme possesses. Those who differ strongly on many subordinate though important matters of creed or church government, will gladly join hands in order to save their fellow-men. The ecclesiastical world of Scotland is at present in a very disturbed condition, so that the well-nigh universal manifestation of unity in connection with the labour of the Evangelists is all the more remarkable.

The extremely strong position taken by Mr. Moody on the omnipresent drink question and his scathing denunciations of the making, the vending, and the consumption of Scotch whisky, have been frequently noted in our weekly reports. The cordial endorsement of his utterances by the great bulk of his audiences affords ground for hope that the national conscience is being educated up to the point of practical and effective warfare against this gigantic curse.

With a few conspicuous exceptions, the daily press throughout Scotland has been friendly in its attitude towards the work of the evangelists. The Scottish Leader alone, among all its contemporaries, rose to the occasion by giving full and daily accounts; but many of the local broadsheets did good service in scattering the utterances of Mr. Moody and Mr. McNeill. The accession of the latter to the evangelistic ranks was a very noteworthy circumstance, and is likely to have lasting results for good in many parts of Scotland. His popular gifts are having the fullest scope among his own countrymen, and none rejoices more in his success than Mr. Moody, who was largely responsible for setting his brother evangelist free for this service.

Of Mr Sankey's special share in the work little need be said in addition to what our weekly notes contained. The marvel is that he has been preserved in such excellent voice throughout our changeful winter, and with so much exposure in journeying. The commonly-expressed opinion has been that he was singing even better at the close of the mission than at its start, and all will join in the prayer that his consecrated voice may long retain its wonderful purity and power as a vehicle for sounding forth the music of the Gospel.

As a final comment, we may say that the work of the past months has proved to demonstration that the old Gospel has lost nothing of its power to attract the masses of the people. Mr Moody's methods of preaching have not changed since he first came among us. He raises aloft the ancient Pauline banner, on which is inscribed "Christ and Him crucified." The people everywhere have flocked to it in their thousands, and have found in its glorious motto the sufficient and efficient antidote for sin and all its woes.

Moses, the Man of God.

Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Regent's-park Chapel.

NOBLE TO THE CORE.

Num. xi., xii.

Uninterrupted success is hard to bear, much more so than perpetual trial. This was the moral of the story of the plains of Capua, where the demoralisation, wrought in the troops of Hannibal by the enervating climate, wrought more havoc than the prowess of the legions of Rome. Many who were vigorous and energetic, when climbing the steep cliffs of adversity, have succumbed to petty temptations in days of sunny prosperity.

If it should be debated as to whether sunshine or storm, success or trial, were the severer test for character, the shrewdest observers of human nature would probably answer that nothing so clearly shows the real stuff of which we are made as prosperity, because this of all tests is the severest. When the younger son came to possess the portion of goods that fell to him, he went down to feed swine.

For some two years Moses had been borne along on a flowing tide. Through faith in the living Jehovah, he had vanquished the proudest monarch of his time, had conducted nearly three millions of people through the wilderness wastes without a settled commissariat, had disciplined an unorganised multitude into a mighty host, with a code of legislation and ritual which is the admiration of all thoughtful men. This was success enough to turn the head of any ordinary man; nor could we have wondered if he had shown signs of undue elation and pride. But the two incidents which we are now to consider show how absolutely simple and humble he had remained amid a very summer of success.

Eldad and Medad.—In condescension to his weakness, his Almighty Friend appointed seventy colleagues to bear with him the burden of the people; and concerning them the somewhat ominous announcement is made that "the Lord came down in the cloud, and took of the spirit that was upon him and put it upon them."

I do not agree with those who think that there was any diminution of the spirit that rested upon Moses. It is very difficult to speak of the subdivision of spirit. You cannot draw it off from one man to others, as you draw off water. The whole Spirit of God is in each man, waiting to fill him to the uttermost of his capacity. It seems to me, therefore, that nothing more is intended than to affirm that the seventy were "clothed upon" with the same kind of spiritual force as that which rested upon Moses.

In each case of those thus anointed, the accession of spiritual force was marked by the sudden breaking forth of prophecy, reminding us of that memorable day, of which this was a miniature, when "they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." May we not say that the entrance of the Holy Ghost in fulness to the heart of man will always lead to the utterance of thoughts that strive for expression, as the ocean wave sweeps along the sea wall seeking for the inlet where it may expend itself.

For sixty-eight of them the power of utterance was only spasmodic and temporary. "They prophesied, but they did so no more." Emblems are they of those who, beneath some special influence like that which cast Saul down among the prophets, suddenly break out into speech and act, and give promises not destined to be fulfilled. Two, however, of the selected number, who, for some reason, had remained in the camp, suddenly became conscious of their reception of that same spirit, and they, too, broke out into prophecy, and appeared to have continued to do so. Instantly a young man, jealous for the honour of Moses, carried to him the startling tidings, "Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp"; and as he heard the announcement Joshua, equally chivalrous, exclaimed, "My lord Moses, forbid them!" eliciting the magnificent answer, "Art thou jealous for my sake? Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets—that the Lord would put his spirit upon them!"

It was as if he said, "Do you think that I alone am the channel through which the Divine influences can pour? Do you suppose that the supplies in the being of God are so meagre, that He must stint what He gives through me, when He gives through others? If it should please Him to create new stars, must He rob the sun of its light to give them brilliance? Is the gratification of a mean motive of vanity a matter of any moment to me, who have gazed on the face of God? Besides, what am I, or what is my position, amongst this people, compared with the benefit which would accrue to them, and the glory which would redound to God, if He did for each of them all that He has done for me?"

This is the spirit of true magnanimity. A spirit of self-aggrandisement is set on retaining its exclusive position as the sole depository of the Divine blessing, and this has the certain effect of forfeiting it, so that fresh supplies cease to pass through. But whenever the eye is single for the glory of God, and position is looked upon only as his gift to be used for his glory, and when the spirit is concentred in one eager and intense desire to see his will done, the glory of that light extinguishes the fires of ambition, and the faithful servant is willing to be anything or nothing, if only the Divine purpose is accomplished.

There is no test more searching than this. Am I as eager for God's kingdom to come through others as through myself? In my private intercessions can I pray as heartily and earnestly for the success of my competitors as for my own? Can I see with equanimity other and younger men coming to the front, and showing themselves possessed of gifts which I always considered to be my special province? Am I conscious of the rising of jealousy or envy when my leadership is subordinated to the claims of rivals? Should I be willing that the will of God should be done though another if he suited God's purpose better than myself? Few of us could answer these questions without the sense of almost insuperable difficulty in assuming the position taken up by Moses when he heard that Eldad and Medad prophesied in the camp.

And yet, in so far as we fall short of that position, do we not betray the earthly ingredients which have mingled, and mingle still, in our holy service? Yes; it is ourselves that we serve—our schemes and plans and selfhood. And if we were to eliminate from Christian service all that has emanated from these sources, what a scanty handful of gold-dust would be left! Oh! when shall we be able to say, "Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets," and view with thankful joy the levelling up of all Christians to the table-land of our gifts and grace?

This, however, can never come till we have learnt to spend long hours with God; till we have been taken into his secret place; till we have come to care for his honour more than for our own; till we have become absorbed in the one consuming passion to see Him glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe. "The zeal of thy house has eaten me up." Thus does the herald star, which on the fringe of night has told weary eyes that the dawn is near, sink contentedly into a very ocean of light, though not itself less bright because every inch of space is illuminated with a lustre like its own.

Miriam.—We remember her as the little black-eyed, watchful maiden who stood beneath the tall palm-trees of the river's brink to watch the bulrush ark, and again as the heroic woman who answered the deep bass of the delivered hosts by leading the women's chorus on the shores of the Red Sea. What did she not owe to Moses? But for him she must have been an unknown slave girl, mated to a toiler in Pharaoh's brickfields, the mother of slaves. But now she was free, and the representative woman of an emancipated race, through the brother whom she had rocked in her arms. Ah! it was sad, indeed, that, at the age of ninety, she should turn against him whom she had tended and loved, and that she should poison the mind of the elder brother who had been his spokesman and right hand.

They spoke against him because of the Ethiopian woman whom he had married. Some have thought that Moses had married a second time, but it seems wiser, since the death of Zipporah is not mentioned, to consider the reproach as applicable to her, especially as she probably bore in her complexion the brand of another race. Cushite means black, or dark-complexioned. She had comparatively recently come to the camp, and for some time Miriam may have been carefully watching her, with the result, that her whole woman's nature revolted from the thought of having to resign her primacy to such as she was. It is always difficult to see another filling the place which we have looked upon as ours, especially if we are conscious of being able to fulfil its duties better.

How well we can imagine her talking to Aaron and to the women with whom she was intimate, about these "Cushites," until she had raised quite a storm of feeling. This was bad enough for her, but how much worse for Aaron, who held the proudest position in the camp? The function of Moses was temporary, and would pass away with his life, whereas that of Aaron was permanent to himself and his heirs. Yet Aaron could not but feel how vast was the gulf between him and his brother. And out of this there sprang the jealousy which made Zipporah its excuse. "And they said, Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses; hath He not also spoken by us?" How easy it is to disguise jealousy beneath the cloak of zeal for the law of God, and to think ourselves immaculate when rebuking the faults of others.

And how did Moses act, he who, years before, had felled an Egyptian with one blow of his fist? Did he pour out a torrent of indignation, assuring himself that he had just cause to be angry? Did he show them the door of the tent, and bid them mind their own affairs? Did he call on God to strike them down in his anger? Nothing of the sort. He answered not a word, "for the man Moses was very meek above all the men that were upon the face of the earth." In his bearing he reminds us of Christ in the judgment-hall, who, "when He was reviled, reviled not again."

Was this weakness, as some would say? Nay, verily, it was the exhibition of colossal spiritual strength. Only a Samson with unshorn locks could have acted thus. It is the weak man who gives blow for blow, who blurts out his wrath, who cannot control the passion of his spirit. Only the strong man can be perfectly still under provocation, holding himself in, and turning the vehemence of his soul into the heat of an intense love.

It may be well to give some closing rules as to the attainment of this meek and quiet spirit, which in sight of God is of great price.

First, let us claim the meekness of Christ. This, of course, was not possible for Moses in the direct way in which it is for us. And yet there was no doubt in his case also a constant appeal for heavenly grace. The humility of Jesus did not forbid his proposing Himself as our model for meekness. "Learn of Me," He said, "for I am meek and lowly in heart." The likeness of the dove that rested on his head, and the lamb to which he was compared, were the sweet emblems of his heart. And in moments of provocation there is nothing better than to turn to Him and claim his calm, his sweet silence, his patience and meekness, saying, "I claim all these, my Lord, for the bitter need of my spirit."

It is acquired next by cultivating the habit of silence. Express a thought, and you give it strength and permanence; repress it, and it will wither and die. Wisely did the Apostle James lay such stress on the use of the tongue, as the rudder and bit of the whole body, for its use will instantly determine whether the heart is filled with evil or peace. You will often hear it said that the best way of getting rid of an importunate passion is to let it out and have done with it. It is, however, a very mistaken policy. Utterance will give it vigour, and will sow another crop that will soon fruit again. Silence will kill it as ice kills fish when there are no vent-holes by which they can come up to breathe.

Learn to be still, to keep the door of the lips closed, to give, indeed, an answer when it is asked, and an explanation when it is needed to correct a misapprehension, but for the most part imitate the example of David, who was prepared for his victory over Goliath by the previous victory which he won over his elder brother in the soft answer returned to his insulting questions. "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath."

Next, by considering the harm done by the aggressors to themselves. The cloud removed from over the tent, as if it must leave the very spot where the culprits stood; and behold, Miriam was leprous, white as snow. There is a profound piece of instruction here; you cannot say unkind or bitter things about another without hurting yourself more than you hurt him. Like the boomerang of the savage, curses come back to the spot from which they start. And the wronged one may well forget his own anguish as he pours out his soul in pity and prayer for those who, in dealing out their bitter words, have contracted the blot of leprosy on themselves.

In allowing God to vindicate our cause.—Moses let God vindicate him, and the Almighty God rode upon a cherub and did fly, and flew on the wings of the wind. The Lord heard all that was said, and spake suddenly to the three, and told them that whilst He would speak to others in visions and dreams, it was to Moses only that he would speak face to face, so that he might behold Jehovah's form. "Wherefore then," said He, "were ye not afraid to speak against my servant, against Moses?" This is the secret of rest, to cultivate the habit of handing all over to God, as Hezekiah did, when he spread out Sennacherib's letter in the house of the Lord.

Commit yourself to Him that judgeth righteously, in sure certainty that He will vindicate you, and bring out your righteousness as the light and your judgment as the noonday.

Also in intercessory prayer. Moses cried unto the Lord, saying, "Heal her, O God, I beseech thee." When we pray for those who have despitefully used and persecuted us, it is marvellous how soon the soul gets calm and tender. We may begin to do it as a duty, in obedience to the command; we soon discover it to be as snow on a fevered forehead, cooling and soothing the soul. Do not wait to feel an inspiration; act on the sense of what your Lord requires; and as you pray, in the calm and holy presence of God, in the secret where your Father is found, you will drop your silt, and the river will run pellucid and clear.

And the Lord heard his servant's prayer, and healed Miriam; but the whole host was delayed a week through her sin. We may be forgiven, but these outbreaks of sin always entail disaster and delay. Neither we nor others can be where we might have been had they not occurred.

The Chiswick Mission.

For eleven years Mr. R. T. Smith has laboured among the very poor people of Chiswick but during the last twelve months the Mission has been specially useful owing to the good accommodation afforded by the new mission premises in Fraser-street. Not a day but brings its duty, or an evening its effort, touching in some beneficent way the lives of young or old. A band of ladies devote a portion of their time to visiting, and a Samaritan fund enables them to relieve many cases of distress they meet with. There are large Bible-classes for men and for women on Sunday afternoon, and the teaching of Mrs. Watts and Mrs. Brown has been most useful.

The cost of the building was entirely defrayed by Mr. E. H. Watts, and an effort to raise a capital fund of £1000 has been responded to to the extent of two hundred pounds. The cost of the Mission annually is over £1200, an expenditure which the annual report fully justifies. Mr. Smith's address is 15, Linden-gardens, Chiswick, W.

DR. PENTECOST'S INDIAN MISSION.

A Madras correspondent writes to us:—

The Mission of Dr. Pentecost has come to an end, and he has left South India for the present.

The Mission lasted five weeks, and was a season of great blessing to all the churches and congregations in Madras. Those who entered into the spirit of the Mission were sorry when it came to an end. Hundreds have publicly testified to their faith in Christ, and have afterwards signed a covenant entered into with God.

All who came forward and were prepared to accept Christ as their Saviour received a card, on which was printed a covenant with God, which he or she was carefully and prayerfully to study. If the covenant could be deliberately entered into, the receiver was to write his name, address, and the church to which he belonged on the opposite side of the card, and then return it to the Doctor for his information. He then received a paper copy of the Covenant to paste on the inside of the cover of his Bible for daily reference. Dr. Pentecost was thus made acquainted with the churches to which the inquirers belonged, and the names and addresses of those of each congregation have been sent to their respective pastors.

The letters the Doctor has received, and the testimony given by many privately, as well as that of those who know them, unite in proving that God has been working in many hearts, producing conviction of sin, and revealing his saving grace in Jesus. Members of every congregation in Madras have been thus blessed. Young boys and girls of about ten years old and old men of sixty have felt the leading hand of God upon them. Isolated cases, and all the members of a family, have acknowledged that God has been near them in blessing. The first to come were grown-up people; the children did not join the number till the middle of the Mission was past; and as the work went on some of the better class of the Eurasians, and Europeans of the respectable artisan class, gave themselves publicly to God.

From the first tent was well filled, but as the weeks went on the attendance became more dense. On several nights many gentlemen had to rise to accommodate ladies with a seat, and then to stand all through the service at the edge of the tent. On those evenings fully one thousand people were hearing the Gospel preached plainly, earnestly, and without any effort to produce excitement. The audience to the end was very mixed: a few Europeans, a very large number of Eurasians—the mainstay of the congregations in Madras—some native Christians, including pastors and other agents, and a fair number of educated Hindoos, some of them occupying high positions. Some of this last class attended regularly every evening till the close of the Mission. To many of these the Doctor gave copies of the New Testament under the promise that they would read them. Several hundreds of copies were thus distributed.

On the evening before the evangelist sailed, all the converts were invited to tea in the Congregational chapel, to meet their pastors, and to say farewell to the Doctor. This was felt by all present to be one of the happiest gatherings of the Mission, and to be a fit termination to such a blessed season. Nearly five hundred were present, including friends of the converts. On Sunday morning a few friends saw the Doctor on board the Manna, to say good-bye to him. We all hope, however, to see him back with us for a few weeks in the autumn on his way to Australia.

At Poona Dr. Pentecost preached in a large theatre. The committee of management so arranged it that none but educated Brahmins should be admitted, and every night of a whole week the building was crowded to the door to hear the Gospel preached simply and directly to their minds and hearts. At the close of this series of services a request was sent to Dr. Pentecost that those who heard him should be permitted to pay all the expenses incurred that week; and at the last meeting a gentleman stood up, and in the name of all assembled thanked the Doctor for what he had been teaching them and trying to do for them, and he added, "If any man had attempted fifteen years ago to speak in this manner to such an audience in Poona, he would have been torn in pieces; but here have we been filling this place night after night for a week, to hear, not lectures on secular subjects, but a plain, simple, direct exposition of the Gospel of Christ. This shows how great a change has come over us in Poona." This change has been largely brought about by the daily faithful teaching of the Scriptures in the schools and colleges and in the street.

MEDICAL MISSIONS TO INDIA'S WOMEN.

If medical mission work generally is so important an agency, what shall we say as to its value in a land like India, among 139,000,000 of women, inconceivable numbers of whom are shut up in the zenanas, which social customs forbid any but women to enter? The field is well-nigh untouched and practically unlimited. The urgent need for such a work as this can readily be understood, when the exceptional conditions of the women during sickness are considered. Their sufferings, extreme before, are considerably aggravated by the ignorant treatment of the so-called native women-doctors, who are sent to their aid in order to keep off the evil spirits who are supposed to be tormenting them.

One of the oldest Women's Missionary Societies is the Zenana Bible and Medical Mission, which was founded in 1852 under the name of the Indian Female Normal School and Instruction Society. It commenced medical mission work so long ago as 1875, when a small dispensary was opened in Lucknow. In those days Indian women were not so accessible to lady missionaries as they are now, and it was not till 1883 that premises were secured for the purposes of a hospital, with accommodation for in-patients. It was about this time that the lady medical missionary in charge was called to render aid to the Maharoni of Punnah, and the story is very well known, how the Maharoni, having been successfully brought through a serious illness, sent a message to Queen Victoria, describing the sufferings of native women in times of sickness, and Her Majesty's answer to the missionary is also well known: "We had no idea that things were so bad as that. Something must be done for these poor creatures."

Passing on from those days to the present time, the Society has now three medical mission stations, at Benares, Lucknow, and Patna respectively. At the two former places large and commodious buildings have been erected within the past few years at a cost of some £6000 to £7000, the money being specially subscribed for the purpose. Then there are the Victoria Hospital for Women at Benares, a gift from one of the Society's subscribers; and the Lady Kinnaird Memorial Hospital at Lucknow, in memory of the foundress of the Society. The Medical Mission at Patna is comparatively young, but the lady doctor in charge, together with an English lady nurse, find themselves overwhelmed with applications for medical relief, and steps are being taken to erect a third hospital here. Nearly £2000 has already been subscribed for this purpose, but another £1000 is very urgently needed before the buildings can be completed.

The lady doctors are assisted by an English matron, native Christian trained nurses, and other Christian attendants. The latest development has been the appointment of a zenana lady missionary at each of the hospitals, to follow up the work of the lady medical missionary by visiting the patients afterwards in their homes. There are also five ladies now studying in London whose medical course is approaching completion, when they will at once proceed to the Indian mission field. During the year 1890 (the last for which particulars are to hand) the in-patients of the hospitals at Benares and Lucknow numbered 326, and the out-patients 6963, the total attendances being 22,056.

The work provides for the relief of a mass of human suffering and misery which few can realise. The main object of the Mission is to seek the salvation of souls, and the doctor is never allowed to displace the evangelist. The office of the Society is at 2, Adelphi-terrace, Strand, W.C.

THE CHILDREN OF POOR EUROPEANS IN INDIA.

Committees have been formed at Calcutta and Melbourne, to carry out Mrs. Euxton's scheme for providing homes for poor Anglo-Indian children. The committee at Calcutta will receive and investigate the applications of those who are anxious to send children out to Australia; and will collect money to defray the expenses of passage, and the support of the children who are selected. Several names of children have been registered, and the committee await more applications, and the names of any one who would guarantee the support of a child in order to give the scheme a fair trial. The passage money, &c., of each child between the ages of nine and ten will average about, Rs. 217, and once landed in Australia each child's support will cost about Rs. 15-8 per month, that is, thirteen pounds per annum. The hon. treasurer is Mrs. C. F. Ruxton, Partabgunge, Tirhoot State Railway, Bengal, India.

The Outlook in Ireland.

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The Irish Poor Law elections, just over, afford striking illustration of the amount of toleration nceded by the priests to their political ponents. Let it be carefully borne in mind at the Parnellite candidates are all Roman atholics. They go to mass, pay dues to the iests, and in many cases are frequent attend- its at the Confessional. They, however, refuse follow the guidance of the priests in politics, d for this a united and most determined effort as been made to drive them from the Poor Law oards. The system of open voting still prevails Poor Law elections. This gives the priests a omendous advantage, and they were not slow to e it. They were able to know exactly how each an voted. They followed the voting papers from use to house, in some cases, it is openly alleged, aring them up when the vote was found to ve been cast for an anti-clerical candidate. us, in Navan, Dr. Nulty, Roman Catholic ishop of Meath, preached a regular crusade ainst the Parnellite candidates. The editor of a ublin weekly organ says: "We have in our sk a letter from a well-known gentleman in avan, declaring that the result of the elections that Union has simply been brought about by lerical intimidation of the ignorant and super- itious.' The election, he declares, was made a ligious question, and clergy were brought in om distant parishes, lest the local clergy alone ight not be sufficient to intimidate the people." In St. Mary's Ward, Cork, Canon O'Mahony ed every weapon in his armoury against the rnellite candidate. Yet the latter was success- l, and declared after the declaration of the ll that "calumny and slander were unfairly ed against him, and every householder in the ard was informed by a certain reverend gentle- an that he would rather see an Orangeman turned than him." Such were the lines on ich the Poor Law elections have been fought re. Altar denunciation, boycotting in their siness, and even violence, have been employed ainst the anti-clerical candidates. The Inde- ndent charges that in some places the "voting pers for a whole country side were left at the use of the parish priest." It asserts, too, that e priests insisted on "going into the houses of mble men, and on having the voting papers lled up as they, and not as the voters them- lves, desired, and in actually tearing up the ting papers when they found the voters durate in holding to their convictions."

These are very specific charges, and they have t been refuted. Of course, every one at all nversant with the present condition of Ireland ows perfectly well that it is not to uphold the ral law that the priesthood of Ireland is now hting a death struggle in the political arena, t to try and win back political power wrested m the clergy by Parnell.

The folly of the course now being pursued by e Irish priesthood is so apparent that it is ming they have not long since changed their tics in the interests of self-preservation. The lowing is culled from a Dublin daily paper, d depicts a scene enacted in Archbishop oke's Cathedral grounds: "Yesterday evening unday, March 27), after Complin in the Cathe- al, a respectable man, named Denis M'Carthy, s returning home with his two children after tending the devotions. Meeting with a friend stopped to speak to him on business matters, en, in a moment or two, Father Rafferty, dm., came out of the palace gate and called Carty.' Not knowing who called, in the semi- rkness of the evening, M'Carthy approached, d met with the salutation, 'You ruffian! why e you obstructing the place?' and without rther preface the inoffensive man received two avy blows, one on the eye the other on the eek. M'Carthy asked for an explanation, which s not given him, and said he would make the v. gentleman answer for his conduct at the xt Petty Sessions. Informations were lodged -day."

It does not require much acquaintance with e Bible to know that such men as Mr. Rafferty not possess the spirit of Christ. Accordingly, e breach between priests and people is daily owing wider; old prejudices against Protes- ntism are fast dying out; the Word of God is ing eagerly scanned for arguments against iestly aggression. The district visitor and the portear find an open door where hitherto bolts and bars stopped their progress. In fact, Ire- land is passing through a revolution in which she needs the prayers and best Christian efforts of God's people. In Rev. T. Connellan's paper, The Catholic, for March (Mecredy and Kyle), there was given an account by a converted Roman Catholic of God's leading in his regard. The writer is a young man living in the south of Ireland. When he had found Christ for himself, he immediately began to work among those who did not enjoy the same happiness. His labours have been so marvellously blessed that now he forms one of a body of seven—all converts from the Church of Rome—who night and morning kneel together to praise God for having revealed to them Jesus Christ, the Great Shepherd of the sheep, the same yesterday, and to-day, and for- ever. This is but one of many instances tending to show that there is an open door in Ireland for preaching the Gospel and winning souls to Christ.

Mr. Connellan, the ex-priest, is conducting Gospel meetings in Dublin every Sunday for Roman Catholics, and they are well-attended. He works quietly, and, as far as possible, eschews controversy. His labours have already been much owned of God. All over the island, but especially in the towns and centres of enlighten- ment, there are evidences of an inquiring spirit among Roman Catholics, and a feeling of pro- found discontent with their Romish priests and system. A clergyman in connection with the Irish Society recently wrote: "I am speaking from personal experience when I say that there is a very fair proportion of the Roman Catholics who do not at all believe in the principal doc- trines of the Church of Rome." Let us praise God for this, and may God's people in England and Ireland let their light so shine that their Roman Catholic brethren may glorify our Father in heaven.

MISS ROBINSON'S WORK.

In my "Annual Statement" last January, I mentioned that a very large, handsome music- hall, with a seven days' licence, "The Empire Palace," had been built almost behind our "Speedwell," and that we had succeeded in hiring it for Sunday-evening services for three months, at a cost of £60. The results have been such that, now the time has expired, we dare not give up these services, and I have engaged the Hall for fifty-two Sundays, with liberty to use it afternoon and evening. The rent alone is £250, besides other expenses; I appeal to the Lord's stewards for support in this undertaking.

If any Christians visiting this neighbourhood would come and see, they would be welcomed. In close proximity to the People's Park and to the railway station, this part of the town is thronged by thousands of persons on a Sunday, and we have sustained open-air meetings, besides the meetings in our own Speedwell Hall and this Empire Music Hall all the winter, and all crowded. The behaviour has been exceptionally good, and God has given us many conversions, both among soldiers and civilians. The most advanced Ritualist clergyman here had bespoken the music-hall for three months after us; this confirmed me in my resolve to retain possession. We are expecting Mr. Richard Weaver during April. "Brethren, pray for us."—Yours faith- fully, Sarah Robinson.

PERSECUTION IN FINLAND.—An occasional correspondent of Evangelical Christendom writes:— "It is said that the Lutherans, and especially the Lutheran pastors, in Finland, are trying to get a law passed to prevent all free religious services. If such a law were passed, scores (if not hundreds) of the best Christians of Finland, would be thrown into prison. It is to be hoped that the report is not true, though, as far as we can judge, we fear that it is. One of the lay preachers who will be affected by the new law—if it passes—speaks of prospective fines and imprisonments as follows: 'But if they put us in prison they cannot take Christ from us. We are prepared for everything except to renounce Him. If they imprison us, we will make the prison walls sound with the Songs of Zion. They may take away our good name, but we have "a new name" they cannot take away. They cannot confiscate Heaven. We shall one day pass through the Golden Gates, and no one will there hinder us telling the wonderful story of Jesus and his love. But we long to tell of that love here below, that the travellers on the world's highway may catch the hope that shines through centuries from the crucified King on Cal- vary.'"

CITY OF LONDON ABSTAINERS' UNION.

The fourteenth annual meeting of this Union took place on Thursday last at the Y.M.C.A., Aldersgate-street. The report stated that strenu- ous efforts were made in opposition to the pro- posal to licence the large premises at the corner of Jewin-street, Redcross-street, for the sale of intoxicants, and with the help of the officers of the Young Men's Christian Association some thousand signatures were obtained, and the com- mittee was glad to state that the licence was refused. An investigation by the secretary showed that within a radius of three hundred yards of the premises in question there were at least twenty-five public-houses or wine bars. The meetings of the Union in the warehouses had been on the whole well attended, the addresses being much appreciated. The committee con- tinued to receive gratifying assurances that their work was appreciated in the City warehouses. The Bishop of London, who presided, said the City Total Abstinence Union was doing, in the sphere in which it operated, a great work. He did not know any other cause that had made such steady progress during the last half-century as the total abstinence question. There was no sign of any abatement of interest; it was a cause which must succeed by its own force, and they would at last make this country sober. The effort made to limit the number of public-houses was taking effect, and the authorities had come to the conclusion that there were too many of them. The work of the society was both mis- sionary and educational.

Dr. Edmunds (of the Temperance Hospital) said he had been an abstainer for thirty years, and had come to the conclusion that he was much better for having been an abstainer.

Rev. Septimus Buss said it seemed to him that the prospect of the temperance cause was never more favourable than at the present time.

Rev. Thomas Evans delivered a vigorous ad- dress, principally dwelling on the question of Sunday closing. It was a shame that the ques- tion had not been settled long ago. Scotland and Wales had Sunday closing, and if the heads of all religious denominations were to unite and determine that the Sabbath in England should be free from this disgrace, Sunday closing would become a fact before twelve months had gone by.

JEWISH WORK IN ODESSA.

Pastor Kornmann, of the Reformed Evan- gelical Church of Odessa, writes:—"During the past year I have baptized thirty Jews, although I had to send away many others. They all seem to have a preference for the Reformed Church for different reasons; among others, because the Ten Commandments are repeated in the same order as in the Synagogue, which is not the case in the Lutheran Church; then, because our churches are devoid of crucifixes or images of any kind; and, again, because of the simplicity and solemnity of the Reformed service. Many of them, however, are in pecuniary distress, and although we have no funds for such purposes, I spent three hundred roubles in the form of relief.

"It gives me pain to send away the poor Jews, for there are able men amongst them; but I cannot, by receiving them into the Church of Christ, sever them from their friends and natural sources of help, and then leave them to starve. If I receive them into my congregation I have duties towards them which I cannot conscien- tiously shirk."

Pastor Kornmann's address is 58, Chersoner- strasse, Odessa.

Rev. C. A. Schönberger, formerly of Vienna, speaks in high earnest of the pastor, and says:— "I should be most thankful if some practical and prayerful interest could be excited in his work among the masses of Jews in Odessa."

STRANGERS' REST, RATCLIFF HIGHWAY.—On Friday evening the Strangers' Rest was once more the scene of a farewell gathering, the occasion being that of bidding God-speed to Miss Granger, one of the workers, who is about to sail for Zanzibar to help in the Sailors' Rest recently opened there. After a few words from the Chairman, Mr. G. Garden, on Luke v. 1-11, and prayer, the Hon. Secretary, Mr. J. Theo. Isaac, made an appeal for Scriptures in several languages, and gave an encouraging account of the work of the past month. The principal part of the meeting was taken up by a helpful and heart- stirring address from Dr. Neatby, based on Phil. iii. 8-12.

THE GOSPEL IN ITALY.

Some time ago I gave in your valued paper an account of the opening of the Parish Church at Mont Orfano, for Protestant worship. Readers of The Christian will be interested to hear of the extension of the movement to another village. Several of our lady workers have been holding a cottage meeting at Trobaso every Sunday, besides visiting, and going once a week to teach the young people to read, &c. This has greatly annoyed the priest, who caused an anonymous letter to be written to Pastor Bossi, saying that if he continued to send "his women to teach false doctrine," they would not "return on their own legs." This threat, however, only made the ladies rejoice, feeling that the enemy would not be so busy if there was not real work going on; and they have not only steadily persevered, but have been invited to visit the surrounding villages by those who came to the meetings at Trobaso.

The meetings have been held in the house of a man who was a mason, and worked in the building of our new church at Intra. This man had been a great deal in Switzerland, and frequently attended evangelical services. He gladly offered his house for the meetings, and having embraced the truth, was received into the church at Intra last Easter. How little we thought, when that robust, fine, man stood up to testify of his faith in Christ that the following Easter he would be at rest in the Lord! Matteo attended the service at Intra with his son and daughter whenever able to do so, often bringing a friend with him. He frequently spoke to his acquaintances of Christ as the only way of salvation. He became a very staunch Protestant, but until he was taken ill, the workers did not know how truly he leaned upon Christ. His wife and others now bear testimony to the change in his life and conduct, and of how constantly he read the Gospel and spoke of it to them all. He died from an illness following upon influenza. He saw all the relatives and friends who went to inquire after him, and spoke to them of his perfect rest in Christ. A brother-in-law begged him to confess to the priest, but he replied that he had confessed to Christ, and did not need the help of any man.

On the Sunday after our friend's entrance into the heavenly mansions his body was carried to its last resting-place. It had to be let down in a sheet from the balcony and placed in the coffin, as the crooked staircase was too narrow to carry down the coffin. Even this was directed of the Lord, for thus many people saw the body after death, which was well, for the Roman Catholics say that after death Protestants have horns and other disfigurements. On arriving at the village cemetery we found many gathered together. When Signor Bossi began to speak, the bells of the church pealed forth to drown his voice, but unavailing, for at least three hundred must have heard as he preached Christ, the Way, the Truth, and the Life. Our thirty-five orphans sang hymns, and after the funeral, Gospels and tracts were distributed, even the carabinieri asking for them.

A deep impression seems to have been made at the funeral. Matteo desired that the text which had sustained him should be sent to the priest—"Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me," &c. These poor, ignorant people believe the tales circulated by a half-witted sister of Matteo's, who has said, publicly, that when her brother was dying, the bed jumped up in the air, and they afterwards heard dreadful noises, as his spirit frequently appeared to them. One woman, much opposed to us, who was present when the poor man was dying, told the priest of his peaceful end. The priest has since been round the cemetery, in procession with the "host," carried under a gorgeous umbrella, and has consecrated the ground, omitting the Protestant grave.

I would ask readers of The Christian to pray for the widow and family, that they may become earnest Christians, and keep the house open for the meetings. The daughters are fully persuaded, but the poor widow is still undecided.

IRELAND.—A successful series of Gospel services has just been held in the Gospel Hall, Loughbrickland, co. Down, by some agents of the Irish Evangelisation Society; and a similar series has been held at Castledawson, co. Derry, by Rev. Dr. Hall, of Maghera, and others.

SOUTH-EAST AFRICA MISSION.

Permit us to thank those of your readers who have followed the itinerants in Zululand with their prayers and sympathy. It may interest them to know that at this, the hot, rainy season, the evangelists are engaged in work at Durban among the thousands of heathen workmen and servants who come to the town for short periods of service. The men are always to be found in the evening in their barracks. One of the largest meetings was among the harbour labourers, when there was scarcely standing-room in the building. There are many inquirers and much interest is evinced, but we need the quickening power of the Holy Spirit. For this we pray.

A great work waits to be done among native girls in service. Many come from mission-stations to the towns. In most instances they lodge where they like, being free every evening at an early hour. Noble work is being done at Maritzburg, by Mrs. MacLaren, among this class, for whom she opened a Home some years ago. Similar help is greatly needed for them in other towns.

When not preaching, our evangelists are occupied in various ways; Mr. Olsen in tent-making. He has made a serviceable tent for the on which they are eager to start as soon as the rains cease. The chief through whose district they itinerated has sent a message, asking them to return and remain amongst his people. In April we hope three other workers will start on a journey through the colony, carrying books and Scriptures for sale and distribution. They also will be provided with a home-made tent. Their work will be among Europeans, and as they go they will preach as well as scatter Gospel literature.

The colporteurs' sales in and around Durban have been very encouraging. The Gospel has also been carried to the sailors, the ships being regularly visited. The Railway Mission branch is very promising. The gangers and their families, in their isolated cottages along the line, will be reached by the colporteurs. Two families came a long distance in a trolley through a thunderstorm to our meeting held at a small station. One of the wives said it was the first service for nine years which she had had the opportunity to attend.

Mr. Howe and myself have been engaged in some of the country towns. Christians at home, who are favoured with so much to sustain and stimulate the Christian life, cannot realise the position of many of God's people who are earning a living in these colonies. Many here might truthfully say, as did a poor Zulu woman,

"I HAVE TWO HEARTS;

my big heart is for the world, and my little heart for Jesus."

We are spending the hottest month in a fine climate, 5500 feet above the sea, under the shadow of Majuba. On its summit and slopes are the graves of many British officers and men who gave their lives in their country's cause. In the valleys below and around are hundreds of kraals, to which as yet no messenger has gone for the honour of Jesus. We hope to welcome three or more workers from England to our mission in April. Others who may be stirred to come should communicate with the hon. treasurer of the Mission, Brigade-Surgeon Robinson, Northfield, Eltham, Kent.

Colonel Cardew, late Resident Commissioner in Zululand, is now in England, and has kindly consented to give information, if desired, regarding work among the Zulus, in whom he feels a deep interest. To the glory of God let me add that, depending on Him alone to meet the needs of the workers and the work, we have not lacked. Last week, after posting £5, the rent of the Mission House, we told the Lord the general fund was now exhausted. An hour later a letter from England brought us exactly that sum! Once, in a time of need, a passing stranger, from Australia, visited the Mission House, gave £10, and afterwards left a sealed packet, which was found to contain £20. "God is unto us a God of deliverances." (Mrs.) M. S. Osborn-Howe.

CAPE GENERAL MISSION.—The Annual Report of the Cape General Mission for 1891, entitled "In the Far South," has just been published. It has been tastefully printed, and contains illustrations bearing on work among the heathen. Copies will be sent gratis, on application to the secretary of the Mission, 2, Berkeley-terrace, Wimbledon.

EVANGELICAL SCHOOLS IN SPAIN.

In evidence of the usefulness of evangelical schools in Spain, I give the following extracts from communications recently received from Mr Murray (of Fuente de Vaqueros), our missionary to the towns and villages of the Vega of Granada. Mr. Murray writes:—

"Again diphtheria has appeared, and six of our brightest and best boys have died of it. I was in constant attendance twice a day from the time that I heard of each seizure. Without exception, the boys took medicines from me that they would not take from their parents or doctors. One, with the muffled voice that this disease often produces, sang our hymns in his last hours. All the others were directed to the Saviour, and expressed themselves as having asked salvation by Jesus only. The answers to my appeals and questions were often touching. Not one of the six families asked the priest to perform the customary funeral rites, or visit the children when dying. This has terribly roused him. ...We have now troops of friends among the children and youths of both sexes. These have gained us the goodwill of scores of mothers and grandmothers. At first, women were rarely seen in our services. They are still less numerous than the men and lads, but now they come in dozens. I have been asked to hold meetings or plant schools in ten villages and towns. Our tracts, gospels, and Bibles have reached at least thirteen villages."

Besides the day-school for boys, there is a night-school for men, which is very popular. Mr Murray further writes:—"Sixty to seventy now read in the New Testament. A small part of these have not read one gospel. Many more than these have read two and three, and a class of fifteen to twenty men have besides read the Acts, Romans, and 1 Corinthians. The Gospels and New Testaments are often conned in the houses, and carried to the fields and read aloud at mid-day gatherings of workers. Instead of the foolish and sometimes wicked songs, some ten young women were heard recently singing, whilst gathering olive-berries, one of our favourite hymns, begging for pardon through the Redeemer....We have more than a hundred under instruction, and I have been asked to receive sixteen more that we cannot now take for want of space."

These facts, coming from a mission station which was only opened during the course of last year, speak for themselves. I may mention, however, that the work is carried on in the face of the most determined opposition of the priest and authorities of the place. Mr. Murray is very anxious to open a school for girls and young women, but we cannot do so at present for want of funds. I shall gladly send, upon application, free copies of "Times of Refreshing in Spain" to any who may desire further information regarding the work. Our funds are very low, owing to the very many recent deaths among our supporters, and I would be very thankful to receive help at this time of need from friends of the Lord's work in Spain. Spain's need is great, and, as Mr. Murray says, "we can descry, though the harvest is not yet, fields whitening for the sickle."

THE COMING DAY.

Oh! haste the day when Israel's land,
From Gentile bondage free,
Shall own the sway of Christ's command—
In Him Messiah see!

Oh! haste that day when Jesus' reign
Shall spread to every shore,
When kings and powers that strive in vain
Shall strive 'gainst Him no more!

Oh! haste that day when Israel's host,
Redeemed from every clime,
No more on troubled billows tossed,
Shall hail the welcome time!

Oh! haste that day when Judah's tribe
With Ephraim shall be one,
When both to Christ shall praise ascribe,
As David's royal Son!

Oh! haste that day when God's elect
Before his throne shall stand,
No more trod down, cast off, deject,
But crowned at his right hand!

THE CHRISTIAN POLICE ASSOCIATION.

Already the "May" meetings are upon us, and one of the earliest of them took place on the last day of March, when Exeter Hall was captured by a strong force of police, who from early morn to late at eve united in prayer, praise, and earnest testimony. The occasion was the ninth anniversary of the Christian Police Association, which has now become international, and which certainly has already done a remarkable work at home, which it may be expected to be the means of doing in other lands also.

The proceedings on Thursday last began with an early prayer meeting, followed, morning and afternoon, by conferences of delegates, presided over by Messrs. A. A. Head and T. A. Denny, both of whom addressed helpful and hearty words to the members and friends present.

We do not intend giving any detailed report of the words spoken by the delegates; suffice it that men representing the Metropolitan and City police, the provincial forces, both county and borough, in many parts of England, Scotland, and Wales, also the Royal Constabulary of Ireland, spoke tersely and to the point, telling of good work going on in their respective divisions and districts. All, of course, was not couleur de rose; difficulties and disappointments were at times frankly indicated, but, on the whole, no one could listen to the numerous testimonies borne—borne, too, by men accustomed to observe and note—without coming to the conclusion that the C.P.A. has been used of God in doing a very real work, in uniting together and encouraging Christian men, in bringing backsliders home to their Father, and in leading the unconverted and careless to consider their ways, reflect on their danger, and seek mercy through Jesus Christ.

POLICE OF AMERICA AND CANADA.

Miss Gurney, Hon. Sec., speaking at the afternoon meeting, gave a really interesting and hopeful account of her experiences in America and Canada, where, with a lady friend, Mrs. Walker, she has been journeying in order to stir up interest in Christian work among the police. By her own express desire we refrain from giving details of her visit to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Boston, Hartford, New Haven, Bridgport, Rochester, Detroit, and Chicago in the United States, and Toronto, Hamilton, London, and St. Katherines in Canada.

The new report, presented at these meetings, concludes an outline of this tour in the following words:—"All through our tour, we praise God for health and strength and safety, and a kind and cordial welcome in every place we have visited. We are favourably impressed with the police departments of America, and believe, that should our Association take firm root amongst them, it will be carried on with a power and vigour unsurpassed in any other country. We have had many opportunities of speaking to the officers at 'roll-call,' and also of personal conversation, and we have always met with respectful and cordial attention and deep interest. In Chicago, during four weeks, we have been busy every evening in this way, speaking at twenty-four stations out of thirty-four, and visiting several two or three times to hold voluntary 'half-hour meetings,' and in no place have we received more genuine courtesy and marked appreciation of our efforts, from every commanding officer, as well as from the department at large. The work here is left in charge of four ladies, assisted by other ladies, who hold fortnightly meetings for prayer and consultation."

THE PUBLIC MEETINGS.

Two public meetings were held in the evening in the large hall, which was crowded by the police and their friends. At the first

General Brownlow, C.B., presided, and after a few opening words on the importance of such work, gave an earnest address based on 1 Cor. xvi. 13, "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong"—words which ring like the final words of a great commander on the eve of some great and decisive battle, and which seem, he felt, peculiarly suitable as a motto for Christian policemen.

Mr. J. Herbert Tritton gave an outline of the report, which referred with thankfulness to the extension of the work among policemen in various parts of the world, and the great awakening amongst the C.P.A. members as to their personal responsibility to live uprightly before their comrades, adorning the doctrine of Christ, their Master, and seeking to win others to Him. A remarkable wave of blessing has passed over many of the branches; there seems a greater spirit of inquiry than the workers remember to have seen at any time since the work began. This they chiefly ascribe to the constant prayer that goes up day by day for blessing. There is a daily one o'clock prayer meeting at the Central Institute, besides the weekly workers' prayer meeting on Wednesday, at 4.30 p.m. The "Quiet Days" are times of definite waiting upon God. The promise has been proved—"Ask and ye shall receive." The reality of the work is shown by the fact that week by week the workers are privileged to rejoice over precious souls born into the family of God. Many instances could be given of the various ways in which men, their wives, and friends, have met with the Saviour.

Proceeding, Mr. Tritton stated that one of the principal events of the year had been the extension of the Christian Police Association to the American continent through the tour just described. In Melbourne a branch had been established; in Tasmania it was trusted that the work would soon take a settled form; whilst in West Africa, at Sierra Leone, a little branch of Christian coloured policemen had been opened under the care of Mrs. Ingham. Work was also being done in Cape Colony, Bechuanaland, Shanghai, Singapore, and Sweden. A women's branch of the Association had been formed, and the Central Police Institute had been attended with much success. The total abstinence cause had been actively pushed in many branches, and the roll of membership in the Police Temperance Union now now amounted to six thousand. A sum of £2000 was needed annually for the work of the Association, besides the necessary funds for the Convalescent Home and Orphange. The report concludes thus—"The time is short. We feel sure that those who know and love our coming Lord will help us, that our 'Peace Preservers' may be ready in their turn to greet the 'Prince of Peace!'"

The addresses which followed, by Revs. Thomas Lancaster and Charles Inwood, were not pleas on behalf of the work, but earnest and plain Gospel addresses, the aim being to win the unconverted in the audience to the Saviour. The Gospel was also beautifully rendered in song by Miss L. Harper, R.A.M. (Sister Louie), of the North Birmingham Mission, whose singing of "Remember now thy Creator" will surely linger long in many minds. Some 150 children from the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage were also present, and, in conjunction with members of the Police Choir, sang a number of hymns, Mr. S. Millar conducting.

After a brief interval, a second and similar meeting was held, presided over by Mr. J. Herbert Tritton, and addressed by Revs. J. Gelson Gregson, and J. G. Mantle.

MR. STOTT AND BATTERSEA PARK.

As you were good enough to report my intention to go visiting churches and conducting missions, rather than accept any of the churches which have honoured me with a call to the pastorate, it is due to your many readers to know why I have accepted the oversight of the church at Battersea-park.

It is, firstly, because I have had a strong drawing towards the place and people ever since the call was given.

Secondly, because there is a grand opportunity for earnest service among old and young.

Thirdly, because these are very commodious and suitable premises, well adapted for evangelical and evangelistic work, and a vastly populated neighbourhood to work upon, chiefly small tradesmen and artisans.

Fourthly, because the people seem so united, kind, and anxious to co-operate in every effort for the glory of God and the welfare of men.

Lastly, we may appropriately call the work the South London Baptist Forward Movement; and if there should be any Baptist friends living within reach of this centre of work, but unconnected with any other place of worship or work, we shall hail their presence and kind sympathy with gratitude and delight. We commenced work on Sunday (4th ult.), when fifteen were added unto the church. W. Stott.

BERLIN DEACONESSES, stationed in different parts of the city, are very often called for at the desire of the Empress. The plan proves a decided success. The sisters hardly suffice to do all the work, and it is now planned to form a ladies' association in connection with every station. The duty of these ladies will not only be to assist in gathering the necessary funds, but also to help in visiting the sick people among the poor.—Evangelical Christendom.

MILDMAY MEN'S NIGHT SCHOOL.

The twenty-second anniversary of the Mildmay Men's Night School was appropriately celebrated on Wednesday evening last week, in the Conference Hall. The attendance of both the scholars and their friends was large. Colonel Morton, who presided, said that the work accomplished during the winter session had been exceptionally thorough, and the results of the examination were most satisfactory. In Biblical knowledge especially the progress had been very gratifying, and though the questions proposed were far more searching and profound than in any previous year, they were answered with facility and accuracy. There was also every reason to believe that the spiritual lessons of the Scriptures, to which prominence is ever given, would be found to be a source of eternal joy and blessedness to many.

A brief statistical review of the school for the past session was submitted by Mr. P. S. Badenoch. The total number on the roll was 748, and the high average attendance (460) afforded one of the healthiest signs of the real vitality of the institution. Several married men had joined the school, but most of the students were young men, and unmarried. All of them were engaged during the day in some industrial vocation, as bakers, builders, confectioners, drapers, labourers, packers, warehousemen, clerks, printers, policemen, cabinet-makers—in short, no fewer than 130 different occupations were represented. The public sentiment (so to speak) of the school was excellent, and all the students were resolute in the endeavour to make the most of the advantages brought within their reach. In addition to the classified results, there were others of infinitely higher importance which could not thus be set forth, and these, without any attempt definitely to estimate them, Mr. Badenoch left to God.

The prizes (47) and certificates (170) were distributed by Mrs. H. C. Nisbet, who, in fulfilment of a promise made whilst residing at London, had come that day from distant Yorkshire to perform the interesting ceremony. Certain of the men were applauded as they were handed a certificate or a prize. When a negro over thirty years of age passed along the platform to receive his reward of merit, he was greeted with the hearty, prolonged applause of all within the hall.

The concluding address was delivered by Captain C. Orde Browne, who based his remarks on the account given in John ix. of the man that was born blind being restored to sight. He dwelt with great force and effect upon the necessity, not simply of knowing the facts of the Gospel, but of such a vital realisation of them—of the relation of the blind, helpless sinner to the Saviour, the sole source of pardon, light, and life—that each may be able, from the assurance which comes direct from God, to declare, "One thing I know, that whereas I was blind now I see."

In the Schwartzathal.

Miss A. Von Weling, of the Alliance House, Blankenburg, Thuringia, writes:—We are able to report gratefully of the progress of our Mission, which is entering upon its seventh year. The meetings are increasingly well-attended, and we have proofs of the working of the Spirit of God. The increase also in the number of visitors as of orphans has necessitated the building of a third house; our only cause of regret being that, owing to want of accommodation, we have weekly to refuse admittance to little ones whose case is laid before us. At our out-station, too, our Evangelist is doing good work, and we are most anxious to place a second in that wide region. We are looking forward to English visitors (in search of health) and Christian intercourse during the summer months.

The Superintendent of the Mission, Rev. G. A. Kaiser, purposes visiting England, Scotland, and Ireland, for a month, beginning with March 30. He will be glad to give any particulars about this "mission work in Luther's land," at drawing-room and other meetings, and begs that any proposal of meetings will be forwarded to his address, care of Rev. D. Baron, 23, Grove-road, Highgate-road, N.W.

TAUNTON.—A three days' convention for the deepening of spiritual life has been held in this town, addresses being delivered by Rev. C. G. Moore, J. T. Butlin, J. J. Luce, and W. Houghton and others. The gatherings were felt by many to be a time of real spiritual power and blessing.

AMONG LEPERS OF UPPER BURMAH.

Upper Burmah was annexed to the British Crown in 1886, and it was a day of great excitement when English gunboats touched the strands of Mandalay and British troops marched through her streets to the palace-gates and demanded the surrender of King Theebaw and his Court. All was accomplished without the crack of a single rifle, and Mandalay soon saw the Union Jack flying over the ex-king's throne-room.

If Government saw fit to annex the province, the Church of Christ was not slow to realise her responsibility to the newly-acquired realm. Christian missions had previously been at work here, and the Wesleyan Foreign Missionary Society sent Rev. W. R. Winston to found another centre of Christian influence and enterprise. Buddhism is the religion of Burmah, and I can imagine no race more devoted than the Burmese to Lord Buddha. His images are everywhere—on hill-top and in valley, in jungle and in town; in the rich man's home and the poor man's bamboo shanty. Buddhist shrines of beautiful design are built so freely that Burmah is called the land of pagodas.

Beneath the shadow of Buddhist shrines are often found the most miserable and diseased mortals in this or any land. These are the lepers. How few of your readers have any idea of what a leper is! 2 Kings v. 1-14 is perhaps the sum of their knowledge of leprosy; but Naaman can teach them very little. At home you never have the sad sights which we in Burmah daily witness. Often are the poor lepers handless, footless, noseless, blind—absolutely rotting in the blazing sun of Burmah! We see these creatures, and have begun a work among them to alleviate their bodily miseries and to save their souls. Buddhist monks do not preach to these lone people; and though the lepers dwell around the pagodas it is only because these are public buildings and places where outcasts may remain undisturbed. Rev. W. R. Winston first thought of leper work in this country, and canvassed north and south and east and west for money to begin a work for the rescue of these creatures. He collected nearly £400, and then built a small Home to which lepers might come. It fell to my lot on March 1, 1891, to go out and try to gather in the first lepers to the Home. When I invited these that first morning many were frightened and suspicious. What could an Englishman want with them? Many thought I wished to end their sufferings by death. Persuasions and kindness were my only weapons, and I was glad at the end of the day to have been able to induce seven lepers to come to the Home provided for them. The work grew by the aid of those already gathered in, advertising the refuge among other lepers, and two larger wards were built capable of accommodating about eighty inmates. To-day we have fifty under our care. These we house, and feed, and clothe. They are nursed when sick, and daily is the Gospel preached to them.

Dr. G. A. Pedley, a private practitioner in Mandalay, and son of well-known Christians in Camberwell, has kindly given his services to the Home. In his hands the medical work is placed. If your readers could only see for themselves the terrible instances of the power of this fell disease in ruining the lives of men, they would be moved to practical pity towards them. Naturally human beings already "dragged by leprosy" (as the Burmese say) are only too exposed to the attacks of fever, dysentery, and all the other ills to which those who live in the Tropics are liable; hence the medical work is great, and we need money to do our best to place this department in a proper position. A wound-dresser is needed, and £25 a year will enable me to lend the doctor the services of such a helper. I have witnessed the Scripture scene—even here in Burmah—of a dog licking a poor leper's wound.

Every morning we have a service for Christian worship among them. Such hymns as, "Take the Name of Jesus with you," and "Wash me in the blood of the Lamb," are often sung, and the lepers listen attentively to the preaching of the Gospel. Death has been busy in our diseased household. One old woman, named Ma So, was the saddest sight I ever saw—so mutilated and wasted. When admitted to the Home she was very weak, but food and care lengthened her life. In a little hut made on purpose for her, she prayed, the night before she died, the following short prayer: "Lord Jesus, I am Ma So, a dying leper; take me in my weakness, and save me now. Amen."

This work is purely undenominational. A sum so small as five pounds means a year's happy life to a fellow-creature who to-day is utterly without hope or brightness in the world. From our point of view, out here on the field, Christian service means to thousands at home Christian giving. You cannot come here and do the work, but you can give to the work itself; and this service of giving will be as real and acceptable to God as though you were with us among the lepers themselves.

Mandalay. (Rev.) Arthur H. Bestall.

NEWS FROM CENTRAL CHINA.

Mr. J. J. Coulthard, writing from Cheo-Kia-K'eo, Honan, says:—

"The appointment of a co-pastor at this station will be a great help to work in this centre. During the past year three have been baptized, and three or four others are waiting for baptism. I have been much encouraged by the earnestness shown by some of the native Christians, and of one in particular. They are subjected to very many difficulties and temptations, to which the Christian world in the home lands is a stranger. Some have given me deep sorrow, and fallen from the happy state in which they were rejoicing a year ago. How much they need our sympathy!

"This year the contributions of the native church defray the expenses of a chapel upon one of the main streets. It has been recently opened for the purpose of daily preaching the Gospel to the many thousands on this the south side of the river, and will be maintained by the native Christians themselves. Lately we have had an introduction through medicine to the palatial abode of His Excellency the Chinese Minister to Corea. He listens attentively to the truth. Oh, that he might be led to accept it! His mother has just died of cancer and a complication of diseases. The influenza has at length reached Honan, and this city is ravaged by it. Thousands have been attacked, and numbers have died."

THE SCRIPTURES IN WEST CHINA.

I desire to express to you my sincere thanks for so kindly sending The Christian every week. It has come as a most welcome packet regularly for the last four years. It is read with deep interest both by myself and fellow-labourers, and it is a source of help and encouragement to us in the Lord's work.

You will be glad to know that the work of giving the Bible to the heathen goes on in West China with increasing energy. The circulation from this centre was larger last year than in any previous one, and our operations were extended to regions more remote, in some cases ours being the first foreign foot.

The circulation from the Chungking Agency for last year was:—2120 New Testaments; 63,737 Gospel portions and Acts; 105,008 Christian tracts; total, 170,865. Our rule is to sell these copies at about one-third of their cost, but this year we made an exception, and in addition to our sales made a distribution at the Great Triennial Examination, held in the provincial capital of Chen, Tu last September. There were fifteen thousand students gathered there to compete for one hundred Chinese degrees of M.A. The first ten thousand of these men received each a Gospel portion and a Christian tract as they retired from the Examination Hall.

During the year journeys covering a distance of fifteen thousand English miles have been undertaken by myself and colporteurs, and countless cities and market towns have been visited. We would be glad of the prayers of God's people for blessing on the seed thus widely sown.—Yours sincerely, James Murray.

Chungking.

IN THE CHINA SEAS.—From Hankow an interesting account comes of evangelistic services held on board a British man-of-war by Messrs. F. R. Johnson and Walter Milward, agents of the National Bible Society of Scotland, who recently went to China. While studying the Chinese language, they asked permission to hold weekly meetings with the men on the gunboat then lying in the river. This was readily granted by the officer in command. In the course of two months four of the crew have professed conversion, and several others are giving evidence of a hopeful change in their lives.

TELUGUS IN WANT.

Rev. J. Kiernan, missionary at Vinnukonda, Kistna District, Madras Presidency, who labours under Dr. Clough amongst the Telugus, in a recent letter said:—

"We have just now famine staring us in the face; grain and water are scarce. I have drawn up a petition to the Collector and Magistrate of the Kistna District, praying that he would start famine relief works for our poor Christians who are the most in need. Cattle are dropping off by the hundred. The petition was signed by about thirteen hundred men, all Christians. The Collector, in reply, told me that Government has granted seven thousand rupees for the deepening of wells and tanks. With our seven thousand poor Christians that sum will be very inadequate to give them work even for one month.

"We have many months more before the monsoon sets in, and I do not know what the people will do till then. Preaching to those who are starving appears out of the question, and to help them in any small way, so as to get even one substantial meal, is beyond my power. We pray that help may not come too late, as on the occasion of the last Indian famine, when many thousands were in their graves. Dr. Clough, the 'Apostle to the Telugus,' is now in America. May he long be spared to work in this field. Until the Lord comes, let us work, work, work!"

We described, a year ago, the great work of the American Baptist Mission among the Telugus. There are many converts every year; but of late there have been no baptisms, because there is no water. In an address delivered a few weeks ago in Chicago, and reported in the Standard, published in that city, Dr. Clough said: "We have fifty thousand Christians over there. About ten thousand of them have been baptized within the last thirteen months, and they are coming as fast as we can take care of them at the present time. These fifty thousand live in about fifteen hundred towns and villages, peopled by probably eight millions of human beings." We trust these Oriental Christian converts will realise Western Christian sympathy in their sore distress.

NOTES FROM CHICAGO.

Lady Henry Somerset has gone from our "garden city." A public farewell was given in the Central Music Hall, and the best young America could do was freely tendered. A testimonial on vellum was presented, and a committee appointed to see her safely on board the departing steamship on April 13. It is understood that she will continue to write for the Union Signal, the organ of the W.C.T.U.

The magnificent Temperance Temple is nearly completed, and will be formally opened May 1st. Over one hundred thousand dollars' worth of rents have already been taken for the spacious and elegant rooms. Old Farwell Hall will soon be demolished. The new steel structure will give more ample room for the Y.M.C.A. work. A call has been issued to nearly every religious paper in America for aid to erect a model Sunday-school building on the grounds of the World's Columbian Exposition. This building would also be used as a Sunday-school headquarters and reception-room during the Exposition, and, if possible, as a headquarters for colporteur and personal Christian work on the ground. It is proposed to raise the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars for the building, and an additional sum for expenses, by contributions from Sunday-schools and individuals. F.

"THE AFRICAN NEWS."—Bishop William Taylor's monthly illustrated newspaper, in addition to the latest news of work in the African field, contains a chapter from the life-history of its editor and one of his Scripture expositions. The year's subscription for a post-paid copy is 5s., which should be sent to Rev. Ross Taylor, 210, Eighth-avenue, New York. As a special premium a portrait of the Bishop with autograph signature is now being given to subscribers.

BIBLE TEACHING.—A Manchester gentleman, who prefers to remain anonymous, with the desire of raising the standard of Bible teaching which prevails in so many Sunday and ragged schools, has generously offered £100 per year for five years to defray the cost of prizes and certificates to be awarded annually to the teachers and scholars of Manchester who take the highest positions in a Scripture examination to be conducted by a joint committee composed of representatives of all the Christian denominations.

For the Young.

THE GOSPEL IN PARABLE.

Dear Young Friends,—I want to write you something about the parable of the Good Shepherd and the lost sheep. You know where to find it, in the fifteenth chapter of St. Luke's Gospel. First I have a story to tell you, and a question to ask, and then another story, which I do not think you have ever read. My first story is very short and simple. Near our house live three sisters, who each in her turn has kept her father's little flock. Now it is the youngest, Denise, who is shepherdess; perhaps she wearies a little when she is all day alone from dawn to sunset, with no one to speak to but her sheep and lambs.

Well, I don't know how she managed it, but one night she came home in great trouble—she had lost a lamb! Her flock that day was several miles from the house. She was obliged to lead the others to shelter for the night, so she was forced to leave the lamb behind in the glen, and go home without it. When her big brother Jem heard her story, he took his lantern and set off in search of the little wanderer. Where do you think he found it? Fast asleep at the foot of a rock, not in the least concerned about its danger. Then, like the Good Shepherd in the parable, he carried it home rejoicing; though I don't think the lamb cared at all about it. Now for my question—Do you think this is the way the Lord Jesus saves us?

I want you to think a little before answering yes or no. I think He wakes his lost sheep before he carries them home. He does not find them asleep and leave them so. You know in the same chapter where we have the parable of the lost sheep, and the lost piece of money, we have also the parable of the lost son, and he goes back himself to seek his father and his home. We must read the two parables if we want to learn how God saves the sinner. The Lord Jesus bids us "come," "ask," "seek," "knock," "strive," "look." He never tells us to go to sleep and wait till He finds us.

Now for my second story, which seems to me a parable in itself. I do not think that the Canadian minister who told it me ever thought of its being a parable. When he was a little boy, he lived with his father in the "backwoods." Their house was built on a hillside, and below them in the valley was a great swamp, frozen in winter, and dried up in the summer, full of tall trees, among which wild beasts were always lurking. The swamp was so near the house that at night the howling of the wolves was always heard, and the child took a strange pleasure in listening to them, feeling himself in perfect safety at home. One evening at sunset he was sitting on the doorstep listening to the wild concert just beginning, for it was dark before sunset under those great trees, when suddenly a piercing terrified cry rose from the swamp below. Lost! lost! lost! it said, and he recognised the voice as that of his elder brother. You can imagine the stir and alarm in the house. Almost sooner than I can write the words, his father and the men had seized guns and torches and were hurrying down the hillside to "seek and save" the lost boy. Thank God, they were in time; the wolves were driven off, and the terrified boy brought in safety to the house. How had it all happened? He had been sent on an errand along the safe upland path, but had taken it into his head to come back across the swamp, hoping to get home by daylight. As might be expected, he lost his way; of course he tried to find it, but in vain. Still he would not give up, and it was only when darkness came on, and he heard the wolves howling around him, that he uttered the despairing cry which reached the ear of his brother in his father's house.

Now I am sure you understand the teaching of this story. The boy was in danger by his own fault. He could in no way escape by his own efforts. His only hope was in what others could do for him. He could only call, and that call said, 'I am in terrible danger; I cannot help myself. Come, and save me!"

And to the lost the message comes, "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord, shall be saved."—Your sincere friend,

S. R. Gelderd.

THE CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.

How wonderfully this Union grows was well shown on Monday (4th inst.), when Exeter Hall was crowded, afternoon and evening, on the occasion of the anniversary of the C.S.U., this being the first time this large hall has been used by the Children's Special Service Mission or the Scripture Union.

Rev. E. A. Stuart, M.A., who has long taken a deep interest in the work, gave an address in which he traced the connection between the books of the New Testament, just as last year he did that between the books of the Old Testament. The four Gospels, he said, might be looked on as the four walls of a house, the Acts of the Apostles as the roof, the Epistles as the furniture inside, while in the Revelation we see the glory of God filling it all.

Mr. Lidstone, on behalf of Mr. Bishop, who, though present, was unable to speak, gave a cheering account of the progress of the Children's Scripture Union.

Canon Taylor Smith, who has long laboured in West Africa, told how Scripture Union work is taken up in Lagos. He spoke also very eloquently on the triumphs and trials of the Word of God.

Amongst other speakers were Mr. Edwin Arrowsmith, who told of the work among boys, and urged every one going to the seaside to look out for new members among the boys and girls on beach and parade; and Rev. A. F. Huckett, who delighted his hearers by the good things he related of the work in the South of Madagascar.

In the evening Mr. H. Hutchinson showed, in a few stirring sentences, how God's Word is being flashed into the dark places of the earth by means of the earnest workers connected with this Union.

Dr. H. Sinclair Paterson, who presided, said he rejoiced to hear of the progress of this Union, which believed in the Divine authority of the Bible, and sought to teach the children to read, love, revere and follow that Book which proves its power as no other book can do by changing hearts and transforming lives. Addressing the workers, the Chairman showed that the deepest and closest study only compels to the conclusion (notwithstanding all the learned critics) that these Books are from God, and speak with a voice and authority which no book beside can claim. After all we come to this, that our faith stands not in the wisdom of man, but in the power of God.

Rev. F. A. C. Lillingston, M.A., said he was constantly finding the good results of leading the children to read the Bible. He loved to see "Hidden Bibles." Did the children present know what that meant? It meant what David spoke of, "Thy word have I hid in my heart." He could not help feeling that there is a tremendous amount of ignorance of the Bible. How few of the middle and upper class children know anything of the Scriptures? They learn everything else, and nothing of the truth of God. This state of things is greatly to be deplored, and one of the best remedies is in the work of such a Union as this.

Rev. Martin J. Hall, B.A., spoke of the Scripture Union secretaries as fishers for souls, such work affording favourable opportunities for pointing the children to Jesus. Some experience had shown him that he could get hold, through the Scripture Union, of many schoolboys who otherwise would be beyond reach. This responsibility is a very solemn one, and he trusted all would seek to be able to render a good account of it. He would suggest all such secretaries should have "a day at home" once a week, when the children might come for help and counsel.

Mr. J. Reginald Naylor described, for the sake of new beginners, how to form and work a Children's Scripture Union branch. Little workers, trusting in God, doing his will, would be used wonderfully by Him in blessing to others. One thing must be guarded against, and that is mixing up the work with amusements; to do so spells "ruin" to all power and blessing. Certain branches had grown from very small numbers to large, simply because God had given the secretaries and workers grace to be in earnest, definite and real, among the children.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Ap. 10, Matthew xxvi. 47-58; Mon., Ap. 11, xxvi. 59-75; Tues., Ap. 12, xxvii. 1-14; Wed., Ap. 13, xxvii. 15-26; Thurs., Ap. 14, xxvii. 27-38; Fri., Ap. 15, xxvii. 39-54; Sat., Ap. 16, xxvii. 55-66.

CHILDREN'S MISSION AT CANONBURY.

A twelve-days Mission for young people was concluded on March 31 at Harecourt Church, Canonbury, conducted by Mr. Lewes Sayer. From first to last the attendance and attention left nothing to be desired. The numbers steadily increased till at the closing meetings the area of the large building was filled. The results of the Mission have filled us with thanksgiving. Workers quickened and stimulated to increased zeal, young men resolving to be "soldiers and servants" of Jesus Christ, and children intelligently grasping the truth as it is in Jesus—these and many other tokens of Divine blessing were graciously given.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Bowden, Ap. 6 to 9; North Wales, Ap. 10 to 12; Bedford, Ap. 17 to 27; Moseley, Ap. 28 to May 6; Mr. Josiah Spiers, Tynemouth, May 6 to 20; Mr. H. Hutchinson, Christ Church, Kensington, Liverpool, Ap. 16 to 26; St. Simon's and St. Jude's, Liverpool, Ap. 30 to May 9; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, Harecourt Church; Kilburn Town Hall, Ap. 1 to 17; Mr. J. S. Tyler, Percy-road Schools, Kilburn, Ap. 11 to 13; Mr. Reginald Callender; St. Paul's Schools, Bolton, Ap. 24 to 30; Mr. W. H. Wilson, Maryport, Ap. 25 to 29; Mr. Geo. Goodman, Hilcot-street, Haggerston, Ap. 4 to 8; Lordship-road, Stoke Newington, Ap. 24 to 29; Rev. Martin J. Hall, Christ Church, Derby, Ap. 9 to 17.

"A Holy Ghost Church."

Pastor Archibald Brown read a paper, with this striking title, before the Baptist Board, at the Mission House, Furnival-street, on Tuesday evening, March 29. The president, Rev. G. W. M'Cree, occupied the chair, and there was a large attendance. The proceedings opened with a season of prayer, led by Revs. J. Baillie and W. Cuff. Mr. Brown's paper was of a searching character, setting forth the importance of a distinct recognition of the Holy Spirit as a Divine Person, his office as an interpreter of the truth as it is in Jesus, and his wonderful working in the hearts of all the saints. He also made some pungent and earnest utterances on doing nothing, either in life, our spheres of usefulness, or in church work generally, which might grieve the Divine Spirit.

An edifying conversation followed, in which Revs. G. D. Hooper, J. H. Cooke, W. Cuff, J. Baillie, Dr. Clifford, and others took part. It was felt by all present that the meeting was full of spiritual profit, and would tend to promote the welfare of the churches in London.

Homes of Hope, Regent-square.

The following fact is recorded in the last report of this Home for the Restoration of the Fallen, 4, Regent-square, Gray's-Inn-road. Not many months ago the secretary was told that a lady desired an interview with Him, which, being granted, there was ushered in a person very neatly attired and of prepossessing manners. She looked very hard at the secretary, and before stating the object of her visit said, "Do you not know me, sir?" and the response being in the negative, she related that eighteen years ago, she herself, being then a young woman, had applied to Mr. Hornibrook, being at the time in deep sorrow on account of the trouble into which she had fallen. The secretary then, at her earnest entreaty, consented to aid her, and admitted her to the Home. After a time a situation was obtained for her by which she was enabled to maintain herself and infant, and to start again respectably in life. And she added, "From that time, step by step I have gone on prospering by God's goodness, and never relapsed; on the contrary, I have been married for some years to my husband, who is a foreman in a good way of business and am very happy and doing well in my married life." She further explained that her present errand was to seek the secretary's kind aid in rescuing a young girl who had fallen into temptation, and expressed a fervent hope that the career of that young girl might turn out to be as prosperous in the future as her own case, through the instrumentality of the Home, had been in the past. Thus, a rescued one becomes in turn a rescuer of others.

COASTGUARD MISSION IN GREAT BRITAIN.—This comparatively new Mission is an endeavour to supply the men of Her Majesty's Coastguard with monthly packets of Gospel papers, and also an occasional letter. Those who have received papers are most grateful for them. As yet barely one-tenth of the men have been reached, and more helpers are much needed. The hon. secretary is Miss Jackson, Valetta, Weston-super-Mare, who will gladly give further information.

THORNE EVANGELISTIC MISSION.—The Annual meeting was held on Friday last in the Council Room, Exeter Hall, Mr. Geo. Williams in the chair. Mr. Thorne gave an encouraging report of the year's work, while Rev. J. Gossett Tanner testified to the work as coping with some religious difficulties of the time. Rev. J. Mathews gave testimony to the good effects produced on the churches visited, Rev. T. Ogden Taylor referred to the value of the Bible Readings. A member of the Polytechnic gave some good results accruing from a mission held in 1890; and Mr. W. Owen Mell related some conversions resulting from the Margate Missions.

Prayer for Revival.

The prayer-meeting for revival—"Wilt Thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in Thee?"—was continued on Monday afternoon, from two to three, and will, we trust, be continued, until the answer comes abundantly.

One friend, well known as a devoted Christian worker, has said that we have no reason or right to expect any great revival until we have rid Asia of the opium curse and our own land of the opium crime.

But is not this to confuse between the Church of Christ and the British nation? Those who are protesting against the curse and the crime are surely not to abstain from crying to God to reveal Himself. A revived Church seems a necessary antecedent to any awakening of the conscience of the nation. When the Gospel has been demonstrated to be the power of God, and sinners have flocked into the kingdom, publicans have been converted, their houses have been voluntarily closed by themselves. If a mighty revival comes, this nation may be so convicted in its own conscience, that it may shake its skirts free of this loathsome and sordid and cruel crime, and sit in sackcloth, like the king and people of Nineveh; or in answer to the prayers of his witnesses that God may reveal Himself, there may come terrible judgments on men with names, and the remnant be affrighted and give glory to the God of heaven.

For surely our friend is right in calling attention to the heinousness of Great Britain's opium crime against weaker nations—a crime which, judging from Scripture and experience, will certainly bring down a fearful retribution upon this nation.

Another equally earnest and devoted servant of Christ, a Vicar in a very crowded part of the metropolis, writes thus, in reply to the circular inviting him to unite with the meeting for prayer:—

I doubt whether any Christian minister, or any member of the Christian Church at large, has a stronger conviction than I have of two facts: first, the need of the manifested power of the Holy Spirit; and, second, the restraint of that power in our land amongst the regenerate and unregenerate alike—the one for higher consecration, the other for heart conversion. So that I am in full sympathy with you on these points. But I am afraid that I differ widely, not on the value and virtue of intercessory prayer, but on the propriety of such prayer, unless preceded by and associated with certain fulfilled conditions. These I find from Holy Scripture to be essential to acceptable prayer, and to the removal of the Divine restraint of the Holy Spirit.

The burden has pressed heavily upon my mind and heart for twelve years at least; and each year its weight has increased with the increase of my experience and knowledge that the vices of Sodom and of Jerusalem are not only present in London, but are also growing worse and worse. And as a humble but earnest student of prophecy, and of historic parallelism (or typology) therein, I see that Judah and Jerusalem in the time of those prophets may guide us to-day in London, both as to what we are as a nation and a Church, and as to what we ought to do.

1. The nation is under the Divine displeasure for unfaithfulness to Him in faith and in practice. All political rulers are alike blameworthy in this respect, and political parties have alike departed from God and pandered to the carnal man, regardless of God's law.

2. The Church has itself erred in faith and in practice. Its ministers have abandoned the sure foundations of evangelical doctrine, so that the Divinity of our Lord, his Atonement, Justification by Faith, Regeneration as in John iii. and Titus, Everlasting Punishment, and even the Plenary Inspiration of Holy Scriptures are declared not merely to be non-essential, but even erroneous—superstitions which cannot remain before the better light of the nineteenth century.

These are sad restraints put upon the Personal Power of the Holy Spirit; but, alas! they are not all.

3. The ministers of the Church are at variance with one another in spirit and fellowship. Where are more jealousies, rancours, envyings, backbitings, revilings, and injuries than amongst those who are or who call themselves the ministers of Christ? I refer equally to the relations between parson and parson, minister and minister, as between the Established Church and Nonconformity.

4. The members of the Church have deliberately effaced the line of separation between the Church and the world, and have also introduced "the fruits of the carnal mind" into Church affairs and work; so that there are more evil practices in connection with church buildings, machinery, activities, and charity, than in the world itself. And the competition to-day amongst church membership is a foul system of "touting and gambling"—a lie upon the Faith, which our Lord says is the secret of effectual prevailing with God.

5. Last, but not least, both ministers and members of the church have supplanted "the bond of the fellowship of the Spirit of Love," and substituted in their daily walk and conversation the imperfect material of "personal friendship and likings."

I hold that the Church of God has sadly erred in all these respects, precisely as Jerusalem of old; and that only by observing the Divine Voice and hearkening diligently thereto in the Prophecies, can England's Christianity escape Jerusalem's doom. The reformation must precede as well as accompany prayer for the manifested power of the Holy Spirit. There must be humble confession, and absolute renunciation of the apostacy from faith and practice within the Church, on the part of ministers and members, before claiming the fulfilment of the promise of the Holy Spirit. That blessed Spirit has said so in the prophecies of Jeremiah and Malachi, and has shown us this in the two overthrows of Mount Zion by Chaldea and Rome.

Now, have we this practical repentance manifesting itself to-day, I do not say in the nation (that seems hopeless), but in the church—i.e., amongst the ministers and members of England's Christianhood? I cannot hear or see it. Worldiness, self-seeking and self-pleasing, pride, jealousies, hatreds, partialities are in possession, even amongst the most professedly devout and spiritual, and restrain the Holy Spirit from giving the Church of Christ "showers of blessing." So that if we want them for the welfare of the church, of our country, and of the world, we must obey the monitions of the Holy Spirit in his Word, and make and execute a solemn league and covenant.

Here, also, the Church is more or less identified with the nation; but we need not remark further upon this. The writer has somewhat misconceived the purport of the invitation. Those who had been reading the Bible together on one afternoon in the week were led to pray that God would revive his work; and to invite others to join them in waiting upon Him. Accepting all the Vicar has said, we think the spirit of confession and repentance and renunciation of evil must all come from God, and as judgment must begin at the House of God we present ourselves before Him that we may prove what is his holy acceptable and perfect will concerning us. Those who have thus been meeting at 186, Aldersgate-street, and many who are with them in spirit in other places are at one with the Vicar in desiring to hear and obey the call of our God in Joel ii.; in acknowledging that our own condition is there described, and in believing that those promises shall be fulfilled to humbled and contrite hearts.

A Minister on Theology.

Preaching recently upon the Epistle to the Galatians at Mount View Congregational Church, Stroudgreen, N., of which he is the pastor, Rev. Griffith Jones referred to the dread in which a "theological discourse" is held by congregations, as if theology were but dry dogma, having nothing in common with practical daily life.

The pill, he said, must be hidden in a coating of gold or silver, or at least of sugar. The old-fashioned definitions are considered out of date. Original sin is spoken of as "heredity"; Conversion as "the elevation of humanity to a higher plane"; Backsliding, as "reversion to type." For a truth like "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," we have such a term as "spiritual solidarity"; no more do we learn that "evil communications corrupt good manners," but we are taught of "the influences of environment." In the course of a useful and practical discourse Mr. Jones showed how absolutely Paul's theology was a part and parcel of his life. "I live, yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me."

WIMBLEDON.—Rev. J. G. Train has just concluded a special mission. The meetings during the week grew in interest, and the attendance increased as they went on. From the earnest attention given by all it is hoped that a deep and lasting impression has been made. The afternoon Bible-readings were also well attended and highly appreciated.

ITALO-ANGLICAN CHURCH.—Rev. Dr. Stauder's Mission in Gray's-inn-road is steadily developing, and branch stations are already proposed at Hammersmith, Olympia, and Soho. A Mission-house has been opened at 34, John-street, W.C., for promoting education and religion among the poor Italians of London. In a circular Dr. Stauder says: "This house is in the immediate vicinity of several thousands of sons and daughters of Italy, whose condition appeals to the feelings of every Christian man and woman in England." Communications may be addressed to Dr. Stauder, at the Mission House.

MANCHESTER WESLEYAN MISSION

This Mission, of which Rev. S. F. Collier is superintendent, is just issuing its annual report, and it will be found to be a remarkable record of success. In 1886, the Mission began with one centre, now there are nine. The membership has risen from sixty to nearly fifteen hundred, then the Sunday-night congregation was twelve hundred, now the various congregations number seven thousand. At first the work was almost purely evangelistic, now the agencies are manifold and various, between thirty and forty meetings being conducted weekly by the staff, in addition to an average of twelve open-air services. Among the departments may be named the Men's Home, Workshop, Food Depôt, Labour Bureau, Servants' Registry, Girls' Institutes, Gymnasium, Gospel Temperance Concert, Savings Bank, and other similar agencies.

The Mission employs all means in harmony with New Testament teaching, and all kinds of work are made subservient to spiritual issues. The influence of the Mission reaches, directly or indirectly, almost every quarter of the city, and evangelistic work has been attempted in workhouses, hospitals, mills, lodging-houses, and, in fact, anywhere indoors or out, where opportunity offers any hope of good results.

One very unpretending but interesting department is the Cottage Mission. A proved Christian man and his wife are put into a cottage in a slum district, and the effect of the services held there, and the example shown in daily good living, is of great value. The man continues to work during the day for his living, the Mission only paying the rent and a few necessary extras. This is very noble work, and needs no small self-denial.

The Social Department, of which Mr. Sackett has charge, grows rapidly, and were there but funds could be largely attended. The fifty beds in the Home are insufficient to meet the daily applicants. By means of the Labour Yard unemployed men are enabled to recoup the Mission for their cost while they stay. The change in the condition, and even in the character, of many of the men helped has been very cheering. A considerable amount has been expended in helping the destitute. The report will give typical cases of remarkable reformations effected in connection with the social work.

Miss Renshaw gives a very encouraging account of the rescue and other work among girls and women, some of the cases being full of pathetic interest. A number of girls and young women have, at considerable expense and trouble, been restored to their anxious parents or friends. A home for young women is at present one of the pressing needs of the Mission.

The work at the various branches of the Mission is carried on on pretty much the same lines as that at the Central Hall. Amongst these are Daniel-street, Ebenezer, Great Bridgwater-street, and the Wesley Institute. Lastly, the Free Trade Hall Sunday service has proved a greater success than ever.

SPRINGTIME

The Spring awakes with a gentle sigh;
There's a gladdening glance in her sunny eye;
There's a rippling smile where the ice was seen;
There's a dewy pearl where the snow had been;
There's a song in the forest,—the wild birds sing
For the birth of the flowers, the return of Spring.
But, O my soul! has your winter fled
In a holy Spring which revives the dead?

The sun only shines on the winter's snow,
The earth only basks in the quickening glow;
And the drift-bars melt on the hoary hill,
And the ice-ribs burst on the frozen rill;
And blade and blossom and fruit are given
Abundant and free by the power of heaven.
O my soul! do you look on your Father's face?
Do you live and grow by the Spirit's grace?

When abiding in Jesus, the love of God
In the heart of the faithful is shed abroad;
And the sorrows of time are dissolved like snow,
And the blessings of Heaven in clusters grow;
No winter to come, neither storm nor shine
Can wither the branch in the Living Vine.
O my soul! are you bearing the fruit that remains
Where a joyous summer for ever reigns?

FIELD-LANE REFUGES.—Mr. Peregrine Platt writes to us.—"We are greatly in need of lady teachers at the following schools: Girls' Sewing School, on Tuesdays, 6.30 to 8.30 p.m.; Girls' Bible School, on Fridays, 7 to 8.30 p.m. I feel sure that if you would give publicity to our wants some Christian ladies would offer themselves in one or other of these branches in the Lord's work. Both schools are held in Vine-street, Clerkenwell-road, E.C."

IGNATZ LICHTENSTEIN,

CIRCUIT RABBI, TAPIO-SZELE, HUNGARY.

AUGUSTINE is reported to have said that the conversion of the soul is one of the greatest miracles. In our day, when so many are loth to believe in miracles, especially in regeneration, it is faith-confirming to have such a remarkable proof of this blessed experience as the subject of our present sketch.

Rabbi Lichtenstein was not only never surrounded by Christian influences, but never heard the Gospel preached, and never had intercourse with real Christians. He was trained in the strictest Jewish schools, and faithfully discharged, for over forty years, the duties of an orthodox Rabbi. He frequently spoke violently against the New Testament, which he regarded as the cause of the Anti-Semitic movement, and a copy of which he had angrily taken from one of the teachers in his congregational school.

This Hebrew New Testament lay over thirty years in his study unread. One memorable evening, when troubled about the religious or, rather, irreligious state of the majority of his brethren, he took the New Testament from the bookshelf, opened, and read it. Forthwith the "veil" was taken away. The effect which the Word had upon him he thus describes in his recent work, "Judaism and Christianity": "I felt myself strangely, wonderfully fascinated; a brightness, a flash of lightning passed through my soul. As though an electric shock had opened my blind eyes, I gazed with astonishment into the future. I felt as one who had recovered from a severe illness—as a prisoner released from his fetters, for I had sought thorns, but gathered roses; instead of stones I found pearls—celestial treasures; instead of pride, humility; instead of hatred, love; instead of bondage, liberty; instead of revenge, forgiveness; instead of enmity, atonement; instead of death, life—resurrection." He communicated this marvellous discovery to his wife and to his son, who was then a medical man in a royal hospital in Budapest. They not only rejoiced with him in this great truth, but also encouraged him to make it known to his congregation, and to the Jewish community, the son promising the father to stand by him in every way, no matter what the consequences might be.

The Rabbi published, in quick succession, three pamphlets in German. Shortly after the appearance of these tracts, which were sold with amazing rapidity, a fierce storm of persecution broke out against him. The Synod of the Rabbis in Budapest called on him to withdraw his statements regarding Christ and the New Testament, or to be baptized, and thus leave his congregation. Lichtenstein did neither the one nor the other; and as to leaving his congregation, he replied that he would do so as soon as they could prove his teaching to be unbiblical.

As the Synod could not alter matters, it tried to induce the Rabbi's congregation to dismiss him; but as this effort was equally futile—most of the members being in full sympathy with him—enemies endeavoured, and with success, to injure his staunch adherents and relatives in monetary matters. The Rabbi helped his afflicted friends as long as his small capital lasted. Just at that time his son, who had promised to be his stay, died—died with the name of Jesus on his lips. Not wishing to bring further calamity on his people, the Rabbi refrained from issuing other writings until the stress of the storm should pass over.

Representatives of various denominations tried to win his services for their respective churches, but he refused very enticing offers, believing that, for a time at least, he could as a Rabbi have more influence among the Jews. Thus he has remained in the Synagogue. He has made the New Testament an obligatory subject in his congregational school, has been the means of leading several members of his flock to Christ, and has seen them confess their faith by baptism.

The Rabbi holds that the prejudices and ignorance of the Jews regarding the New Testament prevent them from reading it, and coming to the saving knowledge of Christ. He consequently considers it his main work to remove all hindrances, and lead them to the New Testament. In his "Judaism and Christianity" he first tells of his own conversion; then he shows the oneness of the Old and New Testaments, proves that Isaiah liii. refers only to Christ; and as the spirit of the Old Testament—the foundation of true Judaism—is the same as the spirit of the New Testament, he appeals to his people thus: "Join them one to another into one stick, and they shall become one in thine hand" (Ezek. xxxvii. 17).

The Rabbi's references to Christ are clear and beautiful. He says that he never thinks of this God-man without being enchanted, and asks the Jewish teachers, "Why do you hesitate to give the great Prophet and the true Shepherd the right name? Why does courage fail you to proclaim openly that the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ?" And the booklet closes with the words: "The Talmud is being translated; Jewish poetry, Jewish learning popularised; and the New Testament translated into the holy language. Now, should not the Jews search the New Testament in order to know Christ? Truly, he who knows Him must love Him; he who loves Him must honour Him; he who honours Him must adore Him; and he who adores Him understands when He says, 'I and the Father are One.'"

Though many Jewish papers write bitterly against the Rabbi, they cannot touch his noble, unimpeachable character. His enemies have often tempted him, and always found him immovable. Only lately a Jewish deputation offered him a considerable sum of money and a yearly grant, if he would undertake not again to speak or write about Christ. To this he replied in the language of Num. xxii. 18: "If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God."

The Rabbi is held in the highest esteem by his congregation, and by all who have the privilege of knowing him, for he is not only learned, modest, and amiable, but also most conscientious and godly. He is full of hopes that he is called by God to remove the hills of prejudice, to fill up the valleys of ignorance, to prepare the way for the acceptance of Christ by his people. Referring to the ill-treatment of which he has been the subject, he writes:—

> They have been dark, sad, painful, miserable years which I have lived since the publication of my three brochures. I have been threatened, coerced, attacked by exalted authorities; condemned and cast off by my venerated elder brother, the guide of my youth, the example of my life; scoffed at, slandered, held up to suspicion, indeed, grieved and wounded in my holiest feelings. One Jewish editor has generously forgiven me as insane!

Rabbi Lichtenstein's conversion gives all lovers of God's ancient people new reason to praise the Lord God of Israel, "Who only doeth wondrous things." It is a new proof of the Gospel's power, a new encouragement to continuance in labours of faith and love for this nation; and, moreover, it is a call to the Church of Christ for prayer, that the Rabbi's endeavours to lead the Jews to the New Testament, and thus to Christ, may be blessed, so that soon all Israel may be saved, and again become a blessing to the world.

A PROSPEROUS GLASGOW CHURCH.

The annual congregational meeting of Trinity Free Church, Glasgow, of which Rev. J. J. Mackay is pastor, was held last week. Cheering reports were submitted; and stimulating addresses were delivered by Principal Rainy, Rev. Alex. Lee, Nairn, &c. &c. It was stated that during Mr. Mackay's pastorate of seven and a-half years the membership had risen from 380 to over 950, and the total funds from £584 to over £2100. A splendid suite of new halls was opened a few months ago, costing nearly £2500. The congregation, though almost all of the working class, raised within itself £1300 of that sum in two years without any bazaar. The rest has been raised from generous friends outside, and only about £100 remains to be cleared off. Seat rents were abolished five years ago, and all the congregational work made to depend on the church door collections; for the year just closed about £700 was put into the plate. For foreign missions about £100 was contributed as against £4 eight years ago. The income for the year just closed is nearly £400 above that of the previous year; or deducting the sums raised for the new halls, the ordinary income is fully £100 above that of the previous year.

A few special features of the work were specially emphasized. Prominence is given to work among the young. In the East-end of Glasgow the churches are very thinly attended in the forenoons, and well-attended in the afternoons. In Trinity the forenoons are given specially to the young, and the attendance now is almost equal to the afternoon—as many as eight hundred being present at times, nearly one-half being young people, whose attendance is stamped on a card as they enter. Prizes are given yearly for attendance, combined with quarterly repetition of Bible-verses and catechism; ninety-two boys and girls earned prizes for 1891. Many mission children who attend become the very best missionaries in bringing their non-church-going parents to the church in which they themselves are interested. A Gospel meeting for the young every Friday evening also is attended by about three hundred children, and scarcely a week passes without little ones being anxious about their souls, and seeking and finding Jesus. In several instances children as young as ten years of age have been admitted to the Lord's Table, and the Kirk Session have never had any disappointment yet among these, though they have had among those admitted at maturer age.

Much aggressive work is continually carried on, and not a Sabbath evening passes without some anxious ones being dealt with. About eleven hundred have been added to the membership in seven and a-half years, and about two-thirds of these have been a profession of faith. Many of them were rescued from very low depths of Glasgow life, including returned convicts, confirmed drunkards, &c.

A Medical Mission is in full operation, where free advice and medicines are given to the poor in the congregation, and in the Mission district specially under the care of the congregation.

There are classes for young women, to teach them cooking, sewing, baking, &c. In all, over thirty separate meetings are held every week. The Gospel is preached in the open air several times a week; the lodging-houses in the district are visited any Sabbath and meetings held; and the Gospel is sung and spoken in back closes all over the district every Sabbath between the church services.

It was stated at the annual meeting that much blessing is being received among the young men at present; and on the previous Sabbath evening nine young men professed to take Jesus as their Saviour and Master, during a special meeting for young men held after the evening service. It was spoken of as one of the best meetings seen in Trinity.

Gospel Temperance work gets great prominence. A large and enthusiastic meeting is held every Saturday evening, and is very fruitful, many of the greatest drunkards having been rescued and brought to Christ. Between young and old, there are over one thousand pledged abstainers in connection with the congregation. In all these meetings the Gospel is the lever used to lift all classes. It has been a standing rule in Trinity for about six years that no secular singing be allowed at any meeting, social or otherwise, in connection with any department of work. And the history of these years affords ample evidence that God has set his seal on this rule. It has been proved that all Band of Hope work, Temperance work among the lapsed, &c., is far better carried on with sacred singing alone. Trinity meetings will compare favourably in attendance, liveliness, and joy with any others on different lines; whilst as to spiritual results, there really is no comparison to be instituted. The Gospel alone is able to raise the fallen and save the perishing, and the Church stultifies herself and dishonours her Master when she calls in the world's or the devil's help to do the work of the Lord.

"KESWICK" IN SHEFFIELD.

In outward conditions, perhaps, no place in the land is more unlike the lovely Lake District than Sheffield, the abode of smoke; but, thank God, spiritual blessing and power do not depend on beautiful surroundings. And so, last week, the evangelical Christians of this town were permitted to realise some of those sanctifying spiritual influences which are experienced so mightily at Keswick. The occasion of this blessing was the first Convention for the deepening of the spiritual life held in Sheffield. The meetings were held in the Montgomery Hall, beginning on Monday evening, March 28, and continuing with morning, afternoon, and evening gatherings each day till the 31st.

One of the great features of this Convention was the delightful spirit of unity manifested by all evangelical Christians. The general committee comprised clergymen of the Church of England, and ministers and laymen of all denominations, and on the platform all branches of the one Church were well represented each day. The speakers were Revs. Philip Norton (Church of England), Hugh Price Hughes (Wesleyan), J. K. Nuttall (Congregationalist), W. R. Skerry (Baptist), T. Rider (Methodist New Connexion), Wm. Redfern (United Methodist Free Church), and Danzy Sheen (Primitive Methodist). The congregations were large, and grew in numbers and interest each day.

The Convention was a memorable season to many, and, as the chairman of the closing meeting remarked, had grown in interest and depth. All the churches of the town are debtors to Mr. W. Jervis, the secretary of the Y.M.C.A., for calling them together to consider the possibility of such a convention, and for the untiring energy and devotion which have so largely helped to carry the convention through successfully. Many will be the prayer that such a convention may become annual.

S.

Dr. L. W. Munhall.

This evangelist has had a large measure of blessing upon his labour in the States during the past nine weeks. In Cohoes, N.Y., four churches united in the movement. About 1200 persons expressed publicly their desire to begin a Christian life, and nearly four hundred openly confessed Christ, forty-two of whom were Roman Catholics.

In Mount Vernon, N.Y., quite 1400 persons made public their desire to become Christians, and more than four hundred accepted Christ as Saviour, and verbally confessed Him. Five churches were united in the work here.

In Jersey City three churches united in the work, and three others co-operated. More than two thousand persons acknowledged publicly that they desired to lead a Christian life, and fully six hundred made the good confession, nearly or quite half of whom were young men. Hundreds of backsliders were led to repent to do their "first works." Great crowds of people attended these meetings. Sometimes two churches would be filled at the same time, and hundreds turned away, unable to get into either place. Mr. George C. Needham followed up the work at Mount Vernon, with most excellent results.

DIVINE COMPENSATIONS.

(Deut. xxxiii. 25.)

'Tis "As thy day," whate'er its stress of duty,—
More grace than God can give thou canst not need,—
"So shall thy strength be," precious word of promise
To nerve the timorous heart to noblest deed!

(1 Cor. x. 13; Dan. iii. 25.)

Or if the fiery trial be thy portion,
He will not send thee more than thou canst bear;
And thou shall surely find, amid the furnace,
That thou art not alone, for He is there.

(2 Cor. i. 5.)

Just as the stars of midnight shine more brightly
Above us, when the darkness gathers round,
So we may taste divinest consolations
In seasons when our sorrows most abound.

(Mark iv. 39.)

And when the night falls, and the tempest threatens,
We most may feel the Heavenly Captain near;
His "Peace, be still," restrains the boisterous billows,
And both by deed and word He calms our fear.

(2 Cor. i. 7.)

Thus trials make more room for consolation,
They bring us closer to our God in prayer,
And prove, indeed, a very benediction,
By teaching us on Him to cast our care.

(2 Cor. iv. 17.)

Our present trial is but "light affliction,"
The "weight of glory" waits us by-and-bye;
"Our light affliction" only "for a moment,"
The promised "weight of glory" is for aye.

(2 Tim. ii. 12; Psalm lxxxiv. 11.)

And if with Christ we suffer tribulation,
Then not less sure are we with Him to reign;
The grace He giveth is the pledge of glory,
The heavenly treasure everlasting gain.

Wimbledon Convention

A correspondent writes:—"The convention held at Wimbledon has proved a time of refreshing which will not be soon forgotten. The presence of the Lord was realised from the commencement of the meetings, and many seekers received definite blessing before the close. A spirit of brotherly love and unity prevailed throughout, ministers of all denominations signing the invitation and taking part in the proceedings.

Mr. Robert Wilson presided, and among the speakers were Revs. J. T. Butlin, J. B. Figgis, C. A. Fox, E. L. Hamilton, J. G. Mantle, W. J. Maxwell, F. B. Meyer, C. G. Moore, E. W. Moore, F. Paynter, W. Darlow Sarjeant, W. S. Standen, and Colonel Sladen. The closing meeting, addressed by Revs. C. G. Moore and W. Darlow Sarjeant, was a fitting conclusion to a week of blessing. It was a time of marvellous power and grace.

Many most encouraging testimonies have been given, and are still continuing to be received, as to the good effected by the meetings. To the Lord alone be all the praise. The attendance throughout was excellent, and in the evenings the hall (holding thirteen hundred people) was crowded to excess, many being turned away unable even to find standing room. A debt of gratitude is due to Captain Tottenham, who took charge of all the arrangements.

LADY HOPE, in whose appeal, which appeared in our issue on March 24, some few friends have interested themselves, desires that communications may be addressed to her at Mickleham, Dorking, as she is returning from the continent. Her desire to consolidate her work among the poor in the Boro' will need further support before such a result can be satisfactorily effected.

DUBLIN Y.W.C.A.—The formal opening of the "Deaconess and Missionary Training Institute," Mount Pleasant-square, Dublin, took place last week, there being a large gathering of friends and workers. His Grace Lord Plunket, presided, and expressed his full approval of the Institute in view of the great need existing at present in Dublin for such a home where Irish missionary candidates can be trained. Addresses were afterwards given by Revs. Canon Neligan, Dr. Burrows, and G. Mahaffy. The Institute is to be worked on the lines of the Mildmay Training Institute, Miss Gage-Brown is hon. resident superintendent.

JEWS IN MILE-END.—A good work is being done among poor Jewish immigrants in this district. Mr. F. N. Charrington gives the use of a room in the Great Assembly Hall for several meetings a week, and endeavours are made to show kindness to the distressed, and to press the claims of Christ upon their hearts. There are about three thousand Jewish families in the neighbourhood of the Hall, and most of them are in actual need of clothing and food. The committee, under whose supervision the work goes on, are unable for lack of funds to extend it as they would wish. Communications respecting it may be sent to Mr. F. N. Charrington, Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end-road, E.

The Revival in Scotland.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY'S CLOSING MEETINGS.

The evangelistic labours among the Scottish people of our two American visitors have terminated, and the workers are now enjoying a period of needed and well-earned rest. The last three days of Gospel-work were as full of real interest, perhaps, as any in the whole campaign. There were two meetings in the Drill Hall, Galashiels, on Monday week. The universal testimony was that this thriving, industrial centre had never before shown such widespread interest in eternal things. A very large proportion of the inhabitants must have been present at the gatherings of the two days.

On the Monday evening, while Mr. Moody was wielding the sword of the Spirit with great effect on the crowded assembly in the Drill Hall, a very interesting overflow was being held in the United Presbyterian Church. After a simple but telling exhortation from Hon. Henry Scott, son of Lord Polwarth, an address was given by for the Hawick District of Burghs, and a tweed manufacturer in Galashiels. Earlier in the day he had conducted Mr. Sankey and some friends through his mills, and shown them the ingenious processes of converting the native wool into tweed cloth. On the evangelistic platform Mr. Brown is an earnest and interesting speaker, and naturally free from the conventionalities of utterance of the regular preacher. He weaves bits of personal experience into clear and freshly-expressed statements of Gospel truth, and is fitted to be an effective expositor to his fellows of spiritual things. He was very emphatic in his tribute of thankfulness to Mr. Moody for the impressions produced on himself by the evangelist's addresses on the preceding Sabbath. When he had spoken, Mr. Richard Hill made an extremely powerful appeal for immediate decision. Overflow congregations are generally regarded as made up of semi-disappointed persons, but on this occasion, at any rate, they had no reason to complain.

The closing after-meeting in the Free Church was one of the largest that Mr. Moody has held during the past four months, and, we should think, one of the most fruitful. The supply of workers was unusually good, and all were kept busy directing the inquirers into the way of life.

INNERLEITHEN AND PEEBLES had a meeting each on the Tuesday—at both places in the parish church. It was the weekly half-holiday at the former place, and so the villagers could freely join the country folk in attending the meeting. Mr. Sankey sang several of the most popular of his solos, and Mr. Moody preached so as to enchain the attention of the people, who were quite melted by some of the evangelist's closing incidents. There was no time for an after-meeting, but the congregation seemed quite ready for one, and moved out of the building with evident reluctance.

The meeting in Peebles was one of the largest that Mr. Moody has addressed for some time. Mr. Sankey's notes rang through the lofty building with splendid effect. A goodly number proceeded at the close to a church at some five minutes' distance, and personal conversation was earnestly kept up, after some guiding words from Mr. Moody. A number professed to step "over the line."

were the last two places on the programme. Early in the mission Penicuick came into public prominence because of some foolish remarks by its parish minister, who declared that the evangelists would only enter his church over his dead body. His fellow pastors in the neighbourhood were of a very different opinion, for they invited Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey to visit their town, near which is situated the Mauricewood coal-pit, where an explosion took place a few years ago, causing the loss of over sixty lives. Having arrived in the little town ahead of the hour of meeting, the evangelists were very hospitably received at the residence of Mr. John Cowan, of Beeslack, an earnest Christian gentleman who takes a practical interest in the welfare of the people. The meeting held in the Free Church was large and enthusiastic. Mr. Moody has stood before few more receptive and responsive congregations. He gave them two discourses full of positive truth, and had so much liberty of utterance that he found it difficult to close the meeting. If an after-meeting could have been held the apparent fruits would certainly have been great. As it was, a hasty departure had to be made. There were no convenient trains, and a carriage drive of nine miles had to be made to Edinburgh to catch a train to Linlithgow.

A large assembly came together in the Victoria Hall of this ancient burgh for the final Gospel meeting of the Mission. Mr. Sankey sang three of his most telling solos, while Mr. Moody preached from a threefold text on "Seeking the Lord." His last words took the form of an intensely earnest appeal to parents to see to it that they and their children were safe within the ark. The after-meeting was held in the Town Hall. Mr. Moody could only address a few words to the inquirers and hurry off to catch the evening express back to Edinburgh, leaving one of the local pastors in charge. This concluded the third lengthened mission in Scotland by the two evangelists.

ALL-DAY MEETING IN EDINBURGH.

The three monster gatherings at the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, which occupied the closing day of the month were not in Mr. Moody's original intention; at the urgent entreaty of the Edinburgh Committee, he agreed, however, to spend the day in that city. An all-day conference having been held there in January, the evangelist resolved to address himself to Christians on work in the inquiry-room, and how to use the Bible in dealing with the anxious. The interest shown in the occasion was widespread and very great. No tickets were issued, and the hall was freely open to all. It was crowded to excess at all the three meetings, and large numbers who were disappointed of entrance betook themselves to the Free High Church close by, where Mr. Sankey and a number of other friends took part. In the Assembly Hall itself Mr. Sankey sang a number of his songs, old and new, being accompanied in many of them by his esteemed and musically gifted friend Miss Darling. Many well-known ministers of different denominations and Christian workers were present. It was a noticeable fact that at the afternoon meeting both the Moderators-Elect of the coming Established and Free Church Assemblies, Professor Charteris and Professor Blaikie, were present, and in consequence of the pressure on seating accommodation had to share between them the president's chair. This fact may be taken as a crowning illustration of the brotherly and thoroughly unsectarian spirit that has marked the Mission in almost every place where the meetings have been held throughout the length and breadth of old Scotland.

After prayer at the forenoon meeting by Dr. J. H. Wilson, of the Barclay Free Church, Dr. Andrew Thomson, of Broughton-place United Presbyterian Church, and Lord Polwarth, Mr. Moody addressed himself to what he regards as in the present day. He said he would not speak in any spirit of fault-finding, but experience had driven him to the conclusion that nine-tenths of the church members were not qualified to do Christian work. He did not altogether blame them for this; the fact was, that church members generally were not trained to work. Many a time during the past months he had seen scores of people go away from the inquiry meetings unspoken with, simply because there were no workers willing or qualified to converse with them. Although this dealing with the anxious is the very cream of the Church's work it is left undone; if it were properly attended to the professed disciples of Jesus Christ would be doubled throughout Christendom within twelve months. There are words of guidance and comfort in the Bible to meet every conceivable case of soul concern or bondage; if Christian men and women only understood how to use the Bible, how greatly they would be blessed in leading the anxious to decision. Impressions that are not dealt with on the spot are apt to fade away, and thus the fruit of preaching is lost for want of some one to gather it. Mr. Moody repeated his oft-expressed conviction that after every Gospel meeting the net should be drawn; and he gave some instances of success where the Sabbath evening service had been devoted to this kind of work. The pastor should have the support and practical help of his office-bearers, and the active spirits in his congregation. When the minister is left to do all the preaching and the talking to inquirers, the church will be

A COMPARATIVE FAILURE.

In taking up his subject proper, Mr. Moody said that there was great variety in the spiritual as in the natural kingdom, and one worker could scarcely lay down hard and fast rules for another; he could only give some hints and show how the plans he followed had proved successful. Workers should study the Bible as a whole, and find out what parts of it are best suited to meet the need of different cases. For example, what would have been splendid advice for the Publican would have proved rank poison to the Pharisee. Nicodemus and the woman at the well in Samaria needed altogether different treatment. Then, workers should not put forward their own peculiar experience, otherwise the inquirer may look for the same sort of experience. Take the anxious one straight to the Word, and take plenty of time with him. The work cannot be done in a wholesale way. If it is it will not be lasting, and this is what gives occasion for criticism of special evangelistic efforts. Be content to speak to one and do the work thoroughly. Plenty of people can be found who will address the crowd, but the great need is for those who can intelligently deal with individuals.

In order to this, however, Christians must be sure of their own salvation. Too many professed believers are living in Doubting Castle. It is the privilege of every Christian to walk in the uncloudled light of God's countenance; but in many of the places he had visited throughout Scotland the Christians seem to be living on doubts. There are three classes of professors who ought not to have assurance—those who are only nominal Christians, those who are not willing to confess Christ before men, and those who will not take their part in bearing the heat and burden of the day. Mr. Moody referred in detail to passages in John's first epistle, which was written for the express purpose of confirming the faith of believers. He also urged that in order to have sure and certain footing for our faith, we must abide by the old doctrine of Atonement. Let philosophers and rationalists speculate as much as they like, joy and peace can only flow from the assurance that Christ has tasted death for us and borne our sins in his own body on the tree. Another test by which we may certainly know if we have passed from death to life is love of the brethren. One reason why so many are in doubt as to their salvation is their unwillingness to treat sin as sin rather than as infirmity.

REPLY TO CRITICISMS.

At the afternoon meeting, which was even more crowded than in the morning, in commencing his remarks, Mr. Moody took occasion to reply to some criticisms that had appeared in the daily papers of that morning. They were to the effect that he had cast a slight on the educated ministry in one of his addresses at the recent all-day conference in Glasgow. Mr. Moody asserted that he had said he did believe in an educated ministry, and appealed to those present who heard him if that was not the case. In the Chicago Training School with which I am connected (said Mr. Moody) the man at the head is not only a college man, but he has studied two years in Germany. The principal of our Young Ladies' Seminary at Northfield is a graduate of a college for ladies that stands higher educationally than any I know of in this country. Our Training School for dressmaking, cookery, and Bible knowledge is also superintended by a college graduate. At our Mount Hermon School for young men, nearly all the teachers are graduates from leading colleges in America. I have sent one of my sons to college, where he has lately graduated, and I want my second son to go through college and the Theological Seminary as well. I do believe in an educated ministry,

BUT I DO NOT STOP THERE.

Mr. Moody went on to say that many young men enter on Christian work far too late in life for them to go through the regular college course. The Church ought to take these men in hand and give them the chance of doing that for which they are fitted. Peter, the unlettered fisherman, did work as good as Paul, the man of education. Of course Paul did his special work better because of his education. But there are some kinds of work that men, whether educated or not, are not fitted for. Why should not devoted Christian women be trained to hold mothers' meetings, cottage meetings, and to teach young mothers cooking, dressmaking, and so forth? That is a practical kind of Christianity that only consecrated and trained women can accomplish. The churches ought also to train helpers to go round among the people and get hold of the non-churchgoers, and in that way supplement the regular ministry. The time has come to call out the volunteers. In Scotland there are piety and education and money enough to evangelise the whole world. If a man has a desire for university education let him have it by all means, but it is not necessary for every one to know Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. As a finishing stroke on this point, Mr. Moody quaintly observed that he regretted exceedingly he had never had a college education himself; but he did not get it, and he was doing the best he could without it. Some people did not like to hear him, but he always got an audience anyway.

Resuming his comments on the topic of "Assurance," he combated the idea prevalent in some parts of Scotland that it is presumption to know and to believe in certainty of salvation. Such was not Paul's view. No man said so much about works after salvation, but no one showed more clearly than Paul that salvation itself is entirely of grace and not of works. There is, therefore, no presumption in being certain of salvation.

Another class of people that the churches ought to deal with are backsliders. He urged great tenderness as well as faithfulness in seeking to win them back. The book of Jeremiah is specially suited for this kind of work. The spirit of Pharisaic self-righteousness is too prevalent; we need more of the spirit of Christ in dealing with those who are out of the way.

THE BIBLE

was the main theme of the evening address, given to an overflowing audience. Mr. Moody said he wanted that his last words in Scotland should be about the good old Book. No man is fitted for efficient service in God's vineyard unless he can wield the Sword of the Spirit. The speaker proceeded to show, in his own characteristic way, how those parts of the Scripture that men cavil at most in our day are the very parts on which our Lord set his seal. It is very easy to pull down, but not so easy to build up, and before we part with our Bible let us be sure of getting something better. Why, asked Mr. Moody, have Scotchmen taken such a high place among the leading business men and financiers of the world? Because of the teachings of the old Book. When Scotland gives up the Bible, woe be to it. The study of fulfilled prophecy was shown to be of very great value in confirming one's faith in God's revealed Word, and the marvellous growth of its circulation was referred to as an evidence of the Divine character of the Book. In closing a long and very interesting address, Mr. Moody commended the practice of Bible-marking, and said he would be glad if any friends throughout the country would send him specially good things they met with in their study of the Bible; they could send them to Mr. W. Robertson, of the Carrubber's Close Mission, Edinburgh, who would transmit to him.

After Mr. Moody had closed, a few warm words expressive of thankfulness to the evangelists were spoken by Rev. Dr. J. H. Wilson. He also stated that a series of Gospel meetings in connection with the special mission would be held in the Free Assembly Hall, to be addressed by ministers and others of various denominations. The hymn, "God be with you till we meet again," was sung, and Mr. Moody left the hall to catch the evening express for London. A number of friends assembled on the platform to see him off, and once more bid him God-speed. As stated last week, he will spend some time on the Continent before resuming active work, Mr. Sankey remains in this country.

WEST CALDER.

Mr. Samuel McKenzie has conducted a most successful series of meetings following up the recent visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey. The meetings have been held in the Established, Free, and United Presbyterian churches during the past three weeks. A deep impression has been made by the earnest, heart-searching addresses of the evangelist. The power of the Spirit was manifestly present in all the meetings. Many remained to the after-meetings, and not a few profess to have decided for Christ. Besides the local clergymen, Rev. J. Jeffrey (Shettleston), Rev. G. Crawford (Fauldhouse), and Rev. R. Kay (Crofthead) took part in the meetings.

MR. MCNEILL IN GLASGOW.

The month's Gospel campaign in Glasgow, to be led by Rev. John McNeill, began with three monster meetings in Hengler's Circus on Sabbath last. The place holds some four thousand people, and the crowd at the men's meeting in the evening was so great that an overflow had to be held in the Christian Institute. The afternoon service was announced as specially for non-church-goers, but probably the great audience contained many who, as Mr. McNeill slyly remarked, had lost their reputation in order to be present. His addresses were sparkling and powerful. Mr. Burke sang sacred solos with fine effect.

The circus meetings will be continued on week evenings; and on four afternoons of the week meetings will be held in St. Andrew's Hall.

FRENCH MISSION IN LONDON.—Last week Madame Waddington, the wife of the French Ambassador, inaugurated a three days' sale of work in the Kensington Town Hall in aid of the mission work of the French Reformed Evangelical Church in Bayswater, under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. H. Du Pontet-de la Harpe. The sphere of operations includes a well-attended church; a Home for governesses, in which 4380 ladies have stayed since 1878; a society for befriending servant-girls, in connection with which 441 registered during the year ending with this month; upper day-school, infant-school, and Sunday-school, with 270 scholars; and a medical mission, which during the past twelve months has rendered aid to 1831 patients.

SEAMEN AT DUNKERQUE.

"It's only Him," said a young Swedish sailor the other day, in a voice choked with emotion, while tears of joy streamed down his face, in the Seamen's Home at Dunkerque. I went down to the Home on the Saturday; some forty men, just paid off, were staying there. About twenty came into the hall, and we had a bright meeting, with plenty of singing, which sailors enjoy so much. The importance of at once accepting the salvation of God through Jesus Christ was plainly put before them, and our meeting closed.

On Sunday afternoon I again went to the Home, and could only get four men to come in for a meeting. But how often the greater blessing comes from the smaller number! Asking how many present belonged to Jesus, the young man referred to above said, "I do; but only since you were here last night. I gave myself right up, just as I am." On asking what was the ground of his salvation, he replied, in his broken English, but with an expression which left no doubt of his sincerity, "It's only Him," and he wept like a child as he realised the greatness of that love which caused the Shepherd to "lay down his life for the sheep."

Our little gathering at once became a praise-meeting, and the change which had been wrought within that soul, by the power of the Holy Spirit, was manifested without by the joy which shone in his face and his changed demeanour. Of his own accord he renounced the drink, put his name in my pledge book, and is proud of the "bit of blue," which now adorns the lappet of his reefer. Like all who have a real experience of the love of God in Christ Jesus, he began at once to work for others, visited a young sailor (also a Scandinavian) lying in the hospital with a broken leg, taking him tracts in his own tongue, and telling how happy he was in Jesus his Saviour. He also induced four others of his shipmates to sign the pledge, thus testifying, not only by the lip, but with the life, the reality of the change through which he has passed.

He has now shipped for South America, and we shall probably see him no more in this life, but his parting words will remain a precious memory. In his simple, straightforward sailor fashion he said, as he grasped my hand, "You are the best friend I've met since I left home nine years ago." To God be all the praise! Truly, the waters of this important French seaport swarm with fish, but where are those who, at the Master's bidding, are ready to "let down the net"?

HATFIELD-STREET MISSION.—The forty-fourth annual meeting took place in the mission-hall on Wednesday, 30th ult., under the presidency of Mr. J. Calvert Coates, C.C. The annual report was of an encouraging character, the committee being able to state that during the year all the varied agencies connected with the Mission had done good service in the neighbourhood. The Chairman, in expressing his sympathy with the object of the gathering, touched especially on the work of dealing with the young. It was important, he remarked, that the rising generation should be mentally, morally, physically and religiously instructed. In teaching the children, their influence might perchance extend far and wide, as these little ones in many cases became home missionaries, thus fulfilling the prophecy, "A little child shall lead them." Mr. W. C. Parkinson, L.C.C., as the representative of the Ragged School Union Committee, declared that but for missionary efforts like that of ragged-school work, he believed that many more industrial institutions than was the case at present would have to be supported by municipal and other bodies.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, APRIL 10.—REVELATION XIII.

The Vision of the Two Beasts (1-10).—The First. The R.V. joins the first sentence to the end of the previous chapter. "And the dragon waxed wroth... and he stood upon the sand of the sea." Then the new paragraph begins with the words, "And I saw." This first beast represents the world-power, which is hostile to the true Church of Christ. He comes up out of the sea, the symbol of the peoples of the world. The "ten horns and seven heads" (R.V.) bespeak the assertion of power and intelligence, and the crowns indicate sovereign rule. 2. Leopard for agility and swiftness; bear for cruelty; lion for strength. The dragon is Satan, who is described as giving the beast his power, because it is through the rulers of the world that he is achieving his purposes. 3. This trait is referred to again vv. 12, 14. The Paganism of the world-power, seemingly wounded to death by Christianity, revives. The harlot-apostasy is the healing of the wound (Fausset). 4. A parody of Ex. xv. 11. 5. See also xi. 2, 3; xii. 6. Evil is limited in its duration. 6. Those who dwell in heaven include the saints on earth, who spiritually tabernacle in God's secret place. 7. How much has rthe Church suffered from the violence of worldrulers, and the saints have fallen before their assaults, overcome so far as their physical life is concerned, but not in their testimony. 8. "In the book of life of the Lamb that hath been slain from the foundation of the world," R.V., i.e., slain in the purpose of God. The death of the cross was the revelation, amid the conditions of human life, of an eternal fact. How solemn the thought that all the sacrifices of Judaism and of mankind have borne their silent witness to that fact, and it was this which enabled God to forgive the sins committed before Jesus died. Are our names enrolled? 10. As our persecutors have dealt with us, so shall they be dealt with. We can only conquer in this war by patience and faith.

The Second Beast. (11-18.)—Represents the sacerdotal power, which has so often, under a show of religious zeal, been brought to bear against the Church. 12. Mark the close alliance between the world-power and priestcraft. 13. An allusion to Elijah's experiences on Carmel. 14. Miracles here, as elsewhere in the New Testament, are signs; but they ust be tested by the Scriptures; we must always take into account the teachings with which they are coupled. In all this there is a counterfeit of God's word and work among men. 15. As the three youths refused to worship Nebuchadnezzar's image, and were thrown into the furnace, so all who will not conform to the dictates of a false priesthood, and an intolerant world-power, must suffer for it. 16. The mark in the right hand denotes service; in the forehead intelligence, devoted to the cause of evil. 18. Six is the number of man in units, tens, and hundreds.

MONDAY, APRIL 11.—REVELATION XIV.

The Lamb and his Followers (1-5).—As before, so here, a vision of the redeemed precedes the record of judgments falling on the world. If this be the first-fruit sheaf, what will not the harvest be, when all the redeemed have been gathered in! What a contrast is the mark on their foreheads to that on the followers of the beast (xiii. 16). Every soul of man is branded by one or the other. Note that the name of Jesus is mentioned on an equality with that of the Father. 2. "And the voice which I heard was as the voice of harpers," &c. (R.V.). The voice was full and far-sounding, as the break of the surf, but melodious and sweet. 3. "As it were," because it is a song old as God's eternal pupose, though always sung with new emotion. There are elements in the joy of the redeemed which none can know save those who have been forgiven and tried. "Purchased out of the earth." O, my soul, live worthily of that ransom price! 4. Virgins—not adulteresses (Jas. iv. 4, R.V.). 5. Can we ever hope to stand amongst them? What a triumph of Divine grace will be there, to make white paper out of such rags as we are.

6, 7.—Before judgment descends, one last opportunity is given of hearing and receiving the Gospel (Matt. xxiv. 14). The Gospel is as indestructible as the nature of God; we need not tremble for the ark of God. How delightful to associate God with all created things, and especially with the rills and springs, which so represent his own Spirit.

8.—Anticipation of xviii. 2.

9-13.—Referring back to xiii. 12, 15, 16. Better suffer all that such persecution can do than incur the undiluted wrath of God. 12. Resumed from xiii. 10. All the persecutions to which the saints are subjected shall but bring out their faith and endurance, which are ever being nourished from Divine resources. 13. Especially spoken to those who die under the persecutions of the beast. "Write," put it on lasting record. "From henceforth," with no interval or delay. Blessed rest which wearies not in the service of eternity. The works do not precede to secure admission, but follow to receive a reward.

14-20.—The Harvest and Vintage. The crown is the garland of victory. The former of these refers to the ingathering of the elect (Matt. xiii. 39, 40). The latter to the judgment of the wicked. See Joel iii. 11, &c.

TUESDAY, APRIL 12.- REVELATION XV.

The Song of the Conquerors.—"Seven plagues, which are the last" (R.V.). 2. This must refer to the Red Sea, when it had returned to its strength, after the passage of Israel, and the emancipated hosts stood on its shores, and beheld it spread out like a sea of glass, and bathed in the fire-light of the rising sun. Glass and fire, like jasper and sardine, (iv. 3), mercy and judgment. Those who had died in the persecutions of ch. xiii., and had been referred to in xiv. 13, are now seen standing as victors, like Israel in that proud moment when the host sang to the Lord who had so gloriously triumphed. 3. The old and new dispensations are one in their triumphs. All former victories are but parables and anticipations of that. God will yet vindicate Himself in the eyes of men, and his saints will be satisfied that all his ways have been righteous and true. "King of the nations." In view of impending judgments the "holy nation" (1 Pet. ii. 9) praises the King of the nations. 4. The elect will clearly see the result and out-working of the Divine plan in the worship of all nations. Compare Zech. xiv. 16-19, and also Ex. xv. 14-16. All this is not only applicable to the great march of the dispensations, but to ourselves. All God's righteous dealings in respect of our own lives will be explained and approved. 5. We must stand in God's holy place to understand his ways (Dan. x. 14). 6. A striking description of the angels, "arrayed with a precious stone, pure and bright, and girt," &c. R.V. Priestly dress (cp. i. 13). 7. Bowl, a broad shallow cup. 8. What a contrast to Rev. viii. 3, 4. Compare Isa. vi. 4; 2 Chr. v. 14.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13.—REVELATION XVI.

The Seven Vials.—As the trumpets affected the kingdoms of the world, so do the vials the kingdom of the beast. We are reminded of Ex. ix. 8. The first four affect the earth, sea, springs, and sun; the last three the throne of the beast, the Euphrates, and the grand consummation of the age. 2. Ex. ix. 9. 3. Ex. viii. 17. 4. The angel who must delight in crystal brooks, which are in his special charge, acquiesces in the rectitude of this retribution. 7. And the altar, beneath which the spirits of the martyrs cry, assents. It is a vast comfort to know that though now God's character is aspersed, it will be fully vindicated in the purest light of eternity. 9. If affliction does not soften, it hardens. Heat melts wax, but hardens clay. 10. Ex. x. 21. 12. "That the way might be made ready for the kings that come from the sun-rising" (R.V.). The Euphrates is used in a symbolic sense, as the word Babylon, which of old stood on it, is. Indeed, all these judgments apparently refer to the destruction of those great systems of falsehood and apostasy which have set themselves against the truth and purity of God. 13. The dragon, beast, and false prophet are the devil's mimicry of the Trinity in Unity of the Godhead. The dragon corresponds to the Father in delegating his authority; the beast, like Christ, is crowned with diadems (xiii. 1; xix. 12); the false prophet, like the Holy Ghost to Christ, directs attention to the beast. These three unclean things have been said to stand for Blasphemy, Lawless Impurity, and Spiritualism. 14. The mystery of iniquity is to make one last effort for the empire of the world, seeking to effect its design through a confederacy of mankind. 15. That confederacy will be close upon the coming of the Son of God, hence the necessity of watchfulness and purity. Whenever sin has reached its climax, Christ is near. 16. "Har-Magedon," "the mountain of destruction" (R.V.). Josiah, during his alliance with Babylon, was slain at Megiddo. See Joel iii. 2, 12, 14, and Zech. xii. 11. 19. This great city is Jerusalem, become as Babylon, symbolising the apostate church, or professing Christendom. This must be swept away ere the true Bride can be revealed.

THURSDAY, APRIL 14.—REVELATION XVII.

The Description of Babylon the Great.—This terrible and vivid description applies to the Romish apostasy as its head and front, and it includes all that professes the form, but denies the power, of true godliness. The word Christendom covers the thought of this chapter. The judments of God must descend on all that is founded in the wisdom and power of man, and that is impregnated with the cruelty and impurity of the human heart. 1. The many waters (peoples) represent the far-spread extent of the apostasy. 2. The kings of the nations have availed themselves of the power of the priest and the church to further their own selfish and evil schemes. 3. What a contrast to the Bride, the Lamb's wife! The beast is that of xiii. 1 (see v. 7); it is covered with names of blasphemy to indicate the virulence of its foul pretensions. As if the apostate system would incite the world-power to put forward more blasphemous claims than it had otherwise been capable of. 4. "Purple," of empire; "scarlet," of blood; "decked," of her wealth and ostentation; "abominations," the Scriptural name for idolatry; "harlotry," of spiritual unfaithfulness, which so often leads to the grossest forms of indulgence. Each line of this description may be verified in Rome, but not in her only. 6. "I wondered with a great wonder" (R.V.). 8. The "is not" refers to the deadly wound inflicted (xiii. 3) by Christianity, but the world-power recovers itself, though only for a little time. It comes up out of the abyss, but it goes into perdition. The writing in the Book of Life indicates an entire change of character, which remains unaffected by the fascinations and temptations addressed to it. 9. Spiritual insight is needed for spiritual truth (xiii. 18; Dan. xii. 10). Rome is always known as the seven-hilled city, but the meaning is deeper than this, as, indeed, appears from the words: "The seven heads are seven mountains, and there are seven kings." In Dan. ii. 35 the stone becomes a mountain, and the seven mountains may therefore stand for the power of the kingdoms of men with which the apostate church is allied. 11. "The Church passes through the death of the flesh to the glory of the Spirit; the beast passes through the glory of the flesh to death and perdition." 12. If "the beast" culminates in some final manifestation of Antichrist, these ten stand for some confederacy of kings by which his pretensions will be acknowledged and supported. 14. "And they also shall overcome that are with him." (R.V.) Sweet promise! To be near Jesus is to be more than conquerors. 16. The world-power shall ultimately break with the apostate church, with which it had been in close alliance, just as the kings of Europe, notably France, have broken with the Roman Catholic Church. 17. See how absolutely the minds of men are in the Divine control!

FRIDAY, APRIL 15.—REVELATION XVIII.

The Fall of Babylon (1-3).—The Angel's Proclamation. 1. What must the Lord of the angels be? 2. Devils, i.e., demons. Spiritualism and impurity are in close alliance, and each is the result of apostasy from God, as the fungus comes where life decays. 3. The wantonness is spiritual. Woe be to those who have been misled by the evil ways of the false church; they must suffer with her.

4-20. The Demand for an Exodus.—Even amid the ranks of the apostasy God has a people. 6. This is an address to the executioners of the divine wrath. 9. The world has been encouraged in sin by the false teachings of the professing church, and may well bewail her downfall. What a contrast to ch. xi. 10. 12. This description of the items of commerce and luxury may be taken literally or spiritually. If the former, we may suppose that the literal fall of some system of error is intended; if the latter, we must refer it as representing certain forms of fleshly indulgence which the professing Church did not condemn. "Thyine wood." Tables made of this wood were objects of great extravagance in the ancient world. 20. "Heaven more rejoices at the downfall of the harlot church than of the world-power of the beast. For the most heinous of sins is that of those who know the Word of God, but obey it not. The fullest development of unfaithfulness is where the Church assumes worldly power, spreads her dominion of sword or money, fascinates men with worldliness beneath the cloak of religion."

21-24. The Final Doom of Babylon.—These artificers had been called in to adorn the formal worship with sensuous arts. The entire paragraph delineates the utter desolation which is to ensue when the judgments of God have finished their mission against professing Christendom. Let us beware of identification with it in any degree; but cultivate an ever-growing oneness with the true Church, the Bride of the Lamb.

SATURDAY, APRIL 16.—REVELATION XIX.

1-10. Thanksgiving.—Constantly throughout these judgments we meet with these attestations of the justice and truth of God. 2. We can afford to wait till God vindicates us. 4. Here we often have to say Amen, without being able to add Hallelujah; there we shall combine the two. 5. In Heaven one calls to another, and one voice may create an avalanche of praise. 6. The great obstacle being removed, there is no further hindrance to the universal reign of God. 7. The heavenly bride is the Holy Catholic Church, comprising the entire body of the elect; the marriage is that time of holy union with Christ which is to be the full consummation of those aspirations which He has created in saintly hearts. This marriage precedes that descent to earth which is the theme of the after-part of this chapter. 10. Angels and prophets are one in their desire to magnify and exalt the Lord Jesus. Compare xxii. 9.

11-21. Christ's Advent and Victory.—A sublime picture of our Lord, when, his marriage being accomplished, He comes to avenge the blood of his chosen and to punish his adversaries (Luke xix. 27). 12. Matt. xi. 27. 3. Surely this is his own blood. Mark the name, "the Word," as John i. 1—4. 15. What a terrible picture of the doom of the impenitent! My soul come not thou into their secret. 19. We have already seen the destruction of the apostate church, here is that of the world-power on which she had relied. The harlot was destroyed by the beast, and the ten kings, and these in turn are destroyed by the Lord Himself. 20. This lake of fire is Gehenna, a living death. (Mark ix. 44.)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 17.

God's Works and Word—Psalm xix. 1-14.

Golden Text: Verse 7.

The heading of this Psalm rightly attributes its authorship to David. His occupation as a shepherd gave him abundant opportunity of studying the two great books of God—Nature and the Scriptures. To him there is no contradiction, but perfect harmony between these two. He could see God as the Author of them both. Yet Nature does not render the Scriptures unnecessary. There is a point beyond which mere natural religion cannot go. It can show forth "God's eternal power and Godhead" (Rom. i. 20), but it has no message for the troubled conscience, and hence is not sufficient to meet the needs of guilty man. Learn the lessons of both creation and the Bible.

The Works of God (1-6).—It is no evidence of heavenly-mindedness to be insensible to the wonders of creation. The devout mind will "consider the heavens" (Psa. viii.), that the condescending grace of God may appear more wonderful. David could see the glories of created things, yet he did not make them the objects of his worship. Through Nature he saw the God of Nature. The Creator was to him more glorious than his work. The heavens are awe-inspiring even when nothing more is known of them than the eye can see. True science, by increasing our knowledge of the heavenly bodies, serves to deepen our reverence. It is difficult to be an astronomer and an atheist. During the French Revolution a revolutionist said to a peasant, "I will have all your steeples pulled down, that you may no longer have any object by which you may be reminded of your old superstitions." The peasant replied, "But you cannot help leaving us the stars."

What glorious preachers are here! The heavens, the firmament, day and night. How unceasing is their testimony. The verbs of verses 1 and 2 may be rendered "telling, displaying, welleth forth, breatheth." Other preachers on earth may be silenced, but these never cease to proclaim God's glory. How wide-reaching is their message! Though there is no articulate sound (3 R. V.), yet all the world is their diocese. In this their message resembles that of the Gospel, of which it was a kind of forerunner (see Rom. x. 15-18).

The Sun, as the most glorious of the heavenly objects, receives special notice. All the heavens are but as a tabernacle to make him conspicuous. His glory and strength and universal beneficence are all mentioned. Is there not in these things a reference to Christ as the Sun of Righteousness (Mal. iv. 2)? The Gospel sheds new light upon the teaching of nature. We can not only hear its testimony to the glory of God, but can see in it a picture of grace. Things seen are shadows of things unseen. The works of God are parables which the word of God explains.

The Word of God (7-11).—These verses are full of instruction as to the Bible. Here are six titles by which it is described. No single one is sufficient to declare it. All are needed to set forth its value. Six qualities belonging to it. What the message of Nature lacks Revelation contains. And six effects it produces. Are not these just what we seek for in Creation in vain? The order of these is significant. Conversion comes first, and after this instruction, rejoicing, purity of heart (Matt. v. 8). Then the two qualities, stability and discrimination, which belong to the Word itself, are seen as attaching also to the man who receives it. If these verses were understood men would avoid two common mistakes:—first, that of supposing that the Word can be the guide and joy of those who are unconverted; and, secondly, that of regarding conversion as everything. It is not the end, but only the beginning of the godly life.

It is only to those who have experienced the effects of the Word that the Psalmist's language (10) will apply. Trapp says, "Old people are all for profit, the young for pleasure; here's gold for the one, yea, the finest gold in great quantity; here's honey for the other, yea, live honey, dropping from the comb." The warning (11) of the Word will never cease to be necessary to us. It is our chart that shows us where the dangerous rocks abound, our guide to keep us from the path of peril. We shall not be ignorant of Satan's devices if this be our study. A faithful friend sent to Luther a portrait of a certain Jew who had designed to poison him. By this portrait Luther knew the man, and escaped his hands. So does the Word reveal to us the face of those lusts that would destroy us. "To be forewarned is to be forearmed." Reward comes not for, but in keeping God's commands. This is true, though obedience involves outward loss (Phil. iii. 7-8). The inward rest and satisfaction of doing his will more than compensate for temporal distress.

An Appropriate Prayer (12-14).—A right apprehension of the searching holy law with which we have to deal destroys all vain confidence. The light of God's word reveals the corruption within the best of saints. Most appropriately, therefore, prayer closes this meditation.

The prayer concerns secret sins (12). Not only secret from others, but secret from ourselves. No man could bear a full revelation of his own errors. We need cleansing from unknown as well as known sins. He who walks in the light, and whose fellowship is undisturbed, still needs the constant cleansing of the blood (1 Jno. i. 7). Outward keeping (13). This is not more than God promises (Rom. vi. 12-14). See what human helplessness underlies the petition. Presumptuous sins will be committed by him unless God "keeps him back." However strongly the temptation impels you, cry to God for his restraining power. A devout spirit (14)—one that is continually occupied with God, and lays a personal claim to Him as Strength and Redeemer. If the heart is filled with devout meditations, the words of the mouth will be right (Matt. xii. 34-35). God keeps the life right by keeping the heart right (Prov. iv. 23; Phil. iv. 7).

Evangelistic Notes.

Messrs. Potter and Miller, evangelists, have had wonderful success in cities near the centre of the State of Illinois.

Freeport, Ill., 150 miles west of Chicago, has had a gracious revival. Large numbers have professed faith in Christ.

Revs. John More and R. Leitch have held an interesting and encouraging mission in Broad-street church, Birmingham.

Turner Junction, thirty miles west of Chicago, has had a blessed revival. Help has been called for by the pastor, and other ministers have gone to his aid in carrying on the good work.

Burnham Overy.—Mr. F. W. Walter, of the Evangelisation Society, has just closed a three weeks' mission here, which has resulted in great blessing. The meetings have been well attended, and God's power has been made manifest. Many backsliders have been restored and precious souls saved, and God's people greatly blessed.

Rev. George C. Grubb has, as our readers know, been labouring with much success at the Antipodes. Mrs. Reed writes from Tasmania: "Very great blessing has attended the mission of Mr. Grubb to the Colonies, and our hearts are filled with overflowing joy and thanksgiving. Mr. Grubb and his party left for New Zealand on March 3, the prayers of many following them."

Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh, of the Evangelisation Society, has during the past fortnight conducted a mission in Ebenezer Chapel, Coalville. Many have professed to receive blessing. He has also spoken to the men in the railway Waggon Works in the dinner-hour. Several of the men, sceptics and readers of "freethought" publications, accepted copies of anti-infidel papers.

Leicester.—A very successful mission has just been conducted at the Leicester Ragged School by Mr. Rowland Sturt, of the Evangelisation Society. God has owned the word, and some who have laboured in this part of God's vineyard for many years were gladdened with the sight of old scholars coming out on the Lord's side; while many others tell of the help and blessing they have received.

Hawkhurst.—Mr. John H. Cooke, of the Evangelisation Society, has just concluded here a fortnight's united Mission, extending from March 21 to April 3. The attendance, which was good at the commencement, steadily improved as the Mission progressed. Christians of long-standing have been quickened, others have been brought nearer, and many have openly sought the Lord. The Mission was preceded and is being followed by a week of prayer.

Rev. R. Balgarnie has just closed a seven days' mission at the Presbyterian Church, Wood-green, which has proved, by God's blessing in a remarkable degree, a time of refreshing and ingathering. As many as 147 have professed conversion, most of these being drawn from the Bible and senior classes. Meetings are being continued for the young converts. These are largely attended and most interesting. Sunday-school teachers and other Christian workers, who had been long praying and looking for an outpouring of the Spirit, are entering into the movement with the greatest earnestness, and are filled with the joy of harvest. The spirit of expectancy abroad in the whole Church gives the greatest hope that the good work will continue to go on. D. M.

A Village Mission.—The success of a mission, as has been frequently remarked, greatly depends on the prayer-meetings. The following incident, which occurred in connection with a week's services recently conducted by two ladies in a Somersetshire village, well illustrates the point. A prayer-meeting was announced for the Saturday evening, but beside the two ladies and the friend who arranged the mission, only one person attended; these, however, joined in earnest prayer for the salvation of souls during the special effort about to be made, and a happy hour was spent together. Before the ladies left the village they had the joy of seeing this woman's husband, son, and two daughters (one married) yield to Christ and rejoice in his salvation; this was the more noteworthy, as these four were the only people belonging to that village who openly professed conversion. The son and one daughter have offered themselves as Sunday-school teachers, and their services are most gladly welcomed, as during the week there has been a marked work among the children, who flocked to every meeting held, and many of them promised to attend regularly.

Personalia.

The Bishop of Bedford is recovering from his serious illness.

Rev. Robert Laws, M.D., D.D., of Livingstonia, has arrived home, and is now addressing meetings in Scotland.

Rev. W. Duffus, who has done noble work at Swatow, has, we regret to learn, been compelled by ill-health to resign.

Rev. John Smith, of Edinburgh, has resolved to decline nomination to the vacant professorship in the United Presbyterian Hall.

Mr. Alfred Alsop.—We regret to hear that this devoted labourer in Manchester is seriously ill, it being feared he has cancer in the throat.

Miss Reed, who, after labouring some time in China, was compelled to leave through ill-health, is now in Tasmania, and is improving greatly.

Rev. H. H. Bourn, who has been in poor health since his removal from Windsor in 1875, was on Sunday, March 26, stricken down by a paralytic seizure affecting his speech and his right side.

Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, though still delicate, is much better. He has been staying in the south of France with Miss Radcliffe, but is now returning to England by easy stages.

Ven. Archdeacon Taylor, D.D., after five weeks rest at Abergele, has so far recovered strength that he was able to occupy his own pulpit last Sunday, and hopes shortly to resume full work.

Mr. J. C. Sherrard, J.P., who has for nearly fifteen years superintended the Lamb and Flag Ragged-School Mission, has been compelled by increasing age to resign, greatly to the regret of many. Mr. Noel Cox has kindly consented to fill the vacant post.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace, of the Marchmont Home, Canada, sailed from Liverpool on Thursday, March 31, in the Sarnia, with a party of 150 boys. We would ask the prayers of our readers on their behalf, and that of their large family, that the Lord would give them a safe and prosperous journey, and "bless the lads" and make them a blessing in the new land.

Rev. Dr. Doudney.—Many will deeply sympathise with this veteran servant of Christ in the bereavement he has been called on to suffer through the drowning of his youngest son, Mr. Arthur Doudney, which occurred through the capsizing of the schooner in which Mr. Doudney was proceeding to Manua, one of the group of Navigators', or Samoan, Islands, in the South Pacific.

Mr. Cuff's Silver Wedding.—An interesting meeting was held on Monday night in the New Hall, Shoreditch Tabernacle, to commemorate Mr. William Cuff's silver wedding. Mr. G. T. Dearburgh presented to the pastor an address. In doing so he stated that twenty years ago Mr. Cuff took the pastorate of Providence Chapel, Hackney-road. During the years that had elapsed since then, great things had been done. When Mr. Cuff came there was a debt on the old chapel of £1200, but the debt was paid, and large amounts had been spent in erecting the tabernacle and that spacious hall. In 1883 there was a debt of £9000, which had been reduced to £4000, the amount now owing, and of this amount £800 had been promised. Various interesting presentations followed, which Mr. Cuff acknowledged in a warm and hearty address.

Mr. William Head.—Pastor Frank H. White writes:—"For more than twelve years Mr. William Head with his devoted wife (both members of the Talbot Tabernacle Church) have been patiently, and with much real blessing, labouring in the Gospel, in the Island of Jamaica. Never very strong, our brother has been in weakness oft, but now it is evident that to be spared to his important sphere of service, it is absolutely necessary he should at once come to England for change and rest. For the home and return journey of his wife and two little ones, with expenses of maintenance whilst in England, quite one hundred pounds are needed. Though the pastor of four native churches, Mr. Head's income is a very small one, and only a little beyond his actual necessities. I shall count it a great privilege to be the channel for ministering of the bounty of any of the Lord's people. Mr. Head is unconnected with any missionary society, so cannot look for help in that direction."

AFRICAN MISSIONS.—Three ladies, Miss Annan, of Dundee, and Misses Lockie and Marshall, of Glasgow, are about to join the staff of the Morocco Mission. Mr. Peter M'Omish, of Glasgow, proceeds to labour at Old Calabar.

THE LETTER MISSION.—The Secretary, writing from Clapham, S.W., says:—We thank God He has blessed our efforts to many weary, sin-sick souls, who have been led by his Spirit to write to the Mission. Many more have written this year than last, most of them seeking salvation; and, praise God, the greater number of these are now able to rejoice in Christ as their Saviour. Two or three were backsliders, the others desired sanctification; they were not satisfied with a "divided heart," with "some of self and some of Thee." All these have been written to by our helpers lovingly and patiently. In some instances the correspondence is carried on for months and even years.

Letters to the Editor.

LORD'S DAY OBSERVANCE.

Dear Sir,—Perhaps I have been more fortunate than other workers, but for upwards of twenty years I have been privileged to take an active part in the Lord's work, on an average of eight or nine hours each Lord's Day, and have never once found it necessary to hire any conveyance, either cab, omnibus, or train, to take me to it. But then I always took the work which lay nearest my home, within a reasonable walking distance. Some of our friends will have to prove from God's Word the necessity of taking up work which is beyond our powers of walking, before inducing me to alter my opinion on this matter.

Are our London speakers the only preachers of the Gospel, or are there not in most places some who could take the Sunday duty, if a more eloquent or gifted speaker supplied the weekly meeting? I have always questioned the right of God's people to set aside this one commandment of the ten, whilst insisting strongly upon the observance of the other nine. Let any one attempt to play fast and loose with either one of the others, and what would the Church to which he belonged have to say to him?

There is a vast difference between paying for a ride and accepting a seat in the carriage of a friend, whose horse can be fastened outside whilst his driver joins the worshippers inside. "Rich Christians" who deny a preacher this privilege are straining at a gnat. Their horses are seldom worked hard enough to necessitate a whole Sunday's rest. A young woman, having been persuaded to attend a Bible-class one Sunday, seeing the lady teacher drive up in a hansom cab, got up and left the room, declaring that "if that was what Christians did, she would have nothing to do with them." Herein Christ "was wounded in the house of his friends."—Yours faithfully,

A. E. Pitt.

Chelsea.

Sir,—I feel that two great principles are involved in the question of observing the Lord's Day. The first is the broadly human one of "Rest." The institution of the Sabbath, like that of marriage, is independent of the Law, and appeals to man's nature with that boon of periodic rest of which he stands so imperatively in need. Let the miserable consequences attending the attempt made during the French Revolution, to lengthen the week to ten days, teach us the wisdom of the Divine regulation in respect of physical well-being. But some say that account in Gen. ii. is only a type. Then so is marriage.

When Israel put themselves under an obligation to merit God's blessings by their obedience, then what was previously a wise provision became a positive command, and never does our Lord so set the Law at naught as to give us a loophole for disregarding one of its precepts. But when tradition comes in, and seeks to condemn an act of love, to do which seemed to Pharisaic hypocrisy to disregard the letter of the Law, though most manifestly in accordance with its spirit, then the Lord, indeed, rebuked their basely strained literalism, and, while proclaiming the blessed liberty of the new dispensation, in no way compromised the sanctity of the day. Love constrains the Christian joyfully to acquiesce in the great moral principles contained in the Law, which surely are abiding; nay, more, to go beyond them, so that he who stole steals no more, but actually labours that he may have to give to him that needeth. Will not love to man constrain me from interfering with any man's needed rest; and love to God keep me from even the appearance of evil?

The second principle involved is more complex, but surely indisputable. While, we presume, no Christian would travel on the Lord's Day in pursuit of pleasure or even recreation, yet many hold themselves at liberty to do so in the service of the Lord. Now, we hold that any Christian is free to labour as diligently as he can, in the energy of heavenly love, in the interests of his Master. 'Tis his delight to do so, knowing that eternal rest shall full soon be his portion. But can he therefore make others his slaves, to whom their work is of constraint, not willingly, and so make himself a cause of stumbling to them, and cause the beautiful name he bears to be blasphemed? God forbid! But what about those places that depend on outside help for ministry of the Word, whether to the saint or the unsaved? Cannot the Lord be depended on to raise up those who shall do His work without dishonouring his name in the doing of it?

Oh, for the simplicity of Apostolic days! Picture the assembly gathered to the name of the Lord alone, the various gifts in exercise, given of the Spirit and by Him sustained. No racing hither and thither for this man or that. The evangelist or teacher coming along is welcomed. How sweet! But they are past, and Apostles are no longer. But the Holy Ghost abides, and the Head of the Church still gives gifts. Cannot He be trusted?

R. E. L.

We have received several other letters on the subject. Mr. H. G. Macgregor, writing from 4 Brechin-place, Gloucester-road, S.W., says: "A friend who literally lives for God, whether by personal work or through the 'talents' of different funds entrusted to him, writes to me: 'If you can help more people by travelling on Sunday than by praying at home or stumping near home, settle it yourself. (Rom. xiv. 5, 6; Col. ii. 16, 17.) My poor, ill-regulated conscience is not to be the rule of life for any other ass who may have fallen into the ditch on the Sabbath Day.'"

"An Old-Fashioned Christian" writes:—"The Ten Commandments stand by themselves, apart from the ceremonial law of God. There is nothing ceremonial about them, and nothing that specially confines them to the Hebrews. Our Lord Himself tells us: 'The Sabbath was made for man,' for his benefit, and surely in the present hard-working day, and in our hard-working country, man needs his Sabbath as much as ever. Another command of our Lord seems to bear on the question: 'As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.'"

Several correspondents ask how any one could conceive of the Lord as disregarding the Day of Rest. Mr. Rivers Hicks writes from 10, Alwyne-road:—"Why should the children of grace claim a revocation of the Fourth Commandment unless they also claim the right to ignore the others? Does not duty to God come before duty to man? Is it contended that Grace contradicts the Law, that the fact of the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ having obtained dominion over us shall cause us to break even one of the least of his Father's commandments? The Master, who was also 'my righteous Servant,' said He came 'not to destroy the law, but to fulfil it.'"

Mr. G. A. Couch, evangelist, Brixham, says:—"Are those who travel on Sundays, because they are not under Law, willing to work for employers all seven days of the week because they are under Grace? I am afraid they would be among the first to cry out; then why should they who are blessed with a rest from their business on Sunday, although it was given under Law, interfere with the liberty of any one?"

Other correspondents urge action for the relief of Post-office workers. One writes:—"It is only in districts where the majority of the inhabitants agree not to receive letters on the Lord's Day that the Post-office officials can benefit to any appreciable degree, for I have often been assured by them that the trouble of selecting and placing on one side the letters of the few is almost greater than if the postman deposited them in the course of the round he is all the same obliged to make. Hence the value and desirability of combination."

"THE ACCUSER CAST OUT."

Dear Sir,—The writer of the paper "On the Accuser Cast Out," in your number of March 24, has overlooked several material circumstances which ought to be borne in mind. Though citing many Scriptures, he has entirely left unnoticed the Divine institution of Sacrifice as shown in Lev. iv. &c., by which the God of Israel pledged himself to pardon the guilt of his worshipper. This he was graciously pleased to do, although Rom. x. 4 shows the inadequacy of the animal sacrifice. Our God found in his own mind sufficient reason for these continuous acts of mercy, and also for the cleansing of Joshua, the High Priest, by virtue of the GREAT SACRIFICE, to be afterwards offered up.

Another oversight in the assertion made, "and who removed the iniquity of that land and of all the world in one day." The iniquity of the land is not removed, it is still defiled by the blood of their murdered Monarch (Num. xxxv. 30-34). Israel is still, in consequence, driven out. Neither is the world absolved from its iniquity (Rev. xx. 11-13).

Another most important oversight occurs in the assertion, running through the paper, that Satan is already cast out of heaven, based apparently upon the passage, Luke x. 18, "I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven." This is not a fall of gravitation. Lightning flashes; it does not tumble. Satan will tumble when cast out (Rev. xii.) In this instance it apparently was accelerated motion in behalf of his affairs, interfered with by the action of the Apostles in casting out devils.

The Accuser, far from being as yet ejected, is still in the Upper Heavens, the επουρανιοι, Eph. vi. 12. He it is against whom, and his associated principalities and powers, the Christian has incessant need to fight. The region he occupies is identical with that named in the same Epistle i. 3, and ii. 6, where our Lord now is.

To accuse does not compel a judge to condemn. Those who accused our Lord before the Sanhedrim and before Pilate, failed to substantiate their charges: and though Satan accuses us day and night, as he has innumerable grounds for doing, yet we have One who pleads in our behalf in constant, earnest intercession. His one prevailing plea is, not that we are guiltless, but that Himself, the Son of God, having taken our nature upon Him, has died in our stead, and that we who confide in Him are his personal property, made one with Himself. In addition, the Holy Spirit is deeply moved in our favour; and being very long acquainted with our struggles against the world, our own corruptions, and the bewilderments of Satan, responds in heartfelt groanings. With the all-holy and upright Judge of all being so lovingly disposed towards his children, we are in every way secured from condemnation.

And as regards Rev. xii. the casting of Satan out of heaven, it must be noticed that it is consequent upon a tremendous battle being fought, angels against angels, Michael the Commander of one army, Satan of the other. None are slain. The conquerors drive out the vanquished, who are not permitted to return.

When the Lamb of God receives from his Father's hand the investiture, with a sealed roll, he begins by opening one seal, on which certain events occur. He then opens the next in order; more events follow. And so on in succession and consecutively, until the seventh seal is undone, in chap. viii. It is not till chap. xii. that the great conflict takes place and the heavens are cleared; the devil having a further time on earth for doing mischief, before being chained in the abyss.

INVESTMENTS BY CHRISTIANS.

Dear Sir,—I am truly grateful to notice that the consciences of Christian people are being aroused as to the growing and grievous sin of Sabbath desecration, and with your permission desire to address a few words specially to Christian investors, whose cash is invested in any Sabbath-defiling concern. Possibly, their money has been thus invested more from want of thought than principle, and they have associated themselves with undertakings without specially inquiring whether the Lord's Day was observed. To such I respectfully submit the following points.

I. Can the Christian knowingly allow the cash his Master has entrusted him with, to be used deliberately as a bait to tempt, in the most attractive manner possible, an unthinking public to despise and desecrate the Day of Rest, by specially-advertised Sabbath rail and boat excursions, or other pleasure traffic, and, what is, perhaps, worse still, consequently compel thousands of employes to commit the same grievous sin?

It is a sad fact, painfully true, that railways, steamboats, trams, 'buses, and the many other kindred Sabbath-breaking concerns, are only too surely destroying the sanctity of our Sabbaths, emptying our churches, and insidiously educating the people to disregard and defile the Divinely appointed Day of Rest. Tens, ay, hundreds of thousands are by these agencies induced to spend the Lord's Day in travel for selfish pleasures, and are effectually prevented from hearing the Gospel preached—and this largely sustained by the Christian investor's money. Satisfactory dividends and respectable directorates have blinded his eyes to the fearful goal his Lord's entrusted money is leading thousands to.

II. Can the Christian investor knowingly and deliberately allow the "pound" his absent Lord has entrusted him with to be openly used by the devil in direct opposition to the cause and Day of God, to empty the Houses of Prayer, to secularise the Lord's Day, and blot it out of Heaven's Calendar as the Divinely appointed Day of Rest?

III. Can the Christian investor justify the action and business of his Company in breaking the Lord's Day by the plea that he is only a unit, a single member of a great concern, and, therefore, not responsible for the action of the whole? At all events, although only a "unit," he does not refuse his dividend warrant, because it was earned by the Company as a whole, and not by his individual share. Would not such a man, if in business as a merchant, stand appalled if his own warehouse or shop was opened on the Lord's Day? Such a scandalous state of things he would never allow. Not only would his Christian character be stained, but even his very church membership would be jeopardised. Without hesitation he would close his warehouse on the Lord's Day, even if it meant pecuniary ruin.

And yet the same conscientious Lord's-Day-keeping Christian unthinkingly allows his cash, in conjunction with others, to be used to its utmost extent for united desecration of God's Day.

IV. How can the Christian investor in such Sabbath-breaking concerns face the revelations of Christ's judgment seat? What we know now, of the irreparable damage done to many by the Sabbath defiling agencies, appals and overwhelms us. Christian investors! ponder, pray over what your money is doing, and haste, while you have time and opportunity, to use it as you would wish you had when you stand in the light of his presence, and possess the full consciousness of the responsible trust of invested money.

DR. PIERSON AND THE PRESS.

My Dear Sir,—You might do me a possible service, and others who sympathise with my views, and at the same time prevent unnecessary interruptions of my time, by publishing the following open letter to all representatives of the Press. I courteously but firmly decline all "interviewing." It is a system which, though it has the credit of originating in America, I have never believed in and have never encouraged. It often is pressed to the verge of impertinent intrusion. When I have anything to say to the public I reserve to myself the right and privilege to say it in my own way, place, time, and form. The representations or misrepresentations of other parties I do not consider myself responsible for, and it has not been my custom to chase about after my own reputation, believing as I do that when a man's reputation needs so much looking after it is not worth the pursuit. When the time comes that I desire to make any communication to the public, I prefer to choose my own channels for such communication; but, as I have done for twenty-five years, I strenuously object to feeding the abnormal appetite of an insatiate public by what the Athenians so much delighted in, viz., the carrion of curiosity.—Yours truly, Arthur T. Pierson.

Metropolitan Tabernacle, April 2.

Temperance Notes.

The Bolton and District Wesleyan Band of Hope Union, which has been in existence for fifteen years, now numbers nearly ten thousand members.

Licences have been refused at Wandsworth, Barnet, and Highgate, on the ground that the localities did not require so many public-houses.

The Sunday Closing Bill for England, which was brought in on February 10 by Mr. Henry Broadhurst, is down for the second reading on Wednesday next, April 6.

Mr. Justice Vaughan Williams, in charging the grand jury at the Chester Assizes, referred to the remarkable absence of crimes due to drink, and said that they might begin really to hope in a permanent improvement in the morals of the people.

"A Temperance M.P.," writing from the House of Commons, on the Shop Hours Bill, asks:—"Why are not the employes in public-houses and beershops included in this Bill? Surely life and work in these places is more trying than in a draper's or millinor's shop?"

Mr. Matthew Burnett has just closed a successful Evangelistic and Gospel Temperance Mission at Waterhouses, Durham. Some extraordinary cases of conversion have taken place, and 180 have put on the blue ribbon badge. Mr. Burnett visits the new converts at Blyth this week, and will revisit Scarborough and district at the end of the week. His address is Westwood, Scarborough.

A largely-attended meeting was held on Monday night in Wesley Chapel, Leeds, presided over by Mr. G. Crowther, of Boston Spa, when addresses were given by Revs. T. T. Lambert and George Jackson. The former said that so long as there were 185,000 public-houses in the country—one for every thirty-six persons—so long would there be great need of home missions. Last year the amount spent on drink in the country was £141,000,000.

A correspondent of the Union Signal, writing from Rotufunk, West Africa, says:—"Oh! the sin, the awful sin, Christian nations are committing by sending intoxicating liquors to our shores. Heathenism is awful; but when coupled with drunkenness, the scene is too black for any portrayal. We can only raise our eyes to heaven and cry, 'How long, oh! how long?' When will we arise in the strength of the Lord, and with the voice of one man say this accursed traffic shall cease?"

The Independent Methodists around Wigan have held a largely-attended convention at Platt Bridge. One of the afternoon subjects was, "The Church in Relation to Social Questions." Of course "Drink" came first. The meeting was enthusiastic, and passed a resolution recommending the members of the congregations to use their votes in connection with Boards of Guardians, Local Boards, and Town Councils, so as to reduce the temptations to drink, and, so far as the workhouse is concerned, to annihilate it altogether.

At the annual meeting of the National Temperance Federation, lately held at Exeter Hall, motions were carried in favour of English and Irish Sunday Closing, the Scotch Direct Local Veto, and Mr. Conybeare's Children's Bill; also instructions to the executive to procure a return as to temperance teaching in the schools of the United States, and to promote the enforcement of the Truck Acts; prosecutions of hawkers of spirits on railway platforms, and the extension of magisterial veto on beer and wine licences.

On Saturday evening, 26th ult., a Gospel Temperance demonstration was held in the Exchange Hall, Hawick, Provost Hogg presiding. The hall, which will seat upwards of two thousand persons, was crowded. The principal speaker was Mr. Merton Smith, who was supported by many of the ministers of the town, and by some of the leading manufacturers and tradesmen. The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic ever held in Hawick, and, to crown all, at the close upwards of 350 persons signed the pledge, two-thirds of which number were young converts to the Gospel of Christ.

A writer in The Christian Advocate, in charging the drink traffic with being the direct cause of crime, Sabbath desecration and irreligion, says that on Sunday evening week while he stood at a street corner, just opposite a public-house, with a mission band, he counted over a hundred persons who entered that public-house during the half-hour over which the mission service extended, and that at that rate it would be easy to infer the vast numbers that must have entered the various public-houses of the city during the afternoon. He therefore argues Christians are only half awake to the evils of intemperance, and that like Nero they are only fiddling while Rome is burning.

The first of a series of temperance meetings arranged for in the various Presbyteries, according to a recommendation of the last General Assembly, has just been held in Londonderry, Rev. W. J. Lowe presiding. Papers were read by Revs. Thos. West, of Antrim, on "The Duty of Separation from the Drink Traffic," by E. J. M'Mordie, of Monreagh, on "Individual Responsibility with regard to Temperance," and by Jno. M'Millan, of Dundalk, on "The Training of the Young in Temperance Truth." These papers have been published in full in some of the Derry newspapers, and in this way it is hoped that a strong public sentiment on the drink question will be formed, and much good accomplished.

OBITUARY.

MRS. R. MORETON.

Many will deeply regret to hear that the Hon. Mrs. Reynolds Moreton, the beloved wife of Captain Moreton, so long the loved and honoured superintendent of the Conference Hall, Mildmay-park, died on March 19, after only four days' illness. Thus a life of loving labour ended—she rests in Christ.

MRS. BLENNERHASSETT.

A wide circle of friends will regret to hear of the death, on Monday morning, 4th inst., of Mrs. Blennerhasset, who for thirty-five years was Lady Superintendent of the Ogle Mews Ragged Schools, Marylebone, W. During this long period she exercised a vast influence for good among the many hundreds of girls with whom she came in contact. She was a real mother to many, and her usefulness in numberless ways will not soon be forgotten. Her influence owed much to the length of her service, as numbers of old scholars, on revisiting the schools after some years of absence, were cheered by finding her still at her post, and ready to talk over the events of their girlhood. After a long and painful illness, she has now gone to her reward, affectionately "remembered by what she has done."

MR. ALEXANDER ALLAN.

Following close upon the death of Mrs. Allan, which took place on February 18 last, comes the intimation that Mr. Alexander Allan, head of the firm of Messrs. J. and A. Allan, of the Allan and State lines of steamers, has also passed away. The sad event took place on Saturday morning, at Blackwood House, Kirkmuirhill, Lanarkshire. The deceased, who was in his sixty-seventh year, had been an invalid for the past twelve months. Mr. Allan took no very prominent part in public affairs, but he was a well-known citizen of Glasgow, and all religious, social, and temperance movements found in him, and in his wife, warm advocates and liberal supporters. He was an elder in Wellington U.P. Church (Rev. Dr. Black's), and was frequently a representative to the Synod. He is survived by five sons and two daughters.

M. JEAN BAPTISTE COUVE, BORDEAUX.

Not only the French Reformed Protestant Church, but a much wider circle, mourns the death of Jean Baptiste Couve, at the early age of forty-nine. For several years a member of the Consistory of Bordeaux, he was the soul of various Christian societies, never failing to attend meetings, wherever held, in the departments of Garonne and Dordogne. His hospitable house was ever open to representatives of the missionary cause, whether French, on their way to Africa, or English, German, Dutch, or Swiss. During his frequent visits to England and Scotland he ever struck the note of Christ's cause for his beloved France. His chief characteristics were unselfishness and modesty. Whenever and wherever he had rendered a service, with a warm grasp of the hand, he would say, "Merci" ("Thank you"), as if he, and not the helped one, had been the recipient of favour.

MR. JOHN GUSTARD.

We hear with regret of the death of Mr. John Gustard, of Bedford-gardens, Kensington. He will be missed by many who knew him as an unostentatious but loyal follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. He was in most hearty sympathy with all true Christian work, but that of the Ragged School Union held a foremost place in his heart. For many years he was the honorary secretary of the Pear-street and Duck-lane Schools, Westminster; also a member of the Parent Union Committee at Exeter Hall, and when circumstances obliged him to retire from active service, he still continued his interest in "The Rags," as he was wont to call them. He only survived his devoted wife nine months. In their removal the church has lost two pillars of truth. They ever defended Protestant doctrine, and were mighty in the Scriptures. Many a lonely invalid will miss the weekly Bible reading and tract which cheered their heart. "Peace, perfect peace, through the blood of his cross," were his last words; soon after he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, to wake no more to care and pain on earth, but "In Immanuel's land" to live for evermore.

THE WAR SPIRIT OF NATIONS.—In the course of a recent lecture on the war between Benhadad and Ahab, delivered in the R. P. Church, Glasgow, Rev. Dr. Kerr said that the war passion had not ceased to actuate the nations. The flame blazed up the moment any nation deemed its "flag dishonoured." If men were as ready as nations to fight on the slightest insult, society and the family would never be at rest for duels. It was deplorable that in the last quarter of the nineteenth century the most civilised nations were the most fully armed, their very attitude of preparation being a provocation to a conflagration. Never were there more gigantic engines for the destruction of property and life, man's ingenuity being laid under the heaviest pressure to devise instruments of death for man. Sooner or later these gigantic armaments must, by reason of their own weight precipitate the avalanche.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

In the latest letters from Uganda, Mr. Pilkington shows very clearly the imperative need for a large reinforcement of missionaries.

The important vicarage of Great Yarmouth has been offered to Canon Quirk, vicar of St. Mary's, Beverley, an earnest Evangelical.

The sum of £2000 has been raised towards the erection of a proposed new church of St. Andrew, in the mission district of Dearnley, Smallbridge, Rochdale.

High Churchmen and Ritualists are raising the strongest possible objection against the Archbishop of Canterbury's Clergy Discipline Bill, which deals with procedure in cases of intemperance and immority.

Rev. Charles W. Barnard, rector of Church Hill, near Kidderminster, formerly vicar of Rowley Regis, Salop, has accepted the vicarage of Oldbury, near Birmingham, vacant by the death of Rev. William T. Taylor.

The Bishop of Exeter's action in confirming a number of lunatics is exciting great attention, and it is not improbable that the matter will be discussed at the forthcoming session of Convocation.

Bishop Austin, of Guiana, Metropolitan of the West Indies, and doyen of the Anglican Episcopal Bench, celebrates his episcopal jubilee during the present month at Georgetown, British Guiana. Among the many offerings he has received a gift of ten thousand dollars from the Governor and Court of Policy of British Guiana. This is one of exceptional interest, the Governor (Viscount Gormanston, K.C.M.G.) being a Roman Catholic.

The Bishop of Liverpool preached on Sunday week at St. Philemon's, where the services are of the old-fashioned plain and hearty style. Canon Honeyburne has been vicar since 1874, and all these years he has borne testimony to the benefits which may be derived from plain Protestant worship and sound evangelical teaching. His church is filled, the parochial organisations are kept up liberally, and continue to act effectively for good in the district.

The annual tea for the agents employed by the Church of England Scripture Readers' Association was held last week at King's College, when there was a large gathering of Readers and their wives. Rev. Marcus Rainsford, who has been identified with the work of the Association for more than twenty-five years, presided over the subsequent meeting, and addressed a few hearty words of sympathy and encouragement to the audience. Rev. Prebendary Eardley Wilmot, Vicar of St. Jude's, South Kensington, also gave a very helpful address on Serving Christ, Following Christ, and Dwelling with Christ.

CONGREGATIONAL.

A women's settlement has been formed in Canningtown for work among the poor.

Rev. D. Robb, Leith, has conducted a week of evangelistic services in the Congregational Church, Wick.

The Congregationalists of East Dereham have received the sum of £500 from Mr. H. C. Wigg, formerly of that town, and now of Melbourne.

Rev. J. W. Houchin, of Ingatestone, is delivering a course of six lectures on the persecutions and sufferings of Nonconformists in the past.

Rev. F. Barclay has resigned the pastorate of the Pilgrim Church, New Kent-road, on account of ill-health, and intends going to Australia.

At the annual assembly of the Cumberland Congregational Union, held at Workington, Rev. J. E. Clayton, of Cockermouth, was elected president for the year.

The Congregational Union is asked to take steps to secure the commemoration of the tercentenary of the death of three Congregationalists—Barrow, Greenwood, and Penry, who died for fidelity to conscience in 1593.

A touching story of the Self-Denial week comes from Sheffield. An aged couple whose scanty income left no margin for reduction, having unexpectedly received the present of a sovereign, determined to give the whole to the self-denial fund, and would take no refusal.

The vacancy in the pastorate of the Arley Congregational Church, Bristol, caused by the departure of Rev. S. J. Whitmee to Samoa to undertake control of the operations of the London Missionary Society there, is about to be filled by Rev. Jonathan Roebuck, who comes from a successful sphere of toil in Dundee.

The annual meeting of the Church-Aid Society is announced to be held on Tuesday, May 10, in the Memorial Hall, the Mayor of Ipswich in the chair. Addresses are promised by Revs. I. Morley Wright, W. J. Bull, and J. Beale, of Othery, in the flood district of Somersetshire.

BAPTIST.

A new chapel has been opened in Nelson-street, Kettering.

The Plumstead and Sidcup Mission continues to show cheering fruit.

Mr. John Burnham was labouring last week in Saltash with tokens of interest.

An interesting work is going on in the Barry Hall, near Cardiff, and it is hoped a chapel will soon be built.

Special services during the past week or two in Tredegarville, Cardiff, have proved full of hopefulness.

The anniversary of the Market Harborough Chapel was held on Sunday last, the preacher being Rev. C. Duxbury.

Mr. H. Kerby Byard, of the Pastors' College, has accepted the invitation of the united Baptist Churches of Winslow and Swanbourne, Bucks.

Special missions in connection with the Baptist Forward Movement are arranged for April and May at West Croydon, Camden-road, Streatham, and Victoria-park.

Encouraging results have followed a mission recently conducted by Mr. Henry Thorne, at Clarendon Chapel, Camberwell New-road. Several have confessed Christ.

During the four Sunday mornings of March, Rev. H. H. Pullen, of Crouch-hill, N., took for his subject "The Bible: Its Inspiration and Infallibility." One evening Mr. Sjöblom, a Swedish Christian, who has been in England a few months for preparation for mission work on the Congo, gave an address on "Fellowship with Christ."

The Regent's-park "Year Book" affords ample evidence that busy as Mr. Meyer has been in helping others, his own work has also prospered in every department. For example: During the past year the membership, which now stands at 719, has increased by 105. The Sunday-school now numbers nine hundred scholars and eighty-nine teachers.

TESTIMONIALS.

Rev. HENRY S. LUNN, M.D. (Editor of The Review of the Churches), writes from 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W., November 16, 1891: "I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

The Rev. G. J. BRETT writes from The Manse, Tendring, Colchester, July, 1891: "For eighteen months I have used the Carbolic Smoke Ball with very astonishing beneficial results. I value it very highly, and should feel uncomfortable without one kept by me."

The Rev. Dr. J. HILES HITCHENS writes from 90, Gloucester-street, Belgravia, S.W., January 1, 1890: "Your Carbolic Smoke Ball relieved the head and throat to a large extent."

TESTIMONIALS.

The Rev. Dr. BULLOCK (Editor of The Fireside) writes: "Those who are troubled with Hay Fever will do well to try the Carbolic Smoke Ball. From practical testimony we can certify that it gives great relief."

Major ROWLAND WEBSTER, Sutherland Avenue, W., writes: "The Carbolic Smoke Ball gave me entire satisfaction last summer. I unintentionally got into a field where Hay-making was going on, and I was not inconvenienced by it. I have not been able to do such a thing for the last twenty years without suffering frightfully."

Dr. J. COLBOURNE, M.D., writes: "I can very highly recommend the Carbolic Smoke Ball from observing its usefulness in quite a large number of cases, principally CATARRHAL AFFECTIONS OF NOSE, PHARYNX, LARYNX, and BRONCHIAL TUBES."

The Original of these Testimonials may be seen at our Consulting Rooms, with hundreds of others.

One CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL will last a family several months, making it the cheapest remedy in the world at the price—10s., post free.

The CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL can be refilled, when empty, at a cost of 5s., post free.

METHODIST.

Rev. W. Wakinshaw pleads the urgent importance of village work.

The Manchester Wesleyan Mission has held interesting meetings at Alderley Edge.

Special meetings at Stockton, held by Rev. J. T. W. Stafford and D. T. Young, have stirred many.

Various important changes are being made in the organisation of the Central London Mission.

In the Portsmouth Town-hall large and enthusiastic meetings have just been held by Rev. H. P. Hughes and W. D. Walters.

An interesting Local Preachers' Convention has just been held at Chatteris, for the consideration of "preparation" and "preaching."

For young people away from their homes and others who cannot attend week-night meetings, Rev. J. S. Hicks, of Willesden, holds a social hour on Sunday evenings, which is a great success. It closes with family prayer.

Mr. W. P. Hartley, Primitive Methodist Missionary treasurer, has offered £1000 towards the cost of building a new wing to the Manchester College. At present the number of young men for whom provision is made is too small to meet the yearly demand for ministers.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Hugh Falconer, of Edinburgh, has been called to Cambridge.

We hear that Rev. W. M. Taylor, D.D., of New York, is being proposed as a good successor to the late Principal Cairns.

Rev. H. Shearer has been giving an interesting series of lectures on "The English Bible," in the rooms of the Brighton Y.M.C.A.

The efforts being made by the Foreign Mission Committee of the English Presbyterian Church to raise £10,000 to clear off the debt are now approaching a successful issue.

Sir Charles E. Bernard, K.C.S.I., in the course of an interesting lecture on "India and Her People," delivered the other day in Crouch-hill, bore high testimony to missions.

Two legacies have been left to the Presbyterian College by the late Mrs. Traill, of Notting-hill—one of £200 for an endowment to the library, and one of £500 to found a theological scholarship.

Two additional missionaries are about to be sent to strengthen the staff at the Lake Nyassa Settlements. The Dutch Reformed Church of South Africa co-operates with the staff of the Scottish Church in the Livingstonia mission-field.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

According to The Friend, the increase of the Society last year was 2742—viz., a little over two and a-half per cent.

William Jesper Sayce has published an excellent little penny pamphlet on "What the Society of Friends Believes, and Why."

Justine Dalencourt, a French Friend, has just had the unique position accorded her of membership in a Temperance Committee in Paris, among pastors and other gentlemen.

At the World's Congress of Religions next year in Chicago, the Friends are likely to be represented by six orthodox and four "Hicksite" Friends. A large advisory committee is also suggested.

At a Gospel Mission in Indiana, out of over a hundred professed conversions, sixty-one requested membership among Friends in one district, and in another, after a similar profession, twenty wished to join the Society.

The Friends of Cleveland, Ohio, have suspended their usual Sabbath evening meeting, and opened Gospel services in a theatre in the heart of the city instead. J. Walter and Emma B. Malone are the workers, assisted by others.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The inaugural meeting of a Methodist Council for Belfast was held on last Thursday evening, and was largely attended.

The consecration of Dr. Welland as Bishop of Down, Connor and Dromore, took place in Armagh on Friday week; the sermon was preached by the Bishop of Ossory.

A meeting in connection with Count Campello's Italian Mission was held in Belfast on Monday week, Rev. Dr. Welland presiding, and an address being delivered by Rev. S. L. Dixon.

As the result of the recent anti-opium meetings in Dublin, memorials have been signed calling upon the Government to carry into effect the resolutions of the House on the subject of opium of April 10 last.

The Arklow open-air services still continue to be disturbed. On Sunday week the police were knocked about, their helmets dashed to the ground, and their batons wrenched from them; while Rev. Mr. Hallowes and his supporters were also very roughly handled.

The annual meeting of Derry Branch of the Bible and Colportage Society has just been held. The Society has four agents, who paid during the year 17,257 visits, and sold a very large number of Bibles and Testaments and other books, besides holding many religious meetings.

Rev. S. G. Cotton has been found guilty by the county Antrim jury, after a trial lasting five days, of ill-treating and neglecting five children placed under his charge in Carogh Orphanage. Sentence was deferred pending the decision of the Court of Appeal on a point of law raised at the close of the case.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Norwich, on March 25, Rev. C. H. Hosken, a veteran Baptist minister, who in earlier days took, in the United States, an active part in the struggle against slavery, and kept "a station on the underground railway" for the escape of runaway slaves; in the South Pacific (through the capsizing of a schooner), Mr. A. Doudney, youngest son of Dr. Doudney; at Leicester, Rev. T. Yates, who had been a preacher of the Gospel for sixty-one years; at Bathafarn House, Carnarvon, on March 31, Rev. David Richards, superintendent of Carnarvon Welsh Wesleyan Circuit, one of the foremost and best-known ministers in the Principality, who last year underwent a painful operation, the effects of which proved fatal; at Ilfracombe, Rev. J. R. F. Ross suddenly from heart-disease; at Golborne, Mrs. Travers, an earnest Christian worker; at Dromara, co. Down, Mr. John Campbell, aged 90 years, and for over twenty years an elder in the Presbyterian Church; in Freemantle, Western Australia, Rev. Joseph Johnson, the last of the missionary band who went in 1836 with the noble John William to the Society Islands, and was the only missionary who remained in Tahiti after its annexation by the French; in Manchester, on March 24, Ralph Taylor, aged 86, to the last a devoted and faithful preacher of the Gospel; at Leeds, on March 29, Canon C. Edwards, of Bingley, aged 55, loved and respected as a devoted clergyman.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, APRIL 4, 1892.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O.Orders, not by stamps.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss.

THIRTY-NINTH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

ONE LUNG DISEASED—CASE of a LOCAL PREACHER at MINSTERLEY (SALOP).

Fifteen months from the time at which I write, this patient applied to me, by the recommendation and at the earnest request of the Primitive Methodist minister and other friends. He is a local preacher, and well known in the denomination. His father died of Asthma.

Hæmorrhage came on some months before I first heard of the case. This continued without abatement, and soon was accompanied by a constant cough, with expectoration, distressingly oppressed breathing, severe pains in the chest and right lung, and at the top of the right shoulder. These symptoms were followed by gradual loss of flesh in every part of the body, and increasing weakness. The doctors then reported: "Consumption set in, and one lung diseased."

In one month there was considerable improvement, in spite of bad weather. The patient continued with the medicine until the following spring. Writing me recently, he says: "I have received such great benefit from your treatment that I have recommended it to many others, to whom it has been very useful, especially while this Influenza has been about so much."

Writing me Jan. 12th, he states that he has passed through the severe winter so far well. "I shall be pleased to answer any inquiry, but kindly do not print my name."

[N.B.—Many patients are anxious that their names should not appear in print for family or other reasons, some lest they should give offence to their local medical attendant.]

PEPSONYMIN TONIC

THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely from its use." Mrs. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dyspepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SPITE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. BRIDGE OF HOPE

Ratcliff Highway, E.

THE BRIDGE OF HOPE MISSION has now been carried on for nearly fourteen years in one of the Poorest Districts in the East of London. The work is especially among YOUNG WOMEN and LITTLE GIRLS, and is both RESCUE and PREVENTIVE. The doors are Open Night and Day, and Applicants are as numerous in the summer as in winter.

The various branches of the Bridge of Hope are

. THE REFUGE.
. THE NIGHT SHELTER.
. THE MOTHERS' HOME.
. THE SERVANTS' LODGE.

and for the work among the Children,

5. BRIDGE HOUSE, LONDON.
6. HOPE LODGE, REDHILL.
7. REGENTS' PARK COTTAGE, LEIGH.
8. THE CHILDREN'S COTTAGE, HIGHGATE

AND

9. THE HAVEN, TICEHURST.

There are 220 beds, which are always full. Sixty little destitute children from the neighbourhood come to akfast five mornings each week.

THE BRIDGE OF HOPE has a very special claim upon the support of the Christian public. It is quite undenominational. t only are girls from the neighbourhood taken in, and workers all around in the various East End Missions helped with their cult cases, but applications to receive Young Girls come from all parts of England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland.

In consequence of the change that has come over public opinion regarding grave moral and social questions, and the reased efforts of Christian Workers to rescue the younger ones, such Homes as ours are more needed than ever.

To give to the BRIDGE OF HOPE is to help those who try to help themselves. The young women in the Refuge ned during last year £608 by Laundry Work, Knitting, and Needlework. It is for the very young girls and children n into evil surroundings, and so circumstanced that, humanly speaking, if not rescued and saved NOW there is no other nce in life but for them to swell the numbers of lost girls on the streets that we now plead.

HELP US TO SAVE THESE LITTLE GIRLS!

The money given goes very directly to the benefit of those for whom it is sent. There is no doubt as to the economy h which the work is carried on. Our need was never so great as at the present time.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto Me."

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of the Rev. Thomas Cook, evangelist of the Wesleyan Methodist Connexion.

"The religious life of to-day," says The New York Observer, "needs a revival of Puritan doctrine and Puritan morality."

The American House of Representatives by 179 to 42 votes, has passed a Bill absolutely prohibiting Chinamen from entering the United States. Surely this is "protection,' carried to an exceedingly selfish extreme, and an act highly detrimental to international comity and brotherhood.

The brief article that appears on another page with respect to the National Vigilance Association, will surely awaken the practical sympathy of many readers. The friends who carry on these Christlike endeavours cannot publicly tell all, but that fact ought rather to increase than diminish the interest felt by the Christian public.

Again our "Notes on Daily Readings" have completed the round of Holy Writ. We begin with this issue another course of Bible study, in which we do not profess to remark upon the chapters in detail, but rather to suggest helpful thoughts for daily Christian life. Many have written to us from time to time, acknowledging the Divine blessing upon the "Notes" given in these pages; and we trust the new series will be signally owned of God to an ever-widening circle of Bible students. We heartily recommend our readers who have not done so to send their names as members of the Bible and Prayer Union, to Rev. T. Richardson, St. Benet's, Mile End, E.

The Committee of Reference of "the C. H. Spurgeon Memorial Fund," alluded to in our last issue, is notable for the catholicity of its composition; and is a fitting index of the wide-spread esteem that is cherished for the departed servant of God. The Orphanage, the Pastors' College, the Colportage and Evangelistic Associations, were organizations for which Mr. Spurgeon made himself peculiarly responsible, and those who desire to perpetuate his work could not do it in a better way than by swelling the Memorial Fund now being raised.

It is a pity that the writer of the leading article in last week's issue of The British Weekly did not verify the statement attributed to Mr. Moody in a newspaper paragraph, that he had disparaged the regular and educated ministry. As Mr. Moody took special pains to explain, in one of his closing addresses at Edinburgh, on March 31, he did not in any degree disparage the regular ministry; quite the contrary. In his speech at Glasgow he simply emphasized a fact, patent to every observer, that certain of our social strata are not being reached by the ordinary ministerial methods, and he advocated the supplemental agency of men and women, less highly trained, but better qualified to get into close personal touch with the un-churched masses.

Mr. Goschen's Budget reveals the unpleasant fact that the consumption of tobacco is greatly on the increase. He has not failed to observe that young men take very early to smoking, and that even little urchins in the streets are becoming taxpayers. The results of this growing habit will not be favourable either to the physical stamina or the spiritual force of the nation.

The Manchester City Council has, by the overwhelming vote of sixty-one to twenty-six, refused a dramatic licence to the Theatre of Varieties in that city. The applicants for the licence made no concealment of their desire to secure it merely in order to get the resultant permission from the Excise to vend intoxicating liquors on the premises. The decision is, therefore, to be hailed as an undoubted municipal triumph for temperance and good morals. We rejoice to think that if the friends of temperance only keep on their watch-tower, no further attempt can be successfully made in the same direction.

A useful Bill is down for second reading in the House of Commons on May 11, which ought to meet with hearty support from all parties. It is simply to forbid, under penalty of a fine (much too light a one, by the way) the sale or delivery of intoxicating liquors to children under sixteen years of age. The law as it stands at present is evaded, under the plea that children are simply messengers; but when we find publicans bribing children to come to their houses, with presents of sweets, and putting a step at the counter for the special benefit of these tiny children, it is surely time to put a stop to the temptations thus placed in their way. The sights and sounds of a public-house are not what young children ought to be familiar with, and we need carefully to guard them against these degrading influences. We would ask all our readers to write to their Members of Parliament, urging them to vote for this Bill for the Prohibition of the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors to Children.

The appointment of a Parliamentary Committee to inquire into the most desirable method of dealing with habitual drunkards may possibly lead to the possession of a more extended knowledge on the part of the Government as to the manufacture of drunkards, and the unhappy connection between the National Revenue and the degradation of the people. There is no use in simply seeking to bring about uniformity in the treatment of what, after all, is an effect clearly traceable to a visible cause; but it is so evident an axiom that it would be better to assist the moral agencies already at work in the direction of prevention and reform, than to expend national funds in endeavouring to regulate the punishment of the unhappy victims to a State-protected temptation.

Our readers will, we are sure, share our joy that so many workers, in all parts of the world, are helped and encouraged by reading The Christian. A large number of friends in Great Britain send copies to missionaries and others abroad, and one of these has just written to us:—

> I should like to tell you an interesting circumstance concerning The Christian. I have sent one every week for eight years to a lady in Canada. After a time I opened a correspondence with her, and said I should like to know what became of the papers which I had then been sending her for about three years. She said they were first well read by all at home, and then they were lent to five ministers in succession, of various denominations, and then to others. I think a copy of The Christian that goes this circuit has plenty of opportunities for usefulness.

We are continually hearing from needy workers at home, and isolated witnesses for Christ abroad, who would be glad to know of friends who would send them a paper regularly.

Some years ago a number of ladies banded themselves together, and resolved not to give their custom to shopkeepers who failed to provide seats for the use of their female assistants. Possibly the organisation has fallen through. If such is the case, it is to be hoped that it will be set on foot again, and on a larger scale. A few days ago a witness stated, before the House of Commons Committee on Shop Hours, that she had been kept at work for ninety hours per week, and that during her fifteen hours' daily attendance at the counter, she was not allowed to sit down. It scarcely need be said that the girl's health had broken down under such cruelty.

In his own striking and trenchant way, Rev. Joseph Cook, of Boston, is dealing in his latest course of Monday Lectures with the burning question of Scripture authenticity. "This is a period of critical earthquakes. Everything that can be shaken is shaken and ought to be!" In the first lecture, reported in Our Day for April, Mr. Cook contends—(1) that an important number of columnar truths in Scripture remain unshaken; and (2) that these are enough to point out infallibly the way of life: that is, the way of deliverance from the love and the guilt of sin. The "columnar truths" mentioned are monotheism, man's creation in the image of God, the family, the Sabbath, a severe view of sin, the hope of redemption, the Decalogue, the Psalms, the great Prophecies, the Sermon on the Mount, the Lord's Prayer, the Character of Christ, the identification of Christ with the Logos, the verifiable promise of the gift of the Holy Spirit, the founding of the Christian Church, and the fruits of Christianity.

The shaking process referred to by Mr. Cook, goes on through many channels. In The Review of the Churches for March and April there are contributions to a symposium on the Old Testament by Principal Cave, Professor Davison, Mr. R. F. Horton, Canon Driver, and Professor Agar Beet. It is reassuring to the unlearned reader to be told by all these scholarly critics that the present searching examination of the literary "husk" of the ancient Jewish oracles can in no way invalidate the worth of the "kernel" of revealed truth which they contain. Canon Driver resents being classed among the "extremer critics," but we observe he has evidently satisfied himself that the book of Job is merely "a dramatic poem under the form of dialogue." Most people, we should think, outside the ranks of the "higher critics" will consider that view extreme enough.

A solemn and weighty utterance, on the doctrinal defections that mark our restless and critical age, was given by the venerable Principal Brown, at the closing of the session of the Free Church College, Aberdeen. He pointed out the serious nature of the fact that many modern purveyors of religious doubt are to be found among those who profess to hold, and are expected to teach, positive saving faith. The Principal strongly vindicated the testimony of the prophets to the Messiah, and urged the importance of holding intact the vital doctrine of Christ's atoning sacrifice.

We understand that Rev. Charles Williams will move, and Rev. F. B. Meyer will second, the following resolution at the approaching meeting of the Council of the Baptist Union:—

> That, in view of the obligation "to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," the Baptist Union renews its testimony to the Deity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, to salvation through his mediatorial work and by faith in Him, and to his supreme and absolute authority in the Kingdom of God; that, while fully and gladly recognising the duty of cherishing good-will towards all men, and of co-operating with them in works of piety and mercy, when this can be done without disloyalty to conviction or to the Lord, the Union deprecates and disapproves any and every association with those who deny the above essential truths, which would weaken the force of our testimony or produce the impression that it is a matter of secondary importance what men "think of Christ"; and that the Union, therefore, urges all the churches and pastors in connection with it jealously to "guard that which is committed to them," and especially to secure in the public ministry of the house of God clear, consistent, and constant witness-bearing to the Deity of our "one Lord" and only Saviour, Jesus Christ.

A Paris contemporary, the Gaulois, states that during the past year no fewer than ninety-seven thousand persons died in France of sheer hunger, and that the number of crimes adjudicated upon in the Courts was 247,000. If we add to this the statement put forward by M. Betham Edwards last November, that in Paris one out of every twenty deaths of adult males is that of a suicide, it will not be difficult to form an idea of the condition of things in a country which is exposed to the effects of the two extremes of superstition and infidelity.

It is very evident to any one who makes a prolonged stay in France that the almost general disregard of the Sabbath simply means for the working-classes six days' pay for seven days' toil. What it means to the domestics and to female employes is aptly illustrated by a statement made in a recent article from the pen of M. Betham Edwards, a master of any subject affecting French social questions:—

"You will find educated women in Paris working as bookkeepers, from twelve to fifteen hours a day, Sundays as well as week-days, their only holiday being half-a-day once a month. I have known a chambermaid in a hotel who during three years never had a whole day to herself."

The Parliament of Religions, to be held in connection with the World's Fair at Chicago next year, is a very ambitious project, and it is impossible not to sympathise with some of its avowed objects. But when the reflecting mind has shaken itself free from the glamour raised by the unprecedented vastness and comprehensiveness of the scheme, this crucial question arises: How will such a conglomerated conference affect the honour of the one living and true God, who has revealed Himself to the world in the person of his Son Jesus Christ? Christianity has hitherto prospered, and been a blessing to mankind, because of its quality of destroying and supplanting false faiths of a purely human origin. The distinctive character and glory of the Christian religion must surely vanish when it is regarded only as one of many of the religions of the world that are all to meet in peaceful harmony on equal terms.

This view of the case is strongly and ably presented in an article by Dr. Herrick Johnson (of Chicago) in The New York Independent of March 24. In his opinion, "to invite all the false faiths of the world to come up to this centre of civilization to exhibit their religious goods and to scatter broadcast what we believe to be their detestable and pestiferous doctrines, seems a monstrous absurdity." And yet we observe, with no small surprise, that the proposal has received the sanction and unstinted approval of many eminent evangelical pastors and professors in America and elsewhere. The working out of the problem will be watched throughout the Christian as well as the heathen world with a curious interest. For our own part, we can anticipate no good to man or to the cause of Jesus Christ from such a Babel of beliefs, half beliefs, false beliefs, and no beliefs.

The Bombay Guardian raises a loud protest against the continuance of "The Holi Festival" annually celebrated in that city and many parts of India. From the accounts given in our contemporary, it appears that this so-called religious festival is in reality a very carnival of lust and debauchery:—

Two-thirds of this whole people drink themselves drunk for two or three nights in succession for the sole purpose of priming themselves for the committal of every possible offence against purity and modesty—and this in the name of religion!

The Guardian urges that the Indian Government should be moved to strike the "Holi" off the list of public holidays, and that the attention of social reformers at the National Congress should be drawn to such an abominable travesty of all religion and morality. For the sake of Young India, a strong effort should be made to purify the social atmosphere of this foul miasma of native custom.

In an article on "The moral wreckage of manhood in middle life," The New York Evangelist remarks that "there are certain perils to life and character and certain temptations that are peculiar to the strong years of full manhood." The writer discerns the causes of such wreckage in overweening self-confidence, the loss of youthful enthusiasm, and the too absorbing interests of business life. Modern history has furnished many illustrations of this; watchfulness and prayer were never more needed than in our busy age.

Come, thou South Wind!

There are times when Nature seems on the point of bursting into bud and bloom, but all her processes are delayed by the long prevalence of the east wind. The invalid racked with rheumatic pain or the hacking cough longs with almost inexpressible desire for a change; and even the healthy, searched to the bone, will gladly welcome it. Each morning we look up to the smoke or the vane for the first symptom of the soft south wind.

It is with something of this eagerness that the more earnest souls among us are longing for a general revival of God's work. It is not that we dread the overthrow of the truth or the extinction of the Church. As well might we fear for the displacement of the cliffs at whose foot the billows have chafed for centuries, without gaining a single inch; or tremble for the life of Christ Himself. These things are guaranteed as capable of outlasting heaven and earth, and of defying the flight of time. But the fight is long. The adversaries of the truth are more than usually aggressive; and their attacks are all the more to be dreaded that they are being made on questions of learned criticism, which can only be debated by scholars, apart from the mass of Christians, and in arenas where sanctified common-sense is denied a standing. The love of many is waxing cold. A spirit of levity and worldliness is enervating the warriors of the cross. Luxury, wealth, fulness of bread and abundance of idleness are all engaged in the work of reducing the temperature of our zeal, and bird-liming the feet of our activity. And on all hands there is the cry for the interposition of God. Let God arise, and his enemies shall be scattered.

In olden days, when his people were at the lowest point of their national fortune, and the outlook was as into a murky night, loyal hearts encouraged each other by speaking often, and saying, "Our God shall come, and will not keep silence." That advent was anticipated as the cure for every heart-ache, the answer to every vaunt of the foe. Nor was the hope in vain. In the most desperate hours of the history of God's work among men, there has been the introduction of a new element of spiritual force, a man like Whitfield, an overlooked doctrine like that of the Second Advent, a gracious quickening of souls, as in the great Irish revival.

There are certain lines on which any such revival in our own times must proceed. Its earliest effect will be to put God into his right place. The pendulum has swung far enough in one direction, it must come back again. Strangely different are the views of God now held from those of a century ago. Then God's sovereignty, his grace, the march of his purpose, the absoluteness of his will, were insisted upon to an extreme. Now all the sweeter, gentler attributes of human nature are attributed to Him, and He is treated as though He were altogether such an one as ourselves. There is a golden mean between these two positions, but the balance needs adjustment, and the exclusive humanitarianism of the conception of God must be compensated for by a fuller vindication of his royal prerogative as the supreme and only Potentate, King of kings, and Lord of lords.

It is clear that certainty of utterance concerning Divine truth must also of necessity characterise any such revival. The preaching of the present day is hazy, indefinite, wanting in clearness, backbone, vision. Men cannot speak forcibly, because they do not see clearly. All great movements of God's Spirit have been marked, not only by the honour done to Divine truth, but by the conspicuous results that have accrued from the presentation of evangelical views of that truth. What revival can be mentioned, which has spread through great communities of men, arresting the mad rush after money and pleasure, and asserting the supremacy of the spiritual world, which has not been associated with the confession of the Deity of Christ, his vicarious and substitutionary death, the inspiration of Scripture, the personality of the Holy Ghost, and other kindred truths?

In any great manifestation of the work of God in our time, we must expect a great change to come over the tone and subject matter of the preaching around us. The Holy Spirit is dogmatic. His speech is not yea and nay, but an everlasting yea. What He says, He says with no uncertain sound, and they whom He uses believe and therefore speak. They may not touch on so many topics as those with which many modern preachers tickle the ears of their audiences. But they sound again and again the deep old truths of Sin, Salvation, and Grace.

One great feature of the coming blessing shall be the pouring forth of a spirit of prayer, so that, as George Herbert puts it, the heart of the Church shall be in her knees. In large gatherings, and in small, the hearts of God's people will be moved in supplication and intercession. This stirring may be as gentle as the kiss of the summer breeze on the standing corn, and therefore it may not excite the attention of the great thoughtless world, which has no instruments delicate enough to detect spiritual movements. But gracious souls will know it, and as the spices flow out from the enclosed garden of the Church they will cry: "This is our God, we have waited for Him, and He will save us; this is the Lord, we have waited for Him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

ROMANS VIII.

Spencer is reported to have said that "if Holy Scripture was a ring, and the Epistle to the Romans its precious stone, chapter eight would be the sparkling point of the jewel." I venture the statement that, in common with the Sermon on the Mount, the parables of the Good Samaritan and the Prodigal Son, the fourteenth chapter of John, the thirteenth and fifteenth of First Corinthians, and the third chapter of Philippians, the eighth chapter of Romans is the most read and the best loved of any portion of the New Testament.—*Prof. J. Moses, the Man of God.

Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Regent's-park Chapel.

A BITTER DISAPPOINTMENT.

Num. xiii., xiv.

It was a weary journey from Kibroth-hataavah to Hazeroth, and thence to Kadesh, probably the weariest of the entire route. Moses spoke of it afterwards as "that great and terrible wilderness." And so at last the hosts came to Kadesh-barnea, on the very borders of the land of Promise, within sight of the low hills, the flying-buttresses, so to speak, of the verdant table-land, which first arrests the eye of the traveller coming up from the vast limestone plain of the desert.

How welcome that spectacle, after the four hundred miles of journey which had occupied the people for the past fifteen months! Welcome as the land-haze to Columbus, or as his native village nestling in the embrace of the hills to the returning traveller. It must have been specially grateful to the eye of Moses.

I. His Hopes.—As yet God had graciously veiled from him the weary journeys of the forty years that were to succeed. He had no idea of them. They had never entered into his calculations. From the words he addressed to the people, he evidently counted on a comparatively brief struggle, sharp, but short, through which they would pass to their possession. It never occurred to him that any one but himself would plan that campaign, even if Joshua led it, or that any other hand would settle the people in the land of their eager longings. These are the words he addressed to the people as they camped in sight of the rolling prairies of Canaan: Ye are come unto the mountain of the Amorites, which the Lord our God doth give unto us. Behold the Lord thy God hath set the land before thee, go up and possess it, as the Lord God of thy fathers hath said unto thee, fear not, nor be discouraged (Deut. i. 19, 20, 21).

As he said these words, must there not have been, deep in his heart, a sigh of relief now his task was almost done, and he might lay down his weighty responsibilities? God's glory was secured beyond their power to tarnish its lustre. The Egyptians and all the neighbouring nations must hear and be convinced. And as for himself, surely there were in store some few happy years in which he should repose after the long toils of his life. Ah, sweet land of which God has spoken to me, surely there is within thy precincts some sequestered nook, where I may sit down and rest and review an accomplished work!

Who can doubt that some such hopes and thoughts as these filled his soul, and whispered the one deep sweet word, Rest, Rest? No more the daily gathering of manna, because it was a land of wheat and barley, in which they should eat bread without scarceness. No more the quenching of thirst at the water that flowed hot over the desert sand, because there would be vines and fig-trees and pomegranates; it was a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that sprang out of valleys and hills. No more the pitching and striking of tent, the setting of the watch, the perpetual movement, for every man would sit under his own vine and fig-tree. After a few years spent thus, he might ask to depart in peace, and pass home from the Canaan of earth to the Sabbath-keeping of heaven.

Is it not thus that we all picture to ourselves the blessed landscape, lying warm and sunny under the smile of heaven? Life is pretty hard just now: a march over a great and terrible wilderness, a stern fight, a bearing of burdens under which we have only just got strength enough. But, never mind, it cannot last, there must be a pitch, the long lane must have a turning, the wilderness-march must have a Canaan, the lack of sympathy and tenderness must be swallowed up and forgotten in the embrace of a love which shall obliterate the memory of all, so that we shall awake as out of a brief, bad dream. But suppose it be not so! What if He who loves us better than we love ourselves has marked out stations in a desert-march that lead right up to the mount from which we are to ascend to our Father's home! What if we are to fight with Moab, and meet Balaam, and see every one of those with whom we commenced life droop around us! What if we are to lie down to die alone beneath his kiss, away from the prattle of children and the warm pressure of loving hands on some Pisgah height! All this may be so, but if it is so, how will we do? Yet this is precisely what came to Moses.

II.—The Quarter from which his Disappointment Came.—It came entirely from the people. Their first mistake was in desiring to spy out the land. It is certainly said in these chapters that the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Send thou men, that they may spy out the land of Canaan (xiii. 1). But the proposal did not emanate from the Lord. It had another origin, which was disclosed by Moses himself forty years afterwards, in words that followed those quoted above, "And ye came near unto me, every one of you, and said, We will send men before us, and they shall search us out the land, and bring us word again."

As in the case of Saul the King of Israel, God gave them what they would have. It was a profound mistake. Had not God promised to give them the land, and could they not trust his choice! Were not his eyes ever upon it, from the beginning to the end of the year? Why need they wish to spy it out? What about his promise to give it them; why, then, need they be so anxious to see whether they could cope with its possessors? They had but, as Moses said, to go up and possess that which He had given.

Their second mistake was in receiving the discouraging report of the majority of the spies. Up to a certain point there was perfect agreement between them. "We came into the land whither thou sentest us, and surely it floweth with milk and honey, and this is the fruit of it." Then the ten said, "The people are strong, the cities are fenced and very great, and there we saw the Nephilim; we be not able to go up against the people, for they are stronger than we." But the two, Caleb and Joshua, whose names alone linger on our tongues as household words, replied, "If the Lord delight in us, then He will bring us into this land, and give it unto us."

The difference between the two lay in this, that the ten looked at God through the difficulties, as when you look at the sun through a reversed telescope, and it seems indefinitely distant and shorn of its glory, while the two looked at difficulties through God. And the people sided with the ten, and turned aside from the thought of God, to dwell long and sadly on the stupendous obstacles that menaced their occupation of the land. Here was a fatal mistake. Unbelief never gets beyond the difficulties, the cities, the walls, the giants. It is always picturing them, dwelling on them, pitting them against its resources. Faith, on the other hand, though it never minimises them, but looks them steadily in the face, turns from them, and looks up into the face of God, and counts on Him. This is what the people failed to do, and for this they lost Canaan. "And the Lord said unto Moses, How long will this people not believe in Me?" "We see they could not enter in, because of unbelief."

Note, that they lost Canaan not because of the graves of lust, but because of their unbelief. My brother, do not sit down beside that grave of lust, and suppose that that is going to settle your future. Never! God is not going to tether you for ever to a grave. There is a resurrection and a new life before you, even for you; arise in the light of his forgiveness, and walk through the length and breadth of the land to possess it. Know thou this, that the only thing which can exclude thee thence is that thou wilt not believe in a forgiveness and grace, which are like the blue arch of heaven above thee, or like the immensity of eternity itself.

Their next mistake was in their murmuring, which proposed to substitute a captain for their tried friend and God-given leader. "All the congregation lifted up their voice and cried, and the people wept that night. And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron, and said, Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt; and they said one to another, Let us make a captain, and let us return unto Egypt."

This was perhaps the bitterest hour in Moses' life. They had proposed to elect a captain before, but it was when he was away; but this was proposed before his face. The people whom he had loved with passionate devotion, whose very existence was due to his intercession on the Mount when they were on the point of being destroyed, had forgotten all he had done, actually proposed to supersede his authority, and if he would not go with them beneath their new-made captain, to leave him to his own devices there. And he fell on his face before all the assembly of the congregation. What unutterable agony rent his breast, not only that he should be thus set aside, but that the anger of God should be thus provoked by the people he loved!

And as he lay there, did he not also, in those dark, sad moments, see the crumbling of his fairy vision, the falling of a shadow over the fair prospect of his hopes, as when a pelting shower of rain hides all a landscape which a moment before had lain radiant in the summer light? So it has befallen in our own experience not once, nor twice. We had been on the point of realising some long-cherished hope. We were within a day's march of it. Our hands had already reached across the frontier line and plucked the first fruits and pressed the luscious grapes of Eshcol to our lips. Oh, rapture! oh, fruition of long expectation! oh, heaven of bliss! And suddenly there is some one or more to whom we are tied, and their education is not complete. They cannot yet go over into the good land. Because they cannot, we may not. And as we stand there, the voice says, "To-morrow turn and get you back into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea."

III. His Refusal to Escape the Disappointment.—The dream of Moses for a speedy entrance into the land might even yet have been realised. If all the people were cut off, and he spared to be a second Abraham, the founder of the nation, it might be possible even yet for him to pass into the good land, and like Abraham settle there. And so the trial was put into his life. Satan tempts us to reveal the evil in us, God to reveal the good. So God, knowing the hidden nobleness of his faithful servant, and eager that it should be revealed to all the world, suggested to him a proposal, that He should smite the people with pestilence, and disinherit them, and make of him a nation greater and mightier than they.

"Accept it," said the spirit of the self-life, "thou hast had trouble enough with them; it will only hasten the inevitable issue of their misconduct; besides, think of the rest thou wilt enter and the renown which will accrue to thee in all after-time." "No," said his nobler, truer self. "It may not be; what would become of Jehovah's fame, and how can I endure to see my people cut off."

There are few grander passages in the whole Bible than that in which Moses puts away the testing suggestion as impossible. "If Thou shalt kill this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of Thee will speak, saying: Because the Lord was not able to bring this people into the land which He sware unto them, therefore He hath slain them in the wilderness." Then quoting the words which God had spoken into his heart on that memorable occasion when He passed down the mountain gorge, he pleaded that He would pardon the people according unto the greatness of his mercy, as He had been doing from the first of leaving Egypt until then. In other words, Moses would not have the rest he longed for at the sacrifice of a ray of God's glory, or of the people with whom his life was linked, though they had sadly plagued and disowned him. And so he turned away from the open gate into Paradise, and again chose rather to suffer with the people in their afflictions than enjoy the pleasures of Canaan alone. Let us ponder the lesson; and when next a dear delight is within our reach, but it will be more for the glory of God and the good of others to turn from it, let us ask grace to take the rugged path of the wilderness, though it mean a lonely life for forty years, and a death on Pisgah.

IV. A Contrast to his Endurance of Disappointment.—Little is said about the leader's bearing. He kept silence, and opened not his mouth, he hid his face even from good, because God did it. But the people's behaviour throws his into strong relief.

When they heard that they were to wander in the wilderness for forty years, till their carcases fell in its wastes, to be interred in the sands as winding-sheets, they rose up early in the morning, and gat them up to the top of the mountain, saying "Lo, we are here, and will go up unto the place which the Lord hath promised. But Moses and the ark of the Lord departed not out of the camp." By force of will and energy they sought to reverse the sentence just passed on them. Moses meekly bowed his head to it, and accepted the discipline of those long years.

Do not times come into our lives like this? We have come to the brink of some great opportunity, and the prize has seemed within our reach. But by some outburst we have shown ourselves unable or unfit to possess it. God puts us back. He says in effect, You are not fit to enjoy the blessing yet. You must go back to the common round, sit at the daily task, plod around the dull mill-wheel. Exercise yourselves in toils and frets and trifles, which are not worthy of a place in history; and after a while come back and stand before these gates again, and you shall be admitted.

But we will not submit to it. "Nay, but we will go up." We will storm the position, we will not be thwarted. We will not meekly sit down beneath the Divine chastisement and learn the turned lesson. If God will not give it, we will take it by our strong right hand. It is a hapless and useless resolve. You cannot force the gate. Better a hundred times wait meekly outside, learning the lesson of patience and faith, and you shall stand there again ere long to find it open to the summons of your ennobled and purified spirit. The obscure journeyings of the forty years will then yield their harvest of blessing.

V. Moses' Solace in Disappointment.—Yet there were springs at which that weary spirit slaked its thirst. The sense that he did the will of God; the blessedness which unselfishness always brings to the elect spirit; the joy of seeing the result of the Divine discipline in the growing earnestness and strength of his people; the reception of daily grace for daily need. All these were his.

But even better than these there was the growing realisation that the true rest of which he dreamed was not to be found in any earthly Canaan, however enticing, but in that rest of heart, that Sabbath-keeping of the soul, that repose of the nature in God, which is alone permanent and satisfying, amid the change and transience of all human and earthly conditions. So our God not unseldom breaks up our earthly visions, dear and cherished, in order that our soul, bereaved and solitary, may search for and find those diviner things which the moth of change cannot gnaw into and the rust of time cannot corrode. "These things God worketh oftentimes with man."

STEPHEN-THE-YEOMAN RAGGED SCHOOL.—The annual meeting was held on Thursday last, Mr. J. E. Mathieson presiding. Mr. J. W. Challis gave a summary of the report, showing encouraging progress in every department. The Sunday-school work had been specially interesting, and that among the elder girls particularly so. A series of special services had been held, with good results. The day schools, mothers' meeting, district nurse, Band of Hope, mission services, and various other agencies, were shown to be in the most satisfactory condition. Addresses were given by Mr. Donald Matheson, Revs. R. Roberts, T. Curry, and W. Daniel.

The Jewish Calendar.

THE PASSOVER.

The Jewish month Nisan commenced this year on March 29. Passover commences on the 14th of Nisan after sunset, or on the evening of Monday, April 11.

The word "Passover" answers to the Hebrew word Pesach, which means a passing over, hence a sparing from punishment or calamity. The institution of the feast is recorded in Exodus xii. The festival was to commemorate at once the deliverance of the children of Israel when, upon seeing the blood-sprinkled door-posts, the destroying angel "passed over" their houses; and the commencement of their march from the land of bondage.

It is needless to say that modern Jews do not celebrate the former part of the feast, which consists in the slaying and eating of the Passover lamb. The last Passover lambs were slain as the Roman battering rams were thundering against the walls of the Holy City. Christ, the great Passover Lamb for all time, had then been slain, and all types and shadows were to be swept away before the antitype and reality. But the Jews would not have Him as their Passover, and they have, therefore, at the present day, no authorised acknowledgment of God's plan of atonement and redemption by blood. What they call Passover is little more than the feast of unleavened bread, or matzoth.

No bread besides matzoth, or unleavened cakes, is, in the present day, used during the feast. Thin and round, about a foot in diameter, these cakes are so slender, that about nine of them go to the pound. In order to avoid the least tendency to fermentation, the greatest care is taken in their manufacture. No one is allowed to make them for sale without Rabbinical licence, which involves careful inspection of the bakeries to see that all is done in accordance with the Law as traditionally interpreted. The wine used during the feast must be kosher, i.e., "proper," passed by the Jewish authorities as pure.

Sunday evening, April 10th (Nisan 13) was the "eve" of the Passover, and it was then the duty of the head of each family, after the service, to search all the rooms in his abode, gathering up everything that might contain leaven. Crumbs of bread have been purposely laid in his way; and, going round silently and solemnly, he picks them up, saying when finished, "All manner of leaven that is in my possession which I have not seen nor removed shall be null, and accounted as the dust of the earth." The next morning everything containing leaven must be removed from the house or burnt, as well as all the vessels with which they had been used. Culinary vessels which have been used during the year are generally put away, those used at Passover time being either new or kept from one Passover to another. The house, too, goes through a general cleaning.

The feast, as stated, begins on the fourteenth day after sunset. The Passover being more a domestic than a public observance, the synagogue service has nothing very special in character. When it is over, the Jews hurry back to their respective homes to celebrate the feast. The table must be prepared during daylight, but the ceremony should not begin until after nightfall. Three Passover cakes are placed upon dishes, each separately covered, and upon them are placed an egg, a shankbone, bitter herbs, &c. Parsley dipped in salt water forms a part of the bitter herbs, mainly consisting of lettuce or horseradish, commemorative of the wearying toil of the Israelites from Egypt. The shankbone is a memorial of the Paschal Lamb, and the egg of the sacrifices brought during seven days of the festival.

Women as well as children take part in the observance of Passover; and the head of the family should narrate to them the story of the deliverance from Egypt. An extra cup of wine is placed on the table for Elijah the prophet, who, as Messiah's forerunner, may come in the course of the evening. When the meal is over, the fourth cup of wine is filled, three others having been drunk during the ceremony. Psalms cxv., cxvi., cxvii., cxviii., and cxxxvi. are then repeated; after which follow various forms of words in adoration of the Almighty. The ceremony ends with a recital of various wonders performed at the Passover during all ages. In this list the greatest of all events that took place at Passover time, namely, the death of our blessed Lord, is of course, conspicuous by its absence. Then follows the prayer expressive of the desire of every true Jewish heart: "The coming year, O bring us to Jerusalem!"

The Jews say of this feast—but without Scripture authority—if the ceremony in commemoration of the Passover is thus solemnly completed, it will be as acceptable in the presence of the Lord as the actual offering of the Passover lamb. The next evening is spent in a similar manner, and from the evening of the second day of the feast, the Jews begin to number the forty-nine days to Pentecost, or the Feast of Weeks. (See Levit. xxiii. 15, 16.) Interesting as all these observances are, the feast is only a Passover in name. The lamb whose blood formed the sacrifice, as originally ordained, pointing as it did to Christ our Passover, is absent; and the Jews try to excuse its absence by practically rejecting the doctrine of atonement by blood. A bloodless shankbone and an egg are all the shelter they have from the wrath of God and the hand of the destroying angel. Worse than their present temporal woes and insecurity is their unsafe position before God. Oh that the House of Israel would see that the only safe place for time and eternity is beneath the shelter of the blood of Jesus!

WORKING-MEN AND THE DAY OF REST.

The annual meeting of the Working-men's Lord's Day Rest Association was held last week in Exeter Hall (Lower), Sir John H. Kennaway, Bart., M.P., presiding.

Mr. Charles Hill gave a summary of the report, showing the various steps taken during the past year to oppose inroads made or proposed to be made on the Day of Rest.

The Chairman reviewed briefly what had been done, and added that they were in earnest about this matter, because the observance of the Day of Rest was one of the greatest blessings this country enjoyed. Nothwithstanding all the attacks that had been made upon the Sabbath, they were there that night to say that they believed the observance of the Day of Rest was still a good institution, as useful now as it was when it was first given to man, alike for his physical constitution and the development of religious life. In spite, therefore, of everything that was said by their opponents, they hoped that the traditions of this country would be well maintained, and they of the Association must exert themselves as far as possible that the blessings of the Day of Rest might be handed down to posterity unimpaired. In regard to the opening of picture galleries and other like institutions on Sunday, they admitted that there was no more harm in looking upon beautiful pictures than on the works of God in nature. They did not oppose Sunday opening on that ground, but what they felt was that such a course must lead to Sunday labour, not only on the part of attendants, but also on the drivers and conductors of conveyances bringing people from all parts to view the exhibitions. They objected strongly to this Sunday labour, and as working-men they must put their foot down very firmly and say it should not be.

Amongst subsequent speakers were Revs. J. F. Kitto and W. Stott and various working-men.

FORTHCOMING INDIAN MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.—The next Decennial Missionary Conference in India will be held at Wilson College, Bombay, on December 28, and following days. It will last a week, and all missionary workers will be regarded as members, men and women being accorded equal privileges in the various discussions. In order to economise time, the papers will be printed beforehand, and not read to the meeting. There is reason to expect that the principal railway companies will make concessions to large parties, and later on the rates will be published. Communications may be addressed to the secretary of the Conference, Rev. Dr. J. L. Phillips, Union Chapel House, 136, Harrantala-street, Calcutta.

HACKNEY Y.M.C.A.—The eighth anniversary of this Association, the institute of which is in Mare-street, N.E., was celebrated last week. The Secretary, Mr. F. L. Porter, reported the number of members and associates now on the roll to be 273, showing a net gain on the previous year of twenty-six. There are also forty hon. members and forty members of the youths' section, making a total of 353. Five of the members are in training for foreign missionary work, three for the ministry, and another has recently been appointed secretary of a neighbouring Y.M.C.A.; whilst many others have gone forth as workers into various [illegible] and mission halls in the district. The treasurer, Mr. A. H. [illegible] reported [illegible] the year were £[illegible] and [illegible] £[illegible]. He appealed for £[illegible], to [illegible] repairs, new furniture, and for the general work of the Association for the ensuing year.

National Vigilance Association

There are few Associations whose work is so strangely varied, and whose help is so much needed, as that of the National Vigilance Association. Nearly every day there is a constant stream of helpless and troubled women and girls who seek advice and help under circumstances too appaling to narrate. Apart from the sin involved, the cruelty inflicted and the wrong done are enough to stagger the strongest mind, and cause heartache to the stoutest and most stalwart follower of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Although varied and manifold are the needs of those who daily appeal to our sympathy, in almost every instance we have been able to render valuable assistance. If our work is to continue, our friends whose sympathies have been aroused by the Master's love must come to our help.

There are few to whom God has given the power to go into the seething misery and poverty of the slums, and render substantial and permanent aid to the children who there are in such grave moral peril. We were appealed to by one of the most active Charity Organisation Society committees in London, and were successful in rescuing the children in each case. We can only mention one:—

B. H. had lived with her parents in a miserable top-garret. All day long the parents were out, and this girl of fourteen was left to her own sweet will. Certainly that will did not incline her to spend the time in a dreary attic. It was much more interesting in the street, and she defied the entreaties and the threats of parents and school teachers. Those of us who remember our childhood must keenly sympathise with Mary's choice. She told us it was "great fun" outside, and we believed her. But with all her recklessness she has a heart, and the parting between mother and child was touching. Only a few weeks have elapsed, but the news has just reached us that the poor woman is dead. The father is in consumption, and has gone into a hospital. Just in time has the poor child been rescued, for in all probability she will soon be an orphan indeed. There are many such literally waiting to be rescued from terrible dangers, and we are often able to get them when others have failed. It is for these very difficult cases we ask help.

OUR MEDICAL HOME.

The need for such a house of healing as our little hospital, is daily experienced with an emphasis so sad that if no one else is convinced of its usefulness those responsible for its conduct certainly are. Month after month the beds are always full, vacancies made by the discharge of those healed and passed on being instantly filled by fresh comers, sick and weary indeed, and whose hearts are heavy with the burden of a spoiled life. Here is one story in brief outline:—

C. L., not yet twenty, parents very respectable; C., the eldest daughter, had always been a good girl, and the family being a large one, she went early to service. She passed unscathed through many temptations, but last summer a man, under pretence of affection, won the pure girl's confidence and then compassed her ruin. She became very ill, and then went to her parents. Her mother was terribly distressed, and because of the younger children she felt that C. must leave home again. And so, with her heartache and suffering, she entered a hospital, where, fortunately, our kind lady doctor found and sent her on to the Medical Home. We do not say that C. is blameless; she admits her sin, and blames herself, as she does no one else. But that does not lift her burden. What so aggravates her mental distress is the fact that soon she will be a mother. We cannot tell all the story, and yet, as we write, the memory of it comes back to us; and, perhaps if our readers knew the details of such cases, they would better understand our appeals for help.

It is not always pleasant, or even encouraging, but the Great Master asks us to minister to Him through such as these. We must follow these poor wanderers through all the disguises of human fault and failing, until they are at Christ's feet. There are often children in this Home, and at this moment a young girl fifteen years of age, whose infant recently died.

THE LEGAL WORK.

Legal assistance is often required, and in this branch of the work we have given help that no other Society renders. Few realise what has been done in this direction, and we cannot in a short space give any adequate report of it. The case of Allard v. Allard, which has recently excited much public attention, is an illustration of the dire necessity that exists for the protection of young women who are literally at the cruel mercies of unscrupulous men. But for the timely aid rendered one more woman would probably have lived a life of such degradation and shame, and died a victim to its terrible results. As it is, she lies in a hospital ward. Happily, the man is in the ward of a prison.

There is much that waits to be done, but funds are low, and it is our standing principle never to incur debt. God knows the horrors of impurity paraded in our streets and flaunted in the face of our youth of both sexes. We feel that nothing but ignorance on the part of Christian parents can account for the fact that they are often so slow to help us in clearing away these deadly incentives to vice. We have lately had to say we could do no more until friends supply us with the means. At this moment we have cases before us which make our impotence almost unbearable.

MISS STIRLING'S HOMES.

IN SCOTLAND AND NOVA SCOTIA.

In the autumn of 1876 a friend in Edinburgh told me she had been shocked by the fearful stories she had heard of the ill-usage of young children in that city, some of which she related. The result was that I opened a day nursery early in 1887, where mothers, who worked out during the day, could bring their babies and little children below seven years of age, and by paying a very small sum leave them to be well taken care of till night. A few came at first, but by degrees the nursery increased, and the children grew and flourished. I could not pay for much help, and had to be practically head nurse myself. Very soon I found so many children who had no home to go to at night, and so many brought by fathers who, through the death of the mother, had to be father and mother and all, that I had to open a Home for Motherless Children. Need I say it likewise grew?

Then a terrible class of little sufferers were brought to me—the inmates of baby farms. These I was enabled to protect efficiently by the help of the police, and many were rescued. But there was a class even beyond these, more numerous and varied in bitter experience as in age; for when does the drunkard's child—boy or girl—cease to be the victim of its parents' sin? Applications came to me from all quarters for harrowing cases in an extraordinary variety of circumstances. Sometimes help was only required for a limited period, or sometimes till, in a year or two, the boy or girl could be put in a way of doing for themselves. More frequently the little ones were left a burden on my hands altogether, until at last I had for a long time before I left Scotland three hundred people to feed every day. You will ask, Did you get no help? I answer, Very little in proportion. True, I had directors, who gave their names, and occasionally came to meetings, but were busy otherwise, and left the burden to me. The Town Council of Edinburgh and other public bodies gave annual grants, and the public latterly contributed about £500 a year; but it was understood that I was responsible for the expenses of the various branches of the Institution, which, before I left Edinburgh, amounted to about £8000, irrespective of £2000 in Nova Scotia.

Under these circumstances, with three hundred children to provide for, I was forced to see what I could do in a new country. So I came to Nova Scotia in 1885, where I found I could provide food more cheaply, and get openings for our children more easily, than in Scotland. I had just money enough to take us across the sea, and buy a farm here. So we came in June, 1886, and settled with the first party of twenty-five on Hillfoot Farm, Aylesford, in the Annapolis valley. That autumn thirty-six more children were sent by the Directors, and parties followed until I had brought about three hundred children and young people, including a few young men and women who had grown up with me, and were most useful in carrying on the work for our children.

No sooner were we located here than my troubles began in another direction. A man of notoriously bad character had brought his three children to my care in 1882, and deserted them immediately afterwards. When he applied for their admission he stated he had been a Roman Catholic, but was tired of the neglect and tyranny of the priests, and desired to have them brought up as Protestants. As I have said, he deserted them immediately. In the course of four years he only once asked after them, and during the same period sent £1 17s. towards their maintenance.

But in 1886, finding that two of the children had been sent by the Directors to Nova Scotia in the course of that year, he consulted a priest, who recommended him to a Roman Catholic agent, by whom he was advised to apply for them. The Directors then requested me to bring them home, which I did at once; but, knowing what the fate of the children would be, I was naturally unwilling to give them up if it could be avoided; and as the father did not make any further attempt to obtain them, the former application to the Directors was allowed to drop. After waiting five months, I sent them out again, and with them the third child, who had not been in the Homes since 1884, but had been supported at my private expense in the country, and in due course they were provided for. After eighteen months a law suit was instituted, which has been alike troublesome and expensive; and the result has been a breach with the Directors, so that for three years I have carried on this work in Nova Scotia entirely at my own expense.

I am thankful to have been the means of laying the foundation and developing in Edinburgh the work which, since my departure to Nova Scotia, has grown into the Scottish National Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, as is stated in the report of that Society for 1889. The decision in my favour recently given by the Court in Nova Scotia in the above case has been a great relief to me. The inconvenience and outlay have been very considerable, but as I was advised to carry it on in the interests of poor children, as well as of the Protestant cause, the risk seemed unavoidable.

As regards our children in Nova Scotia, the work for them has been most successful, both bodily and spiritual, and the best testimony to their good qualities is to be found in the ever-increasing openings which are pressed upon me for them. Any friends desiring information will please address to me, care of Lady Home Spiers, 5, Tedworth-square, London, S.W.

Brixton Orphanage.

The number of children maintained and educated last year at the Brixton Orphanage for Girls was upwards of 300, at a cost of £2316, being less than £8 per child. The sixteenth report states that fifty-nine necessitous girls were received during 1891, making a total of close on six hundred received since the formation of the institution. Of those who have thus been cared for, many are now holding respectable positions, three are engaged as under matrons, two are teachers in similar institutions, and two others have received a gold watch as a reward for long service.

An earnest appeal for continued help is made by the hon. superintendent, Mrs. Montague, who reports that several times the funds have been exhausted, but have again and again been replenished in answer to prayer. The address of the Orphanage is Barrington-road, Brixton, whence copies of the report may be obtained. "The Clothing Society for Poor Ministers," an agency having its headquarters at the Orphanage, reports the distribution of one thousand garments, boys' suits, &c., with letters of grateful response from the worthy recipients, many of whom must have suffered severely but for such kindly aid.

MANCHESTER REFUGES.—A party of forty or fifty lads have just been sent off by the Strangeways Committee to Canada. At the farewell meetings interesting accounts were given of the work in Manchester, and of the openings on the other side the sea for boys who here seemed hopelessly helpless. Mr. Chamberlin, of Denver, Colorado, spoke of the vast capabilities of both the States and the Dominion as an outlet for those willing to work.

EAST LONDON NURSING SOCIETY.—This society aims at the provision of trained nurses for the whole of the East of London, containing about one hundred parishes. At present not more than a fourth of the ground is covered, comprising twenty-eight nurses, with a population of two hundred and fifty thousand. Last year nearly four thousand poor were nursed, few of whom could have had a nurse but for this society; and of this number more than two-thirds recovered. The Society was affiliated with "Queen Victoria's Jubilee Institute for Nurses," early in the year, and one additional parish has been provided with a nurse. The report just published contains a complete analysis of the work done, with list and names of parishes worked. The office is 49, Philpot-street, Commercial-road, E., and Mr. A. W. Lacey is the secretary.

The World's Young Women.

The annual conference of the Y.W.C.A. was held on Wednesday and Thursday last in the Lower Exeter Hall. For the first time in the history of the Association the Conference was International in character, delegates attending from France, Norway, Sweden, Spain, and America.

On Tuesday evening a conversazione for members was held at the Morley Halls, 316, Regent-street. Lord Kinnaird presided, and addresses were delivered by Mrs. Fenn, of Madrid, M. le Pasteur Maillet, of France, Mrs. Edward Trotter, who has recently returned from Norway, and the Hon. Emily Kinnaird, who has just returned from a prolonged visit to India.

On Wednesday morning a prayer-meeting was held at Exeter Hall, when Mrs. Bannister gave an address on the call of Ezekiel by a vision and a voice. The Countess of Chichester took the chair at the next meeting, and spoke a few words on Isaiah lx. 1 and Luke i. 79. Miss Gollock followed with a stirring address on the training of missionary candidates, and the qualities requisite in those who would go forth into the foreign field. Miss Corabel Tarr, from the U. S. America, gave a most interesting account of the beginning and work of the Students' Volunteer movement. The Hon. E. Kinnaird spoke on the needs of India; and Miss Bradshaw, from Dublin, urged the deep responsibility which we are all under with respect to the perishing heathen.

The afternoon meeting was presided over by Mrs. J. Herbert Tritton. M. Maillet from France, Madame Verne from Paris, Mrs. Fenn from Spain, each gave details of Y.W.C.A. work in those countries. A paper from Miss Squire, of Gibraltar, was read, telling of the work being done there among English girls. Miss Manning also gave interesting details of work on the Continent.

On Wednesday evening a conversazione was held at the Morley Halls. Mr. L. D. Wishard, of America, who takes a warm interest in the Association, and has been instrumental in starting over 80 branches, gave an address on the power of prayer, instancing a remarkable revival which took place at a college in Japan. M. Maillet gave a most earnest address on service from 2 Corinthians iv. 5 and Matthew x. 24. God wants good servants, humble servants, wakeful servants, servants who are not lazy, who do not think of themselves, who are anointed with oil and are prayerful, and who feed on the Word. Rev. E. W. Moore closed with a stirring message from Exodus iii. 2, 3. There are many great sights and no lack of sightseers. A new picture or exhibition will attract crowds. Moses turned and saw—what? A vision of God.

The prayer-meeting on Thursday morning was presided over by Mrs. Hatt Noble, who spoke on the wonderful supplies of God at our disposal for his work. Lady Carbery took the chair at 11.30, the subject being "The Y.W.C.A. at Home." Miss Wingate gave a brief, comprehensive sketch of the work, and by a typical instance showed the usefulness of various Y.W.C.A. departments. Miss Skirrow followed with cheering news of the Factory Helpers' Union. In one institute alone eight thousand teas were served during the year, 557 garments were made, and 195 depositors availed themselves of the savings bank. Mrs. Hind Smith spoke on the Total Abstinence Department, Mrs. Gardner James on the work in Switzerland, and Mrs. Edward Trotter again on Sweden. Lady Carbery closed with a brief review of Y.W.C.A. work in London during the year.

In the afternoon the chair was taken by Mrs. Frederic Barker, the subject being "The Y.W.C.A. in Distant Lands." Mr. Condict told of the work in San Fransisco, where the Y.W.C.A. was started thirteen years ago, and where they hope soon to start junior branches. Miss Corabel Tarr (U.S.A.) gave an account of the work and organisation of the Association in America; Mrs. Barnett told of the work in Monte Video; Mrs. Arthur Brown in Australia; and Miss Wingfield Digby told of work in Africa and the Holy Land, from which she has lately returned. After a few words from the Hon. Emily Kinnaird, Mr. Hill, lately returned from Auckland, gave a thrilling account of the needs and possibilities of that place, where he has worked for twelve years. Mr. Hill asked the prayers of all present as he is shortly going out to help fill the ranks of the Niger Mission, Africa.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting in Exeter Hall on Thursday evening had all the customary elements of interest. It is convened at a late hour (8.30) so as to enable the young women workers of the great city to be present; they came in their thousands, though there was room in the gallery for more. The waiting time was agreeably passed by listening to some choice music, delightfully rendered by a choir of blind sisters from the Norwood Royal Normal College. When the Hon. Emily Kinnaird (on whom her mother's mantle appears to have fallen) entered the hall the friends gave her a hearty cheer on her return from India; this was repeated later on in larger volume at the call of Mr. W. T. Paton. The Chair was occupied by Lord Kinnaird.

As honorary financial secretary, Mr. W. T. Paton made a brief statement, which took the place of the formal reading of the report. The annual value to the State of a well-educated and well-trained young woman, according to the late Leoni Levi, is a thousand pounds. The Y.W.C.A., said Mr. Paton, cares for the young women under its care at 6s. per head per annum. He made an earnest appeal for wiping out over two thousand pounds deficit on the year's accounts. Speaking of the London work, he said there are forty-three institutes and homes, besides one hundred smaller branches in the metropolis. There are two thousand young women students attending evening classes at fifteen institutes, and some have passed the Society of Arts examinations. The work is largely sustained by the voluntary service of a noble band of Christian ladies. Some very interesting facts were adduced by Mr. Paton, showing the high esteem in which the association and its work are held by clergymen, employers, and the parents of the young women. As showing the thoroughly unsectarian character of the institution, he remarked that, in connection with one branch in North London, thirty young women are working in different places in Sunday-schools, ragged schools, &c.

After a few cordial sentences from the noble Chairman, addresses were given by Hon. and Rev. W. Talbot Rice and Rev. F. B. Meyer. The former based a simple but impressive appeal for spiritual decision on the story of Ruth and her choice. Mr. Meyer spoke very effectively on the necessity of the Christian life being lived day by day in conformity with God's plan, if it is to be a happy and fruitful one. To every sincere soul God will reveal the plan on which He would have them live.

The United Central Council of the Y.W.C.A. met on Friday morning, and a meeting of foreign delegates and others was held on Friday evening, at which Lord Kinnaird presided, to consider the advisability of organised effort for the extension of the Y.W.C.A. throughout the world.

Home of Rest, Bognor.

To enable poor people of the metropolis who require change of air to enjoy a seaside holiday, is an undertaking which commends itself to all. This institution at Bognor, which Mrs. W. D. Scott, of Chiswick, opened at her own cost about a year ago, has served this purpose admirably. Its doors opened last year to as many as five hundred, and thus many poor homes of London were brightened by its sunshine. When a money charge was made, it was of a very modest nature; and some who were unable to pay enjoyed a fortnight at no cost to themselves.

But physical well-being was not all; a series of meetings was maintained, and much spiritual blessing was the result. The accommodation in this respect is not quite sufficient, and an effort is being made to build a hall which might be used by residents and visitors alike. Help to a limited extent is needed so that this, the most important part of the work, may receive the attention it deserves.

CORSICA.—A mission has been, for some time past, carried on in the north of this wild island by Miss Grant Brown, and one or two companions, who have been visiting some of the mountain villages in the Balagna and also working at Corte, in the centre of the island. The welcome they have received has been very encouraging, and not a few have received their message. Two or three young men, converted through their instrumentality, are devoting themselves to the evangelisation of their own people. Recently, they went to Basilicata, the highest mountain village in the island. Meetings were held in a café, the keeper of which seemed deeply impressed with the truth. When one of the ladies showed him a temperance pledge, such as some in the Balagna had signed, he at once signed it, with his comrades. But how was he now to keep the cafe? He expressed himself ready to do the will of God, and when some chocolate had been made, he tasted it, and said that henceforth he would sell that. So the buvette was turned into a temperance cafe, where chocolate and coffee are the only drinks.

N.E. LONDON GOSPEL MISSIONS.

Friends of the above many-sided labours will be glad to hear that a good measure of prosperity and not a little blessing have been enjoyed of late. By the practical help afforded, many homes have been kept together, though an unusually large number have been obliged to yield to the necessity of entering the workhouse.

The recent epidemic was specially felt in the poor districts around the various mission halls, and many found it their message to "arise and depart," telling each anxious worker that "the time is short," for the harvest is near. Yet, while our doors have been almost forced down by the crush of poor homeless men for a little food, and hundreds of underfed and half-clothed children have striven to gain admission to our dining-hall, together with the starving met with in the home visitation, still there has been real joy afforded for the spiritual blessing reaped.

Many who have only just escaped the grave during the late trying season, are entirely unfitted for work, and sorely need a bracing up at our Home of Rest on the coast. We are very much wanting this season to bring into use the remaining unfurnished rooms at Lancing, and send down a proportionately larger number of "drooping toilers and fading children." For this we heartily invite practical and speedy assistance.

Then the Bible Van is now refurnishing for the season, for which suitable parcels of books and other helps would be welcome. Tracts and Gospel books are also much needed. We have again the joy of saying how gladly the Christian men going forth on this ministry will embrace any openings for service, and co-operate with the Lord's people from place to place. The arrival of the "van" has often resulted in awakening interest in the things of God, and led to considerable blessing. We ask prayer for this and our other spheres of work.

Will the friends of this work kindly note that the offices of the Mission are now removed to 6, Clephane-road, Canonbury, London, N.

Deaconess Work in Jamaica.

Miss E. Wise, who in 1890, at the invitation of the Bishop of Jamaica, was sent from the Deaconess House at Mildmay-park, to take charge of the training of parochial workers at Kingston, writes in Service for the King:—"The idea of trained women doing public work for God is still new in Jamaica, therefore candidates for training have come forward slowly.

"Ladies who desire to be deaconesses receive eighteen months' parochial training, and six months' in the Public Government Hospital, where Sister K. has two wards under her charge. Those who desire to be nurses are receiving a thorough training. We have also some respectable coloured women, whom we call parochial helpers, who, having been sent by their clergy from different parishes in the island, receive six months' training in nursing, and nine months' parochial teaching.

"At the present time there are three ladies and two young coloured women in training in the hospital; one of the latter has already been employed twice in nursing private cases. An association of ladies in connection with the Home has been formed; there are now fifty members. These assist the deaconesses in work as opportunity affords, helping with their prayers, subscriptions, and collections. There is an immense field for women's work in Jamaica. If only the hearts of some in England could be stirred to come out and help!"

THE KANAKAS.—Amongst South Sea Islanders working on the sugar plantations around North Bundaberg, Queensland, Mr. C. F. Johnson is carrying on a fruitful work. Recently seventy-three men and four women were baptized after a public examination, in the course of which four local ministers carefully examined the candidates as to their Scriptural knowledge and faith in Christ.

HOMES FOR THE AGED POOR.—Ten of these Homes are now open in various parts of London, the present number of inmates being 127. In a little reprint from Woman's Work, entitled "Remember," the obligation to care for the poor is lovingly urged, and a peep at an old couple who have for twelve years occupied a room in one of the Homes, is given to the sympathising reader. The husband is 81, too feeble to leave the house, and is very deaf, his wife has been partially paralysed for the last three years, and cannot help him. But "no murmur is heard from the lips of either, both are happy, and looking forward to a better home." A report, containing further particulars of the charity, will be sent on application to Miss E. G. Harrison, 5, Grandacre-terrace, Anerley, S.E., who regrets having to deny admission to many needy applicants through lack of funds.

Christ the Liberator.

Rev. Dr. Cuyler, writing from Brooklyn, U.S.A., says:—

I send you this wee bit for your columns, which are already every week a "feast of royal bounties." Our religious papers, and all our hearts, are still full of love-tributes to dear Spurgeon. Last Saturday I gave my "Personal Reminiscences" of my beloved brother, and I am to repeat them before the Presbyterian Union of New York next week.

What a tremendous "swath" the scythe of death is cutting! Spurgeon, Fraser, Principal Cairns—all in quick succession!

But amid the great bereavements come great blessings, and your paper resounds with the "new songs" and glad tidings of God's work in Scotland. My health is excellent, and pen and tongue busy in preaching what you and I feel is about the only Gospel worth preaching.

"Loose him and let him go!" At this command of Jesus they unwind the bandages from the limbs of Lazarus, and by the old familiar path he walks back to his old home. This was the master miracle of all which Jesus wrought during his incarnation, but He is still doing for imprisoned souls what He did for the body of his Bethany brother when it had lain four days in the sepulchre.

I looked not long ago with genuine pity on a noble eagle, caged in a public park, as an exhibition for schoolboys. The old grey mountaineer felt its galling imprisonment, and occasionally flapped its wings as if it were homesick for the skies. "Loose him and let him go," was the thought inspired by the sorry sight, and how he would have sailed off to fly in company with the sun. Eagles were not born for slavery. I thought, too, as I looked at the chained bird, how much he resembled some fettered souls, yes, some Christian souls that are terribly tied down by unbelief. Too many people have enrolled themselves in the Church—some have entered the ministry—with a heavy clog that binds them to the lower earth. It hampers them, hinders them, and is fatal to all spiritual joy or growth in holiness. Many a young convert begins his religious life with a doubting and desponding spirit. He nurses his fears in a morbid way, and mistakes all this gruesomeness for humility. He is a chained bird from the start. Others are fettered by besetting sins, from which they have never cut loose. They have never made a clean break with their old sinful self, or with the beggarly elements of this world; they are hobbled with practices and associates that they have never cut loose from. They have probably passed from death unto life, yet they appear very much as Lazarus would have looked if he had walked the streets of Bethany in his ghastly grave-clothes!

This is a pitiable style of religion; it brings little joy to its possessor, and gives him or her no power in the community. While they are content to be what they are, there is no hope for such manacled professors. Their only hope is in a timely and thorough repentance, and a fresh work of Christ, a deeper and thorough work; and for this they must earnestly seek, or else they will be chained birds in a church cage to the last. Some really good people are clogged by bodily ailments—dyspeptic stomachs or weak nerves, and they see but little sunshine in their Christian experience. Bunyan has depicted several specimens of these pilgrims, who hobble towards heaven on crutches, until death unloosens them and lets them go. Such Christians are to be pitied more than blamed; they are rather patients in Christ's hospital than soldiers on his battle-fields. We pastors go around and visit these disconsolate birds, who sit most of the time on their perches, and seem glad to swallow all the Bible promises we can bring to them. They are never likely to do much soaring or singing until death cuts the tether and lets them fly home.

False doctrine, false views of sin and of Christ, are at the bottom of a great deal of this spiritual debility. Every error is the enslaver of the soul. Truth makes us free; and if the Son makes us free, we shall be free indeed. Martin Luther was a chained eagle in the Erfurt Convent until that heaven-sent truth, "The just shall live by faith," unloosed him, and he went forth to emancipate the bond-slaves of the Papacy. Thomas Chalmers was another chained eagle, but when the great doctrines of man's utter guilt and Christ's redemption liberated him, he soared up into the empyrean, the king of Scotland's Gospellers. John Wesley never attained to a full salvation until in that little London prayer-meeting his eye rested on these words: "The Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." I once visited that little room—just out of Aldersgate-street — as the real birthplace of Methodism. The great liberator of imprisoned soul is Jesus Christ. If you want to convert a Roman Catholic, teach him salvation by faith in the atoning blood and the work of the Holy Spirit. If you want to convert the sinners in a Protestant congregation or Sunday-school, drive home the same truths into the conscience. Drunkenness is both a sin and a disease; while we may apply medical tonics to sustain the body, and the pledge of total abstinence, yet the converting grace of Christ alone can deliver from the slavery of sin. Every true revival in a church repeats the miracle of Bethany. We see dead souls brought to life. We hear tongues unloosed to pray. Professing Christians who had been dragged down by worldliness, or hamstrung by unbelief, are let loose into a freedom and a joy to which they had been strangers. To every member of our churches who is now dragging out a half-dead religion, the Holy Spirit comes with the arousing call, "If ye be indeed risen with Christ, seek those things which are above!" Instead of sitting in the gates of the tomb, cast away your grave-clothes and begin to live as Christ's freemen and Christ's witnesses, and the heirs of a magnificent inheritance. Look higher! Live higher! Get a new grip on Christ and then go out and labour to draw sinners from the pit of hell. This is the revival we all need. We need a new consecration to Christ and a fresh baptism of his Spirit, for we can never convert an ungodly world while we are gasping for life ourselves. If Christ unloose us, we shall be free indeed, and where his Spirit is there is liberty.

Madagascar.

Writing from Ambòhidrabiby, a village where the work of God is carried on by native teachers superintended from a distance by Mr. Peill, of Ambohimanga, the evangelist says:

"I am glad to acquaint you with the work of the Holy Spirit in this village, especially among the young men. Many have been to visit me this week to inquire the way of salvation. All were under deep conviction of sin, and in great distress on account of their sins. Yesterday afternoon I had a meeting of inquirers, and the interest was so great that we could not break up till long after dark. After all had dispersed two middle-aged men came back for more talk in private, during which they shed tears and wept aloud with emotion. Both said they had been idolaters and devoted to heathen customs, but were determined henceforth to give up their heathenism. They are plainly changed characters. Pray for our church at Ambòhidrabiby, that we may be fit abodes for the Holy Spirit."

THE PRIESTHOOD OF CHRIST.—There is no office of Christ, says John Owen, that Satan labours so hard to obscure as his priestly one. Satan cares little, comparatively, for Christ the Prophet and Christ the King, as long as he can get men to forget Christ the Priest. Let us ever stand fast on this point. That Christ is carrying on the office of a Priest in Heaven is the crown and glory of Christian theology.—Bishop Ryle.

CHRIST'S TEARS.—The Son of God wept over the lost, and "his sweat was as it were great drops of blood" in the agony of his sufferings. Oh, hard heart! Shall not the Redeemer's tears move thee? The Son of God did not weep vain and causeless tears, or for a light matter; nor did He for Himself either spend his own, or desire the profusion of others' tears. "Weep not for me, O daughters of Jerusalem!" He knows the value of souls, the weight of guilt, and how low it will press and sink them: the severity of God's justice, and the power of his anger, and what the fearful effects of them will be when they finally fall. If thou understandest not these things thyself, believe Him that did; at least believe his tears!—John Howe.

The Revival in Scotland.

REV. JOHN McNEILL IN GLASGOW.

Mr. McNeill began a month's mission in Glasgow on Sabbath, April 3. The Mission is being conducted under the auspices of the United Evangelistic Association. St. Andrew's Hall has been secured for the afternoon meetings four days in each week, and Hengler's Circus is rented for the Sabbath services and the week-evening meetings.

The first week's meetings have amply justified the Association in renting these places, the most commodious to be had in the city. Three services were held on Sabbath week, the first being for non-churchgoers at 2.30, when an audience of fully four thousand people gathered together, and listened most attentively to a Gospel address. The meeting at five o'clock was for women only, and fully 3500 came together. While this meeting was going on thousands of men had gathered round the door waiting for admittance to listen to an address for men only at seven o'clock. So great was the crush that before the service began the doors had to be closed. There must have been about 4500 present, and at the close of the service a large after-meeting was held, when between forty and fifty men rose from their seats asking the prayers of the congregation. Many interesting cases were dealt with.

The afternoon meetings in St. Andrew's Halls have been well attended. The audience grew in numbers until the close of the week, when the large hall was well filled. We believe this service will become a very popular one with those who are free during the day and who desire to hear the Evangelist.

Every evening in Hengler's Circus the large building is completely filled, and each evening there have been large after-meetings and many inquirers. Mr. McNeill's statement of the Gospel is forcible and attractive; and while he frequently causes his hearers to smile, he is making a very deep impression on the lives and hearts of many by his earnest appeals to them to yield themselves wholly to the Saviour.

It may interest the readers of The Christian to learn that many striking cases of conversion occurred while Mr. McNeill was in Dumbarton. Dumbarton is one of the headquarters of football in Scotland, and the local club has always taken a foremost place in national competitions. Several members of the club attended Mr. McNeill's meetings, and some remarkable conversions took place among these men. The captain of the Dumbarton Football Club was one of those who surrendered themselves to Jesus, and many of the sporting newspapers have put in a public announcement of his withdrawal from the national game. He was engaged to play a match two days after his decision for Christ, and he kept faith with his promise; but after the game he told his comrades, before they adjourned for the usual refreshments, that this was his last game, and now he was going to work for Jesus.

Mr. McNeill is ably assisted by Mr. J. H. Burke, who has charge of the choirs, and who delights his audiences with his beautiful Gospel solos.

Applications are coming in to Mr. McNeill daily from many parts of England, desiring him to visit them. Mr. McNeill wishes his friends to know that his engagement for 1892 is to do evangelistic work in Scotland, and in Scotland alone; and he has had to refuse all these special invitations. His plans for the future have not been made, and he does not desire to bind himself for any engagement beyond the present one with the friends in Scotland. W. M. O.

DUMBARTON.

The meetings commenced at Dumbarton by Messrs. Moody and Sankey, and continued by Rev. John Robertson and Rev. John McNeill, have been followed up by Mr. W. J. Taylor, of the Evangelisation Society. The hall where the meetings were held has been crowded at every meeting, and at last proved too small. A remarkable characteristic about the work from the very commencement has been the large numbers of young men present. Many who were under conviction of sin have been dealt with at the after-meetings. Such a movement among young men has never been witnessed in Dumbarton before. The good work is still proceeding under Mr. M. Pittendrigh, also of the Evangelisation Society.

VISITATION IN CHINA.

A very encouraging report has recently come from China in the shape of a diary of a tour of visitation among the native Churches made last December by Mr. Orr-Ewing, who was accompanied by Mr. Reid. The stations visited were those lying along the banks of the Kuang-sin River, in the province of Kiang-si. The start was made from Nan-K'ang-fu, and a number of places were visited. The greater part of the journey was done by boat; the rest of the way the two missionaries were carried on chairs by coolies—a novel experience.

Mr. Orr-Ewing writes in very hopeful terms of the general condition of the churches and the converts whom they were enabled to meet, and whose faith this apostolic plan of visitation must have done much to confirm. Frequent mention is made of the English sisters stationed in little groups at different points on the river. In some cases they were busy acquiring the language and preparing for future service; in other cases they had been some time in the work, and were being unmistakably blessed in it.

Of the native churches the writer has many gratifying things to say. Referring to one place, he says he was much impressed with the desire which the native Christians manifested to spread the Gospel among their fellow-countrymen. At one country place, fifteen miles distant from the chief station, the work is described as remarkable. Mr. Orr-Ewing and one of the resident sisters were busily engaged for three hours in examining candidates for baptism. At another place the members of one family had been specially owned in their testimony for the Lord. In another centre idolatrous practices had been given up in no fewer than sixty homes, through the testimony of the head of one household! Again, it is remarked: "It is most encouraging to see the native church showing a missionary spirit, and the members delighting to preach the Gospel without any remuneration."

Throughout their journeyings Mr. Ewing and his companion sometimes found traces of the recent disturbances, while in other places the workers appear to have escaped all trouble. In one place the resident English sisters found themselves somewhat hampered in their movements by the excessive anxiety of the Mandarin to protect them from possible interference. Wherever the two visiting brethren went they found a hearty welcome, and had the opportunity of frequent Gospel witness-bearing, in addition to the work to which they were specially commissioned.

An indication of the difficulties that are met with among certain classes of the people is found in an incident told of an encounter with one of the literati, who kept up a lengthened argument, in which he contended that the teachings of Jesus Christ and of Confucius were pretty much the same. He loftily disdained to receive instructions from an unlearned native Christian.

This work of periodical visitation among the churches, which has been undertaken by Mr. Orr Ewing, is a most important one, and our readers are asked to unite in prayer that wisdom may be given in carrying it out.

Society for Distributing Scripture Truth.

Free grants have been given during the past year to a large number of philanthropic institutions, in addition to those supplied to the railway waiting-rooms. No new feature of the work is recorded in the thirty-second annual report just issued, but the evidence of a vast amount of permanent good being done by the Society is sufficiently manifest in the letters of appreciation received from grateful recipients of the Scripture rolls, handbooks, cards, and leaflets. Urgent appeal for continued support is based on the fact that through the printing-press "countless human rills are conveying poison instead of truth, and the enemy of man and God has never been so active as now in scattering tares of superstition and doubt." On the other hand, a recipient writes: "God has wonderfully blessed these silent messengers; the sailors derive great comfort from them in their cabins; and hospital patients obtain infinite consolation." The publications of the Society may be had at the depot, 47, Pevensey-road, Eastbourne, on application to the secretary, Mr. Wm. Brown.

A SERIOUS FACT.—In a certain Kentish village it is affirmed that over one thousand of the 1360 residents do not attend a place of worship on Sundays. In addition to this the parish Sunday-schools have been closed for nine weeks, and the school children have not attended church or other services.

PRAYER FOR REVIVAL ANSWERED.

I am glad to notice in The Christian signs of God's people coming back to the primitive ways of seeking a revival. I believe the only real work that can be done for God is by waiting upon Him in prayer, and only going forward as fitted by Him. I have long felt we have got off the lines by our everlasting talk, talk. Half the time of the weekly prayer-meeting is given up to an address, and even in the prayer-meetings at conventions and other gatherings of a like nature, the time is wasted with the same desire to give us "only a few words," lasting frequently half the hour of the meeting. How I long for the time when Christian folks will come together to wait only on the Lord. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

Let me give an example. Four years ago, the Liverpool City Mission was steadily losing ground. The number of missionaries had not been so low for long. The Mission was in debt, and there was depression everywhere.

The missionaries were invited to a friend's house to pray. The first meeting was not encouraging. Another was arranged for the following week, which lasted some two hours. Yet another was held, and we who were present will not soon forget it. Hearts were touched by the Spirit of God; confessions were made of backslidings and failures. Some wept, and gave themselves anew to God and his work. These meetings were repeated, one lasting to one o'clock in the morning. At no time did all the staff attend; only volunteers were asked. And the result? Hope took the place of despair. God at once encouraged the workers. Men who were barren began to see fruit. We closed that year without debt, and have had none since. Our staff has increased fifty per cent. Our Mission-halls stood then at nine, now we have twenty-two, all self-supporting, save one; many full to the door. The gross attendance last month was over 32,000.

All this progress has been without noise. The halls have been opened without any ado. A few of us have met for prayer to ask God to use the place as He thought best, and the missionary has gone forth to his house-to-house visitation in order to tell of the dear Saviour, and in this way the rooms are filled.

Men converted to God in these halls, after their day's work has ended, have given their time freely in order to enlarge these places, or to paint and paper them, some buying the materials. We still meet for prayer; often two and three times in a week, generally now in the morning. When we come together we sing a hymn, and then to our knees, never rising till the hour is gone, and it goes all too quickly. We seldom admit strangers. When we do, they must be in the work. One of these said, "You cannot help having blessing with such meetings." Another thanked God before others that he had been permitted to see such a band of men thus beginning their day's work.

What I like most about it is—that it is all so quiet. You might be here and know nothing about it. But the fruit can be found all over the city in the lives of saved men and women. To God be the glory!

THE SALIAR CASTE.—Mr. and Mrs. Duthie who are labouring at Nagercoll, Travancore, specially among the Saliars, a peculiarly difficult class to reach, sent Mr. Cousins an account of the faithful life and peaceful death of the first woman of that caste who has become a Christian. Zenana work has been going on in the quarter for many years. There also is located a girls' school, and it is hoped that many women will yet be gathered out of heathenism to enjoy the light and liberty of the Gospel.

THE DRILL-HALL BREAKFAST MISSION, EDINBURGH.—The Sabbath free breakfasts have now been given for sixteen years, and the old, old story proclaimed to the poor guests thus drawn together. The new report says that the attention paid to the addresses is very marked; it adds:—"We believe that in many a heart, every Sabbath morning, seed is being sown which, sooner or later, will spring up and bear fruit in a changed life. During the year a total of nearly forty thousand poor men, women, and children have sat down to a substantial free breakfast, the average cost being less than fourpence for each one." The Sabbath-school numbers nearly three hundred children; employment has been secured for many of the older scholars, some of whom have recently decided for Christ. At the lodging-house meetings the general conduct and attention of the casuals to the Word preached is noted as being remarkable. Contributions amounted to upwards of £800 for all purposes and from all sources. Mr. Robert Wilson, 3, Queen-street, is the hon. treasurer.

For the Young.

THE BROKEN KEY.

Minnie, or "Peach-cheek," as she was often called, was a bright, merry little maiden of nine years old, full of life and glee. I am sorry to say she was rather spoiled, and allowed to have her own way more than was good for her. So she grew to be wilful, and, I must own it, disobedient, much as she loved her dear parents and her wee sister Katie. I will tell you how she fell into sin, so that my dear young friends may take warning and avoid the same.

A gentleman visitor at Minnie's home, who was very fond of her, had presented her and Katie with a grand beautiful doll, with blue eyes and curling golden hair. Her name was "Charlotte." She had lots of pretty dresses, mantles, bonnets, and hats, and all other proper things; also a pair of lovely blue kid shoes, with rosettes, white open-work lace stockings, a pretty fan, and even a parasol, which could open and shut. All these fine clothes could be put on and taken off, and doubled up, so that dressing and undressing "Charlotte" gave constant delight to Minnie and her little sister. Many were the walks after lesson time to buy new sashes and laces. All sixpences were saved up and spent on "Charlotte," and often she was fetched down to be admired when visitors came.

One day a lady called when Papa and Mamma were out, and the little sisters did their best to entertain her. At last, Katie whispered "Oh, Minnie, if we could but show 'Charlotte' to Miss B——, but we musn't. Mamma said we musn't ever unlock that drawer, without asking her, but, oh, don't you wish we could show how lovely she is in that blue cloak you made!"

Minnie flushed; it was a temptation, and she whispered back, "No, Katie, dear, we musn't unlock that drawer; but perhaps mamma left it open. I'll just run up and see."

Katie waited her return with great anxiety, and thought all was right when Minnie came down with "Charlotte" in her arms, only Minnie's cheeks were very red, and she spoke crossly, and didn't seem to enjoy Miss B.'s loudly expressed admiration of the pretty wax baby. Conscience was making her unhappy, for Minnie had done wrong. The wardrobe drawer had been locked, but the key only needed a turn. Minnie yielded to temptation, turned the key, clasped her treasure, and ran down with it, meaning to take it back, lock it up, and never say a word about it.

Miss B. soon left, and away upstairs ran Minnie. She laid "Charlotte" carefully in, and was folding the pretty blue cloak round her, when she heard the well-known knock at the hall door, and knew her parents had returned. In a terrible fright she gave the key a sharp twist, and oh! horror! it broke in the lock. Nothing could be hidden now. How bitterly she regretted her disobedience and deceit.

"Minnie," called a loving voice, and down she went with crimson cheeks and beating heart. Her confusion and averted eye showed that something was wrong. The tale was soon told, the sin confessed and forgiven; and, folded in a fond father's arms, the child's heart was lightened of its load.

I was that naughty Minnie, and to this day I well remember how my beloved father led me upstairs, and talked to me with tears in his own dear eyes. How he warned me against disobedience, and entreated me to drive away the very first temptings to deceit by darting up a little prayer to God for strength to resist. I recall his very look as he bade me kneel down and ask God's pardon for my sin. He told me to thank Him for that broken key, as but for that I might have succeeded in my plot, and perhaps, encouraged in my sinful inclinations, might have grown up a deceitful and untruthful girl. Dear young friends, love and value your God-fearing parents and submit humbly to their wise corrections.

"A GRAIN OF WHEAT."*

Only a grain of wheat,
So small, that folk don't mind it;
Only a grain of wheat,
With the power of God behind it;
Only a buried grain;
Only the falling rain;
Only the sun's bright glory,
Bursting through heaven's top storey;
Only a grain, only a grain,
Buried, and dying, and living again.

There's harvest in a grain of wheat,
If given to God in simple trust;
For tho' the grain doth turn to dust,
It cannot die. It lives—it must—
And men shall have enough to eat.

Only a span of life,
So small, that folk don't mind it;
Only a span of life,
With the power of God behind it;
Only a little span;
Only a buried man;
Only a King's great love,
Paving the way above;
Only a span, only a span;
Only a buried, dying man.

There's harvest in the life of man,
If given to God in simple trust.
For tho' the body turns to dust,
The man's immortal. Moth and rust
Are only for a little span.

Dublin Visiting Mission.

The supply of the needed funds, and the manifest tokens of God's presence and blessing, are noted in the new report as furnishing abundant ground for thanksgiving and praise. There has been increased access to the people, and an awakening to the value of the Word of God, so that in a place where scarcely a single Protestant is to be found, the missionaries have stood up in the market-place to read and expound the Scriptures, while numbers have crowded round to listen, and many have bought copies of the Testament. The darkness and ignorance in which the people are kept, however, by Rome is illustrated by a few typical cases, one of which is as follows, narrated by the visitor: "I lately visited the dying bed of a woman who had been a Roman Catholic. She told me that, as a girl, she was compelled by threats to go to confession, but came away from it with more sin suggested than she could ever tell. In later years she was brought into contact with the Mission, where she sought and found the Saviour, and is now happily resting on his atoning work." Rome's prohibition of the Bible is also emphasized and declared, while facts are adduced that show the need of its circulation. "The people generally have no idea of the free pardon of sin through the blood of Christ, nor of justification by faith." The report may be had from the secretary, 35, Upper Fitzwilliam-street, Dublin.

DOHNE, CAPE COLONY.—Rev. A. Welsh writes: "We had the joy of admitting twelve candidates to the fellowship of the Church (five by baptism) at our last Communion here. We are greatly cheered at seeing so many coming forward and confessing Jesus as their Lord. A number of those present at the Communion came here on the Saturday, having to travel, some fifteen, some twenty, some thirty miles. Two hundred and eighteen members in all sat down at the table of their Lord and proclaimed his death."

MISSION TO MEDITERRANEAN GARRISONS.—The two centres of operation are those of Gibraltar and Algeciras. Here eight zealous workers, with Captain Armstrong as hon. superintendent, are found prosecuting evangelistic efforts among the soldiers and sailors. Gospel services, hospital visitation, work on board ships, and Bible-readings, &c., in the Home on the Rock, are the chief features of the Mission, as the result of which many have received great blessing. Among the events of the year has been the opening of the "New Found Out," formerly a notorious public-house, but now converted into a refuge for soldiers and sailors. In some of the stations the Holy Spirit is believed to be working in a marked way, and several have been brought to the Saviour. The absolute need for such a mission is urged by the fact that in one vessel visited by Captain Armstrong the mate had died, six of the crew were down with fever, and there was not a Bible or Testament on board. Communications should be addressed to Mrs. Todd Osborne, Rysland, Newton-Mearns, N.B.

A NEW "FRIEDENHEIM."

The beautiful work of caring for and witnessing to poor weary ones gliding into the valley of death, with none to comfort or cheer, carried on by Miss Davidson at "Friedenheim," is already well known to our readers, who have also learned the need for larger and more suitable premises. At length the way has been opened, and a convenient house has been secured at Sunnyside, Upper Avenue-road, South Hampstead, N.W., quite close, we may note, to the Swiss Cottage railway station.

Already two gatherings of kindly interested friends have been held in the empty house, in order to commend the whole work to God and show practical sympathy. In a few weeks, should the Lord's people be stirred to give towards alterations, fitting, and furnishing, it is hoped the new Home of Peace will be ready to receive patients.

Amongst the many touching incidents mentioned in the report, just issued, for the past year, we observe that of one girl who was an inmate for several months, and though completely helpless and unable to move herself, her gentle patience never varied, and her sweet influence was felt by all around. Her end was "perfect peace," though the chariot that bore her from us was one of fiery suffering. She proved that God was, indeed, a refuge in the time of trouble, and able to sustain in weakness; and doubtless, by-and-by, it will be made known how many were helped and blessed by her example. Her prayerfulness was such a power in the room, and her humility. She did not speak much, but one could not watch her life without seeing the reality of her faith in a risen Saviour. Her loss was greatly felt; and among her little treasures was found a purse, with about one pound in it, collected by her for the "Home" she loved, and for opening which to her she constantly expressed her gratitude to God.

As to the present needs, we learn that in all ten thousand pounds will be required to buy the new Home and clear all expenses; towards this nearly five thousand pounds have already been received. Those who really know the weary, desolate ease of many lonely dying ones, who understand what it is to afford relief to the body during the closing days of life and to minister to the deeper needs of the departing soul, will surely seek to show sympathy and aid practically in this loving work. Communications should be made to Miss Davidson, Friedenheim, Sunnyside, Upper Avenue-road, South Hampstead, N.W.

International Bible Reading Association.

The annual gatherings of this association were held on April 5 at the Sunday-School Union, 56, Old Bailey. In the afternoon there was a conference of District and Branch Secretaries. Encouraging statements were given by representatives from Sheffield, Newcastle, Bolton, Manchester, Talgarth, Leicester, Bradford, Halifax, Gravesend, &c. Rev. R. Culley, secretary of the Wesleyan Sunday-School Union, gave an address cordially recommending the association and supporting its objects.

A public meeting was held, at which Colonel J. T. Griffin presided. The Hon. Secretary stated that there had been issued 390,000 membership cards in the English language, being an increase of 55,000 over the number at the same date last year. Of these, 342,000 were issued to members in the United Kingdom, and 47,000 in other countries. For the present year the list of readings had also been issued in six additional foreign languages. The members of the association had continued to support Dr. J. L. Phillips as a missionary for the promotion of Sunday-schools in connection with the various missions in India.

Rev. J. B. Meharry, B.A., of Crouch-hill, gave an excellent address on the value of the Bible, followed by Rev. J. E. Newell and Mr. Sa-anga, a native of Samoa, who, in his own language, interpreted by Mr. Newell, expressed his gratitude for the good which had been effected in his country by means of the I.B.R.A. and the Society of Christian Endeavour.

CROSS IN-HAND.—In connection with the Saynden-road Mission, Staplehurst, a Mission has been commenced here and a Sunday-school opened. Interest is manifested, and already God has blessed the effort.

THE NATIONAL EDUCATION LEAGUE held a drawing-room meeting on Thursday last, at 3, Grosvenor-square, the residence of the Duchess of Portland. Miss C. M. Mason, hon. sec., gave an outline of the objects of the Union in the promotion of education from the moral and scientific side, and to create a better public opinion on the proper education of children. The secretary of the London branch is Lady Isabel Margesson, 63, St. George's-road, S.W.

FULFILLED PROPHECY:

THE DEATH OF CHRIST.

We have abundant Scriptural warrant for treating the sacred fact of our Lord's death as an instance of fulfilled prophecy. In Luke xviii. 31-33, Jesus Himself predicts it as fulfilling "all things that are written by the prophets concerning" Him. After his resurrection, He again connected his passion with the Old Testament predictions, first, in his conversation with the two disciples journeying to Emmaus, and, again, to the assembled disciples before his ascension (Luke xxiv. 26, 45-46). Peter did the same (Acts iii. 18); Philip found this the most effective way of preaching the Gospel to the eunuch (viii. 35); and Paul adopted the same method at Antioch (xiii. 27-29). From Peter's epistle we learn that the prophets themselves were diligent students of their own prophecies, and that even angels are interested in a theme like this (1 Pet. i. 10, 11). Let us study it reverently. It will tend to strengthen our faith, and to enhance our appreciation of our Lord's atoning death.

The story is too well known to need repeating. Every one is familiar with the journey from the upper room to the garden; with the agony and bloody sweat, followed by the visit of the traitor, and the arrest; with the appearance before the High Priest, before Pilate, the representative of the power of Rome, and before Herod, the wicked king, who, a few years before, had trembled at the preaching of the Baptist; with the buffetting, the scourging, the thorn crown, and the mockery so patiently endured; with the journey to Golgotha, and the painful crucifixion and death, which seemed such a triumph for his foes and such a staggering blow to the hopes of his friends. Let memory linger upon the whole of the touching story. Not on "Good Friday" alone, but all the year round do we need its message of love.

I. IN THE WHOLE EVENT, without touching upon details, we can see how prophecy is fulfilled. Let us call before us the prominent actors in this awful tragedy. Here is Judas, the traitor, who sold him. "Say, Judas, what was your object?" He replies: "Gain. I sought those thirty pieces of silver." "Priests and elders, what was your object?" "We hated Jesus, because his truth and his life were opposed to us, and we determined to get Him out of the way." "Pilate, what did you hope to accomplish?" "I hoped to save my position as procurator." "And, Herod, what was your object?" "Nothing more than to have a little sport out of a reputed miracle-worker." But when all have combined and done their worst, what is the total result of their efforts? The prayer of the assembled disciples (Acts iv. 27, 28) tells us, "Of a truth, against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel were gathered together." What for? "To do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done." That and nothing more. What the Scriptures have written, they who rejected the Scriptures helped to fulfil. The guilt is theirs, but the results of their crime God appropriates for Himself. And be it known unto all who rise up against the Lord's anointed, that, however strong their combination, however wise their counsel, however apparently successful their efforts, they will never accomplish more than will fulfil the counsel of God. Who can fail to adore the depths of the wisdom of God in bringing about his own purpose of blessing by means of the greatest crime this earth has ever witnessed?

II. IN THE TIME

when the crucifixion took place, there is a more striking fulfilment of prophecy. In Dan. ix. 25, 26 it is predicted that Messiah would be "cut off"—that is, put to death (Isa. liii. 8)—after sixty-nine weeks from the time of the issue of the decree for building Jerusalem. This most probably refers to the decree given to Nehemiah in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes (Neh. ii.). According to the chronology of Archbishop Usher, Artaxerxes began his reign 473 or 474 B.C. His twentieth year would, therefore, be 454 or 455. If we add to this the thirty-three years of our Lord's life, we have 487 years as the time between the issue of the decree and the crucifixion. The sixty-nine weeks of years, that is, sixty-nine multiplied by seven, equals 483, a difference of four years between the prediction and the event. But even that slight difference does not exist, for the margin of our reference Bibles tells us (see Matt. ii.) that a mistake of four years has been made in New Testament chronology. If the four years are deducted from the 487, the exact number of the sixty-nine weeks of years, or 483 years is obtained. Is not this significant? How solemnly important the death of Christ becomes when we see God, five centuries beforehand, telling the very year in which it will take place!

There is yet another indication of time. Christ is our Passover (1 Cor. v. 7), and if the type is to be accurately fulfilled, He must die in the Passover Week. See how God works in the counsels of his enemies. The Sanhedrim met, resolved to put Christ to death, but said, "Not during the Feast" (Matt. xxvi. 3-5). That is their plan, but if carried out, the prophetic type will be broken. God's plan is, "Now, during the Feast;" theirs is "Not now, but after the Feast." But their plan is upset. Judas appears at the Council, makes his bargain, and decides with them the place and time for the arrest. And so the type is accurately fulfilled. Who can read the account without feeling that a greater than Moses wrote the details for the Paschal Feast? And that God was behind and above the deliberations of the Sanhedrim, turning their counsel into confusion, and accurately fulfilling his own? When of this wonderful story are considered, the accuracy with which the event fulfils the prediction is more remarkable still. Upon all the details we cannot dwell, but it will be profitable to examine some, and to place the words of the prophecy by the side of the Gospel narrative.

The patience with which our Lord met his suffering is noticed by all the evangelists: "When He was reviled, He reviled not again; when He suffered, He threatened not." The prophet so said centuries before. "He opened not his mouth: He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so He openeth not his mouth" (Isa. liii. 7).

The narrative tells us that He was scourged with the cruel Roman lash, that the servants of the High Priest buffetted Him, and spat upon Him. The prophecy foretold this: "I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair" (Isa. l. 6).

The narrative shows that though He was manifestly innocent, a judicial sentence was obtained against Him, which gave an appearance of justice to his condemnation. Prophecy said: "He was taken away by distress and judgment" (Isa. liii. 8, margin).

He died, not by any form of death the Jews had power to inflict, but by crucifixion, the most cruel and ignominious that man could suffer. Even this was foretold: "They pierced my hands and my feet" (Psa. xxii. 16).

To increase the humiliation of his death He was crucified between two robbers, as though He were one of the same class. So said prophecy: "He was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. liii. 12).

During the hours spent upon the cross, burning thirst possessed Him, and vinegar was given Him to quench it. Even this was not omitted in the prediction: "In my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink" (Psa. lxix. 21).

When the soldiers who had crucified Him came to divide his garments, they decided by lot who should possess the coat. Prophecy foresaw even this: "They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture" (Psa. xxii. 18).

But hark! What is this first word that bursts from the lips of the crucified Saviour? "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Who inspired the prophet to say: "He made intercession for the transgressors" (Isa. liii. 12)?

Now, listen to the cry of the mockers who stand round the cross. His confidence in God is the theme of their cruel jest. How came the prophet to quote the very words with which they reviled Him? "All they that see Me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, he trusted in God that He would deliver Him: let Him deliver him, seeing He delighted in Him" (Psa. xxii. 7, 8). The event is but the prophecy re-written.

The three hours' darkness is passing, and another cry bursts from the Sufferer. The very words were foretold by the prophet: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Psa. xxii. 1).

And now the agony of death is past; and He who, during life, has been the companion of the poor, and on the cross has been numbered with the wicked, is laid in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, a rich counsellor. Did prophecy foretell that? "His grave was appointed with the wicked"—a further indignity intended by his murderers upon the lifeless body, but frustrated by the application of Joseph, so that "He was with the rich in his death" (Isa. liii. 9).

These are only some of the details of this narrative in which prophecy finds an accurate fulfilment. How solemnly important the event must be in God's view! and how far are they from the mind of God who relegate the atoning death of Christ to a position inferior to that of his incarnation and his life. The two ordinances Jesus has left his Church, the visions of Christ as seen in the Book of Revelation, and all the songs of the redeemed, perpetuate the memory and emphasize the importance of the blood of Atonement. Let us value it as God does; and let all fear the awful guilt of despising a salvation procured with such a costly price.

A subject like this bears with greatest importance upon the subject of unfulfilled prophecy concerning Jesus. His coming again is as his first coming was the hope of Old Testament saints. The prophecies relating to that first coming have had a literal fulfilment in details of a most humiliating character. Not less literal and not less certain will be the fulfilment of all that is predicted of the coming that is yet future. Trust the atonement rendered when He came in humiliation; be content while here to go forth to Him without the camp suffering reproach with Him, that you may be able to welcome Him when He appears the second time, and may not be ashamed before Him at his coming.

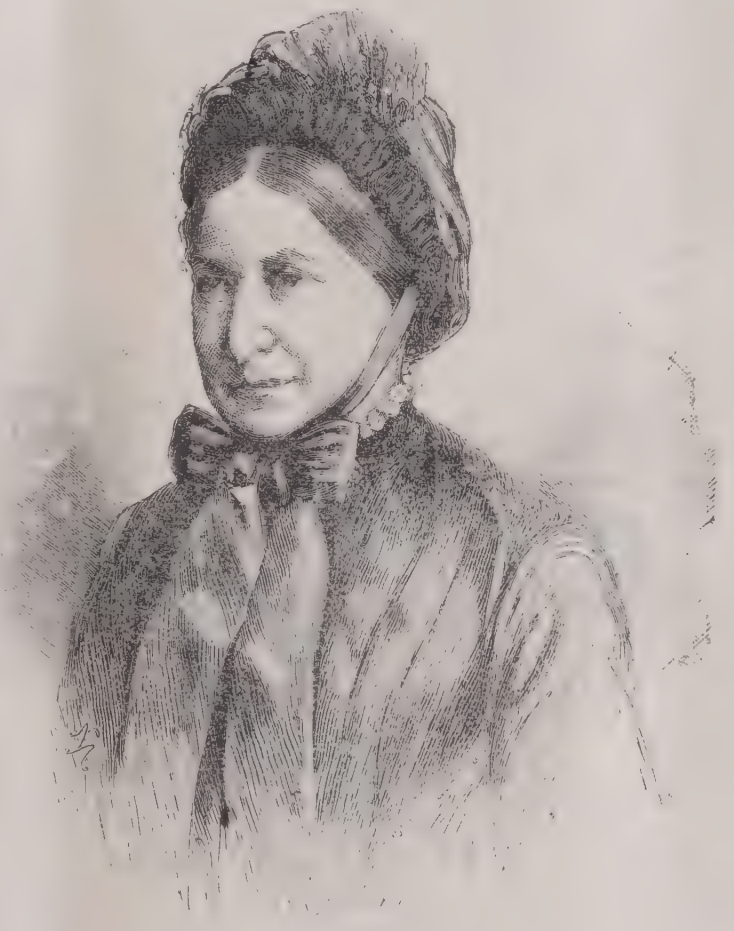
HOME FOR THE FATHERLESS (70, Lewisham-road).—In his fourteenth report, Mr. Henry Toye says: "This brings us to the close of another year, making twenty-two years in which we have proved the faithfulness of God caring for us day by day." And further: "I have to say to the praise of his name that not one good thing hath failed; and without telling my need to any one but God alone, all has been supplied." Mr. Toye proceeds on lines similar to those adopted by Mr. Müller, and the tale of gifts, both in money and food, that have come in on almost every day of the entire year, seems wonderful to read. The amount thus received was upwards of £1500, apart from groceries, &c., valued at £150. The Home is open to visitors every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons; and persons wishing for reports can have them on application.

THE JUVENILE THRIFT-AND-THRIVE NEEDLE-DRIVERS' BAND, affiliated to the Anti-pin-my-rags-together Association, now enters upon its third year. Under the heading of "Rejoicings" in the new report is recorded the bursting forth of a gracious work of the Holy Spirit, so that several of the band have given their hearts to the Saviour. One of the most troublesome of my needle-drivers, says Miss Benn, has become so changed in her home-life that her mother told us one day, weeping, she was "afraid her dear child was not long for this world, she had become so good." A new branch has been started in Liverpool, and Lady Henry Somerset purposes forming one in the North of London; and even Vienna is spoken of as a future centre. Altogether, success has marked the enterprise all along the line, the flower-making department being more successful than ever. The address of Miss L. Lower Benn, the hon. organiser, is 33, St. Peter's-road, Mile-end, E.

THE LATE MRS. MENTOR MOTT,

HONORARY DIRECTRESS OF THE BRITISH SYRIAN MISSION.

AMONG the many earnest-minded women whose spirits have been stirred up to undertake extensive work in the Lord's vineyard, there have been few more devoted and self-denying than Augusta Mentor Mott.



In her early years, together with her sisters, she received an admirable education, and, under the influence of a highly intellectual father, Hannibal Evans Lloyd, and a wise and godly mother, the four Misses Lloyd were in a measure prepared for the work which God was preparing for them. They early showed their desire to aid the needy by taking an active part in a Ladies' Association for the help of negroes in the West Indies, and thus were trained for further Christian work.

Augusta Lloyd was married to Mr. Mentor Mott, a gentleman possessed of considerable means; and after travelling about for some time, they settled down at East Coombe Park, Charlton, where they lived in great comfort, but always devoting themselves to the welfare of their poorer neighbours. Elizabeth Lloyd had previously married Dr. Bowen Thompson, well-known in connection with the Euphrates Valley Railway scheme, and with him she had lived some years in Syria, and become interested in the ignorant and down-trodden women of that land. On the death of her husband, during the Crimean war, Mrs. Bowen Thompson found a loving welcome at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mentor Mott, and for some years she joined with them in labouring among the poor of Greenwich and Woolwich.

In the year 1860 the terrible rising of the Druses of the Lebanon against their Christian neighbours, which resulted in the massacre of some eleven thousand men, filled the land of Syria with scenes of desolation, and caused a bitter wail of anguish to rise from the stricken hearts of some twenty thousand widows and orphans. That cry of woe found an echo in English hearts, bleeding still from the wounds of the Indian mutiny, and sympathy was soon manifested by contributions of money and clothing, which were gladly distributed by English officials and American missionaries in Syria.

Mrs. Bowen Thompson recognised a deeper need than for outward relief, and in October, 1860, she landed in Beyrout, to commence the blessed work of proclaiming the Gospel in its fulness and simplicity to these poor, degraded women, who, though nominally Christians, were in many cases ignorant even of the fact that they possessed souls, and in all cases the victims of delusive superstitions. The American missionaries, who had been for some years at work among the men and boys of Syria, held out the hand of fellowship to Mrs. Bowen Thompson, and aided her in her efforts on behalf of the female population. Very soon her accounts of the openings for educational and spiritual work among the women and girls of Syria, led to the formation in England of the "Ladies' Association for the Moral, Social, and Religious Improvement of Syrian Females." This long title was afterwards changed for the simpler designation of "British Syrian Mission."

Mrs. Thompson's sisters joined the committee, and one of them, then the wife of Mr. Henry Smith, of Morden College, Blackheath, became, and was for nineteen years, the honorary secretary of the Association. The one remaining Miss Lloyd soon joined Mrs. Thompson in Beyrout, and within a few years Mr. Mentor Mott, recognising the burning down of his house at East Coombe as a providential indication that his home was to be elsewhere, went out with his wife to Beyrout to join the mission band. Thenceforth his Syrian home became the active centre of this blessed work. Mrs. Bowen Thompson continued to be the recognised head of the Mission until she was called to her rest on November 14, 1869; by that time Mrs. Mott had become acquainted with the manners and customs of the people, and acquired a sufficient knowledge of the Arabic language to be ready to take the responsible post of honorary directress, which she ably filled for nearly twenty-two years.

(From a Photograph by Bonfils, Beyrout.)

When Mrs. Mott took up the reins of government there were eighteen schools, with about fifty teachers and sixteen hundred pupils, and seven or eight Bible-women. Since then the numbers have risen to thirty schools, one hundred teachers, three thousand pupils, and thirty Bible women and Scripture readers, of the latter five are blind men. Mrs. Mott was aided by a small staff of European ladies, acting as superintendents of out-stations, such as Damascus, Tyre, Baalbec, Zachleh, &c., and of various departments of the Mission in Beyrout; but so completely was the control of the work in her hands that not a change was made in the position of the youngest native teacher without reference to her. Mrs. Mott was a good linguist, had musical and artistic talent, and possessed a calm dignity combined with a wonderful graciousness of manner, which specially fitted her for ruling others. Her tact and courtesy carried her through many of the difficulties which beset evangelical mission work in a country under Mohammedan rule, and in the midst of the corruption and superstition of Oriental Christianity. The local authorities, however, were convinced that there was no secret political design underlying the work of the British Syrian Mission, but that its aim was the real welfare of the women of Syria, and the amelioration of all suffering that it could reach. Mrs. Mott was an indefatigable worker; she kept up a correspondence with all the mission agents in Syria, and, more or less, with all the branch association secretaries, and many other friends in England. A very large proportion of the income of the Mission was given in response to her own letters.

Mr. Mott's beautiful house in Beyrout (his own private property) has sometimes called forth criticism from those who think that missionaries should dispense with everything but the bare necessaries of life; but it has been wonderfully helpful to the natives of the country, especially those of high position, to see that people who had means enough to enable them to live (had they wished it) in idleness and luxury, spent their whole time, and a very large proportion of their means, in carrying the news of the Saviour whom they loved to the people of a foreign land. It was ever the delight of Mr. and Mrs. Mott to show hospitality, as many travellers could testify who have been for weeks under their roof, and many invalid workers, of their own and other missions, have been kindly nursed there. Again, numerous gatherings of the children and teachers of the Beyrout Schools took place there, and when some good man like Bishop French or Bishop Hannington was in the town, the large hall would be filled with European and American residents and English-speaking natives, to hear him deliver an address. From time to time the Hareem of some Turkish official would be invited to spend an afternoon with Mrs. Mott, and, of course, the opportunity was used to tell of the way of salvation.

The prayerful spirit of that home pervaded the whole Mission, and in the reports from the various schools it is remarkable to see how the children spontaneously band themselves together in prayer unions; and it times of sickness the people say: "Send for the Bible-woman to come and pray for us."

THE DEACON'S PRAYERS.

Deacon May was a prosperous, unctuous, easy-going kind of man, whose easy-goingness you never properly realised until you heard him at the week-night prayer-meeting. Then you realised, and wondered!

One prayer night, towards the close of the year, Deacon May was more than usually fierce, martial, and uncompromising. He prayed the vengeance of the Lord on such hell-deserving sinners as were then assembled. He told the Lord they deserved and expected only to be hated of Him eternally, and that if He were to wipe them off the face of the earth that minute, without any warning, it would be only a part of their deserts.

"Oh, Lord," he prayed, "send forth thy chariots into our midst and consume us! Let thy speedy judgments convince us of thy almightiness and our littleness. Put forth thy restraining hand, and shew us where some of us stand to-night," and a great deal more to the same purpose, in a voice that shook the windows, and frightened the little old ladies and the few partially-deaf old men who comprised the weekly prayer-meeting held in Zion Chapel.

"Deacon May be a mighty powerful speaker, be'ant he?" tentatively suggested old Maria Hall to her husband.

"H'm," he replied, with superior wisdom, "pity he don't speak for hisself, though, for I'm half afeared at what he says."

"Afeared! What for, Hiram? A'nt they good prayers?"

"Well," responded Hiram, "I'd be afeared if I believed that way, as them prayers might come true some day, that's all; and then where should we be, Maria?"

"Hiram, I never thought of that, that I didn't! You go and see the deacon about them prayers soon's ever you can, Hiram, for I didn't never think of their comin' true!"

The next evening Hiram went; there was no time to be lost.

"Good evenin', deacon; you are lookin' pretty comfortable."

"Never more so," responded Deacon May "bless God for all his goodness! It's a nice world and a good one, ain't it, Hiram?"

"You don't think we want consumin' right away, then, and you don't feel as if the Lord hated ye, eh?" asked Hiram.

"Dear, no, that ain't my way of lookin' at things! What are you driving at, Hiram Hall?" asked the deacon, laughingly.

Then Hiram told him of those prayers, and what would come to pass if they were answered; "but the worst of it is," he continued, "some of us go to prayer-meetin' never expectin' any answers. I quite frightened my wife when I spoke of their comin' true."

"I should think so!" replied the deacon. "Why, I've heard my grandfather pray them prayers, and my father before me, and I ain't never heard better ones! You go home, Hiram Hall, and learn to make finer prayers than those, and then we'll look for the answers."

* * * *

There was a crowd outside Deacon May's house, and the fire-engines were there, and the flames were leaping up to the sky, and yet the crowd did not appear to be sorry for Deacon May. He appeared at one of the windows, calling loudly for help, and imploring someone to come to the rescue of his wife and child, but no one stirred. Some in the crowd called out that it was "the judgment of God," others persuaded the deacon that it was "the chariots of the Lord come to consume them." Yet others reminded the half-frantic man that it was no more than he deserved, and a voice called out something about "the wrath of God abiding" on the wretched deacon. "Oh!" he screamed in an agony, "have pity on me and mine. God is love, He would never send forth his judgments in this way upon one who desires to serve Him faithfully."

And as the flames leaped round him closer, and he heard the crashing of the building beneath, he saw Hiram Hall pointing the finger of scorn at him, and calling out "Yah! Yah! tell us that 'God is love' at the next prayer-meetin', Deacon May; this is the answer to your prayers—the good old prayers of your grandfather and your father." With a shriek the deacon threw up his hands, and was about to leap from the burning house, when he felt a detaining hand on his arm, and looking up saw his wife. "Deacon, where have you been? You've been snorin' fine, and just now you give such a scream as terrified me?"

The deacon awoke to find he had been dreaming; he never told his wife about what. But next prayer-meeting he prayed such a helpful, humble prayer, and was so earnest in the way he besought God to teach them how to pray, and to give them faith to expect an answer to their petitions, that old Hiram, tucking Maria's arm into his own as they walked homewards, whispered to her very confidentially:

"Maria, I shouldn't mind deacon's prayer comin' true to-night, and what's more, I shouldn't wonder if it's one o' them prayers as the Lord answers."

And Maria answered, "No, Hiram, it were so nat'ral, nor shouldn't I!"

IN DISTRESSFUL RUSSIA.

A Christian worker who recently visited Baku, in Caucasia, writes the Evangelisches Allianzblatt: "In former days I was able to hold blessed meetings among the Armenians, but now Lutheran clergy are placed over them, whose first resolution is to close every other mouth, and the people must submit. An even gloomier cloud overshadows Russia—wider persecutions are in contemplation, and there will be no patience with any who cannot pronounce Shibboleth after the manner of the 'Orthodox Church.' The air is full of spies, the cause of the Gospel lies low, and the Government upholds superstition with a brutality which had not its like in the Middle Ages. The least suspicion is sufficient to rob peaceable and loyal subjects of their liberty, since any declension from the Greek Church is looked upon as 'anti-national.'

"I do not venture to preach anywhere lest I should cause persecution to suspected Christians, but the prison doors are open to me, and the Lord is with us there and makes his Word powerful. The prison is very full here, about twenty per cent. of the prisoners being Jews. Altogether there are 625 immured within these walls, and a yet larger prison is erecting. Many Jews have been baptized in Greek and Protestant churches in order to obtain the right to remain in the land and carry on their trade!"

Sedgley Temperance Mission.

That strong drink is peculiarly the miners' bane has been evidenced clearly enough in the accounts given during the coal agitation, by special correspondents of the daily press, of life in the mining villages. As in Durham and Yorks, so, doubtless, in Staffordshire; and hence Christian workers are compelled to keep the Temperance question full in front.

Thus it comes about that the mission work which has been carried on in Sedgley for thirty-two years, under the care of Mr. F. A. Homer, J.P., is known as the Sedgley Temperance Home Mission, and is very distinctively on Temperance lines. The Mission Hall, it is interesting to note, was one of the first of the kind—on a purely evangelical basis—opened in this country. The report of this good work has just reached us, and from it we learn:—The Sunday and Thursday evening Gospel services are prayerfully carried on, the streets constantly missioned by the little band of workers, and tracts systematically distributed from house to house. These silent messengers of God are again and again left at every house in our village, while the whole district shares in this effort to let God's love in Christ be known. The Mothers' Meeting, carried on by Miss Homer, continues to be largely appreciated, having numbered fifty members during the year.

Mr. G. Dann and his wife, who have done good service at Portsmouth and elsewhere, have entered on the work at this Mission, and the superintendent is hopeful blessing will result. The furnishing of the house required has, however, increased the financial burden of the year. The Sunday afternoon and evening classes and various other meetings continue interesting and fruitful. There is, we observe, need for sympathy and aid. Communication should be made to Mr. F. A. Homer, J.P., Sedgley, Dudley.

INTOLERANCE IN SPAIN.

We recently witnessed in Algeciras an example of the gross intolerance of the Romish Church, and this within five and a-half miles of Gibraltar. A warrant-officer in the Spanish Marine, who attended our Mission with his wife, both of them Christians, was seriously ill for about two months. As the doctor saw his end drawing near, he advised his wife to get a priest to administer the last rites of the Romish Church. She told him that her husband was already prepared. Shortly afterwards his superior officer called, and advised him to have the priest, but he replied that when he wanted him he would send. Later on, he sent other two non-commissioned officers to try and arrange for the priest to come—the seamen were to land and accompany the priest in procession with candles, &c.—but he told them that he needed not priests, as he was quite prepared, his trust being in Jesus. Not many hours before he died, on Sunday, March 6, his officer called again; by this time he could not speak, but, as with God-given strength, he said: "My conscience is at peace with God."

The day after he died the priest sent to claim his body for burial according to the rites of the Romish Church, but his widow refused. The Alcálde (Mayor) refused to give his permission for a civil burial, but the Judge gave instructions to have him buried in the Civil Cemetery. At the last moment the Alcálde gave permission. On reaching the cemetery, which lies about a quarter of a mile outside the town, the gate was found locked. The Alcálde ordered the body to be left in a coach-house outside the gates for twenty-four hours. The people refused to do this, knowing right well that it was a mere ruse for the priests to get possession of the body. They carried it back to the town to the residence of the Judge, who gave instructions for it to be taken to our mission-hall until he sent orders for the interment. The following day we had a short service in our hall before starting, and the street was filled with crowds who could not gain admission.

This being the first burial in the Civil Cemetery, the priests fought every inch of the way, annoying the widow in every possible manner. The people are freeing themselves from this Romish slavery, and are coming in crowds to hear the glad message of salvation proclaimed. Since our hall was opened, more than a year ago, it has been crowded out. It holds fully one hundred. We need one to hold at least from 350 to 450. What is better still, souls are being converted; for which we praise God. We have many towns and villages in this district, with from several thousands up to twenty thousand inhabitants, without a single missionary to proclaim the good news. The secretary of the Mission is Mrs. Todd Osborne, Rysland, Newton Mearns, N.B.

SOUTH COAST CONFERENCE.—A United Conference is to be held at Hastings, April 26—28, for mutual refreshment and strengthening, and the stirring of many to seek a fuller and deeper life. The subject will be "Privileges, Power, and Practical Outcome of the Christian Life," and among the announced speakers are: Revs. John Bennett, D.D., W. Fuller Gooch, J. G. Gregory, H. Grattan Guinness, D.D.; Messrs. C. Russell Hurditch and E. Cope Morgan, and Canon Taylor Smith, of Sierra Leone.

CONFERENCE IN SWITZERLAND.—A conference, the third of the series, is again this year being organised for Switzerland during August and September, to be conducted somewhat on the lines of the English conventions for the deepening of the spiritual life. The conference will probably assemble in more than one centre, and, inasmuch as one of the principal objects aimed at is the awakening of increased interest in Christian work on the Continent, certain leading French pastors have promised to be present. It is also anticipated that some at least of the names well known at English conventions will give their assistance.

TWO MILLIONS OF NOMADS.—Mrs. Bishop says:—"Just think, from Karachi to Bagdad, among the populous cities and villages of the Persian Gulf, of the Tigris and Euphrates, throughout Arabia, throughout South and South-West Persia, not a missionary! From Bagdad to Teheran—almost the most populous district of Persia—not a missionary! The Great oasis of Ferghana, at a height of 7000 feet, with 680 villages, craving medical advice, never visited, scarcely mapped! Then Julfa and Hamadan, with a few workers almost powerless to itinerate, represent the work of the Church of Christ for the rest of Persia. Two millions of Nomads never touched!"—L. M. S. Missionary Chronicle.

CAPE GENERAL MISSION.

When I look back upon the three years of our existence and see the progress God has enabled us to make, I can truly exclaim, "What hath God wrought!" Our Soldiers' Homes and Sailors' Rest are centres of life and activity, and many souls have been brought to Christ. Last year, the attendance at the Sailors' Rest amounted to over 6300. These included men of many languages and nationalities. We should be glad of tracts for this branch. At Wynberg, our little home is crowded with soldiers and a larger place needed, while a new hall for services will be opened this month.

In Cape Town, we have been seeing quite a little revival in our open-air and indoor meetings. The former reach the poor outcasts in some of the foulest slums. In the latter, the people flock in to hear the Gospel; and every Sunday night this year souls have been born again. Some desperate drink cases have been successfully dealt with, and we have proved the Lord's power to drive the drink-devil out.

Post, police, and railway-men are being cared for, and we are working these branches in happy union with the central missions in England. We have now a large nurses' home, with seven nurses and two more coming out. This has been a great boon to Cape Town, as the need of fully-trained nurses was long felt.

The work amongst the Malays is being carried on by Miss Measby and Miss Comford, and, at last, we see signs of God's Spirit working in the hearts of these bigoted Mohammedans. A daily school for the children is greatly appreciated, and we look for the day when the seed sown in these young hearts will spring up into life.

I recently had a tour through the colony and the Transvaal with our President, Rev. Andrew Murray. We visited Johannesburg, Pretoria, Vryheid, Utrecht. Going into Swaziland, we returned via the Orange Free State, while I came back via Durban, East London, and Port Elizabeth. We had, indeed, an insight into the needs. At Johannesburg and Pretoria we held Missions, which were truly fruitful. At the latter place a fine piece of ground was offered us at a peppercorn rent of 5s., and since our return we have sent Mr. Michael Coates there to be our missionary. A new hall is being built, largely through the generosity of Mr. A. W. Baker, of that city, who leased us the land as well; and now we purpose having various branches of work in full swing, including a night-school for the heathen, which is true missionary work.

Mr. and Mrs. Thurman leave for Johannesburg on the 16th to open a branch of our Mission in this golden city. Mr. Thurman's knowledge of the colony will largely help him. An extended work amongst blacks and whites should soon be the outcome of this new departure, and by the time this is being read they will be in full swing. This will make two new branches opened this year.

We were greatly impressed with our visit to Swaziland, with its sixty thousand heathen as dark as night. Last year we started a Mission station in the heart of the country in memory of my wife. Mr. and Mrs. Baillie are quite settled at our new station, called Bethany, and gave us a warm welcome. Heathendom reigns supreme all round, and the people are encrusted with superstition, and greatly under the power of the Witch Doctor. Only those who go to the centre of heathendom know the depressing influences abroad, and the power of sin and Satan. Our station is very primitive, but when funds come in we hope to build a much-needed house and hall. We had two hundred acres given us in another part to enable us to start another Mission station. We also found two open doors on the banks of the Pongola, in the Vryheid district—a low fever land during summer. Here are thousands of heathen Zulus, and we purpose starting two stations with native Evangelists—one in memory of our much-loved secretary, Wilfred Malcomson, and the other in memory of a true friend of the Mission, the late C. H. Spurgeon. Our missionary in the Transkei, Samuel Holt, is doing well, and we are now looking out for another to join him. Although we have a substantial offer of financial help for Kimberley, we have as yet been unable to find a suitable man. We want a young fellow, musical, and all on fire for souls. We have other doors opening for an extended work amongst the heathen. Will your readers pray for us and help us?

WORK IN CENTRAL FRANCE.

Allow me to call attention to a quiet work which is being done in and around Le Puy, Haute Loire, one of the great strongholds of Roman Catholicism in France. For some hundreds of years Le Puy was a celebrated place of pilgrimage, on account of its cathedral possessing a statue of the Virgin, which is said to have been made out of the Ark of the Covenant by the prophet Jeremiah, and to have been brought over to France from the Holy Land by St. Louis! Innumerable miracles are said to have been wrought in the crypt of the cathedral where this image is placed.

As may easily be imagined, the inhabitants of Le Puy are very bigoted. Not many weeks ago, during a Roman Catholic mission which was held in the city, the people were warned against dealing with Protestant tradesmen. In the midst of these Romanists a pastor of the Reformed Church of France is labouring in connection with the well-known Société Centrale. Unfortunately, the progress of the cause is greatly hindered by the unsuitable buildings in which the Protestants meet. It is a long, low room, made of two apartments thrown into one, situate in a low part of the town, a fact which produces a bad effect upon the Romish inhabitants, who think that the Protestants hide because their deeds are evil. The pastor, M. Abel, is desirous of building a respectable place of worship in a more suitable neighbourhood. He is trying to raise £1000 in order to buy the ground and erect a modest building with plain wooden benches. This by no means involves leaving the neighbours of the present room to their fate. They will be visited as assiduously as ever, and an impediment will be removed out of the way of inquirers who would like to go to the Protestant service.

M. Abel, in a letter before me, says: "This is a pioneer station. Our object is, first, to awaken the few Protestants of the town, and prevent them from becoming Roman Catholics or indifferent. Both cases have happened to families, originally Protestant, who have settled here. Secondly, we desire to watch over a region where there are religious desires and aspirations that are no longer satisfied by the Papal doctrine. The work here, then, must surely interest all true friends of the pure Gospel.

"A lady who has lived in England, and who was much struck by the religious character of the English, and especially by their respect for Sunday, has lately made her will. She wishes to be buried by a Protestant pastor, and has left a small sum to pay the travelling expenses. She implores us to come to the little town in which she lives and preach the Gospel. 'The English,' she says, 'send missionaries to the heathen. They ought to send missionaries to us as well, for we are becoming more and more heathen as time goes on.'"

Every possible effort is being made to raise the money needed for this modest building in France. But without outside help it will be impossible to carry out the scheme. It is difficult for outsiders to realise how small the Protestant minority is in France. Out of 36,000,000 of inhabitants there are only 600,000 Protestants all over France.

Communications may be addressed to Miss Green, Moorlands, Bickley, Kent.

A CAUTION. — For some time complaints have reached Mr. Fegan, Dr. Barnardo, and the Secretary of the Homes for Little Boys, that boys purporting to come from one or other of these institutions are going about from door to door selling tinware, and by their conduct bringing discredit on the Homes they are supposed to be sent out by. Those responsible for the Homes named are anxious, therefore, that it should be quite clearly understood that these juvenile hawkers of tin goods are in no way connected with their institutions.

CENTRAL SOUDAN MISSION.—Mr. Hermann G. Harris is now at Tripoli with six young men, all of whom, with himself, are now hard at work studying Arabic and Hausa, the latter being widely spoken in the Central and Western Soudan. They have taken in Tripoli, for a year, an Arab house for their own use, and in fitting up, the chairs are the only articles of furniture they have bought, as the tables, cupboards, shelves, &c., the young missionaries have made for themselves. They are, while studying, carrying on the distribution of the Scriptures in villages around Tripoli, and visiting the market, &c., with a small bookstall.

Easter Poems.

"Death is swallowed up in victory."

Christ is risen, Alleluia!
Earth and Heaven join to raise
Loudest chants of deep thanksgiving,
Sweetest notes of love and praise;
Hear the mighty strains ascending
In triumphant majesty,
Holy angels roll the anthem:
"Death is lost in victory."
Alleluia! Christ is risen,
Victor in the awful strife;
Alleluia! Christ hath opened
Unto us the gate of life.

Having borne in his Own Body
All our sins and sorrows sore,
Crowned with resurrection glory,
Jesus lives to die no more;
Now the mournful tomb is empty,
Now the woeful cross is bare;
Oh, the gladness! oh, the rapture!
We no more need seek Him there.
Alleluia! Christ is risen.

Lift your heads, ye shining portals,
Where the jewelled splendour burns,
Lo! the heavenly "King of glory"
To his Father now returns;
We have been with Him in sorrow,
Now to light He leadeth on;
May our spirits, robed in gladness,
Follow up where He is gone.
Alleluia! Christ is risen.

'Tis our King's high coronation,
All creation hails the day;
And He calleth us to share it,
And to join the festal lay;
Glory, glory be to Jesus
All the power is his alone,
Now He rules and reigns forever,
His the kingdom and the throne.
Alleluia! Christ is risen.

Caroline Tickner.

A thousand times the gladsome chimes
Ring out the world to wake,
And wild notes sweet the strain repeat
From every budding brake.

By moorland grey and sea-washed bay,
By wood and mountain mere,
The chorus swells beyond the bells
For Spring herself is here.

Sweet Spring, the type whose Antitype
Rose likewise from the dead;
Lo! bursting bloom, erstwhile in tomb,
Where Nature's tears were shed.

Send on the song; the night was long,
But now at last 'tis o'er,
For He awakes who for our sakes
Shall live for evermore.

The life that slept God safely kept
Until the golden morn,
But with the sun death's sleep was done,
The Conqueror rose at dawn

Yet not alone, for all his own
Life-linked with him rise too;
And faith, by grace, doth claim her place,
With nothing else to do.

O blood-washed heart, come, bear thy part,
In earth's triumphant hymn!
O heaven-born child, God-reconciled,
Pour out thy praise to Him.

HOPE COTTAGE, WOODFORD GREEN.—Started eleven years ago, this Institution has received and trained from its commencement 85 children, "many of whom are now respectable, Godfearing girls, instead of miserable and degraded creatures, which they must inevitably have become but for their removal to this Home." The new report states that during the past year five of the inmates have gone forth from the Home, some into service, and one has been adopted by a lady as her own. These five vacancies have all been filled up "by poor half-starved little waifs received from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children," preference being mostly given to these "because they are generally the saddest and neediest little mortals that can anywhere be found." The total income for the year was £260, for which many and grateful acknowledgments are tendered by the lady Director, Miss Charlotte Johnson, who may be addressed to Forest Lodge, Woodford-green, Essex.

THE OPEN-AIR MISSION.

The new Open-Air Mission Male Choir lent brightness and variety to the proceedings in Exeter Hall (Lower) on Monday evening, when the thirty-ninth anniversary of the Mission was held.

Mr. Gawin Kirkham, the esteemed secretary, presented an outline of the report, which, after reference to the financial need, spoke of growth and progress in the way of new members, fresh stations, increased opportunities, and precious tokens of God's blessing on the Gospel in the open air. Various criticisms having been mentioned, a number of useful hints were given, the observance of which would greatly help in promoting efficiency. Serious attention was also called to the state of the law with regard to open-air meetings, there being no prescriptive right of meeting out of doors; but as a rule the police do not interfere, provided there be no obstruction of the thoroughfare and no disorder.

Statistics were given of the work of the past year, of the travelling work of the secretary, of the operations at races and fairs, and of the distribution of tracts and Gospel papers. The special agents, who have laboured at races and similar gatherings, have done valuable pioneer service. Details followed of village work, of open-air service in the metropolis, the provinces, Wales and Ireland, and even abroad.

Sir Arthur Blackwood, K.C.B., who presided, rejoiced, as an old open-air preacher, in the facts indicated, in the brief outline just presented, as to the work of the past year. While filled with gladness for past blessing, every member must gird his loins for fresh and vigorous service in the name of the Lord. In the way of helping such, the Chairman called attention to three words—Understand, Utterance, and Unction. The Apostle would have God's servants understand the things most surely believed. It is not foolish preaching that God blesses, but rather the foolishness of preaching. Therefore, the open-air preacher should give himself to the patient and prayerful study of the Word of God. Then having understanding, utterance must be sought, and this we are taught comes by the Spirit of God. But having these two, the successful preacher must have also unction—the unction of the Holy One, the anointing of the Holy Ghost for service. Many things may seem to fill the place of this gift, but nothing will suffice save power from on high.

Pastor Archibald G. Brown, who was warmly received, told how he began Christian service thirty years ago among navvies on Tooting-common, under the blue sky and with a wheelbarrow for his pulpit. After brief prelude, the speaker proceeded to call attention to the Apostle Paul's exhortations and commands to Timothy—each one of them worthy of being pondered and prayed over by every worker for God. The first word is, "Be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus;" and here we have the deepest need of those who would truly serve. We can never outgrow a sense of dependence. The next word is, "Endure hardness;" for those who would render real service must be ready to suffer. The day seems fast coming when the choice must be made between popularity and faithfulness. Another word is, "No man that warreth entangleth himself that he may please God." There are many things which snare and entangle the preacher and spoil the simplicity and power of the Gospel. A few stirring words followed on consideration, remembrance, study, and faithfulness.

Rev. Alfred Cave, D.D., spoke on "Preparation for Preaching," insisting on the use of plain English, on the value of warm sympathy, on the importance of clearness, terseness and point. Bible study is the chiefest of all preparations; the man who knows his Bible is always ready. He would have them keep a note-book, ever be learning and observing. The speaker took a text, and showed how he would use it in the open-air—in a snap-shot style, so that even the chance hearer might have a sharp, pointed message. In his solemn and serious closing words Dr. Cave showed that, after all, the one thing the preacher needs is power from on high.

Rev. John Edmond, D.D., added a few eloquent and genial words, expressing his sense of the value of open-air preaching as reaching those who cannot otherwise be reached with the Gospel.

YEOVIL.—Tokens of the precious fruit from the recent Mission appeared last week at a special meeting in the Y.M.C.A. rooms, when seventy professed converts assembled, and many bore testimony of blessing received by themselves or in their families.

FROM BISHOP TAYLOR.

Dear Sir,—You are no doubt acquainted with the arrest and prosecution of Brother Manuel Mellin, pastor of the Portuguese Protestant Church, an outgrowth of Dr. Kalley's labours at Madeira. After many months of suspense, he was acquitted last Monday, one week ago to-day. The charge against him was that he buried a Protestant girl, who was the ninth person he had so buried, in the public cemetery. I accompanied Mr. Smart to the court last Monday. The judge asked the prisoner to state to the court what he said when he buried the girl. He stood quite erect, and was perfectly self-possessed, and said, in a tone of voice sufficiently distinct for all the people who crowded the house to hear: "'God so loved the world, that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' Also the following words of Jesus: 'I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on Me, though he were dead, shall he live, and he that liveth and believeth in Me shall never die.' These are the words I said, and I had no idea that I was violating any law of the State, and I had no such intention."

Having to be aboard my ship by twelve o'clock I could not remain, but our ship not sailing in time, I received a note from Mr. Smart, saying, "Mellin is free. Case debated till 2.15 p.m. Praise the Lord."

Mr. Smart is doing a good work in various departments at Madeira—distributing Bibles and tracts, visiting all the ships that anchor in port, attending to his sailor boarding-house, preaching half a-dozen times per week, half of his discourses being to the Portuguese people in their own language. Mrs. Smart and her sister are equally hard at work in their schools. They have one school in a basement hall of their capacious dwelling, and are superintending four other schools in suitable centres of the Portuguese population.

I hope brother and sister Searles will succeed in establishing a similar work in variety and efficiency in Grand Canary.

My forty new Mission Stations on West Coast of Africa and in Congo and Angola are all manned. The six stations I opened in Angola are all self-supporting, and are blessed with soul-saving success. The younger ones in my other fields are pulling along, some very efficiently, others feebly. We have many discouragements, but are not at all discouraged. It is God's work, and we are, according to our perceptions of his leading, prosecuting it in his way for Africa. If we ever get the worst of the fight for the rescue of the perishing heathen, we are like the Irish leader in a certain war "who never knew when he was whipped."

Great victories often follow apparent defeats. Upon the whole, my missions in Africa were never more prosperous than at the present moment. Of about ninety missionary workers in my forty stations we lost none by death the past two years, except dear Captain Borella, a good man of sixty-six years, who came to Africa on his own account and at his own cost. He did a good work for a couple of years, and died in the Lord at Vivi last August.

We ask the prayers of the Lord's people for the increasing success of the stupendous work to which He hath called us here in Africa.—Yours in Christian love and service,

Wm. Taylor.

ROMANISM IN WIMBLEDON.—A correspondent writes to us: "The February issue of a local religious and Temperance monthly, The Pioneer (Smith and Son, Hill-road, Wimbledon), contained an article on "The Harlot Church of Rome: Her Approaching Doom Shown by God's Word." The Jesuits thereupon tried every means to induce the proprietors to retract and apologise, as well as promise not to repeat such an attack. Failing in that effort, they adopted the time-honoured method of boycotting the proprietors as tradesmen, for they are printers and stationers. An offer was made to them to reply to the writer of the article through the magazine, but this they rejected. The next step was to inundate the members of the Free Public Library Committee with letters, urging them not to allow the magazine to be placed on the reading-room table any longer. Having discussed the matter in private, the committee resolved no longer to accept The Pioneer. On the other hand, it has been decided to admit the Catholic Month. Other Romish publications are also found in the reading-room."

MISSION WORK IN KASHMIR.

The Church of England Zenana Missionary Society or Women's Medical Mission was begun at Kashmir, over three years ago, by Dr. Fanny Butler. She started in a native house in the city, going daily to her work and returning in the evening. Her surroundings were the reverse of sanitary, but they were homely for the women, and the result was, first, a large attendance of patients, and, secondly, the illness of one of the medical assistants with typhoid fever, and, in all probability also, in her then delicate state of health, the shortening of Dr. Butler's own life.

In these unsuitable quarters Mrs. Bishop found the work being carried on, and very kindly gave five hundred pounds for the erection of better premises; but Dr. Butler died three days only after the foundation-stone was laid. After six months' interregnum, the work was superintended for nearly a year by Dr. Jane Haskew, of the I.F.N.S.; and when I took charge in March of last year, I found the John Bishop Memorial Hospital as near completion as funds would allow of—i.e., the out-patient building was finished, and one block of the in-patients' building capable of being used, while the dwelling-house was ready for occupation a month later.

Thus the work was carried on under more favourable conditions for the workers. But two mistakes had, nevertheless, been made in the selection of the site—viz., it was too near the European Bachelors' Camping-ground, and also liable to inundation. The consequence of the former error was, that the numbers of women applying for treatment fell off, especially those of the more respectable, and, therefore, more secluded class, whom it is most important that we should reach; and the consequence of the latter error was the invasion of our premises last July by a flood which ousted us from home and hospital, utterly demolished our dispensary building, and so damaged the hospital and dwelling-house that engineering authority has pronounced re-erection necessary.

Since we must rebuild, it will cost little, if any, more to rebuild on a more suitable site. By the kindness of the Maharajah's Government, we have obtained the loan of some commodious native premises in the city for temporary use; and also the grant of a new site, with an adaptable building on it, for the erection of permanent premises. We have made efforts on the spot, relying on our Society and friends of mission work at home to supply the "sinews of war."

Our living in the city, among the people for whom we labour, is already beginning to be appreciated, and we hope it will, in due time, give us the influence among them, which we so earnestly desire. But the Kashmiris are a suspicious folk, and the really secluded women are very timid and superstitious, and have been scarcely touched as yet. At present the enterprise is waiting for money to build with. £10,000 would float us into smooth water.—Yours faithfully,

Edith A. Huntley, M.D.,
Superintendent C. E. Z. Medical Mission, Kashmir.

Earthquake in Japan.

Details of the recent earthquake in Japan have just reached me. Thousands are suffering through their having lost their homes and means, as well as their relatives, whose mangled bodies have been dug out of the debris, while the remains of others have had to be left where the devastating death-king has buried them.

In addition to this, thousands are the inmates of hospitals specially improvised for their benefit. Such are maimed, halt, and, in some instances, imbeciled. Now that the heat of summer is approaching, the slowly decomposing human bodies are becoming more offensive, and likely to breed disease and fever, which may prove as destructive to life as the earthquake itself. The Japanese Government, as well as native and foreign merchants, including the missionaries, have contributed largely to the alleviation of this paralysing condition of so large a proportion of our fellow-creatures. A Japanese Christian doctor writes: "If you can send us money we shall be most happy to receive it, and use it for hospital work in the earthquake district."—R. Saiki (Dr.), Kiyoto, Japan.

I need not add that I cannot, to any great extent, help them except by my prayers. But among the readers of your paper there are those who have not only a God-given vein of benevolence, but the gold and the silver, as well as the grace to recognise the opportunity afforded by this pressing appeal.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, APRIL 17.—REVELATION XX.

1-3. The Binding of Satan.—The beast and false prophet being destroyed, Satan is bound. 2. Old as the beginning (1 John iii. 8). During this blessed period, called the Millennium, which is the Latin for 1000 years, Satan will be no longer able to exert his malign influence over men, Christ and his saints occupying the position which formerly belonged to the devil and his angels, and thus, though all men will not be regenerated (v. 8), yet the prevailing influence in the world will be on the side of righteousness. Then will be fulfilled the rapturous visions of the prophets. Then the golden age shall dawn (Isa. xxxv.).

4-6. The judgment which the saints are to exercise is the subject of many passages of Scripture. They will have already stood before the Judgment Seat of Christ, and had their positions of authority assigned them, and these they will exercise (Luke xix. 17; Rev. v. 10). 5. The Resurrection of the Just (Luke xiv. 14) takes place at the coming of the Lord for the Church, before the Millennium; the second resurrection takes place at the end of that period, and just before the great white throne (v. 12). As we consider the glorious privileges, which depend on present faithfulness, how earnestly should we seek after entire freedom from all that would imperil our future. 6. Holiness is blessedness: and the saints will be for ever beyond the dark shadow of death, passing among men as their priests, ruling over them as kings. But each of these titles indicates service.

7-10. The Last Great Conflict.—Gog and Magog take us back to Gen. x. 2; see also Ezek. xxxviii. and xxix. It would appear that this great confederacy of the northern nations against the beloved city, Jerusalem, will be led by Satan, and overwhelmed by the direct judgments of God. 10. The lake of fire and brimstone reminds us of what the valley of the Dead Sea must have appeared when Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed. "For ever and ever," lit., to the ages of the ages.

11-15. Great, because all other thrones are subordinate to it. White, because of the immaculate purity of the judge. The Judge, none other than the Son (John v. 22). 12. All the human family will be there, save those who shall have been included in the Church of the Firstborn. The books of conscience (Rom. ii. 15, 16), of God's Word (John xii. 48), of memory. "The book of Life" is a constant subject for Scriptural comment (Ex. xxxii. 32; Ps. lxix. 28; Dan. xii. 1; Phil. iv. 3; ch. xxi. 27). 13. Death and Hades give up the dead, this is the general resurrection. What a marvellous congregation that will be! The whole family of man assembled to hear the awards which are to affect eternal destinies! 14. Death and Hades here personified shall be themselves destroyed.

MONDAY, APRIL 18.—REVELATION XXI.

1-8. The New Heaven and Earth.—Fire is yet to purge our earth, from which it will come forth fair as on the morning of Creation. The sea is used as the emblem of unrest and separation and untamed lawless power. 2. The New Jerusalem is the antitype, the Divine ideal of what the earthly city should have been. We shall never be able to realise God's perfect pattern till it comes down. 3. What was given in type to Israel shall be the perpetual blessedness of the saints (Ex. xxv. 8). They shall be his people, i.e., the nations of the saved. 4. "Every tear" (R.V.). Notice how that blessed state is described in negatives. But what the positive side of its bliss will be no tongue can tell. 5. A new world, new Jerusalem, new conditions of existence for those whose hearts have been made new and holy. These things exist only as Divine pledges, but they are as certain as if already fulfilled. 6. "The Alpha and the Omega" (R.V.). Let Him be first and last with all our speech and life. If He creates a thirst, He pledges Himself to its quenching. "Freely," i.e., gratuitously. We shall always be pensioners on the undeserved grace and love of God. 8. Note that the fearful, i.e., the cowardly, those who draw back, are classed with those who drank of the cup of the harlot's abominations.

9-27. The New Jerusalem.—The angel who showed Babylon shows its great contrast (xvii. 1-5). If Babylon was comparable to a faithless wife, here we have a city devoted to the Lamb, its husband. 9. Bathed and robed in light. Jasper specially represents crystalline brightness. Its wall for security. 13. The tribes of Israel and the Apostles of Jesus show that all dispensations mingle there. 15. Since all is measured, all is reckoned in the Divine care to be safeguarded and filled. 16. Its perfect symmetry and beauty. There were one thousand furlongs between the several gates. Each side of the city would be about four hundred miles. 17. The wall more than two hundred feet high. 18. The very gold shall be ideal in transparency. 19. What a contrast to xviii. 12! Chalcedony, sky-blue; sardius, cornelian; beryl, sea-green. 22. All the place is a temple, every act worship, no veil on the perfect vision. As so often, notice the conjunction of the Almighty and the Lamb. Life spent in fellowship with God is worship. 23. "The lamp thereof is the Lamb," R.V. (John viii. 12). 24. "And the nations shall walk amidst the light thereof." (Compare Isa. lx. 3-11.) This exquisite description of the New Jerusalem is surely the setting forth of spiritual realities under a material guise, for how else could they be made living, bright realities. Whatever outward glories there may be perceptible to the sense, they shall wax dim as compared with the spiritual essence, the worship, the communings, the holy service, the rapturous vision of God.

TUESDAY, APRIL 19.—REVELATION XXII.

1-5. The River and Tree of Life.—The realties of which Eden possessed only the shadows and types are here in full glory. "Bright as crystal" (R.V.). Does not this river represent the flow of the Divine Spirit, who makes glad the city of God, and makes the wilderness sing? 2. The R.V. joins "in the midst of the street thereof" to the end of the first verse. Not one tree, but many. The tree of life is surely an emblem of our Saviour, whose fruits nourish us in every experience, and whose healing touch is for all wounds and sorrows. 3. Till then all creation groans and travails under the curse, but it shall be delivered at the manifestation of the sons of God. 4. This is the Heaven of Heaven; service, vision, likeness. 5. The Lord shall be our everlasting light, and the days of our mourning shall be ended. The reign not limited as in the millennium, but for ever and ever.

6-9. These Words.—See also xix. 9; xxi. 5. The Word of God, and especially this book, is our chart, so that we may be able to anticipate our route. 7. This special benediction to those who love this book opens and closes it (i. 3). 9. It is very beautiful to think of angels as our fellow servants.

10-21. Closing Appeals.—Not as Daniel, whose prophecies were to be long in accomplishment; these are not sealed because their fulfilment was at hand. 11. "Unrighteous" (R.V.). Filthy, as opposed to God's purity. "Still," yet more (R.V. marg.). The punishment of sin is sin. It is a fall down into the bottomless pit, the speed ever accelerating. 12. The reward of the King to his faithful servants. 13. This third mention of Himself as Alpha and Omega shows how much significance there is in the statement. He is the alphabet of being. 14. Note the alteration of R.V. in this last beatitude from the lips of Jesus, "Blessed are they that wash their robes, that," &c. Our access to the tree of life is a right, founded, not on our works, but on his precious blood. 16. These things were entrusted to the seven angels and seven churches for the whole Church. David sprang from Him as God, he from David as man. The morning star is the harbinger of morning-dawn; but the glory of that day never wanes or sets. 17. This is the appeal of the Spirit in the Church, and of the Church as well as of the individual believer, that He would hasten his coming. As Christ says, I come quickly; can we answer, Come? Even if a man does not thirst, yet if willing, he may take. 18. As a blessing had been pronounced on those who love and keep this book, so there is a curse on those who reject and mutilate it. 20. Christ's last assurance is met by the simple, solemn cry of the Church, of Creation, and of the Spirit, Amen, come, Lord Jesus. And till He come, may his grace rest on those who have read, and those who have written these notes, and on the one Church.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20.—GENESIS I.

This chapter is full of God. Though it is but the vestibule of the Palace of Scripture, it is as full of the manifest presence of God as was the most Holy place in Solomon's temple when it was filled with the Shechinah glory. And as you pass down its corridors into the dim past you find that each age was as full of God as that in which He said, Let us make man. Go back to the beginning, God is there; penetrate the darkness brooding over the deep, his Spirit is there; ascend to the heavens, they are the curtains of his tent; search the earth, there is no herb or plant, or grass-blade or fruit-tree, which emerges into being apart from his thought, his hand, his creativeness; sweep from world to world, and you find Him making the stars; or watch the sea monsters in their boisterous play, and He is there to bless; and so to the moment when there seems a pause in the story, and the Godhead moulds red earth after the pattern of the Man Christ Jesus. Canst thou wonder at its being very good? It could not have been otherwise with God for workman. And if thou desirest that the new creation of thine heart should be as fair, thou, too, must be full of God, the work of his hand, constantly yielding to his touch, his workmanship created unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.

THURSDAY, APRIL 21.—GENESIS II.

The coming events cast their shadows before into the events narrated in this chapter. Here in miniature we behold those stupendous scenes which fill the Gospels. He who formed man became man at Bethlehem. He who planted the Garden of Eden is at work making a garden out of the moral and actual wastes of the world: He who entrusted man with the supremacy of the brute creation has won for Himself that same control, and exercised it over the fish that teemed in the waters of Galilee: He who enwrapt Adam in the deep sleep, Himself fell, as to his body, into a deep sleep of death, in which they bore him from the cross to the couch of the garden-sepulchre; He who out of Adam's sleep brought him Eve, yearning for love, in his death obtained his Bride, the Church, whom He loves as Himself, to whom He cleaves, and who is to be associated with Him as his helpmeet in the reign of glory that is yet to be. Oh, my soul, what bliss is thine to be loved and cherished thus, and what a destiny is to be thine when the marriage of the Lamb shall be come, and thou shalt be presented to Him without spot or wrinkle or any such thing!

FRIDAY, APRIL 22.—GENESIS III.

So far as appearances go, this is the ruin of God's handiwork. For vast periods He had been working up to the creation of man, the capstone of the edifice of creation. But here, by one fell act, the great enemy seems to have shattered the Divine ideal. And through that one sinful act all the children of the human family, and we amongst them, must inherit evil tendencies, which will blossom into evil act and life; death has entered into the world; a shadow is flung athwart the fair Paradise of God; and man is driven from the tree of life and the garden, in the midst of which it stood. Ah, hapless heritage! But wait! O, soul, stand still and wonder! Out of this wreck a ladder is to be reared, of which the top shall lead to Heaven, and thus thou mayest climb to a loftier destiny than Adam ever touched. There is a second Man, the Lord from Heaven, who shall do more than retrieve the ruin of the first. He will put away sin and abolish death, and undo the spell of the curse; create new heavens and earth; and give thee right to the Tree of Life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God. Trust Him, and be one with Him, and wash thy robes in his blood, and share his redemption and reign.

SATURDAY, APRIL 23.—GENESIS IV.

Here is the genesis of "the world." From the moment that the arch-enemy got man into his power, his one aim was to keep him fast by the fascinating meshes of the subtle world. The world is the sum of all that appeals to the sense and taste of man, apart from the love and life of God. It is here in miniature. Its religion of fruit and flowers, raised by human ingenuity and care; its bitter jealousy, selfishness, hatred and murder; its alienation from the presence of God; its love of city-building; its pursuit of music, art, science, and all manner of delights; its secret dread of vengeance; its martyrdom of the saints,—all this is true of it still. Beware of it. Walk not according to its course. Resist its bewitchments. Quit its cities for the tent-life of the pilgrim-host, who overcome the world though they are slain by it, like Him—who, on the eve of his death, announced that He had overcome that by which he was to be slain, and bade us be of good cheer. Even little children may overcome, if they will let Him in, who is the Overcomer.

LARK-LANE MISSION HALL, LIVERPOOL, exists for the purpose of proclaiming the Gospel to all, but especially to the children. The report for last year shows that much blessing has followed the efforts put forth. One girl writes: "The Gospel Mission has helped me to keep from sin, and made me quite a different girl and an obedient one, so as to think of my mother and help her all I can." A larger hall is in contemplation, to cost £600. Mr. E. H. Maddock is the hon. supt. A situation bureau has been instituted.

RYDE Y.W.C.A. AND CHRISTIAN HOME.—The Committee state, in their new report, that the thirteenth year has been the crowning one of their experience both temporally and spiritually. Many interesting letters from young women who have passed their holidays at Garfield House, tell of the happy time they spent there, and of the blessings they received. The engagements of the evenings of the week, comprise Bible-class, French-class, social evening, Bible reading, educational-class, and working party. Two of the valued helpers have left for mission work in the foreign field. The institution is open to all respectable young women from every part of the Kingdom, and applications for admission may be made to the Lady Superintendent.

UNITED PRAYER ANSWERED.—Writing as to the value of united prayer for revival and for blessing on Christian work, a friend gives the following fact:—Last autumn I came back from my holiday, resolved to ask the members of my men's Bible-class to pray with me that our numbers might be doubled. We agreed thus to pray, and at first had our faith tried. Fifteen were present out of twenty-three members; but the next Sunday only eleven came, the following Lord's day nine, and then the numbers dwindled to six. An old blind man became too feeble to attend; two left to go elsewhere; two went off to sea. But God was faithful to his promise, "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my father which is in heaven," and we began to add steadily to our numbers, till now two new members have raised us to the exact double we resolved to ask.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 24.

The Lord my Shepherd.—Psalm xxiii.

Golden Text: Verse 1.

Psalm xxii. is the Psalm of the Cross, in which Christ appears as the Good Shepherd giving his life for the sheep (Jno. x. 11); Psalm xxiii. is the Psalm of Resurrection, in which Christ is the Great Shepherd caring for the sheep (Heb. xiii. 20-21); and Psalm xxiv. is the Psalm of the Ascension, in which Christ is the Chief Shepherd, who will yet appear to reward his servants (1 Pet. v. 4). The three are connected: we begin at the cross, where sin is atoned for; being saved, we belong to Him, and become his care; and He shepherds us, not for our own sake only, but that we may be servants for Him to others.

This is one of the most beautiful and helpful Psalms David ever wrote. It has been called "the nightingale of the Psalms. It is small, of a homely feather, singing shyly out of obscurity; but oh! it has filled the air of the whole world with melodious joy, greater than the heart can conceive." The language is so sublimely simple, the shepherd image is so homely and so well understood, that exposition and comment are difficult. To emphasize what the Psalm says, is better than to say anything about it

1. The Lord. Can the sheep lack anything for whom He cares? Every quality a shepherd requires is possessed in fullest perfection by Him. His ascension (Psa. xxiv.) proves Him all-powerful (Matt. xxviii. 18); his sufferings (Psa. xxii.) prove that He has the will He could die sooner than lose those whom He loves. David had hazarded his life for the sake of one of his flock (1 Sam. xvii. 34-36), the Lord would not do less for him. Shepherd—the metaphor is frequently used. As a shepherd He had led forth his people (Psa. lxxvii. 20); and even in heaven He does not cease to be as a shepherd to the redeemed (Rev. vii. 17). To own Him as Shepherd is to confess ourselves his sheep, weak, defenceless, foolish, and prone to stray. What creature could be more dependent? Are we his sheep? See the three marks by which the sheep are known (Jno. x. 4, 27). My Shepherd is much more than a shepherd. In caring for the flock He can care for each one individually. A Sunday-school teacher called to see one of his scholars and found the boy dead. His mother explained to the teacher that before her boy died he had counted from the thumb to the last finger but one, and had rested on that with evident satisfaction. The teacher understood it. Not long before he had given a lesson on this first verse, making the five fingers stand for the five words, urging each one to be able to say the fourth word "my." The scholar could not do it at the time, but before his death, when speech had become impossible, he had said it by that sign. Can all say it now? Not want—the language is full of confidence, not for the present only, but for all the future (Psa. xxxiv. 9, 10). To an old Christian, who was very poor, a neighbour said, "You must be badly off, yet you are always cheerful." "Oh, no!" he replied, "we are not badly off; I have a rich Father, and He does not suffer me to want." "What! Your father not dead yet? He must be very old." "Oh," said he, "my Father never dies, and He always takes care of me."

2, 3.—Note how everything is done for the sheep by the Shepherd. He maketh, &c. Good pasturage and quiet rest are secured to all his sheep. The green pastures are found in the Word of God, the still waters are the gracious influences of the Holy Spirit, who acts through the Word. If any are not enjoying this quiet refreshment, it is because they are not following the lead of the Shepherd.

4. By the bedside of a suffering girl, who seemed to be very near to death, I repeated quietly the first three verses of this Psalm. A bright smile lighted up her face as she took up the fourth verse, adding the words, "For Thou, O my blessed Jesus! art with me." Death for the believer has lost its sting, only the shadow of it remains. Who fears the shadow of even the most terrible monster? Walk through—not sit in it (Luke i. 79). It is not a place of abode, but a way along which we pass to the glory beyond. Fear no evil. (See Heb. ii. 14-15.) If Death's Conqueror is by our side, we need not fear his vanquished foe. The rod does not refer to affliction. It was used by the owner in counting the sheep. To "pass under the rod" means to be counted as one of his The staff was used by the Shepherd in defence of his sheep. Never is it more needed than in the dark valley.

5. The man who can say "my Shepherd" will also have to speak of "mine enemies." With what calm confidence the mention of the enemies is introduced. So far from disturbing the joyousness of the song, it only becomes an occasion for magnifying richer grace. The feast is prepared as quietly as though the enemies were not there, and just as quietly does the man of God partake.

6. Surely or only. Nothing else but goodness and mercy. The Lord leads while they, like two angels, follow, or "run after" us. All the days—the whole number of them, and the whole variety of them. In dark days or days of sunshine these two shall still attend us. And I will dwell, &c. This is where the leading end—"for ever with the Lord" (1 Thess. iv. 17; Jno. xiv. 1-3).

Personalia.

Rev. Dr. Stalker, of Glasgow, is to receive a call to Marylebone Presbyterian Church.

The Bishop of Winchester is, we are glad to hear, recovering strength, having resumed his duties.

The Earl of Stamford, one of the recently-appointed lay preachers, has been addressing large congregations in Christ Church, Endell-street, St. Giles.

Rev. John Edmond, D.D., will, we hear, resign at the meeting of Synod, his post as Convener of the Jewish Committee, a step taken on account of advancing age.

Rev. Andrew Mearns, having been unanimously and heartily re-elected secretary of the London Congregational Union, has consented to serve again.

Mr. R. F. Horton, has consented to deliver the Lyman Beecher Lecture on Preaching at Yale University next April, in succession to Dr. Dale, Dr. Stalker, and other pulpit leaders of both continents.

Rev. Charles W. Stubbs, the well-known rector of Wavertree, Liverpool, who has been in a very indifferent state of health for some time past, is now much better, and hopes to resume his duties at his own church this week.

Rev. Burman Cassin, rector of St. George-the-Martyr, Southwark, S.E., has, we regret to hear, been dangerously ill, through weakness resulting from congestion and hæmorrhage of the lungs. He was unconscious during the greater part of last week.

Rev. D. Burford Hooke, acting secretary of the Congregational Union, has broken down in health, and for the present has cancelled his engagements. He is suffering from congestion of the lungs, and though no immediate danger is feared, absolute rest is required.

Dr. G. F. Pentecost has been invited to fill the late Dr. Donald Fraser's pulpit at Marylebone for four Sabbaths, beginning April 17th, on his way home to America. He expects to sail about June 1st. Probably Dr. Pentecost will conduct a short mission there of ten days or two weeks.

Mr. Richard Cadbury has set a noble example in handing over to the Mayor of Birmingham his late residence, Moseley Hall, which he has partially endowed as a convalescent home for children. The institution has accommodation for 150 beds, and, with the donor's endowment, is estimated to be worth £30,000.

Mrs. Jerry McAuley, widow of Jerry McAuley, has resigned the superintendence of the McAuley Cremorne Mission, New York. She is to be succeeded in this work by Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ballou, who for five years past have been in charge of the Third-avenue Mission of the Madison-square Presbyterian Church.

House of Rest for Christian Workers.

The readers of The Christian who have so frequently taken an interest in this work will be glad to know that the new premises in St. John's Wood have proved in every way suitable. A much larger number of the Lord's labourers have been admitted during the past year than could have been received in the house previously occupied in Kilburn. The total number of admissions for the two houses, in London and Eastbourne, is 801. The debt on the premises was reduced at the end of last year to £500. Since then the lady who gave the first £1000 has kindly given £100, and another friend has promised the last £100 of this sum, so that only £300 is now required to set the property, which is freehold, entirely free of debt. Charlotte Mason.

House of Rest, 10, Finchley-road, St. John's Wood, N.W.

SEAMEN'S CHRISTIAN FRIEND SOCIETY.—An excellent muster of the Christian Harbour Lights took place on Thursday in the Seamen's Chapel, Ratcliff-highway. Rev. G. J. Hill referred to the many happy meetings held in the old chapel, now about to be demolished that a new and more commodious building might be erected. Miss Messer, Mr. Young, Mr. Hill, and others, gave addresses, followed by testimonies from seamen of the preserving power of Jesus Christ from temptation. Several anxious sailors were dealt with by the missionaries, and a number signed the pledge.

THE LATE DR. CHRISTLIEB'S TRAINING SCHOOL.—The Berlin correspondent of Evangelical Christendom writes:—"It has now definitely been decided to remove the Johanneum, the institution for training evangelists, founded by the late Professor Christlieb, from Bonn to Barmen. After the death of the founder and of Professor Fabri, the institution had few friends at Bonn. The pastors of the small Protestant congregation there have rather clerical tendencies, and wish to do the work alone. The population is chiefly Roman Catholic. There was little room for introducing the young men into practical work. In Barmen they are in the midst of a living evangelical congregation, and the working-classes of the great manufacturing city offer ample opportunity for practical efforts."

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. Richard Weaver is preaching during April at Miss Robinson's Soldiers' Institute, Portsmouth.

Lynmouth.—Mr. Veasey has conducted a special mission here, and much spiritual good has been done.

Mr. George Robert Cairns comes to England in May, and will work in this country and Ireland for eighteen months.

Dorchester.—In connection with the Y.M.C.A. a special evangelistic mission has been held here, attended with tokens of blessing.

Hunslet.—A successful evangelistic mission has been conducted here by Rev. F. J. Greening, and the results have been most satisfactory.

Lymington.—A special mission has lately been held here by Mr. C. W. Holmes. The mission has been much appreciated, and attended with blessing.

Torrington.—A fruitful Mission has been held here by Mr. Kelshaw, and the results are most gratifying, many having received spiritual blessing.

Rochester.—An evangelistic mission lately conducted at the Vines Congregational Church and the Baptist Church, by Rev. W. Fuller Gooch, has been the means of awakening many to seek salvation.

Mr. William Forbes has been giving Gospel and Temperance addresses at Blackheath, Lambeth, Marylebone, and Southsea. On Wednesday last he spoke at Miss Weston's Sailor's Rest, Portsmouth, to a large audience.

Rev. R. Balgarnie has held a seven days' mission at Farnworth, in connection with the Sunday-school anniversary; there had been much earnest preparation for these special services, which have been attended with cheering results.

Mr. Bewley Weaver, third son of the veteran Richard Weaver, has been greatly blessed in connection with the Gospel Mission at Hanley, Staffordshire. He has got together a large number of young men, among whom the Lord is working wonderfully.

Ireland.—A ten days' successful Mission has just been held in the St. Patrick's Church, Waterford, by Rev. Hugh Falloon; a similar Mission for men has been held in the Gregg Memorial Hall, Dublin, by Canon Robinson; and at Westbourne Presbyterian Church, Belfast, by Mr. W. Thompson.

Mr. John Elliott, of the Evangelisation Society, has just concluded a mission at Coate, Devizes. The meetings have been well attended and greatly blessed, many having been led to Christ. Mr. Elliott, whose services have been much appreciated in Wilts, now goes to Devonshire to work in connection with the Y.M.C.A. in that county. Many prayers will follow him that the Lord may use him greatly.

Rev. E. Payson Hammond has been holding evangelistic meetings in New Haven, Conn. The Lord blessed his labours, and many persons professed Christ. On March 14 he addressed a ministers' meeting on "The Conversion of Children," stating that personal interest in the young was necessary in order to have any considerable effect on them. Some of the theological students take an active part in the inquiry meetings, and great enthusiasm prevails.

Mr. Charles Inglis.—For eighteen years consecutively Mr. Inglis has held meetings in connection with the Tower Hamlets Mission. His month is generally January, but owing to absence in America he was unable this year to come till March. During that month his work was greatly blessed at the Great Assembly Hall, so much so that had not the next month been filled up he would have stayed on and completed his second. However, it is hoped that he will be able to give July, when he will be very heartily welcomed back by many who have only recently been brought to Christ through his preaching.

Mr. C. R. Hurditch writes:—"God gives us much cause for praise in blessing with his Gospel preached in the halls, which is cheering in these days of rebuke and blasphemy. He is reviving his work, and candidly I believe that, would the stewards of the piled-up gold and silver send us more supplies, blessing might be duplicated and triplicated in our near districts, for which we sadly need plain halls. At Malden Hall quarterly meeting, 507 were reported in fellowship (mostly converted there), and all happy, united, and earnest in a multiplicity of good works. Why should not this be repeated in Brondesbury, where my hands are tied for want of means to 'go forward'? Pray about it with us."

LADY HENRY SOMERSET had made voluminous notes of her journey through the States, and of the various inquiries she has instituted. These she kept in a handbag, together with her back-book and cheque-book. Passing through New York on her way to New England she lost the bag, and efforts made to recover it had proved fruitless.

CHRISTIAN COMMERCIALS.—The work of the Commercial Travellers' Christian Association continues to be pushed forward vigorously, the membership having increased since the beginning of the year from 1320 to 1450, while branches have been formed for devotional gatherings in Dublin, Belfast, Leeds, Bristol, Southsea, Leicester, &c. There is at present need for help in this good work. The Secretary is Mr. Leonard Courtney, 135, Aldersgate-street, E.C

Letters to the Editor.

"A QUESTION OF CONSCIENCE."

Sir,—Of course your correspondent "Inquirer" could not invest in railway, omnibus, tram companies, nor breweries, but money may be placed on deposit in many building societies, with absolute security, at four per cent.—Yours respectfully, Conscience.

Dear Sir,—I have for some time been waiting upon the Lord for light and guidance in regard to holding money invested in railway companies. Besides running trains on Sabbath-days, there is the fact that they have licensed restaurants at many of their stations. I do not know whether these are directly under the company's management or not, but the responsibility of their existence, I suppose, lies with the company in any case. In this way a strong temptation is put in the way of many—stronger no doubt to many than ordinary public-houses. Are shareholders not thus implicated indirectly with a trade of which every Christian ought to have his hands clean?—Yours truly, S.

Edinburgh.

Sir,—Is there not a still more important question of conscience involved in Christians investing in the shares of public companies, and in railway stocks, than that which has already been before your readers? With such Scriptures before him as 2 Cor. vi. 14, Eph. v. 7-11, and many others, a friend of mine is unable to become a shareholder in a public company of any sort, seeing that he would thereby have to join affinity, and be in partnership with ungodly people.

He also considers it contrary to the mind of God to join a company registered under the Limited Liability Act, even if all the shareholders be Christians, as we are told to owe no man anything, and therefore as Christians we have no right to limit our liability for the payment of our debts.

Perhaps some of your readers may be able to show from the Word that he is wrong.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully, Jehoshaphat.

"THE ACCUSER CAST OUT."

Sir,—It is evident that my aged and esteemed friend and brother, Mr. Nelson, has not apprehended the argument or the purpose of my papers on "The Accuser Cast Out." Consequently I must ask him to bear with me in saying that the "oversights" are not on my part.

I do not question that God "found in his own mind sufficient reason for pardoning the guilt of his [Old Testament] worshipper." But the locus standi of Satan as an accuser of the Old Testament saints before God was derived from the fact that no atonement had actually been made; and that when Jesus entered heaven by virtue of his own blood, having put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, there was no more place for an accuser, because the righteousness of God in passing over the sins of the past was now made manifest.

Mr. Nelson says, "The iniquity of that land is not removed; it is still defiled by the blood of their murdered Monarch. Israel is still in consequence driven out. Neither is the world absolved from its iniquity." Of course, as to actual accomplishment, this is true; but John Baptist said, "Behold the Lamb of God, that beareth away the sin of the world." The "one day" of Zech. iii. 9 is connected, as I have connected it, with the day of Calvary, by not a few commentators, of whom I quote the following:—

Scott—"On that 'one day' on which Christ was crucified for his people, a complete atonement was made for all their sins."

Keil—"One day—once for all, in the sense in which the word occurs in Heb. vii. 27; ix. 2; x. 10."

Pusey—"On one day that removal should be, which needed no renewal. A Jewish writer (Rashi) confessed the mystery, while he said, 'One day; I know not what that day is.' Ask any Christian child, 'On what day was iniquity removed, not from the land only, but from all lands?' he would say, 'On the day when Jesus died.'"

Fausset—"The remission of sin is the fountain of every other blessing. The 'one day' of its removal is primarily the day of national atonement, celebrated after the completion of the Temple (Lev. xxiii. 27) on the tenth day of the seventh month. Antitypically, the atonement by Messiah once for all ['one day'] offered, needing no repetition like the Mosaic sacrifices (Heb. x. 10, 12, 14)."

The assertion that Satan is cast out of heaven not only "runs through the paper," but the sole reason why the papers were written was to prove that out of heaven itself, the presence of God (Heb. ix. 24), the accuser has been cast. And the reasons given from Old Testament and New Testament Scripture have not been touched, except Luke x. 18, which was by no means the passage upon which my argument was based.

That the accuser is in "the upper heavens" is a very different thing from his being in heaven itself, "accusing before God, day and night, justified saints who have been crucified with Christ, who "is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Whether Satan be now in the upper heavens, or the heavenly places, or the air, or the earth, does not touch the fact that he has been cast out of the place where he accused the saints until the Justifier sat down on the right hand of God.

"To accuse does not compel a judge to condemn." True, but John v. 24 teaches that believers shall not come into judgment. They have nothing to do, and never will have anything to do, with God as a Judge. The only tribunal before which they will appear is the judgment seat of Christ.

Granted that in Rev. xii. the casting out of Satan is consequent upon a tremendous battle, can my brother show that that battle has not been fought?

My conviction is that if the great adversary is day and night laying accusations against me before God, I have no valid assurance of my justification. I have shown that the Old Testament saints were subject to these accusations, because no expiation had been made for their sins, but that when expiation had been made, and God had raised again the Atoner on account of our justification, there can be no more accusation laid against me before the Judge.

THE OPIUM QUESTION AND THE SOCIETY OF ARTS.

Sir,—A very crowded meeting was held at the Society of Arts on Thursday, March 24, when a paper on "The Opium Question" was read by Mr. G. Batten, late of the Bengal Civil Service, with Sir John Strachey, K.C.S.I., formerly Lieutenant-Governor of the North-west Provinces in the chair. The reading of this paper was preceded by a remarkable article on the subject in The Times of March 21, of two and a-half columns, the main object of which seemed to be to show that, apart from the question of economic revenue, "the legitimate use of opium in India is determined by two sets of causes by geographical or climatic necessities, and by needs arising out of the prohibitions of religions, or the temperament of races." In other words, the issues were limited to purely medical and moral lines.

The latter we can surely dismiss with the remark, that, if there is any force left in the precept to "do to others as we would be done by," the obligation devolving on a professedly Christian nation, to supply its subjects with an inducement to self-indulgence in lieu of another prohibited by their religious enactments, or to minister to a temperament, alas! already admittedly sensual, by means of a drug (whatever may be said to the contrary) largely taken for sensual purposes—is as baseless as it is immoral.

The medical aspect of the question, however, is one which must be carefully and scientifically discussed. For, if it can be satisfactorily proved that "the general and moderate use of opium," under any conditions, imparts to the poor cultivator of India, what the writer in The Times describes as "an unconscious safeguard," against the endemic diseases of any locality, by far the chief of which is fever (I purposely do not limit the locality to the population of Deltaic tracts of land) then the Opium Question must be discussed apart from all considerations other than those which will enable the peoples of India to resist most successfully that disease (fevers of varied types) which annually carries off numbers out of all proportion to all other diseases put together. For instance, in a population of forty-four millions in the North-west Provinces and Oudh, the deaths from fevers in 1886 numbered 1,216,618, while those from all other causes were only 250,995. This, therefore, is the point round which the battle must now rage, as the withdrawal of the drug, said to produce this "unconscious safeguard," is, by the writer in The Times, declared to be "morally indefensible."

Opium, therefore, must be viewed and treated either as a necessity for health or a luxury for wealth, and perhaps there never was a better opportunity—outside a purely professional arena, such as that in which I led the discussion at the meeting of the British Medical Association at Bournemouth last year—than was presented at the Society of Arts last Thursday. There were medical men in that splendid hall capable, from the greatest and most varied experience, of discussing the subject to the full; and there were civil administrators in sufficient numbers to witness the combat and test the result, but, clearly quite unexpectedly to all, this crucial point of the question was never even touched upon in the discussion, if we except a few remarks from Sir Lepel Griffin, the weight of which, however, was not likely to be increased by the terms in which they were delivered.

I must, however, in justice to Sir George Birdwood, state, that owing to the impossibility of giving the numerous applicants to speak an opportunity of being heard, he most generously, on behalf of the Society, undertook to record in the pages of the Society's journal, the remarks of those who would have spoken had there been time. We must, therefore, wait till the journal appears, to read the views of those present. In the meantime, I feel that all must admit the difficulty which the Chairman undoubtedly experienced in limiting the time of the speakers; but, as said before, Sir George Birdwood has done his best to supply any deficiency which might have been complained of from this cause.

The Book World.

Prince Edward is the title of a capital memorial sketch by Rev. Charles Bullock, B.D. There are portraits of the late Duke of Clarence and Princess May, also of the other members of the Royal House. Poems and incidents make up a very attractive booklet. (1s. Home Words Office.)

Herbert Fry's Royal Guide to the London Charities is a very useful book of reference. The twenty-eighth annual edition, just issued, edited by John Lane, shows in alphabetical order the name, date of foundation, address, objects, income, officials, &c., of a very large number of benevolent agencies. Christian workers and philanthropists will find in this manual answers to a thousand questions as to what is being done for God and humanity, not only in London but throughout the world. (1s. 6d. Chatto and Windus.)

The Fourth Gospel. Evidences External and Internal of its Johannean Authorship. By Ezra Abbot, D.D., Andrew P. Peabody, D.D., and J. B. Lightfoot, D.D. (7s. 6d. Hodder and Stoughton.) Dr. Abbot deals with external evidences of the authorship, and Dr. Lightfoot with internal evidence for the authenticity and genuineness. Each is thorough and learned, and the two constitute an unanswerable argument. Dr. Peabody's brief study on internal tokens of authorship links together valuable essays which well deserve preservation in volume form.

The Works of Thomas Cooper. Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton have issued cheap editions (1s. 6d. each) of some of Thomas Cooper's most useful works, including—The Bridge of History over the Gulf of Time, a popular view of the historical evidence for the truth of Christianity; God, the Soul, and a Future State; The Verity and Value of the Miracles of Christ; and Evolution, The Stone Book and the Mosaic Record of Creation. All these books have gone through several editions, and still deserve the attention of students and those who contend for the faith against such as labour under delusions arising from sceptical perversity or intellectual pride.

The Redemption of the Body, an examination of Romans viii. 18-23, by W. Fitzhugh Whitehouse, M.A., is scholarly and suggestive. Its author maintains that "the creature" is "man as a creature," and "the redemption of the body" answers to "the resurrection of the body," the Apostle's argument being directed to showing that the sufferings which Christians are now called upon to endure are quite insignificant when contrasted with the triumph of glory at the appearing of Christ which awaits those who overcome. Careful students of Scripture will enjoy this examination of a portion which has been interpreted in very various ways by standard commentators. (2s. Elliot Stock.)

The Propitiation of Our Lord in its Bearing on Ethics. By James Kennedy, M.A. 2s. 6d. Alexander and Shepheard. This makes no profession of being an exhaustive treatise; but it is a thoughtful essay on a subject of supreme importance, inspired by devotion to Christ, and founded upon Holy Writ. The author maintains that no system of ethics approaches that of the Bible, grounded on the Divine verities which gather in their concentrated force round the incarnation, the mission, and the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ, and in the course of his argument he shows the utterly unscriptural nature of what may be designated as modern advanced views of the redemptive work of Christ.

Messrs. Cassell and Co. have begun a new serial issue, in sevenpenny monthly parts, of the New Testament Commentary for English Readers, edited by Bishop Ellicott. Many will be glad to secure this highly-esteemed work on such easy terms.

How to Testify for Christ is a very instructive address, delivered in December last to the members and friends of the Open-Air Mission, by Rev. Handley C. G. Moule, M.A. All preachers should read it. (1d. Open-Air Mission Office, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, W.C.)

Charles Haddon Spurgeon is the subject of the most recent (102) issue of the penny Biographical Series of the Religious Tract Society, written by Rev. F. B. Meyer. The sketch gives, in a most sympathetic manner, a large amount of information in a condensed and readable form.

Temperance Notes.

Mr. George Blaiklock has started for a three months' campaign in South East Africa.

A successful Temperance Mission has just been held by Mr. R. Coad in Exeter.

A united Gospel Temperance Mission has been held with good results in Hillborough.

With the object of promoting the cause of temperance in the district, a coffee-palace has been opened at Edenbridge, Kent.

Mr. Gladstone promised a deputation, which waited on him last week, that he will support the Scottish Direct Veto Bill when it comes on.

The British Women's Temperance Association, in order to perfect its organisation in London, has just formed a union of its metropolitan branches.

It was reported at the annual meeting of Eastbourne Wesleyan Missionary Band that all the members, fifty in number, were total abstainers and non-smokers.

The late S. C. Hall said, "The time is not far distant when men will no more think of tolerating a dram-shop than of poisoning a well, from which their neighbours and themselves draw water to drink."

The Barnet justices have refused to renew the licences of a public-house at the village of South Mimms, on the ground that it is not required. Although the population of the village is only 418, there are already eight licensed houses.

The recent annual meetings of the Sunderland Branch of the B.W.T.A. were addressed by Mrs. Ward Poole. The meetings were enthusiastic and largely attended, and were brought to a close by an eloquent speech from Mr. A. Green, Jewish Rabbi, a warm advocate of Total Abstinence.

Lord Stanley has closed one of the public-houses on his estate at Holyhead and signified his intention of closing more when the leases expire, while Mr. Alfred Thomas, M.P., has given notice to the landlord of a public-house he owns in Cardiff that on the expiration of the lease in 1893 the premises will be closed.

Sunday, April 3, was observed by the Women's Christian Temperance Union of America as a day of special prayer that God would incline the Commissioners of the Great Columbian Exposition to decide that the gates shall be wholly closed upon the Sabbath, and that no intoxicants shall be sold upon the grounds.

"Only let women," says Mrs. Ormiston Chant, "with their conviction that alcoholic liquor is a bad thing, be freed from the hindrances hanging round them from an ignorant age, and they will do what motherhood has always done—get the young away, out of the danger, and call on men to get the danger out of the way."

Writing from South Africa, a correspondent says:—"In some places, men, women, children, and even babies, will be seen lying along the road drunk, and some of the whites talk unblushingly of the day when they will all be killed off by rum, and they can have the land. The Hottentots and Bushmen are now utterly debased by the white men, and the Zulus, a very superior race in intelligence, character, and appearance, are beginning to fall victims."

Rev. W. G. Lawes, missionary to New Guinea, has stated that drunkenness has been introduced into New Guinea by Europeans, and adds that the cargoes of vessels bound for South and West Africa during one week only, and which called at Madeira, included no less than nine hundred thousand cases of gin, twenty-four thousand butts of rum, thirty thousand cases of brandy, twenty-eight thousand cases of Irish Whisky, and forty thousand cases of vermuth. No wonder that the path of the missionaries is surrounded by so many difficulties!

The Duchess of Rutland is exerting her powerful influence in favour of temperance. In an article recently communicated to the Press she speaks in the highest terms of such institutions as coffee-stalls and coffee-houses as counter-attractions to the public-house An interesting description is that which the Duchess gives of the Nottingham Social Guild, with its suppers to the poor. its evening-homes for factory girls, and its recreative classes, where men learn such crafts as wood-carving, and where games, concerts, lectures, and other attractions are provided for them.

The annual meeting of the Society for the Study of Inebriety was held last week. Dr. Norman Kerr gave some particulars of an appeal he had made on behalf of the Inebriates Legislation Committee of the British Medical Association to the various Temperance and allied societies on behalf of compulsory legislation for the habitual drunkard. Hitherto these bodies had opposed all such legislation, but the reception of this appeal revealed a marked change, and great temperance bodies now thoroughly adopted the compulsory platform, recognising a large number of inebriates, not as willing offenders, but as impelled by a physically diseased condition. Dr. Usher, of Melbourne, gave a paper on some new methods of treating alcoholism. There were, he said, two forms of this disease—those of heredity and acquisition; also another which he would term infantile, which was brought about by the negligence and carelessness of people in giving malt and spirituous liquors to children. At the present time there were nearly one hundred asylums and retreats in the world for the treatment of this disease, and it was contended that heredity was the chief factor in nearly sixty per cent. of the cases.

OBITUARY.

REV. DR. COLLINGWOOD BRUCE.

Another heavy loss has fallen on English Presbyterians in the death of Rev. John Collingwood Bruce, D.D., who passed away on Tuesday week, in Newcastle, at the ripe age of seventy-seven. In 1881 he was elected Moderator of the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of England; but, speaking generally, he was better known as an author and literary labourer than as a minister. His son, Mr. Gainsford Bruce, M.P., was with his father to the end.

MR. GEORGE JACK, OF DUNDEE.

Many will have cause to mourn the death, on Sunday week, of Mr. George Jack, at the age of seventy-five, until recently superintendent of the Mercantile Marine, Dundee. While highly respected as an able and trustworthy official, his peculiar claim to notice is found in the fact that he was not only an earnest Christian, but known as "the Seamen's Friend," taking as he did a deep interest in the Sailors' Home and many similar Christian and benevolent institutions for the spiritual and temporal welfare of our bluejackets.

REV. CANON PAYNE, OF READING.

The death of this earnest and active clergyman will be felt, not only by Churchmen, but also by others of various names, to be a real loss to the cause of the Gospel. A devoted worker and a thorough Evangelical, he had wide range of sympathy, honouring and appreciating all who laboured for Christ. For many long years he has preached the word "in season and out of season," not infrequently by the wayside after his day's work in the church. As vicar of St. John's and St. Stephen's Churches in Reading, William Payne had many demands on his care and attention, yet withal he ever found time for personal effort, temperance, and purity advocacy, and the earnest support of foreign missions.

Missionary Prayer Union.

As a result of our first quarter's existence we are able to send up to the Baptist Missionary Society the sum of thirteen pounds, after deducting one pound for printing expenses, which have been rather heavy this first quarter.

We have fifty members, and have had returns from forty-seven. The total received from these is £14 0s. 5d. As our membership is increasing, we are confident that we shall be able, by this Prayer Union alone, to support a missionary as our representative in the foreign field.

We are greatly encouraged, for so many of our members belong to the humbler class, yet their daily gifts have realised a total which must surprise and delight themselves.

By this method there are few churches which could not very largely increase their contributions to the missionary cause.

GEO. WAINWRIGHT.

West Cliff Tabernacle, Bournemouth West.

HURSTPIERPOINT Y.M.C.A.—Bishop Hannington, who was, it will be remembered, born at Hurstpierpoint, ministered for some three years in St. George's Chapel, built by his own father, doing a grand work amongst young men. We are glad to hear that the Y.M.C.A. has now taken up this work, and have been granted the chapel, rent free, for the purpose. Help is being asked to furnish the place. Communications should be made to Rev. W. D. Newton, Y.M.C.A., Hurstpierpoint.

LITERATURE THROUGH THE POST.—A correspondent, calling attention to the post as a means of disseminating Gospel literature, says: "The postage on printed matter to Australia, India, Natal, Ceylon, New Zealand, and the United States, is only ½d. for 2ozs., 4ozs. 1d., 4d. per lb. If each one of your readers would only post 2 or 4 ozs. of literature a week, say his or her copy of THE CHRISTIAN, to some foreign missionary, it would be a great encouragement to him to go forward."

THE BIBLE IN MADAGASCAR. — Some time since a society was formed in Antananarivo, the capital of Madagascar, for the distribution of the Scriptures at a cheap rate to the people in the distant provinces, and in January a public meeting was held to make its claims and character better known. A notice of the meeting was sent, as a matter of course, to the Palace Church, and thus came under the notice of the Queen and the Prime Minister, who showed much interest in the matter, and attended the meeting, which was very enthusiastic. The chair was occupied by Mr. H. E. Clark, of the Friends' Mission, who is president of the Association. Rev. W. E. Cousins gave details of the work of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and was followed by Radaniela (Mr. Daniela), the senior native tutor at the L.M.S. College, and chairman this year of the Imerina Congregational Union and Native Missionary Society. He spoke most earnestly and eloquently of the good the Bible had done in Imerina, the central province of Madagascar. Rev. R. Baron, L.M.S., the last speaker, enlarged upon the responsibility of Imerina (that is, the Hovas) to send the Bible to the distant tribes.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Lord Penrhyn has granted a site for a church college at Bangor.

It is stated that the C.M.S. receipts will show for the year ending March 31 an increase of about £10,000.

Sir John Kennaway, M.P., and Dr. R. N. Cust are to address, the week after next, missionary meetings in Dublin.

It is being seriously considered whether a European or a native bishop should be nominated successor to Bishop Crowther.

The Bishop of London's Fund has just received a legacy of £1000 from the executors of the late Mr. Alexander Temple, of Maida Vale.

The Niger deputation reported last week to the C.M.S. Committee that the feeling in favour of independence is still strong in the Delta.

Miss Talbot, daughter of the late Mr. Christopher Talbot, M.P., has given a site and a donation of £1000 towards the erection of a new English church at Maesteg, South Wales.

According to The Globe, The Church Times remains in the family of its founder and late proprietor, Mr. G. J. Palmer. One son, the Rev. H. J. Palmer, is appointed editor under the will, another sub-editor, and another business manager.

On Saturday last the Bishop of London, consecrating a new chancel at Christ Church, North Finchley, impressed upon a large attendance of North London clergy the duty of encouraging church-going. He views with horror the desecration of Sunday, noting that the men who advocate relaxation on this day are not mindful to consecrate the other six.

At St. Paul's during the present week mid-day addresses have been delivered by the Archbishop of Canterbury. On Good Friday the new Dean of Chichester will take the Three Hours' Service. A similar function at York Minster will be conducted by the Archbishop of York, who thus, like his brother of Canterbury, undertakes a duty never before performed by an English Archbishop.

A service in connection with the Society for Higher Religious Education was held last week in St. Margaret's, Westminster. Professor Brown stated that societies have now been formed in most of the southern dioceses for promoting systematic reading and study of the Bible, &c. The Professor showed how needful such study was, both for the clergy, to prepare them for work among their more educated parishioners, and also for all who desired to have an intelligent knowledge of Holy Scripture and of the history of their Church.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Mr. George Barber has been invited to become Dr. Dale's assistant at Carr's-lane, Birmingham.

Dr. A. B. Bruce delivered last week in Leeds the Hamilton Lecture, his subject being "Christianity To-day."

Rev. A. Goodrich, D.D., speaking last week at Skipton, to a body of ministers, devoted himself to a sturdy defence of the Old Testament in view of recent attacks.

The annual meetings of the Yorkshire Congregational Union, held last week, were full of hopefulness and vigour. Encouraging reports of progress were rendered.

At the Medland Hall Shelter a "Conference of Casuals" was held one evening last week, when considerable light was thrown on the needs and necessities, ideas and habits of the class.

Rev. W. H. Dickenson has just held an eight days' mission in Parish Street Church, and a five days' mission at Camberwell New-road. He is now at Bedford Chapel, Camden Town.

The London Congregational Union held its annual meetings in the Memorial Hall last week, Rev. Alfred Rowland took as the theme of his presidential address, "Re-union," dwelling especially on Archdeacon Sinclair's "St. Paul's" sermon and the Grindelwald Conference.

The work at the Welsh Mission Chapel, Woolwich, has been in a low state, but of late matters have taken a turn. Several of the Welsh churches have sent supplies, and, at length, a regular ministry has been secured; the congregation has increased in number, and the workers are much encouraged.

In Great George-street Chapel, Liverpool, a large and prosperous congregation formerly met, but owing to residential changes it has emptied of late years. Last November, however, the P.S.A. movement was introduced, and now the place is crowded with working men, who come not in the afternoons only, but mornings and evenings as well.

Rev. S. Auty, speaking at a Home Mission meeting in Keighley, stated that he found homes without food or fire where the family income was £5 to £6 per week. He was convinced that there was no hope for their work in such places as South Stockton unless they went to the people with the Gospel in one hand and the temperance pledge in the other.

BAPTIST.

Mr. J. L. Stanley is mentioned as a probable successor to Mr. Gooch at West Norwood.

Four hundred members have been added to the Baptist churches in France during the past year.

Rev. John Creer has just concluded a series of special services at Charles-street Chapel, Camberwell New-road.

The anniversary at Wynne-road, Brixton (pastor, Z. T. Dowen), showed remarkable progress for the past year.

A new chapel has just been opened at Portslade-by-the-Sea, the outcome of the mission work which has been going on some thirteen months.

Rev. W. S. Swanson addressed, lately, the students at the Pastors' College on Missionary work in China, and the needs and opportunities of that vast empire.

The work at Upton Chapel, Lambeth-road, has lately been remarkably vigorous, the membership having risen from fifty to 350 since Mr. W. Williams entered on the pastorate, some five years ago.

At the quarterly meeting of the London Baptist Association, held last week in Denmark-place Chapel, Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., gave a strong and vigorous address on present truth for the age and the inspiration of the Bible.

In connection with the Upton Chapel Mission the half-yearly meeting of Youths' Bible Classes was celebrated on Sunday week last, addresses being delivered by Messrs. W. H. Weedon and J. C. Underwood, the superintendent. There is a flourishing Band of Hope connected with this branch of the work.

A gracious work has been going on for some time past in the Baptist Church of Torrington, North Devon, of which Rev. G. F. Owen is pastor, and over thirty have lately come out confessing themselves to be children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. No special efforts have been put forth, and at the half-hour's noon-day prayer-meeting there are generally sixty present pleading at the throne of grace.

METHODIST.

Rev. J. Ashworth has been holding interesting services in various towns on the Tees side.

Large meetings were addressed in Chester last week by Revs. W. D. Walters and H. P. Hughes.

Rev. John White, who has been labouring in Workington, has been set apart for mission work in the Transvaal.

Most encouraging special services have just been held at Heanor, Ilkeston, by Rev. J. A. Grainger and others.

Mrs. Hughes, speaking lately in Windsor on the needs of special classes of women in London, awakened deep interest by her glowing sympathy.

Enthusiastic meetings were held last Tuesday in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, in support of the Wesleyan Missionary Society. The President of the Conference, Revs. Dr. Jenkins, D. Hill, and others gave stirring addresses.

Sir Arthur Blackwood, K.C.B., has made over to the Wesleyan Methodists the Village Hall and British Workman Coffee Palace, with all the furniture and appointments, estimated to be worth £4000, at Crayford, Kent, in which he has for so many years successfully carried on evangelistic and other mission work.

The Committee of the Aldershot Soldiers' Homes held their annual meeting on Wednesday week. The report presented was very encouraging, apart from the matter of finance. A larger number of men than has been the case for some years past now frequent the Homes, and appreciate the provision made for their comfort.

At the anniversary meeting of the Leysian Mission (St. Luke's), held last week, the work was described as mainly religious. The average attendance at the Sunday-school was 280. The largest auxiliary of the Mission was the Medical Mission, Dr. Griffith seeing about 170 cases weekly at the hall. About 10,000 cases were dealt with last year there, and at the homes of patients.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. John Miller, of Grange, Banff, has accepted a call to Belford.

Rev. M. Merle D'Aubigné last week addressed the London South Presbytery on the work of the Missionary Church of Belgium.

The Women's Missionary Association (English Presbyterian) reports fourteen new branches, and fairly satisfactory progress during the past year.

An anonymous donor has sent, through Dr. Monro Gibson, £1000 to the Presbyterian funds—one-half to go to foreign missions, and the other half to church building.

The current number of Our Sisters in Other Lands contains a delightful account of a Hak-ka sister, just called home, from the pen of Mrs. Riddell. She had been a member of the Ng-kang-phu Church for about nine years, having been admitted when she was nearly seventy years of age.

A special effort to raise a fund of £10,000 in support of the Foreign Mission Fund of the Presbyterian Church, and to stimulate a "Forward Movement," is making satisfactory progress. Twenty-four Presbyterians in Liverpool have contributed, through Rev. John Watson, the handsome sum of £3090.

Dr. Greig, who was brutally assaulted and almost killed near Kirin, Manchuria, addressed lately a meeting in Greenock. Passing lightly over his own peril and pain, he said that "during that night of agony he recalled a passage in the autobiography of Dr. John G. Paton, how, when he was in imminent danger of his life, he thought of the open heavens and the glory of God, and Jesus standing at the right hand as his Protector. This had cheered Dr. Paton, and it had brought peace and calm to his (Dr. Greig's) mind in his time of distress in Manchuria. Christ was nearer than the pain."

SALVATION ARMY.

General Booth completed the 63rd year of his age on Sunday last (10th inst.).

The two days' meetings held at Exeter Hall last week were fully attended, and were probably the most marked, as to their spiritual results, of any of the recent meetings, either in London or the provinces.

General Booth's health has been somewhat indifferent lately. It has, however, considerably improved under a course of hydropathic treatment, and he has arranged to hold meetings at Plymouth on Good Friday, and at Brighton on Easter Monday.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The Presbyterian Theological Colleges at Derry and Belfast have just closed very successful sessions.

Four additional Presbyterian congregations are about to be organised at Belfast.

A sum of five hundred pounds has been left by Rev. Henry McCaw, of Claggan, to each of the two Presbyterian Colleges to found students' missionary prizes.

On Sunday week the open-air services at Arklow entered on a new phase. The police suffered no hindrance, and Rev. Mr. Hallowes and his curate conducted the service without opposition.

The Belfast Town Mission is still carrying on a vigorous crusade, but finds drunkenness the greatest hindrance to its efforts. During the past month the eighteen missionaries paid a large number of visits, and met with much encouragement.

It has been decided to form in Cork a Ministers' Union, comprising the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Independent ministers in the city. The Union is to meet monthly, to have a general interchange of pulpits twice in the year, and a united Communion Service annually in January in connection with the week of prayer. It is believed that this organisation will be a means of much blessing in the South of Ireland.

A meeting was held last week at the Palace, Dublin, to inaugurate the foundation of a Mothers' Union. His Grace Lord Plunket presided. It was proposed by Dean Dickenson, and seconded by Canon Wynne:—"That an association be formed in connection with the Church of Ireland known as the 'Mothers' Union,' with a threefold object—(1) to uphold the sanctity of marriage; (2) to awaken a sense of the great responsibility of mothers and others having the care of children in the training of boys and girls, the future men and women of our country; (3) to organise in every place a band of mothers who will unite in prayer, and seek by their own example to lead in purity of life.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

A Home for Incurables is to be founded in Dundee.

The Dundee Town Council has voted a grant of £150 towards the technical classes held at the Y.M.C.A.

Mrs. Gilroy, of Castleroy, Broughty Ferry, gifted £8000 to benevolent and charitable institutions in Dundee and neighbourhood.

A memorial to Government, protesting against the continuance of the opium trade, has been sent by the Greenock Established Presbytery.

Mr. A. D. Purves, one of the office-bearers of the Brighton-street E.U. Chapel, Edinburgh, is going out to Central Africa as an artisan missionary.

Rev. W. Patrick, F.C., Kirkintilloch, editor of Youth, is to be invited to the pastorate of Free St. Paul's Church, Dundee, vacant by the death of Rev. R. Waterston.

The membership of Dr. Stalker's church, St. Matthew's, Glasgow, is 1043: of Rev. Robert Howie's church at Govan, 1112; and Rev. John Robertson's church at Gorbals, Glasgow, eight hundred.

Rev. Hugh Black, of Paisley, is to receive a unanimous call to be colleague of Dr. Alex. Whyte at Free St. George's, Edinburgh.

The Aberdeen Spring Conference on the deepening of the spiritual life has been held this year in the Free East Church. Among the speakers were Rev. J. Macpherson, of Kinnaird, Rev. John Hall, of Cullen, and Professor Laidlaw, of Edinburgh.

The annual conference of the Young Men's Guilds of the Free Church was recently held in Dumfries. Delegates from a hundred societies attended the business meeting, which was presided over by Professor Salmond, Aberdeen. Professor Henry Drummond gave an address on sermon writing.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Bathafarn House, Carnarvon, on 31st ult., Rev. Dr. Richards, a beloved and honoured minister; at Llanfairfechan, Mrs. W. Caenog Jones, a faithful worker and wife of a earnest minister; at Newport, Mon., on 1st inst., aged 77, Mr. D. E. Davies, well known as a devoted worker at Eaton, Norwich; on 6th inst., aged 75, William Stacey, a helper of many; at 27, Upper Brook-street, on 4th inst., after one day's illness, Mr. William Ellice, aged 75, a friend of many Christian institutions; at Manchester, Rev. T. Daniels, aged 73. Rector of St. Paul's, a pronounced and energetic Evangelical; at Cannes, Rev. Alex. Miller, Rector of Annahilt, co. Down, a warm supporter of foreign missions; at Bangor, co. Down, Rev. A. B. Beatt, late Rector of Inch, co. Down, and brother of Rev. Ed. Best, Methodist minister, New Zealand, and a most devoted godly man.

For Indigestion take Guy's Tonic.

Mr. W. J. Johnstone writes from Chatham: "I must say that Guy's Tonic has done me more good than all the doctors' stuff that I have ever taken, and that is saying something, seeing that I have suffered from chronic indigestion for twenty-two years. I have taken one bottle of your Tonic, and have just obtained another. I must say that I feel a wonderful difference—the depression has vanished, the appetite is very much better; in fact, I feel nearly well."

We do not Claim

That Guy's Tonic will infallibly cure every ill under the sun, but we do say, here and now, that it should immediately be resorted to

When digestion is accompanied by flatulency;

When pain, weight, fulness, or distension is felt after eating;

When there is drowsiness after meals—a very common symptom;

When there is distaste for foods of all kinds; or

When there is a dull, weak, failing, or pining appetite.

TO ANY ONE DESIRING to test our remedies, we will send, securely packed in a special box, a bottle of Guy's Tonic, together with a free sample box of Guy's Fruit Pills and complete "Guide to Digestion," containing simple instructions as to the Guy's Tonic Treatment, post paid, for 2s. 9d. Address all letters to Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C. Guy's Tonic is sold retail of all Chemists at 2s. 9d. per bottle, and Guy's Fruit Pills at 1s. 1½d. per box.

Applicants for Tracts.—W. Mortlock (temperance), Clifford Bank, Great Western-terrace, Cheltenham; A. E. Honnor, The Marsh, Pinner, Middlesex; Thomas Bertram, 33, Dalrymple Loan, Musselburgh, N.B.; W. J. Cook, 61, Waleran-buildings, Old Kent-road, S.E.; M. White, St. James-street, Walthamstow; John Poate, James Villa, Farnborough, Hants; J. Sills, 15, Richard-street, Cathays, Cardiff; Arthur H. Thirlby, Measham, near Atherstone; C. Locke, 85, Ilbert-street, Queen's-park, W.; Owen R. Williams, 29, Water-street, Rhyl.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most desirable that all books and papers sent should be carefully read before being given away.]

The City Gospel Male Choir.—The young men forming this choir, to the number of eight or ten, are prepared to conduct Gospel services, open air or otherwise, from Saturday to Monday in country villages, not far from London, where no Gospel effort is usually put forth. Application should be made to Mr. A. G. Garstin, jun., Queen-square, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY.—On Thursday last Mr. Moody addressed a meeting in the Presbyterian Church, Rome. He is now making a short visit to Palestine. On Monday week Mr. Sankey sang and spoke at a large gathering at Mertoun, Lord Polwarth's Scotch residence. He is at present in England.

DISTRESS IN RUSSIA.—Mr. J. E. K. Studd, writing from the Polytechnic, 309, Regent-street, W., sends a letter from the Countess of Bobrinskoy, describing the sufferings of the Russian peasantry through want of fuel. The question of supplying this pressing need is causing great anxiety to philanthropic workers in various parts of the Empire.

MRS. EDITH O'GORMAN AUFFRAY, "The Escaped Nun," is now lecturing in Essex. On Monday week she lectured "Life in a Convent," and the "Romish School System," to a large and enthusiastic audience in Colchester, Mr. Robert Scott presiding. Harwich and Witham were also visited during the week. After Easter Mrs. Auffray goes to the West of England. Her lectures are generally attended by large audiences, and the work is telling very much on the Protestant feeling of the country.

SAILORS' WELCOME HOME.—The venerated worker, Mr. George Holland was the principal speaker at the muster of the "Christian Lifeboat Crew" at Miss Child's Welcome Home for Sailors on Tuesday week. His personal experience in the work at Whitechapel, was very telling and practical. Among other incidents he referred to a conversation with the dear old Lord Shaftesbury, in which he mentioned his delightful visit to Miss Child's Home, and the deep interest he took in her work for God. Miss Child read extracts from letters from the various branches showing the flourishing state they were in, and then gave the text for the month: "Blessed is the man whose strength is in Thee. Blessed is the man that trusteth in Thee." Good testimonies have been received from foreign ports of the changed character and behaviour of several of the sailors since their conversion.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL,
LIVERPOOL ROAD, ISLINGTON, N.

For the reception of sufferers from INFECTIOUS FEVERS, whose means are insufficient to afford them proper isolation and treatment at home. Patients contribute about one-fourth of their cost while in Hospital, the other three-fourths falling upon the funds of the Charity.

78,000 persons have been treated here since 1802, and probably ten times that number have been preserved from infection.

Subscriptions and Donations will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, Major W. CHRISTIE.

Bankers: Prescott, Dimsdale and Co., 62, Threadneedle Street.

Tinted Covers, 1s.

Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards 1s. 6d.

"There is nothing clearer than the author's English, more musical than the rhythm of his simple sentences, more spiritual than his tone, or more refreshing to devout minds than his addresses. They glow with fervour and pant with the highest aims; and yet their exegesis is sound and their commonsense and practicability strong and supreme. The volume before us is charming, welcome, and enriching as the balm-filled air of dawning spring."

"GIVE THE CHILD A CHANCE!"

A Neat Illustrated four-page Card addressed to Parents who send their Children to the public-house to "Fetch the Beer."

By G. E. MORGAN, M.A.

A useful adjunct to evangelistic and temperance work. See opinions of eminent Christian workers:—

"'Give the Child a Chance' is capital. Poor lambs! I was quite outwitted lately at our Band of Hope. I asked, 'How many of you this week had to go for beer?' Almost all the hands went up, but one lad exclaimed, 'I don't sip as I used to!'"—Miss Annie Macpherson.

"Admirable. I wish it a wide circulation."—Mr. Robert Anderson, LL.D.

"I like it more than I can say."
Dr. Barnardo.

"A capital thing! We intend to work it well."—Mr. W. S. Caine.

"Excellent and greatly needed. . . Delighted to take some."
Mr. F. N. Charrington.

"I like your card immensely."
Rev. S. A. Selwyn.

"Will be productive of very much good."—Mr. John Cory.

"I admire your ingenuity. There's a great deal to do and the time is short."—Mr. T. A. Denny.

"I like your card very much."
Rev. Newman Hall.

"I have long felt that something was required. It will do an immense amount of good."—Mr. George Holland.

"It seems to meet a great want very effectively."—Rev. Hugh Price Hughes.

"A well aimed blow at a great evil."
Rev. John Macpherson.

"Just what is needed. Constantly bewailing the evil it is designed to remedy."—Mr. John Kirk (Ragged School Union).

Books for Bible Students and Teachers.

SEARCHING THE SCRIPTURES:

In Order to Abiding Communion with God. Also Suggestions for Bible Reading and Study; and a plan for Consecutive Daily Reading. By Dr. J. Anderson, M.R.C.S. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A scholarly, accurate, suggestive, and wise work on the study of the books of the Bible; how best to get at their teaching, and how best to turn that teaching to practical account. Preachers and teachers will find it a treasury of thought, beautiful expositions, and fruitful suggestions. The volume is nicely got up, and is suitable for a prize or a present."—Oldham Chronicle.

"IN THE VOLUME OF THE BOOK:"

Or, The Pleasure and Profit of Bible Study. Being an Introduction to the Study of the Holy Scriptures. Ninth Edition. By Rev. George F. Pentecost, M.A., D.D. With Introductions by Rev. Joseph Cook and Bishop J. H. Vincent, D.D. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; cloth limp, 2s.; cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"There are few popular books about the Bible that we are more heartily prepared to recommend than that of Dr. Pentecost; for hardly one could be named that is so likely to lead to a thorough and life-long use of the Bible itself. . . This is high praise, but anyone who makes the acquaintance of the volume will find that we have not exaggerated its merits."—Christian Leader.

For Bible Readings.

NOTES FOR BIBLE READINGS.

A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects Carefully Compiled and Arranged. By S. R. Briggs and John H. Elliott. Suitable for Bible Readings, Cottage Lectures, Sabbath School Lessons, &c. Tinted covers, 2s. 6d.; cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

This work contains Introductory Matter by D. L. Moody, consisting of Useful Hints on "How to Study the Bible," and "How to Read the Bible."

"This is a book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the Class Teacher, and an assistance also to the Preacher. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation; and those who conduct Bible Readings will find it most suggestive."—Christian Progress.

BIBLE READINGS

On Eleven Different Subjects. By Henry Moorhouse. Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards 1s. 6d.

"Very searching in style; at the same time old truths are put in a new light. 'Bible Readings' is a charming gift-book, and a profitable companion."
Preacher's Analyst.

"We believe it will be made a blessing wherever it may go."—King's Highway.

BIBLE READINGS ON THE GOSPEL OF MARK.

A Handbook and Help for Bible Classes, Lay Preachers, Sunday-school Teachers and Evangelists. By Henry Thorne. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; cloth boards, 2s.

"Mr. Thorne is a man of wide reading and also of sound judgment. He has evidently spared no pains to make his book complete. We have been much struck with the modesty and sincerity of his work."—Christian Leader.

"Teachers and preachers will find Mr. Thorne's Lessons on Mark very helpful. They cover the entire Gospel, and are arranged in fifty-two lessons, each of which has been prepared with conscientious care."—The Lay Preacher.

LIFE, WARFARE, AND VICTORY.

Being Notes of Bible Readings Specially Written for Young Converts. By Major D. W. Whittle. Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"Is a nicely got-up volume, of good Scriptural, and plain teaching as to spiritual life, its impartation, its enemies, and its friends. The book was designed originally for those led to Christ by the author's ministry, and is refreshing, stimulating, and replete with anecdote."
Irish Baptist Magazine.

RUTH, THE MOABITESS.

A Series of Bible Readings on the Book of Ruth. By Henry Moorhouse. Tinted covers, 6d.; cloth limp, 1s.

"Containing many fresh and original remarks, all tending to practical usefulness. A capital sixpennyworth of commenting on a favourite book."—The Sword and Trowel.

New and Cheaper Edition, greatly improved.

CHRIST AND THE SCRIPTURES:

The Living Word and the Written Word. By the late Rev. Adolph Saphir, B.A., D.D. Crown 8vo, tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition. Cloth extra, 3s.; cloth bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"This book is full of thought and palpitates with life. It is the work of a Christian, a scholar, and a man of genius; while none have ever brought to the theme a larger measure of love and reference. We know of no volume that we more earnestly desire to see in the hands of persons of every age who are pondering the religious questions of momentous importance, so much agitating men's minds at the present time. It is not only admirably adapted for the mature and thoughtful, but it is also peculiarly fitted to give a right direction to the thoughts and lives of young, earnest, and inquiring persons."
Newcastle Daily Chronicle.

PEARLS OF WISDOM

From the Parables. By A.L.O.E., Author of "Rescued from Egypt," "Exiles of Babylon," &c. 256 Pages. Illustrated with twenty-four Full-page Original Drawings. Handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards. 3s. 6d.; with gilt edges, 4s. Special Cheap Edition: Tinted covers, 6d.; cloth, 1s.; cloth boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

"Never were the parables seen to better advantage, never did they seem so full of meaning, purpose, point, and never were their details made so winsome and stimulating. Religious teachers of all denominations will find the volume exceedingly suggestive and stimulating."
Oldham Chronicle.

"We commend the volume to the special attention of ministers, lay preachers, and Sabbath-school teachers, as a most helpful auxiliary to the elucidation of the Saviour's parabolic teaching."—The Primitive Methodist.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

A Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Eight Chromo-Lithographic Views. Tinted Covers, 2s.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d.; Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon wrote in The Sword and Trowel:—"Preachers abound; but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter; but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. James Culross; and in his work entitled 'John, whom Jesus Loved,' we have found a book. Many writers are mere echoes of other men's voices—they imitate the good steward in bringing forth things old, but things new are quite out of their way. One of the excellences of Dr. Culross is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way. . . .

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."

"BEHOLD I STAND AT THE DOOR AND KNOCK."

Christ's Message to the Church at Laodicea. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Another 'gem of purest ray serene' from the deep waters of our brother's teeming mind. He possesses a ripeness of thought and a beauty of expression which, in our judgment, are scarcely equalled, and in not one instance surpassed, by those of any other living teacher known to us."—The Sword and Trowel.

"THY FIRST LOVE:"

Christ's Message to the Church of Ephesus. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly. We heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."
The Sunday-School Chronicle.

CHOICE SAYINGS.

A Collection of over 800 Striking and Profitable Comments on almost every Subject Relating to Christian Faith and Practice. By Robert C. Chapman. Tinted Covers, 9d.; Cloth Limp, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d. Presentation Editions: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.; Morocco, 3s.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon wrote of Mr. Chapman's book:—"Here we have gold dust, 'and the gold of that land is good!' Some of these brief 'Sayings' contain whole sermons. Personally we expect to gather many discourses while studying this little book. A dew from heaven rests on Mr. Chapman's expositions."—The Sword and Trowel.

"There is both manna and old corn of the land here in rich variety."—Footsteps of Truth.

MANY INFALLIBLE PROOFS:

The Evidences of Christianity; or, the Written and Living Word of God. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D. With Portrait of the Author. Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d. Superior Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"An invaluable work. The price is low at half-a-crown. It is the book which the present period needs. It is solid, plain, conclusive argument. To spread such a treatise as this will be a very gracious work, and the results must be beneficial."—Sword and Trowel.

"The work is one of the very best we have seen for the people, and may be eminently useful also to young preachers and Sunday-school teachers."
Christian Commonwealth.

"Dr. Pierson's style is simple, terse, manly, and full of soul; and he has at his command a singular fertility of illustration."—Literary World.

On the Tabernacle.

"The Illustrations in colour and gold are exceedingly beautiful."—Christian Age.

THE TABERNACLE, THE PRIESTHOOD, AND THE OFFERINGS.

With the Spiritual Lessons Derived from the Ritual and Ceremonies of the Old Dispensation. By Henry W. Soltau, Author of "The Holy Vessels of the Tabernacle," &c. With Four Beautiful Coloured Plates, and numerous smaller Engravings. Cloth Boards, 5s.; Library Binding, Gilt Edges 6s.; Tinted Covers (without Coloured Plates), 3s.

"This is the best book on the subject we have seen. Concise, complete, and evangelical, it affords all readers of the Holy Bible the help which they need in appreciating the services and ritual of the wilderness worship."
Preachers' Analyst.

"We heartily commend this work to all students of the Bible, and especially to young Christians. Its teaching is calculated to root and ground them in the faith."
Footsteps of Truth.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MOSES.

As Seen in the Tabernacle, and its Various Services. By Rev. George Rodgers. With Frontispiece, and numerous smaller Illustrations. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.

"No young Christian, and especially no preacher, should be ignorant of the truth which this small volume very simply but very forcibly enunciates."—The Christian.

"We cordially recommend the short and very suggestive treatise."—The Bulwark.

THE TABERNACLE AND THE TEMPLE:

Their Symbolic Teaching and Spiritual Import. By Arabella E. Webb. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth, 1s.

"Bible-class teachers and students will find this little catechism helpful and suggestive."—Word and Work.

"Intelligently and lucidly written; and manifests much careful study of the Scriptures."—The Irish Baptist Magazine.

THE GOSPEL IN LEVITICUS.

Types and Foreshadowings of the Great Redemption. By Rev. James Fleming, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Fitted to be eminently useful as a plain and faithful setting forth of the work of Christ as foreshadowed in the Mosaic types."—Baptist Magazine.

"This is not a book for scholarly critics, dealing with exegetical distinctions; but one intended for the common people, dealing with practical questions, and the spirit breathing through the book is that of one earnestly desiring the salvation of his readers."—The Primitive Methodist.

THIRTY-NINTH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

ASTHMA AND CHRONIC BRONCHITIS.

The case to which I shall now refer is that of Mr. Geo. Turner, of Slapton, Leighton Buzzard. He had lost a relative with Consumption. His illness commenced with catarrh contracted three years before I heard of him. This became chronic, the bronchial symptoms increased, and attacks of asthma became frequent. Cough, with much greenish yellow expectoration, followed, with occasional spitting of blood. There was much wheezing, and sensation of fulness at the chest, and night sweats.

Particulars as above were sent me, at the poor man's request, by Rev. H. Anstey, of Slapton Rectory, who has taken great interest in his case. He had commenced with my medicine prior to this for a week or two, and his breathing was better, and he felt stronger already.

A chronic case like that which is here narrated needs sometimes a long perseverance. The patient continued with his medicine, writing me at intervals, all through the year, not, however, with that regularity which he should. Writing in May, 1890, he says:—"I must have a little more medicine. I have had none lately. I thought I would try and do without." (This is a not infrequent mistake.)

Sept. 1st, 1891, I received a letter from Rev. H. Anstey. "My parishioner (he says) has very much improved in health. He is at work. I feel it to be due to you to acknowledge the great benefit he has received by your treatment. He is most grateful, and wishes to express his thanks."

PEPSONYMIN TONIC

THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely from its use." Mrs. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dy-pepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SPITE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. BRIDGE OF HOPE

Ratcliff Highway, E.

THE BRIDGE OF HOPE MISSION has now been carried on for nearly fourteen years in one of the Poorest Districts in the East of London. The work is especially among YOUNG WOMEN and LITTLE GIRLS, and is both RESCUE and PREVENTIVE. The doors are Open Night and Day, and Applicants are as numerous in the summer as in winter

The various branches of the Bridge of Hope are

1. THE REFUGE.
2. THE NIGHT SHELTER.
3. THE MOTHERS' HOME.
4. THE SERVANTS' LODGE.

and for the work among the Children,

5. BRIDGE HOUSE, LONDON.
6. HOPE LODGE, REDHILL.
7. REGENTS' PARK COTTAGE, LEIGH.
8. THE CHILDREN'S COTTAGE, HIGHGATE

AND

9. THE HAVEN, TICEHURST.

There are 220 beds, which are always full. Sixty little destitute children from the neighbourhood come to breakfast five mornings each week.

THE BRIDGE OF HOPE has a very special claim upon the support of the Christian public. It is quite undenominational. Not only are girls from the neighbourhood taken in, and workers all around in the various East End Missions helped with their difficult cases, but applications to receive Young Girls come from all parts of England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland.

In consequence of the change that has come over public opinion regarding grave moral and social questions, and the increased efforts of Christian Workers to rescue the younger ones, such Homes as ours are more needed than ever.

To give to the BRIDGE OF HOPE is to help those who try to help themselves. The young women in the Refuge earned during last year £608 by Laundry Work, Knitting, and Needlework. It is for the very young girls and children born into evil surroundings, and so circumstanced that, humanly speaking, if not rescued and saved NOW there is no other chance in life but for them to swell the numbers of lost girls on the streets that we now plead.

HELP US TO SAVE THESE LITTLE GIRLS!

The money given goes very directly to the benefit of those for whom it is sent. There is no doubt as to the economy with which the work is carried on. Our need was never so great as at the present time.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto Me."

Sunday-school Teachers will glean much useful instruction in the following work by Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., of Regent's-park Chapel.

The Psalms:

NOTES AND READINGS.

By F. B. MEYER, B.A.,

AUTHOR OF

"ABRAHAM: or, The Obedience of Faith;" "ELIJAH: and the Secret of his Power;" "JOSEPH: Beloved—Hated—Exalted;" "ISRAEL: a Prince with God;" "THE SHEPHERD PSALM;" &c., &c.

Pocket Edition: Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 0d.

"Sunday-school teachers, lay-preachers, and ministers, will find here much useful help, and all devotional students of the Psalms will be glad for these brief, bright, and beautiful comments. There are capital outlines of scores of evangelistic addresses, and a fair amount of filling in besides."—Cambridgeshire Congregational Magazine.

"A series of pointed, suggestive, and really helpful notes and readings on the Psalms, well qualified to render useful service alike to teacher, preacher, and private student of the Word. The setting and leading point of each Psalm are briefly but clearly given. Those who have not the means or the time to study more comprehensive commentaries will find here a singularly serviceable manual."—Word and Work.

"In these days of hurry and demands upon time, the meaning of the Word of God is little understood by the masses of professing Christians, because it has not occurred to authors to write comments that are short, pithy, plain, interesting, and withal sound and full in their teaching. Mr. Meyer's commentary on the Psalms combines all these qualities. His style of writing is felicitous. As a Christian teacher he is 'a master in Israel'; and the book is published at a price within the reach of most people."—The Rock.

"THE PSALMS: Notes and Readings," is also published in a larger form (Demy 8vo) as one of "THE CHRISTIAN BIBLE READINGS" Series of Bible Expositions. In this size it is more especially suited for the Library or for Reference. PRICES: Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"GIVE THE CHILD A CHANCE!"

By G. E. MORGAN, M.A.

A Neat Illustrated four-page Card addressed to Parents who send their Children to the public-house to "Fetch the Beer."

A useful adjunct to Evangelistic and Temperance Work.

"Give the Child a Chance."

PRESS NOTICES:—

"Short and to the point."
Footsteps of Truth.

"Deserves a wide circulation."
The Rock.

"Nothing better could be found for the purpose."—The News.

"Should be scattered in thousands amongst the homes of English working people."—Christian Worker.

"An excellent booklet, which should be scattered broadcast throughout the land."—The Christian Church.

"Armed with this little weapon anybody can lead an attack on parents who send little folk for drink."—Cambridgeshire Congregational Magazine.

"A kindly-worded remonstrance against the practice of turning children into drink-bearers. The idea is excellent and as the card is illustrated, it is very likely to be carefully noted by parents."
Alliance News.

"A most effective four-page card, which may certainly be described as meeting a long-felt want. . . The matter is admirably condensed, the card is attractive, and temperance workers would do well to secure a supply to put into the hands of children when observed going to the public-house."—Temperance Record.

"A scholarly, accurate, suggestive, and wise work on the study of the books of the Bible; how best to get at their teaching, and how best to turn that teaching to practical account. Preachers and teachers will find it a treasury of thought, beautiful expositions, and fruitful suggestions. The volume is nicely got up, and is suitable for a prize or a present."—Oldham Chronicle.

"IN THE VOLUME OF THE BOOK:"

Or, The Pleasure and Profit of Bible Study. Being an Introduction to the Study of the Holy Scriptures. Ninth Edition. By Rev. George F. Pentecost, M.A., D.D. With Introductions by Rev. Joseph Cook and Bishop J. H. Vincent, D.D. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; cloth limp, 2s.; cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"There are few popular books about the Bible that we are more heartily prepared to recommend than that of Dr. Pentecost; for hardly one could be named that is so likely to lead to a thorough and life-long use of the Bible itself. . . This is high praise, but anyone who makes the acquaintance of the volume will find that we have not exaggerated its merits."—Christian Leader.

"These are popular works by our great Evangelist; and they deserve a large sale. There can be no need for us to commend the living, blazing speech of our brother Moody. Who can equal him in natural simplicity, all aglow with holy passion!"—The Sword and the Trowel.

ADDRESSES BY D. L. MOODY. 132nd Thousand.

Delivered in England and Revised by Himself. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Primitive Methodist:—"With the effect of these Addresses when spoken the whole land is acquainted; and now that they are written, they will tend to keep in force the impression they have already made."

THE FAITHFUL SAYING: 19th Thousand.

A Series of Gospel Addresses. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The King's Highway:—"These discourses are full of power and homely beauty, and exemplify very fully the strong points of the great Evangelist. His anecdotes are so fresh, so pointed, and so touching."

HEAVEN: 50th Thousand.

Its Hopes, Its Inhabitants, Its Riches, Its Rewards. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Baptist Magazine:—"We have here the large verbal familiarity with Scripture; the raciness of style; the profuseness and aptness of illustration; and the intense spiritual earnestness—which are always to be expected when Mr. Moody opens his lips to speak or takes his pen to write."

POWER FROM ON HIGH: 31st Thousand.

Or, the Secret of Success in Christian Life and Christian Work. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Dr. William Carey, the pioneer of modern missions to the heathen world.

Rev. F. B. Meyer's chapter on Moses is omitted this week, in consequence of the Easter holidays; the studies will be resumed in our next issue.

Dr. Pentecost will speak at the Annual Meeting of the Zenana Bible and Medical Mission in Princes' Hall, Piccadilly, on Wednesday, April 27th, at 3 p.m. Great blessing has rested upon the work of Dr. Pentecost in India, and he has seen very much of missionary work there.

Though the weather is not as yet very inviting for country rambles, the time is close at hand when many of our poorer town-bred children are taken, for one brief day, to share the health-giving delights of field or forest or ocean shore. We shall be happy, as in years past, to act as the almoners of our generous readers, in thus ministering to the happiness of a needy class.

In a letter just received, Rev. Thomas Evans, of Mussoorie, India, says:—

I am sorry to have to add that gaunt famine is abroad in many places in India at the present time. Madras, about which Mr. Caine wrote long ago, is suffering most; but in parts of Bombay, the Central Province, Rajpootana, and the North-West Provinces there is, if not actual famine, great scarcity. This will cost our Government, perhaps, more money than the liquor trade has brought to the coffers of the State last year. How easily the God of Heaven can deprive us of bad money, and how easily He can make up for any sacrifice we may make for righteousness' sake!

It is stated that upon the re-assembling of Parliament, Mr. Dalziel, M.P., will bring in a Bill to regulate the hours of labour of the omnibus and tramcar men, and, in fact, to limit their hours to twelve per day, with intervals for meals. Strange to say, a portion of the Press is already writing strongly against the proposal, as being an attempt to interfere with the liberty of contract, but the measure is called for, and the sympathies of all right-thinking people will go with those who hope by it to remove a grave scandal.

The selfish impatience which so easily besets individuals took possession of an immense crowd of holiday-makers on Monday, at Hampstead-heath railway-station, with very terrible consequences. The day had been beautifully fine, but towards evening dark clouds threatened a storm. The railway-station was besieged, men, women, and children, in haste to get home, crushing down the stairs and crowding the platforms. The throng speedily became helpless, and two women and six children were suffocated. This is a sad ending to a day's pleasure. Once again a merely trivial anxiety is shown to involve calamity and disaster; and if the strong manage to hold their ground, it is because the weak "go to the wall." Christian life inculcates and develops patience and gentleness, and such occurrences as this show how profitable these virtues must be for the life that now is, as well as being disciplinary for the perfect life that is to come.

In view of the approaching General Election, "the Licensed Trade" of the Midland district are said to be marshalling their forces in order to secure, if possible, a large and powerful representation in the next Parliament. As it will probably be a matter of commercial life or death with many liquor-sellers, we do not feel surprised at their action. We trust, however, that their activity will be met, on the other side, with still greater earnestness on the part of Temperance voters and advocates.

We are glad to note that the National Vigilance Association has secured the arrest of a vendor of indecent photographs, who seems for some time to have carried on a large trade in corrupting pictures. The work of the Association has an importance which is not sufficiently recognised by Christian people. We recently called the attention of its Secretary to the fact that in well-known London thoroughfares articles which might have been manufactured in filthy Sodom are unblushingly displayed in shop windows. He replied that the prosecution of such offenders involves an expenditure which the Association is unprepared to undertake. He reminded us that in a case in which it prosecuted a publisher of immoral literature, the Association depleted its treasury, but the Christian public showed no sign of interest by sending funds to carry on such work. This is not as it should be. The purification of the shop windows in our London streets is a pressingly needed reform at the present time. The office of the Association is at 267, Strand, W.C., and the secretary, Mr. W. A. Coote, will be glad to receive suggestions as well as other help from the friends of social purity.

A constant war needs to be waged in all our great cities against the doings of those inhuman wretches who do not scruple to corrupt and debauch society for purposes of gain. As President of the American Society for the Prevention of Crime, Rev. Dr. Parkhurst is dealing some heavy and well-directed blows at the nurseries of vice in the city of New York. He roundly charges the police authorities of the city with tacitly conniving at the operations of gambling and disorderly houses, which are well-known to them, but with which they do not seriously interfere. The Grand Jury of the city has made a presentment, thoroughly endorsing Dr. Parkhurst's statements, and the police authorities are, therefore, put on the defensive. The Christian sentiment of the city is being aroused, and we trust the warfare will be kept up till the enforcement of law and the conservation of morals are brought into line.

Twenty-six Congregational ministers, met in Boston, U.S., have given expression to their profound gratitude to Mr. Joseph Cook upon the completion of his seventeenth annual course of Monday lectures in that city. They say:—

We especially endorse, and pray that God may bless, his eloquent and constant testimony for the value of the Christian Scriptures; his fearless and patient advocacy of the brotherhood of all men of every race, and colour, and class, and condition; his interest in the promotion of revivals of positive and vital religion, wherever the Church has grown careless in her work; his powerful appeals for the preservation of the Bible Sabbath; his incessant warfare upon the saloon; and his pungent appeals for the fidelity of all citizens to their obligations, wherever they can make their influence felt for purity and righteousness in the government.

Arrangements have been made for the continuance of these lectures under the same general committee and by the same distinguished lecturer.

The Sultan of Morocco has issued orders forbidding intercourse between Moorish women and ladies attached to Christian missions. The workers connected with the North Africa Mission are specially affected, and, having regard to the welfare of inquirers and others, they are prepared to pursue their labours with special circumspection and caution. The Sultan's advisers interpret communications between Moorish and English women as threatening "innovation in the laws," and "the evil of corrupting religion." These offences may be visited with the penalty of death in the case of renegades refusing to repent in a given time! A definite subject for prayer at the present time is that the Sultan may grant religious liberty to his subjects, so that the Gospel may be proclaimed among them without Imperial hindrance.

Jewish history is not only fascinating in itself, but remarkable in its characteristics. Some of these are well indicated by Rev. T. Pryde, of Glasgow, in the current issue of The Old and New Testament Student:—

When we review the history of the Jews from the call of Abraham to the persecutions in Russia, we can truly say, "God hath not dealt so with any nation" (Psalm cxlvii. 20). There must be something very enduring that can keep them alive through five thousand years, in the midst of such vicissitudes. The empires of Asia, such as the Chinese and the Hindoo, may be as old, but, properly speaking, they have no history. There seems to be no progress, only stagnation, for millenniums, in the same social and religious state. But the Jews have always been in the van of progress. They have been able also to adapt themselves to all times and to all climes. They multiply in Egypt and Babylon under taskmasters and a burning sun, and they can now live and thrive in the midst of Siberian snows. This power of endurance, and this power of adaptation to changing circumstances, have not been given to all. They belong to the favoured people.

The dispersion of the Jews was not only effected by God, but has by Him been made effective to an important end. Wherever they have been, these people have borne a passive, but still undeniable testimony to the truth of the Holy Scriptures, which set forth God's love in Christ, and also declare, in varied tones and on many grounds, that He "now commandeth all men everywhere to repent."

At the Central Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in India and Malaysia, held at Calcutta in January, Bishop Thoburn spoke as follows:—

In my opening address at our last meeting I ventured to speak of the time when we should "begin to add five thousand or ten thousand converts to our church every year." Little did I then think that before two years should pass such a time would be upon us. It has come, and we are now face to face with the most perplexing responsibilities. Far and near, thousands of converts have come to our altars, and many thousands more are waiting for us to go to them with the Gospel message.

At the very lowest estimate, twenty-five thousand persons are to-day standing outside our doors, willing and waiting to receive the Word which God has entrusted to us for them. From every point of view this is an extraordinary spectacle. If the worst that has been said against these inquirers be true, it does not materially lessen the importance of the movement. It is a spectacle new to India, and with few exceptions new to the heathen world.

From other parts of India intelligence no less remarkable comes to hand. Dr. Clough declaring of the Telugus in the Madras Presidency: "About ten thousand of them have been baptized within the last thirteen months, and at the present time they are coming as fast as we can take care of them."

Nevertheless, when foreign mission work is looked at in the light of the acknowledged duty and actual opportunities of the Church of Christ, it should cause great searchings of heart as well as give rise to feelings of joy. We are glad that, in order to stimulate thought (and, let us hope, action) in this direction, Dr. Angus has issued a revised edition, with facts down to date, of his booklet, "Apostolic Missions: The Gospel for Every Creature" (Nisbet). Dr. Pierson, in an introductory note, says this is one of the boldest, wisest, and strongest appeals for immediate and world-wide evangelisation that he has ever read. We cordially second this high estimate, and trust that Dr. Angus's address, first delivered twenty years ago, will again be influential in awakening Christians to their bounden responsibilities. The Divine method is exhibited; enthusiasm in individual effort is urged; and, finally, Christians are asked to "take up missions as work, not as play." May God apply and bless the timely admonition!

"This is the Finger of God."

The Christianity from which the supernatural is eliminated is not the religion of the New Testament, or of Christ, and indeed is scarcely worth contending for. If the miracles are only the product of hysterical fancy distorting natural phenomena; if Jesus of Nazareth still sleeps beneath the Syrian stars; if there was no Ascension through the still morning air to the cloud which hung like an amber veil over the portals of the heavenly world, then the religion of the Bible cannot meet the one urgent demand of the human heart for some authoritative and God-given pronouncement on the great facts of existence.

It is not so long ago since a leading German scholar tried to reduce the evidence for the Resurrection into the subjective experiences of the Apostle Peter, as a brilliant Frenchman before him had done to those of Mary Magdalene. The Unitarian and Robert Elsmere schools ignore the claim of Christianity to be treated as a supernatural revelation, and explain away all references to the miraculous as hardly worth consideration. This position is only too gladly adopted by this materialistic and self-indulgent age. Is it to be supposed that a so-called Christian people which derives one-half of its total revenue from the consumption of intoxicating liquors and tobacco, would be specially eager to believe in the presence of the supernatural, or to admit that God Himself had stepped in to establish a new order in our world by signs, and miracles, and tokens of supernatural power?

The trend of modern thought, both in certain sections of so-called religious teachers and amid the busy crowds of men, whose perception of the unseen and eternal is constantly being blunted by their absorption in the material and transient, is undoubtedly towards disbelief in the miraculous. The old argument of Hume, that it is easier to believe that the early witnesses were deceived than to believe in the marvels of the Gospels, still holds sway over millions of minds who are conscious of its power, though they may be unwilling to adopt and avow it in so many words. If miracles happened then, why not now? How do we know that those first witnesses were not deceived? Would that we had been there to test the presence of the supernatural for ourselves! Such is the attitude of many who would hardly care to be classed as anti-Christian or infidel.

But it seems to be forgotten that the presence of the supernatural in the facts of Gospel history was attested by two sets of witnesses—by the Apostles, who insisted that their special mission was to affirm the marvellous events they had seen; and by the Holy Ghost, whose mighty voice corroborated theirs in unmistakable tones. "So is also the Holy Ghost."

This witness is in the world to-day. The Apostolic band have long since passed to their rest, leaving their testimony on the page of Scripture, and in the lowest courses of the Church. But the Holy Ghost remains still, attesting not simply the fact of the supernatural past, but the presence of the supernatural in the centuries as they hurry by.

The moral miracles which are being wrought around us each day by the power of the Holy Ghost are as much proofs of the existence and presence of the supernatural as the miracles of the Gospels. Indeed, the miracles of the Gospels are but the miniature of the perpetual miracles which the living Christ is working always by the energy of the Divine Spirit. Still leprous hearts are being cleansed, blind eyes are being opened, dumb lips are speaking, and the dead are being raised. These are facts to which the world is calmly indifferent, but they are irrefutable evidence that God does step out of the unseen into the seen, and makes his power known by unmistakable signs.

What is the testimony borne to the present age by Madagascar, by the Telugus of India, by the martyrs of Uganda, by the transformations of the New Hebrides? There is no power known among men adequate to account for the marvels which these names suggest. And if only intelligent men would stand still and read the lessons which are being taught from every quarter of the world, they would be compelled to admit that there is at work amongst them a power which cannot be accounted for except in the old confession, "This is the finger of God." The supernatural element is amongst us to-day in probably larger measures than ever before in the history of man, and is amply sufficient to justify all our belief in Scripture story.

And is not the same lesson obvious in the story of the Church, which is manifestly the work of the Holy Spirit, and obviously due to his supernatural power? Throughout the centuries its existence has been vehemently assailed. No pains have been spared to stifle its testimony and extinguish its influence. Pilate and Herod have joined hands in their common enmity. But all in vain. There has never been an age, however vehement its hate, which has not had its band of consecrated souls, eager to be witnesses or martyrs for the truth as it is in Jesus. Flood and fire, bribes or threats, the horrors of the Inquisition or the dragoons of Claverhouse, have none of them availed to diminish their numbers or to stay their testimony. Undaunted by all that flesh and blood could do, the mighty host of God's elect has still pressed on. The existence of the Church in the world is due to the perpetual presence of the Holy Ghost. The flame has not died out because He has been its oil. Death has not conquered because He has infused new life. The winter has not destroyed the seedling because He has nourished and cherished it. And in this fact, so wonderful, so unique, there is evidence of at least as much supernatural power in the world of to-day as brought the Church into its existence in those ages that lie back in the far-away past.

We will not speak of the witness of the Holy Ghost to the individual conscience, evident and certain though it is to each believer. It is sufficient to adduce the moral miracles of the present age in the sphere of renovated lives and emancipated nations, and to point to the existence of the Church in the midst of a hostile world, as evidences that the age of the supernatural has not passed away, but is here and now. If the Apostles lived to-day, they would say with unanimous consent, "We are witnesses of these things, and so is also the Holy Ghost."

THE DOORS OF THE SHADOW.

To-day men whisper of "untimely death,"
As though the purposes divine of God
Leave room for fate and chance promiscuous.

The thrush in ruffled plumage on the moor,
The seabird far upon the ocean waste,
Dying unknown of men, are seen of God,
Who knoweth when the hedgerow sparrow falls,
And hears the brood chirp in the lonely nest;
Their tiny eyes mist-hid with grief forlorn.

The death that takes the pauper takes the prince
The patriarch sighs out his breath at eve;
The babe fades out of life at early dawn,
Before the little feet have touched the earth;
The mother dies, and leaves the prattling child
Unconscious of its loss, entranced with toys.

The shadow falls across life's sunlit way,
And all our days would be enwrapped in gloom,
And all our nights dread with despairing dreams,
Were we forgetful of the truth divine
That death is but the servant of our God
To work his will mysterious, and hid
From eyes that would be blinded by the light,
Could we but see across the silent stream
That flows between us and the Beulah land
Where Christ is, with the pierced hands and feet,
The feet and hands that pierced were for thee
And me, and all the throng of ransomed.

The dust returns to dust, the soul to God
Who gave it, and thou canst not guess
Why thou art left to weep, but God doth know,
And He doth hear when, in the hush of night,
Thy cry ariseth: "Master, comfort me:
Weary I am and laden heavily.
Thou who didst stretch the loving hands divine
Above the mourners sad in Bethany,
Whisper across the new-made greening grave,
'Because I live, ye, too, shall also live.'"

THE EQUIPMENT OF THE NEW MAN.

"Satan is strong, the world is strong, corruption are strong; three strong currents, and all setting one way; but the new and holy nature, though in itself weaker than any of them, yet in Christ, and by the power of the Holy Ghost, is stronger than all of them. "After Easter."

"L' homme propose, le Dieu dispose."

The Idumean dynasty had laid well to heart the maxim, "If you cannot be famous, be notorious." Herod the Great, Herod Antipas, and Herod Agrippa are all "remembered by what they have done," but only with wondering horror that men with such grand possibilities should become so degraded. The murder of the innocents by Herod the Great, and the murder of John the Baptist and the mockery of Christ by his son, have given them an everlasting position on the pinnacle of infamy.

Now we see the great Herod's grandson, Herod Agrippa, pursuing the same iniquitous course. He stretches forth august hands, "to vex certain of the Church." First killing the Apostle James, he proceeds to imprison Peter, "intending after Easter to bring him forth," that the people, brutalised by savage rule, should have one of their favourite spectacles, a fellow-creature put to death, with some new refinement of cruelty, for the sole offence of being good. As we look into this prison, through the medium of an inspired description, nothing could seem more secure of accomplishment than Herod's purpose. Four quaternions—sixteen soldiers—to guard one man, and in addition to the soldiers there were locks and bolts, bars and manacles. Safe, surely! The permission given by his predecessor in similar crimes, concerning the security of a yet more sacred Charge, had been followed by Herod, and the words, "Make it as sure as ye can," in the light of after events,

READ LIKE THE KEENEST IRONY.

To Peter's spirit prison bars had already lost their power. No longer the poltroon whom "the breath of a woman could blow down," the Pentecostal baptism had made him strong and brave and free. It was Eastertide, and around him thronged visions of the scenes of which eleven years before he had been an "eye-witness" at that season. Before him passed, with panoramic vividness, the feast of the Supper, with those last sacred discourses, the Gethsemane anguish, the betrayal, and the never-to-be-forgotten miserable denial by his own lips of that gracious Master, leading up to the cruel death and the glad resurrection. We can well believe that on that night the dungeon walls would ring with the burning words, in which his impassioned nature would pour forth to the soldiers to whom he was chained the wonderful story of One in whose love he even then "rejoiced with joy unspeakable and full of glory." Well was it for them that the Gospel was thus preached to those rude, rough men—in every sense "spirits in prison"—for, little as they thought it, it was their last chance, and before another evening had closed they, and not the prisoner they were so faithfully guarding, would be "put to death."

At length silence fell; and fettered limbs, and direst discomfort, and apparently nearing martyrdom, did not prevent Peter from sinking into a sleep as profound and unbroken as that of a tired child in the arms of its mother. And then coming, as it generally does, when human reason would pronounce it impossible. "The angel of the Lord" was the chosen agent, and he did his work well, no sound of falling chains being allowed to disturb the guard, whilst a smart blow was not spared in the awakening of Peter. Angelic speech was turned into the homeliest of channels in direction of Peter's midnight toilet, and angelic and miraculous strength was exerted in accompanying the captive's course through closed doors and past sleeping keepers. In fresh illustration of the truth that Divine help is intended as a stimulant, and not a paralysis, of human energy, the angel, as soon as the insurmountable difficulties were passed, left Peter himself to surmount the rest—left him, too, to make the midnight air vocal with his ascription of praise to the power and faithfulness of his God.

But what of the midnight prayer-meeting—that culmination of the ceaseless current of prayer which had been flowing towards the Mercy-seat ever since the time of Peter's arrest? No answer to their supplications for his freedom, and to-morrow he was to be "brought forth;" and now evidently they had lowered their expectations, and could only believe for spiritual consolation and support to be vouchsafed to their beloved teacher through the coming martyrdom. And it is beautiful to see how the Heavenly Father gives, not grudgingly or of necessity, for in this instance it was not "according to their faith," but far beyond it.

> Breaking the narrow prayers that may
> Befit our narrow hearts, away
> In his broad, loving will,

He often gives "abundantly," above all that we ask or think. He did so now. Whilst their prayers were mingled with sorrow, and possibly with sobs, joy was at hand! Peter alive and free "stood knocking at the gate." The narrative reminds us of each pair representing the strongest possible contrast. Take the first and third. Peter in the gloom and suffering of imprisonment, with death ready to seize its prey; Herod, in dazzling splendour of apparel, seated on a throne in his magnificent palace, and evoking bursts of applause by his eloquence; there are few who would not think the king more enviable than the apostle. And in modified forms the same contrasts exist to-day. "For the present," not joy, but grief, to "those who fear the Lord"; "for the present" success and triumph to "those who fear Him not." But the picture has its other panels. The second might well be crested by the texts, "Say ye to the righteous, it shall be well with him;" "The angel of the Lord encampeth around them that fear Him, and delivereth them." And the fourth, as it portrays the admired monarch ending a dishonoured life in a loathsome death throws a lurid light on the words, "woe to the wicked, it shall be ill with him."

How different an "after Easter" from "the expectation of the people of the Jews, and from the intention of Herod, and from the forebodings of the Church!" The vivid story illustrates, in its brightest aspect to the Christian, the proverbial saying that "it is the unexpected that generally happens." But we want to take the "after Easter" from its original setting for our own special appropriation to-day. There is a greater and more cruel Herod still living, and "stretching forth his hands to vex certain of the Church." But, thank God,

IT IS ALWAYS "AFTER EASTER"

now, and that glorious Resurrection is the pledge of all blessings that are guaranteed to us through Christ.

So let no dungeon of sorrow or difficulty appal us, either for ourselves or our Christian friends. Surely this brief study of Bible story will teach us afresh how near God is, and how ready to answer prayer. Have not many of us seen that wonderful "light shining in the prison" of our sore need, and we, too, have been "compassed about with songs of deliverance?" And He who spared not his own Son, may well be trusted "yet to deliver us."

It may be that the savage captor has bound some of our dearest, and, worst of all, they know not that they are in chains, but think their indifference and forgetfulness of God a proof of liberty. Even then the case is not desperate "whilst with us is prayer." Prayer for the mighty, emancipating Holy Spirit. Let us honour Him more. He is purchased. He is promised. He has been given. But we need Him in far greater fulness. When He comes to the darkest and most enslaved, "the dungeon flames with light," and in many a case of terrible spiritual captivity the glad utterance has become true:

> My chains fell off, my heart was free,
> I rose, went forth, and followed Thee.

A TROPHY OF GRACE.

The recent death of Michael Dunn in Brooklyn, N.Y., while giving his testimony for Christ, deserves more than a passing notice. He was converted in the McAuley Water-street Mission, New York, several years ago. His own testimony of himself was:—

"I was born a thief; my parents were both thieves. One of the first things I remember was being taught to steal. I was in Newgate and other prisons in England and the States, and transported to Australia, more than half of my life (thirty years). I was always a favourite with the keepers, for I obeyed the prison rules, and when my time was out they would say: 'Mike, we will keep a place for you, for we know you will come back again;' and I always did, until the Lord set me free, and then I could keep out of prison.

"My conversion happened in this way. With another thief, I was passing through Water-street, New York, one evening, and we heard singing different from that of the public house. My pal said to me, 'Do you know what that is? Do you remember Jerry McAuley, the river thief? He has got religious, and runs that place. He wears good clothes, and has got a gold watch. His wife is with him, and on Sundays the big folks come down to see him, and shake hands with him.' He wound up by saying, 'Michael, you would make a good parson if you only took to religion.' I replied to him, 'I am coming down to see Jerry some night.'

"I came into the mission, and after a while Jerry stood up and told how he was saved. He was followed by others, some of whom I had known as thieves, drunkards and vagabonds, all saved. A great longing came into my heart to be like them—to be free from this weary, hunted life. At the close when the invitation was given out for all who wanted to be prayed for to come forward, I went forward, and upon my knees asked God for mercy and found salvation."

Soon after Michael's conversion the Lord put it into his heart to open a Home for ex-convicts (one of the most despised and neglected classes of men), where they could find honest work making brooms and brushes, and a comfortable home, and pay for their work and their board. Gospel meetings were held on Sunday and on some week evenings. The Home was a success, and many conversions took place among the inmates. The writer has often conducted meetings in the Home, and heard glorious testimony of God's power to save from the uttermost and keep to the uttermost. Dunn had opened Homes in New York, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Chicago, and Brooklyn before he died. The Home in New York has so prospered that they have erected a large building with a broom and brush factory. The superintendent is a Scotchman, who ran away from home to follow the sea, and landed in New York a poor drunkard. He, too, was converted in the McAuley Mission, and is a successful worker for Christ.

KENSAL MEDICAL MISSION.—The work of this Mission has been much blessed during the past year, and there has been an increase of one thousand attendances and three hundred new patients. It has been the means, in many cases, of leading people to Christ, and of alleviating the sufferings of many. The Lord has met the needs throughout the year. The special need at the present moment is an earnest Christian medical man, who could give two hours on Friday afternoons to seeing some of the patients. Miss Thompson, hon. sec., The Cottage, Kensal-road, W., would be glad to give further particulars to any one willing to help in this way.

ARMY AND NAVY MISSIONARY UNION.—Emanating from the Army and Navy Prayer Union, this organisation has been formed, under the presidency of General Hutchinson (late lay Secretary of the C.M.S.), its principal object being the encouragement of missionary interest and enterprise amongst the officers and men of the two services. Like the Prayer Union, the Missionary Union is strictly undenominational. Its honorary secretaries are Major H. Pelham Burn (Rifle Brigade), The Cherry Orchard, Old Charlton, S.E., for the Army; and Commander Sulivan, R.N., Fleet, Hants, for the Navy—either of whom will be glad to give further information on the subject.

The Christian Life.

AN ADDRESS BY PROFESSOR HOFMEYR, OF STELLENBOSCH, S. AFRICA.

"LET this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." (Phil. ii. 5). Is the life you are seeking after a higher life than that which was breathed into you at the time of your conversion and surrender to Christ for pardon? No, it is the same life. It is the life which every believer possesses by virtue of his being united to Christ. You are both justified and sanctified by being in Christ (Rom. viii. 1; 1 Cor. i. 2). At the time of your conversion you received a whole, an entire Christ. He has been to you since then both your justification and sanctification. He does not give Himself to the believer bit by bit, but entire—once for all. And so you received the new life in its entirety. It is not to be completed by the addition of bit after bit. It remains the same all throughout, unto all eternity. It is life, and life is not made complete by adding part to part. Lifeless things are thus made mechanically. Life grows, expands organically.

See the oak there. Whence its hidden roots and visible branches and blossoms? They are due to the acorn. They were contained in it in an undeveloped state. They were from the very first present in the acorn as a possibility, only waiting for the necessary conditions of growth being fulfilled in order to come forth and show themselves. So it is with the new life imparted to the soul from the moment it becomes united to Christ by faith. It is to be one unbroken continuity of life from beginning to end. You who have been converted but yesterday, you are called to live the same life as the most advanced Christian. God has not two sets of commands, one for the younger and one for the older Christians. He expects the same Christ-like life from all his children. He wants all his children to be like Christ and to live like Christ. You are born into this life, you do not grow into it. But it has to grow in you. You have to GROW AS A CHRISTIAN.

Your capacity of taking in and giving out what Christ imparts must increase, and it does increase by being continually exercised (Heb. v. 14).

Because the Christ-like life is imparted to every believer as a possibility, Paul never hesitates to exhort every believer to walk like Christ. They were very young converts those Thessalonians to whom he thus wrote: "Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," and to whom he could joyfully say, "We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers; remembering without ceasing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father" (1 Thess. i. 2, 3; v. 22, 23). Because it is one and the same life in all, from beginning to end, therefore it is made possible to all believers, on one and the same condition, namely, by faith.

But what does this faith mean? It is trusting God to do in us what is utterly impossible to ourselves. Here is the mistake you made. You thought that a believer should have a power in himself of showing a Christ-like mind, which the unconverted has not, and to that inherent power you trusted; but you failed miserably. Trusting to this inherent power you tried to walk like Christ, putting forth the most earnest endeavours. With what result? That failure followed failure, defeat followed defeat, disappointment followed disappointment. Yours was a sad and miserable life. You were a burden to yourself, perhaps to others too. Christ was not manifested either to yourself or through you to others. You could neither see nor reflect him.

But what has God done to you? He has shown you your mistake. He has shown you that the Christ-like life is for man not a difficult, but an impossible thing. That it can never be man's own work. That it must be God's work in man. That the believer must only by faith (and the obedience which is the manifestation of faith) let God work in him. O, blessed discovery, to which you owe the new manner of life you have commenced to live! Hitherto you mixed law with Gospel, working with believing, self with Christ. The law stimulated you to try what you could not do, and so it multiplied your offences against God and conscience, and robbed you of true peace and joy. It condemned you and left you helpless. It was to you a law of sin and death.

But now you have given up all effort which is thus stimulated by the law. You utterly despair of self. Your eyes have been opened to see that Christ is in you both the cause of your justification and the source of your sanctification; that God Himself is working out through Christ in you the Christ-like life. You have only to yield and to obey. The power by which God works in you through faith, effecting what all created power can never effect, is no less Divine, no less omnipotent, than the power whereby Christ was raised from the dead (Eph. i. 18-20).

There were some believers at Philippi who did not live the humble Christ-like life (Phil. ii. 1-3, 14; iv. 2). These Paul exhorted to be like-minded with Christ. How had they to obey this exhortation? Not by legal, self-born endeavours, but by believing that Christ was living by his Spirit in them (ii. 1), and that God was Himself working out the Christ-like life in them. Remember the injunction, "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out (the purpose of) your salvation (which is a Christ-like life) with fear and trembling (with filial sensitiveness), for it is God which worketh in you BOTH TO WILL AND TO DO of his good pleasure. Do all things without murmurings and disputings, that ye may be blameless and harmless, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world" (ii. 12-15).

THE SONS OF GOD,

The life you have to live is as supernatural as was the life of Christ, the Son of God. The world is to be convinced of the reality of your conversion by its supernatural result. The worldly and worldly religious people must behold in you a life which infinitely surpasses their capability and can only be made possible by one's union with Christ through faith. How beautifully was the Christ-like life exemplified in Paul. He dared exhort the new converts to follow him even as he followed Christ. Suppose his Christ-like life to have been the result of his own endeavour, then it would have made him the proudest Pharisee that ever lived. But to whom did he ascribe his success in following Christ? Not to himself, but to Christ. "I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me" (Gal. ii. 19-20).

You, who have just begun to live this life of faith with regard to the Christ-like life to which you are called, rejoice exceedingly to know that you can walk worthy of your calling, because "faithful is He that calleth you, who also will do it" (1 Thess. v. 24). Yours is the believing and obeying. God's is the doing. All things are possible for those that believe. Faith has no other and no less a resource to fall back upon than the Divine. That resource is the Christ who dwells in the believing heart (Eph. iii. 17). He is yours and you are his. Never turn back again to self to seek its help. Let Christ in everything to which God calls you be to you the beginning and the end. Only believe and obey, and He will never fail you.

A FRESH-AIR FUND has been formed by Mr. C. A. Pearson, in order to induce the readers of his Weekly to co-operate with him in giving poor children "a breath of pure country air." The arrangements are being made in connection with the Ragged School Union, and should funds be forthcoming it is intended to take parties of two hundred children at a time every week-day between June 13th and September 17th. It is a good example, which many might well follow.

DR. GOODWIN ON GOD'S WORD.

In a letter, dated Chicago, March 12, 1892, and addre to a reader of THE CHRISTIAN, Rev. Dr. E. P. Good remarks:—

WE need not fear, I think, the fullest cussion of the Word of God. I believe it stand, whether tested on its literary merits its relations to science and philosophy, or a ethics, and as to all its claims of supernatu ism. I believe so fully in its divine origin character, and I am so radical in the gro which I take with reference to the doctrin inspiration, that I do not allow of any antag ism between it and science, or history, chronology. I believe fully in its "inerran as the modern phrase is. If holy men of spoke as they were moved by the Holy Gh then they have given us only such a revelat as He designed us to have. He certainly k all things.

Whether He chose to reveal truth of one k or of another makes little difference. Whate revelation He has made is a truthful revelati so far as it goes. The sun does not shine so f in the earliest morning as at the noontime; whatever light comes in, the twilight is li from the sun. It is, so far forth, from the t light, and all that we need is a fuller disclos of it. So with the Scriptures; the light t shines in the Pentateuch is not so full as t which shines in the New Testament; but it nevertheless, light, and so far as it makes a rev tion it makes a true one. We shall find m and more, as we study the testimonies of Word, what I think science itself is helping now to find—that there is the most exact acc in every line of investigation, between the tru which are disclosed in science, and the tru which are revealed in the Word.

Of course, we need correct interpretations the Word and correct interpretations of scie My position is, that when we have both, t will give us one testimony, because they co from the same God. But, as I often say, potential proof of the divineness of Script lies in the fruit which it bears in the hearts lives of men, I believe that exactly as ligh adapted to the eye, and food is adapted to body, so the Word of God is adapted to m souls; and that, if we can bring it to bear u men without any philosophy as to its nature its methods, we shall bring men to know truth and to feel its power; and they will thereby brought out of darkness into light, out of the bondage of sin into the liberty of children of God.

That is to say, God's Word is, as a whole, Word—a divine unity from Genesis to Rev tion; and as such it is the power of God, wisdom of God unto salvation to all them t believe. So I think the one thing for us to d to keep on spreading the glad tidings and pres ing the Word just as it is. God will see to without question, that it accomplishes t whereto it is sent.

London Railway Men.

THE annual meetings of the Metropolitan rail men have been most encouraging. The gather were large, and the addresses given were ful power. The work of the Mission has greatly tended during the past year. The Lord has gi the workers much cause for praise in seeing care souls attend the meetings regularly.

All the workers are voluntary, except the r sionary, who devotes his whole time to the need the men. £250 a year is needed to carry on work. Miss Jackson, 28, Topstone-road, Kensing W., will gladly send the names of railway men are in want of monthly packets of Gospel literat

At a recent meeting of the Public Library Committee it was decided to a The Pioneer. There are some men of high prin on the Committee, but also two or three of somew singular judgment, for one suggested that the pa should guarantee never again to print articles c paring Rome to "the Harlot" of Rev. xvii., w another actually declared The English Church to be "decidedly worse" than the formerly-boycot Pioneer!

A Link with the Past.

Few, now, are the living links to connect the present generation with that to which the writer of "The Dairyman's Daughter" belonged. Some who knew and heard him reside at Turvey still; while other few may yet be found in the surrounding villages. But, like the sere leaves that linger through the autumn, to go down before December winds, the old people are fast disappearing with the winters, and very, very soon the last of them will have gone.

One of those who are left is living at Pavenham. Born within sound of Olney bells, in 1801, it was when they were new, or almost new, that old Mrs. Spires, as a child, committed to memory the hymns that Newton and Cowper have given to the Church of Christ, and that, since then, have been sung and quoted in every part of the Christianised earth. She remembers, too, having heard, as a schoolgirl, of letters that Carey wrote home from India to his old friends in Olney.

But very different, according to the old lady's account, were those early days of the century to the times in which we are now living. War was raging abroad, while fever and famine prevailed at home; and as the Assizes followed each other, men and women, who had been driven by starvation to acts of petty theft, were being strung up like dogs in every county town.

One incident related by the old lady must have been peculiarly painful to all acquainted with its details. A farmer of the period had been reduced to the lowest depths of want; and, in the recklessness of despair, had stolen a sheep to save his family. While carrying home a portion of the carcase he was met by a neighbour, who playfully asked him what had brought him prowling about at night. Thinking he was discovered, he took to his heels, and dropped his parcel in his terror. The other took it up, and, without considering the consequences, acquainted his neighbours with what had happened. A little while afterwards, and the parish constables had been placed on the fugitive's track They found the poor fellow at home, but without either fire or food in the house. When his children learnt the intruders' errand they frantically clung around their father, and refused to be separated from him. Even the stern emissaries of the law found the scene almost too much for them. But duty, at length, prevailed over sentiment; and, torn from the arms that would have kept him, he was led away, to be sentenced to death.

One of Mrs. Spires's brothers was killed at the siege of Badajos, and hard it is to keep a dry eye when the dear old soul gives the story of his enlistment at Bedford Fair, and tells how, when he went off to join the army of Wellington, in Spain, he waved his hand to his little sister, who stood at the window to watch his departure. From the pathos thrown into the recital one might almost imagine the speaker still to be the little sister, rather than a woman between ninety and a hundred years old.

It was about the time of her marriage that she became acquainted with Legh Richmond. Her husband was converted under the good man's ministry, but afterwards joined the "Particular Baptists." From all that the neighbours say about him he was a simple-minded, but earnest Christian; and the Word of God being precious in those days, he showed how much he prized it by throwing open his house for preaching, and by sometimes preaching himself. He was taken home, after a lingering and painful illness, some twenty-two years ago.

When we first came to Pavenham we found the old lady and a devoted daughter, who had left her place at service for the sake of ministering to her widowed mother, engaged in making the Bedfordshire pillow lace. This Mrs. Spires continued to make till she had entered her ninetieth year. The last piece taken from her pillow was, through the kindness of Mrs. Theodore Walker, forwarded to Her Majesty the Queen, by whose orders a letter of thanks was returned to the aged toiler from Windsor Castle.

It needed no persuasion on our part to induce our old friend to open her house for a cottage meeting on th Monday night. The idea made her face quite radiant with delight, and so, about every fortnight, for the last ten years, we have gathered under her humble roof for prayer, praise, and the study of God's Word. Sometimes she will pray herself, and sometimes give us a short address at the close of our meeting; but as she has twice broken an arm within the last six years, the shock received on each of these occasions has done much to enfeeble her physical powers.

I have ever regretted that I did not take down for publication her words on the twenty-first anniversary of her husband's death. They might have done much in strengthening the faith of other widows. "It is twenty-one years to-night," said she, "since God took my dear husband from me. It was a dark prospect before me, and all he could do to comfort me was to tell me God would take care of me. But his words have all come true. God has taken care of me. I didn't know where my support was to come from, but it has come, year by year, and day by day. I have never wanted yet, and I don't believe I ever shall, for He who has borne with my ill-manners so long won't leave the poor old widow now." She then went on to testify to God's proved faithfulness in spiritual things, and gave us not only a remarkable, but even a lengthy address.

When we met at her cottage recently she had just completed her ninety-first year, and again, playing the part of a mother in Israel, she gave us younger believers a word of cheer, while offering her testimony to the truthfulness of God. Feeling that her feet may, even now, be bearing her along the last stage of life, there is not a particle of boasting in her conversation. It is her constant confession that there is nothing in her but that which causes her to look off to Christ. And is it not best for her thus to be keeping her eyes on Him? Maybe it would be well for some of us younger folk if, instead of looking so much to ourselves, and, as we think, to "Christ in us," we were looking constantly away to Him.

I would only add that I should be pleased to answer any questions about her from those whom I may have interested in her history.

THE EVANGELISTIC MISSION.

There were large assemblies at the Bank Holiday meetings at Kilburn Hall on Monday. Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, director of the Evangelistic Mission, presided in the afternoon. After praise and prayer, Mr. George Hucklesby spoke upon the threefold aspect of the Lord Jesus as the present portion of his people, as typified in the Lamb, Ex. xii. 8; the manna, Ex. xvi.; and the old corn of the land, Josh. v. 10.

Mr. Henry Varley followed with a practical address. Referring to Rom. vi. he pointed out that sin is there spoken of, not "sins." The worst thing about the sinner is not that he does wrong, though that is bad enough, but that he is wrong. Our nature is inherently and positively bad. A Christian should do nothing unless he can do it to the glory of God. Even our eating and drinking must come under the strictest subjection if we would have spiritual power. There is a bloodless morality that goes for making clean the outside of the cup and platter, while leaving untouched the rotten corruption within.

Mr. T. A. Denny presided at the evening meeting. Drs. Anderson and McKilliam, Mr. Cooke (of the Indian service), Mr. Hogg (of the China Inland Mission), and Mr. Harrison (from Australia) took part in the proceedings.

Theatrical Employes at Tea.

In its work for Christ the agency engaged in providing religious services for non-churchgoers in theatres, music-halls, and mission-rooms, has been energetically and successfully occupied during the past season. More than three hundred thousand have attended the meetings, and not a few have enrolled themselves on the side of the Lord. The work among the theatrical employés has been very fruitful. The experience of the London City Missionary recently assigned to deal with that class of the community is most interesting.

On the evening of Good Friday between eight hundred and nine hundred persons, employed in one capacity or another in such places of public amusement as the Pavilion, Standard, Britannia, Sadler's Wells, Surrey, and Grand Theatres, were entertained at tea by Mr. and Mrs. George Williams at the Shoreditch Town Hall. Courtesy, order, and cheerfulness prevailed. It was hard to determine whether the guests or the host and hostess were the most delighted. An evangelistic meeting was afterwards held, Mr. Williams presiding. He set forth the urgent necessity of closing with the offer of salvation. Mr. J. H. Lydall, Miss Dashwood, Rev. J. B. Berguer, Mr. C. M. Sawell, and Rev. J. B. Barraclough also spoke. As the large assembly left the building each was given, in the name of the Religious Tract Society, a handsomely bound book.

A JEWISH MISSION MEETING.

As special methods are needed to bring the truth before Jews, an evangelistic meeting among people of the favoured nation differs greatly from those among Gentiles. Most Jewish missionaries are themselves Jews, but this is by no means necessary in all cases, as the Christian, who has acquainted himself to some extent with the language and mind of the Jew, and whose heart is filled with love to Christ and to his kinsmen according to the flesh, possesses a great influence with the Jews, though of a different kind from that of his Jewish brother missionary.

Meetings for Jews are held three times a week in Zion Chapel, Whitechapel-road, a thoroughfare which is generally crowded with Jews on Saturday afternoon. Before three o'clock, the time of the meeting, workers distribute invitations printed in Judeo-German to the Hebrew foot-passengers, for otherwise a congregation cannot always be relied on. Descending the steps into the schoolroom, where the meeting is to be held, we find from forty to fifty Jews assembled, while the platform is occupied by two or three missionaries, with the Scriptures in Hebrew and German before them. The meeting is opened by the reading of a portion of Scripture, first in Hebrew and then in German; an Old Testament passage is generally selected, but in this case it is from the New Testament—Romans iii. Praying God's blessing on the meeting in but few words, the missionary proceeds to set forth the inability of man to keep the law of God, and the necessity of the Messiah being also an atonement for sin, which doctrine he confirms with citations from the Old Testament. He speaks in German—with an occasional Hebrew word or quotation—and, indeed, the whole proceedings are in German, or in the Jewish German dialect. The audience is constantly becoming augmented or decreased by individuals strolling in or out; and it is often as great an art to keep as to get a Jewish audience of this kind. The men will be bound by no rules; they signify assent to or dissent from the speaker's words by free conversation, or by openly challenging his statements. As a rule, the speaker requests that all discussion shall be deferred till the close, seeking as far as possible to deliver a connected message first. On this occasion, as often, there are one or two atheistic Socialists among the audience, for this combination of Atheist and Socialist—the latter word being used in its common but not highest signification—is found among Jews as well as Gentiles. One of these demands proofs of the inspiration of the Bible, and a reconciliation of the existence of a God with the social problems of the day.

Some might imagine that the Jews themselves would be the first to take up the cudgels in such a case, faithfully to defend their own Old Testament Scriptures from the attacks of such a man. But, alas, no! Strong religious feeling, even among Jews, has largely given way to indifference, and they listen to the sceptic without rebuke, sometimes even applauding his sallies. Perhaps it is that they would like to see the missionary brow-beaten, and care not by what weapons. Now another figure on the platform rises, this time an Englishman, though he speaks in German. He points out that the truths of Christianity can only be established between Jew and Christian by appeal to the Old Testament Scriptures as the Word of God; and that, therefore, the Atheist has no basis whereon to agree, and is put out of court—though not out of God's grace. He presses home once more the sinfulness of man, on the authority of God, and urges faith in Christ as the only means of redemption. At times, though, as it happened, not on this occasion, many questions of real interest are raised by the Jews, and often voluntary testimonies are given to belief in Jesus Christ.

Once more a short prayer—this time in English—and the meeting breaks up, to continue discussion, however, for some time in small groups about the room. At the other end of the room is a table with New Testaments and tracts, which are given away to those honestly desirous of reading them. Thus is the seed of the Gospel implanted in Jewish bosoms, in the belief that God may, by his Holy Spirit, cause it to bear fruit to his glory.

May We Expect a Revival?

These nineteen centuries have been marked by periodic religious movements, local or widespread, as though the Church of Christ had her phases and seasons; her seed time and harvest; her summer and winter. The cycles have not found her, on their recurrence, in the same position; for a superior Power has been directing her course into new regions of experience and blessing in the heavenlies. Each revival has been marked by a special feature: orthodoxy concerning the person of Christ; the reformation of the Church; purity of morals; evangelical godliness; the missionary enterprise; the power of prayer; practical philanthropy.

If Christendom could give its voice to-day as to the character of a Revival which would be the need of our times, it would probably be in favour of one distinguished by the unity of Christians through the effusion of the Spirit, and the fulfilment of the Saviour's prayer, "I in them, and Thou in Me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the world may know that Thou hast sent Me." The cry of a multitude of the disciples, now ascending to heaven, is "Wilt Thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in Thee?"

If we reach back to seasons within our memory, and which lie open to review, with the object of discerning the signs of the times, it will be found that to the period inaugural to "Times of Refreshing"—like the hush before the storm, or the droppings which presage the shower—there is something analogous in the condition of religious thought and feeling at the present time.

THE FIRST INDICATION IS DESIRE.

Revivals have usually been anticipated by deep longings, not only amongst the most godly people, but amongst nominal Christians and indifferent outsiders. Every thoughtful man, however unspiritual, must be conscious that society needs improving, both in Church and State, and as well for the body as the soul. He will admit that what is urgently wanted is a right spirit, and be convinced that the wisest legislation and best methods will fail, except directed by a soul of righteousness. God alone can bring in "the good time coming," which all would be glad to see, and would rejoice also if some mighty force could sweep them into the Kingdom of God.

The temperature of feeling rises within Christian communities who are longing for God to visit Zion (though it be their own little Zion), and who are desirous that the set time to favour her may come.

The Lord spoke by Jeremiah, saying, "The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times, and the turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the judgment of the Lord." Times of judgment and of blessing ought to be intuitively discerned. The portents are around us, and we know that summer is nigh. A corresponding attitude of expectancy heralded the revival in the United States in 1858. Of the several forces which combined to produce this expectancy, one was the controversy on the question of slavery. It was as intense in religious circles as in society generally. The belief that man could hold property in man struck its roots throughout the Southern States, and was spreading into new territories westward. Professing Christians in the south fortified their position by appeals to Scripture and ancient custom. Northern Christians, for the most part, energetically denounced it, and sought to bind around it a legislative cordon, saying, "Thus far and no farther." It developed into a time of grave anxiety when it was manifest that neither controversy nor legislation could cope with the evil—that nothing short of direct Divine interposition could sweep it away. Hope turned to God, and expectation was fixed on Him. There existed then an intense school of piety, represented by Finney, Mahan, Caughey, Bishop Simpson, and Dr. and Mrs. Palmer, whose Christian devotion and deep piety aroused the churches, and bade them "Lift up their heads, for their redemption was drawing nigh."

The same spirit of expectancy was awakened during the following year in the North of Ireland. Tidings of a great Revival in America were borne by correspondence with personal friends and relatives; by lengthened accounts in the public papers; and by sermons and addresses, in which the story was told of the great work of grace. Professor Gibson, of the Assembly's College, went that he might witness the Revival scenes for himself, and published in an interesting pamphlet a record of what he saw and heard. The longings of multitudes for "showers of blessing" were as deep and great as those of a dry and thirsty land, rent by a thousand fissures, as though the earth were opening her mouth to heaven and the air were laden with her sighs.

It was a time of great expectation, and the eye of faith caught the Fitzroy signals that a favourable wind had sprung up, and was bearing a cloud of blessing across the western sea. Those periods of expectation are paralleled in our present times.

THE SECOND INDICATION IS SINCERITY.

Conviction is the spring of action. Great movements have been the result of a strong persuasion. Sincerity is honesty of heart, and the Searcher of hearts discovers it. The progress of a religious revival has always been marked by thoroughness and depth. It is Christianity in downright earnest. The obvious reality is all the more striking when compared with the too familiar formalism. The approach of a revival is marked by the vanishing of what is superficial and perfunctory, and by a manifest determination to get at the depths and be thorough—a searching after the reality of God with heart and soul and strength. The historical fact is that, previous to the American Revival referred to, there was the most serious commercial panic ever known in the Western world. Every bank stopped payment, the strongest commercial houses succumbed to the crisis; fortunes which were the fruit of years of industry were lost in a day; thousands were out of employment; some feared to ask payment of bills from men whose faces were haggard with a wild despair. Heaven and earth seemed shaken, and the hearts of many failed them.

One effect took place—the religious world was shaken out of its formalism. The tempest swept away every refuge of lies, and foundations were laid bare. Reality alone could satisfy a people so terribly in earnest, a real religion, a vital gospel, a strong consolation, a Christ mighty to save. Heart and flesh were crying out for the living God. A people thoroughly aroused and intensely earnest are not far from the kingdom of God; for it is written, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."

Tidings flowed in a continuous stream, of the progress of the work in the States. From speculative discussions public attention was turned toward and centred upon the practical subject of a definite blessing. What they wanted was, that God should be in the midst of them of a truth; and they were moved to fervent and continuous prayer. The most casual observer of the condition of Christian society in England today must perceive that there has been a general movement and a very marked advance in the direction of genuineness and sincerity in religion. People are turning away in disgust from hollowness and mockery where their profoundest interests are concerned. They know that men must be honest who deal with God. There has been a rebound from the Romeward tendency identified with the Oxford movement. Professing Christians in their conventions have been expressing their desire for a truer, deeper, fuller spiritual life.

THE THIRD INDICATION IS PRAYER.

Revival must come down from heaven. God has ordained prayer as a channel of communication. The ascent of petition finds response in the descent of blessing. "Thus saith the Lord, I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them." "Ask and ye shall receive." Wherein God is disobeyed He is dishonoured.

Dr. Prime entitled his record of the American revival "The Power of Prayer," and thus begins his second chapter: "In the upper lecture-room of the 'Old North Dutch Church,' in Fulton-street, New York, a solitary man was kneeling upon the floor in earnest, importunate prayer." Thus he describes Mr. Lanphier, a home missionary, who pleaded for the city that lay heavily on his heart.

That praying man was the germ of a great work of grace and a parable in himself. Others joined him in the same exercise, and soon the noonday prayer-meeting became an institution. As it grew the revival spread. The movement which marked the times of Whitefield and the Wesleys, was marked by the blessing of God on preaching. They began as the praying band [illegible] Oxford; but the epoch was marked as that single men addressing crowds. The Americ revival was signally an era of prayer—the mul tudes addressing God. There was no room f preaching where none could occupy more th five minutes. The chairmen were mostly promp methodical, Christian, business men; but in the meetings there was a quickening spirit prayer. Men prayed directly, simply, pointed powerfully. They asked for what they wante as from a father, and as though they expected in the name of Jesus.

Old ideas of prayer were swept away. T formula was forgotten, that prayer should co sist of adoration, thanksgiving, confession, a supplication for blessings personal, domest national, and universal. When the inevitab bell was expected to strike "time up" at t end of five minutes, men prayed in telegram They were terse and direct as sinking Pet "Save, Lord, I perish." The narrowing of t time gave accumulative force to the stream petition. The discovery was made that t secret of spiritual dynamics lay in the power prayer.

The same feature marked the beginning a progress of the Irish Revival. When the strea was traced to its spring, it was found where few young men met together to pray. Th had no leader, none to teach them how to pra save the Spirit of God. One after another w converted. From their knees they went for to be living witnesses. Their unpretentio meetings consisted of prayer and testimon They were crowded wherever the young co verts came, and though they might be illitera they were full of Christ.

The movement was both Backward and F ward. The refluent wave was followed by anoth that struck higher along the shore. The elde took a back seat, and the young people came the front. Those who received blessing at on began to pray as with other tongues, the Spi giving them utterance. None could gainsay t witness of those who spoke what they knew a testified what they had seen. In prayer th seemed irresistible, and the places where th were assembled seemed to shake with the p sence of the Lord. The whole region seem bathed in the Spirit of grace and of supp cation.

A similar spirit of prayer is deepening a spreading around us to-day. We seem to sta under the fringe of a cloud of blessing. Minist and churches are pleading with increasing f vency for a manifestation of the Spirit. Annu assemblies, like the recent Congregational Uni meeting, interrupt their conferences to give the selves to prayer, and appoint special morni prayer-meetings. Missionary societies are co vening all-days of prayer for labourers, mea and blessing. Prayer unions which reckon th membership by thousands are banded in a fello ship of prayer.

When people begin to pray the Revival h begun already. Say ye, Where is the promise his coming? He stands in our midst when t doors are shut. The seasons are in his han and they shall come in the appointed time. Ble winds and driving hail may seem to hinder t footsteps of the living springtime, but the co nant of God standeth sure, and his season blessing cannot fail. The prophet Hosea su moned Israel to return unto the Lord. "Ta with you words, and say unto Him: Take aw all iniquity, and receive us graciously, so sh we render the calves of our lips." The p mised Divine response is immediate: "I will as the dew unto Israel; he shall grow as t lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. Th that dwell under his shadow shall return; th shall revive as the corn and grow as the vine."

"Who is wise and he shall understand th things; for the ways of the Lord are right."

LEWES.—A united mission, under the direct of a Ladies' Committee connected with the Pres terian Church of Lewes, was conducted for fo days last week. Mrs. Anderson, from London, g Bible readings in the afternoons in the Lect Hall of the Presbyterian Church. A remarka work has been going on among the Y.M.C members, many of whom have received bless through Bible classes conducted by Rev. Dan Gunn. As a result these young men, full of ferv and love, helped on the Mission by engaging regular out-door work. The audiences each even were riveted by the earnest words of Mrs. Anders and the touching solos of Mrs. Pope. After-mee ings were held every night, and several conversi are believed to have taken place.

MEDICAL MISSION IN NORTH CHINA.

The Superintendent of the T'ung-shin Hospital and Dispensary, Chefoo, writes:—The number of Chinese patients treated during the year 1891 is a little over four thousand. I have had to refuse some in-patients during the cold weather, having no funds to enable me to warm the hospital, and the cold here is very severe.

Sixty-eight operations have been performed, twelve of these being done under chloroform or ether, and two or three others (on the eye) with the help of cocaine. The varities of disease treated, i.e., both medical and surgical, have been 112, the most common being diseases of poverty and dirt. The Gospel is preached every morning to the patients and others who may come in; a short service is held in the morning, and recently, a night school in the evening.

Mrs. Randle has a day-school of eight scholars, boys and girls, in which steady progress is made. The whole cost of the school is £10 per year, which includes teachers' salary, books and one meal a day to the girls, who are very poor. The school teacher (a young Chinese woman formerly of the Presbyterian Mission school), and also one native helper have been supported in part by ourselves and in part by the gifts of friends at home.

The out-patients are mostly very poor people, who suffer from bad food and unhygienic conditions of life. Many need food, not medicine. The entire amount of money I have had to spend during the year has been about £52. The China Inland Mission has given me £46, and outside friends have subscribed £6, being principally fees for some medical attention. From this it will be seen that the actual cost of treatment has been only 3d. per case. Many patients have cost us much less than this, but several have cost us much more. 4000 sick people treated for £50 is surely not expensive missionary work. The chief expenses are, of course, first, medicines; then wages of assistant and hospital boy, also apparatus and appliances of various kinds.

We have been preserved in peace during seasons of excitement, and have been enabled to continue our work in all its departments without being once stopped, for which we are devoutly thankful. This is, nevertheless, a very hard field of labour, and we would ask all who know us to bear us up before God in constant prayer that blessing and fruit may be more abundantly given.

One interesting case—out of many—is that of a man (suffering from carbuncle), head of a well-to-do family in the village of T'ung-shin. He had no desire to seek our treatment, having cherished, for some reason or other, very hostile feelings towards us. His relations, seeing that his condition was a bad one, and was becoming worse, at length prevailed upon him to have me called. After my treatment, he gradually improved, and is now well. He has been touched by the attention we gave him for two months; he is no longer an enemy, but a friend, and comes to our Sunday morning services, and has come to the conclusion that we are different people to what he supposed. So prejudice is broken down, and friendship secured, and the people are learning the Gospel. In May last we baptised two converts in the sea, a service being held here before we went, and prayer and confession at the seaside.

Bethnal-green Free Library.

The sixteenth anniversary of this institution recently took place. The Treasurer, Mr. F. A. Bevan, presided. He said he rejoiced to know that the institution continued to flourish, and that the number of readers last year was in excess of those in the previous year—showing that they thoroughly appreciated the institution.

Rev. A. F. W. Ingram, of Oxford House, Bethnal-green, moved the adoption of the report in very friendly terms, and this was supported by Dr. Dawson Burns. Other speakers were: Mr. C. W. B. Burdett, Rev. Isaac Hartill, and Mr. J. E. Greenhill. During the evening Mrs. Bevan distributed prizes to the students of the evening classes held in connection with the library.

MR. MERRY, Sen., sails by Sardinian this day, April 21, for Canada, with the sixty-third party of little emigrants from the Home of Industry. Prayer is earnestly asked for safe voyage and for our God to bless the lads.

THE LATE REV. DR. H. ALLON.

Death has once more robbed the Nonconformist pulpit in London of one of its foremost representatives. After a very brief illness Dr. Henry Allon, so long the pastor of Union Chapel, Islington, died on Saturday morning. He had preached to his own people on the previous Sabbath, and was announced to preach again last Sabbath evening, so that the circumstances of his decease correspond in a measure with those of the late Dr. Donald Fraser. Dr. Allon was expecting soon to retire from active ministerial work, and only a few months ago a co-pastor and successor was found in Rev. W. H. Harwood, late of Sunderland.

For close on fifty years Dr. Allon was pastor of Union Chapel, and for more than a generation he has been regarded as one of the leading lights of the Congregational pulpit in this country. He enjoyed the unique distinction of having been twice elected Chairman of the Congregational Union. He belonged to what may be called the "Broad" school of Nonconformist theologians, and his preaching was more characterised by culture than by intensity. At the same time, he held fast by the distinctively evangelical truths of the Christian faith, and was strong in the belief that a man's Christianity ought to colour and regulate every aspect and relation of life, whether individual, social, civic, or political. For a score of years he edited the now defunct British Quarterly.

The congregation worshipping at Union Chapel, has long been noted for the extreme excellence of its service of praise. This was mainly due to the musical gifts of its pastor, who compiled a hymn and tune book which has been largely in use in the Congregational body. During his pastorate of 48 years, Dr. Allon is stated to have received into the membership of the church some four thousand persons.

Last Sunday morning Mr. Harwood made touching references to the death of the senior pastor, and to the intimate relations sustained to his attached flock for so many years. A funeral service will be held in Union Chapel this day (Thursday) at 2.30 p.m., and the interment will be at Abney-park Cemetery at 4 p.m.

MR. MOODY IN ROME.

On Thursday evening, April 7, Mr. Moody gave a Gospel address in the Scotch church. His usual rapid movements only gave us a few hours' notice of his intended visit to the City of the Cæsars; but the brief time was fully taken advantage of by a few willing workers, and notices were widely distributed all over the city on Wednesday night and early on Thursday morning.

The greater part of Thursday was devoted by our beloved friend to visiting the spots associated with the name of the great apostle. The "hired house," the Mamertine Prison, the Palatine, where he made his appeal to Cæsar, were all visited, but specially the Appian Way. When he came to the spot where the old pavement is distinctly traceable he asked to be allowed to leave his carriage, and with his son Paul he quietly and thoughtfully walked some distance, remarking to his son, "These very stones were trod by the apostle on his way to Cæsar's judgment-seat." He took only a passing interest in the great monuments which line the remarkable road; his soul seemed filled with the Gospel and its greatest missionary.

At 8.30 the Scotch church was filled with a most attentive audience, amongst which were a number of Italians, both soldiers and civilians. Mr. Moody's address was marked by simplicity and Divine power. For an hour he poured forth his soul, commending Jesus to sinners, pleading with saints to become more like their Master, and closing with some touching remarks upon the glorious things and the glory awaiting the believer. We bless the Lord for this short but precious visit, and several who spoke to Mr. Moody at the close of the meeting went away rejoicing that they had been privileged to share in the blessing.

Mr. Moody left on Friday morning for Jerusalem. David Young, M.D.

A LADY'S CALL TO PRAYER.

Dear Sir,—I have received the following letter from Miss Campbell, best known as the founder and leader of the Mildmay Railway Mission:—

Dear Mr. MacGill,—In October, 1885, I received an invitation from a friend to meet Mr. Reginald Radcliffe and a few Christians in an hotel in London, that we might spend some hours in prayer for the evangelisation of the world. One of the immediate outcomes of that meeting was the organisation of several missionary conventions on somewhat new lines; as you will remember, the hearers were brought face to face with the needs of the world, the perishing millions, and the responsibilities of the Church of Christ. Several who were fully engaged in home mission work were present at the first of these, and then realised that the Lord was calling them to leave the home work for far off lands where the millions were living and dying in the darkness of superstition and heathenism, with no one to tell them of the glad good news.

I was among the number, and after waiting on the Lord about it for two years the way was made clear, and I left for China, expecting to spend the rest of my life among its people. But this did not prove to be the purpose of the Lord. While engaged in the work and acquiring the language without expected difficulty, I received a clear intimation that his will for me was that, when I had seen for myself the terrible realities of heathenism, and the open doors for the messenger of the Lord, I should go among his people in other lands as his messenger from the heathen to them. After fourteen months spent in pleading this cause in the United States of America, I returned to England, and in less than nine months urged the claims of this heathen in about three hundred meetings all over the land, and since then in many more.

But with the deepest sorrow and heart-weariness I feel inclined to say: What is the use of it all? What are the results? These I leave with God. He sent me to speak and I have spoken. How have the people heard? The power of the Lord was mightily present, and it seemed as if the apathy and indifference would be no more. Vain delusion! Now the cry of my heart is Prayer, Prayer. Will God's people come and pray? My thoughts go back to that prayer-meeting in 1885. Why should there not be another? As you shared in organising the Convention that followed that prayer-meeting, I unburden my mind to you that we may together ask what is the mind of the Lord about it, and see what can be done.

As Manchester is so central, could we arrange for a three days' gathering there of foreign missionaries and persons heartily interested in the subject, for prayer and humiliation?—Sincerely yours, F. E. Campbell.

To this letter I replied, and the result is the advertisement which appears on page 29 of this issue of The Christian. I do most sincerely hope that the Christian Church will respond to this lady's call to prayer. Thousands have gathered to hear man talk; why should they not come and hear what God the Lord would speak? The Lord has blessings for the heathen. Can it be that He has stayed his hand because we have not asked, or asked amiss? Let us humble ourselves before Him, confess the sins of his people, and plead the cause of the heathen in the spirit, "I will not let Thee go unless thou bless them."—Yours in the Gospel,

J. Wakefield MacGill.

City Mission, Manchester.

REV. JOHN McNEILL IN GLASGOW.

This mission has now gone on for two weeks, and the work deepens. The afternoon meetings in St. Andrew's Hall are well maintained, the audience almost filling the spacious building. This is considered remarkable when the cold weather is taken into account, and the fact that many West-end families are out of town during the Easter holidays.

A striking feature of the mission is the large evening gathering in Hengler's Circus, which has proved a splendid place for evangelistic services. This is the first time that the Gospel has been preached in it, but many hope again to hear the "good news" sounded forth within its walls. As an auditorium it suits Mr. McNeill well, for he has his congregation round him.

On Sabbath, April 10, large crowds gathered at 2.30 p.m. for non-church goers, at 5 for women, and at 7 for men. So great was the crush, that at the 2.30 and 7 o'clock meetings the doors had to be closed. Every night during the past week the circus has been well filled, nearly three thousand people being present. One is impressed with the number of men who come; in some parts of the building there are long rows of men only. One night there were eight men out of one team of football players. The superintendent of the Seamen's Mission—assisted by some of his workers—has been bringing numbers of sailors each night, and there have been many conversions among these men. One sailor, who for seventeen years occupied a good position, but lost it through drink, gave his testimony at a sailors' meeting two days after, and joined his ship rejoicing in Jesus.

Mr. McNeill invited those who had got blessing and who had decided while the Gospel was being preached, to write to him and state the fact. Quite a number of letters have been received, and they are of deep interest. One man states that he was an office-bearer of the church, and looked upon by all his friends as respectable, but he had till last week been living in sin. He was led to the Lord during one of the addresses. Another man who had fled from justice, and was so wretched that he intended to destroy himself, and had the revolver loaded in his pocket, surrendered to Jesus, and handed the revolver to one of the workers. A number of young lads have been saved. It is interesting to see them, night after night, bringing their companions to the circus, and leading them to the Saviour.

Mr. McNeill's addresses are all good and impressive, but special mention should be made of the address delivered on the evening of Good Friday. The subject was "The Three Crosses," based on the account given in Luke xxiii. The preacher's humour is generally irrepressible, but that night there was no humour. Once, when using the broad Scotch, one or two in the audience were seen to smile, the preacher immediately rebuked any levity "standing beside the Cross." The solemnity and power with which Mr. McNeill spoke of sin made a deep impression upon the large audience. He showed how a man's ruling passion was strong in death, and as a man lived so did he usually die. His picture of the railing and cursing of the impenitent thief was very impressive. When he came to speak of the penitent thief he had a beautiful passage on the prayer of the dying man.

Mr. McNeill has become an adept in his conduct of the "after meeting." Sometimes he runs the first and second meetings into one, and before the audience scatters, gets those who desire to decide for Christ to indicate their willingness by either rising or raising their hands. At other times he announces a hymn, and lets those leave who cannot stay, but a large number every night manifest their interest, and remain to be dealt with. There is a large staff of workers, and they are all very happy in the work.

Each night at 7 o'clock, a well-attended prayer-meeting is held for half-an-hour, which has been greatly blessed.

A Gospel Temperance meeting has been held every Saturday night in the circus, and has been productive of much good.

Mr. J. H. Burke sings at every meeting, and keeps a large choir together. This service of song is much appreciated, and has been blessed.

A CHRISTIAN WOMEN'S HOME.

Nearly four years ago it was laid on the heart of two sisters to open a Christian Temperance Home, where women in business, too old for working girls' or Y.W.C.A. homes, might find a home, economical, comfortable, and truly Christian. The thought originated on behalf of one, delicate and depressed in mind, who seemed to need constant care and kindness. The upper part of a house was first taken in Mortimer-street, W., and by-and-by a move was made to a larger house in Bolsover-street, W., accommodating twenty-two inmates, and with rooms suitable for holding Bible-classes. Here many friendless and well-nigh despairing ones have been sheltered, often when out of work, without means, and exposed to the gravest danger. On behalf of such, and in order to enable them—while out of a situation or in weak health—to earn their living, Miss Richards is earnestly anxious to fit and open a workroom. There are in the Home skilful needlewomen, too delicate for ordinary workrooms, yet most respectable and deserving, and the superintendent wishes to be able to afford them a chance of living.

During the past three years the Home has come between many women and the workhouse; five women have been saved from the river; and those who have been helped out of their difficulties, and set upon their feet again, are now doing well with God's blessing. All who have come in despair and difficulty have been sheltered and comforted. A sum of £200 is required to buy stock for, and pay wages to, delicate women; to institute a reserve fund for unexpected emergencies; and pay off the comparatively small debt which the Home has contracted during the period of three years through helping deserving and genuine cases.

The ordinary inmates pay from four to five shillings per week for sleeping accommodation, and for food as required; hence, so far as these are concerned, the Home pays its way; but on behalf of those out of work, or weak and ill, there is need, as surely no one would wish they should, when unable to pay, be turned out into the streets.

Mr. John Cory and others, who have interested themselves in the matter, have promised to help, but the amount named is still required. It is proposed to form a small committee of gentlemen to aid in the management. Meanwhile, we trust that sympathy will be awakened, and that some may be led to render help to these quiet, earnest workers in a work of real service to many. Communications should be made to Miss Katharine Richards, Christian Temperance Home, 91, Bolsover-street, Great Portland-street, W.

Seamen's Christian Friend Society.

Consequent upon the approaching demolition of the Society's chapel in Ratcliff-highway, valedictory services were held in the building last week, Rev. G. J. Hill preaching on Sunday morning and evening. Mr. Robert Wales presided at a public meeting the following day. He rejoiced that, looking at the present condition of the chapel, at no distant date a new and more commodious structure was to be reared for their comfort, and, better still, the salvation of souls.

Rev. J. G. Hill said he had preached in this chapel for nearly a quarter of a century, and he thanked God that many had passed away triumphantly from earth to heaven, because it was in this transformed old sugar-house they had first heard the name of Christ, and were led to believe in Him. Toward the cost of the new buildings necessitated by the growth of the Society's work among sailors, the Committee had received about £2450, having some years since purchased the freehold site. Mrs. Hill and Mr. Lampard having spoken, a number of testimonies were given by converted drunkards and others, all bearing witness to reformed lives and happy homes as the result of attending these services.

EAST LONDON INSTITUTE

FOR HOME AND FOREIGN MISSIONS.

In a circular letter, dated Harley House, Bow, April 11, Rev. Dr. H. Grattan Guinness, after referring to the lamentable illness of Mrs. Guinness, and the return from Africa of his son, says:—"The work of our Institute, in sending out messengers of the Gospel to the unevangelised regions of the earth, goes quietly forward. Seventeen missionaries, who have been trained in the Institute for foreign missionary service, are now leaving us for North and South Africa, for the West Coast, for India and China, and for North and South America. Six of these go to North Africa. Four have been accepted by the North Africa Mission—Mr. Reid, Miss Van der Molen, Miss Ada Watson, and Miss Tate—and two are going in an independent capacity to Algiers and Tripoli—Miss F. Marston and Miss Elizabeth Tucker.

"To the West Coast of Africa Mr. R. L. Stewart will sail about April 15. His destination is Liberia. To South Africa Miss Meyer, who is a German, and speaks English well, hopes to sail on May 6, in order to undertake nursing work in connection with Mr. Spencer Walton's Cape General Mission. To India and China three of our Doric Lodge deaconesses are going at this time—Miss Pike, Miss Evans, and Miss Emslie.

"Seven of our number are undertaking Gospel labour at this time in North and South America. Mr. Attwood, Mr. Heath, and Mr. Gregory feel called to labour among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains. Mr. Berkeley, a bright, earnest Gospel preacher, twenty-eight years of age, who has spent nearly three years in the Institute, goes to Puget Sound, near Vancouver, on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Pride and Mr. Hay are undertaking missionary work among the Indians of Paraguay, far up the La Plata River, in connection with the South American Missionary Society.

"For most of these brethren and sisters we need funds to meet the expenses of passage and outfit. Will you not enable us to send them forth to their various destinations in North and South Africa, on the West Coast, in India and China, and America? Help us liberally, remembering also the needs of the Institute which is providing these missionaries for various fields as well as preparing many others for similar missionary openings throughout the world."

Broussa Orphanage, Asia Minor.

This valuable Institution is at present in great need of sympathy and practical help. Owing to necessary repairs after the storms of last winter, which damaged some of the buildings, and the building of a wall as a protection against robbers, the Treasury funds have almost been exhausted. The Orphanage was founded in 1875 by the present Principal, Rev. Gregory Baghdasarian, on behalf of the orphaned children left desolate by the famine which at that time had ravaged the country. Since then six hundred have passed through the Institution.

The Orphanage is strictly evangelical in its teaching, and the spiritual life of each child is of the first importance. I had the privilege of the personal friendship of Mr. Baghdasarian's first wife. Before leaving England she spent a week at the house of my father (Rev. R. S. Brooke, D.D.) in Huntingdonshire. I have never met any of greater faith or more untiring zeal in God's work. God called her to rest after many years of labour, and among her last words were, "I hope English Christians will never forget this Orphanage." Mr. Baghdasarian has since married a lady who is a second mother to the children.

MEDICAL MISSION WORK AT FIGUERAS.—The Roman Catholic landlord has refused any longer to allow his premises to be used for the medical mission connected with the work of Pastor Lopez Rodrigues. Consequently the agency now has its centre in a miserable house on the outskirts of the town. Poor patients, some of them from a distance, have to stand in the street awaiting their turn. Madame Rodrigues writes:—"To each a Gospel is given on leaving. At the back of our new hall and schools there is sufficient ground to build suitable premises for the doctor and apothecary, and the patients could then wait in the hall, where a Gospel service would be conducted for them. At the same time our lady workers would be there to speak individually to anxious souls. To remove the prejudice of centuries, convert enemies into friends, and open doors for the Gospel in dark towns and villages all over the province from which our patients come, there is no agency so powerful as that which heals the body, as well as the soul." Communications may be addressed to Rev. J. C. Stewart Mathias, Cossington Rectory, Leicester.

For the Young.

A JEWISH SCHOOL IN BOMBAY.

When I was a little girl, about nine years old, I read a story, published by the Religious Tract Society, in which we were told never to laugh at Jews, but to love them for the sake of the Lord Jesus Christ. From that time I took a great interest in them, and I could never bear to hear people speak of them as they often do.

When I came out to Bombay as a missionary's wife, I found out some Jewesses, and used to teach them in their own house; but it was not till last year that I was able to open a school for Jewish girls. When I began there was not a child who could read and write her own language, though two or three could read a little English, and several could repeat Hebrew quite fluently, without understanding it. They knew none of the Bible stories which you love. Now the elder ones are able to read the Bible for themselves in the Hindustani language, which they all speak. None of the Jews ever speak Hebrew now, but they think it is right to read the Bible and to pray in it, even though they do not know what they are reading about or praying for!

Suppose you pay a visit in imagination to my school. You must first step into my pony-shigram—a curious little square-built carriage, about the size of the Tom Thumb's or midges, which you may have seen at Tunbridge Wells or Torquay. It has no glass windows, but Venetian shutters and sliding wooden doors. After driving some little distance, and noticing many things strange to you in the roads, we turn a corner and come into a street, which you might think was in Jerusalem, or some other Bible city, for here we see numbers of people walking about in the dress you see in pictures about Abraham.

These are all descendants of his; some of them are Arabs, children of Ishmael, but many are Jews. The Jewesses wrap themselves up in white sheets, which they hold over the face, just leaving a little bit open to peep out. The Jewish boys wear long white tunics, with coloured sleeveless jackets over them, and the little girls have loose striped gowns—they are fond of divers colours. Many of the children wear English clothes.

There is another class of Jews in India, called Beni-Israel—i.e., Children of Israel, who dress differently from those I work among, and use a different language, called Marathi. There are two or three mission-schools attended by them, but mine is the only one for Hindustani-speaking Jews.

About half-way up the street we stop, and enter a house which has a heavy-looking door standing open, like that of an ancient church. It is not so strong as it looks, however; the bolts and bars, and the nails with which it is studded, are all of painted wood. Outside this door, in a sort of verandah, is a niche for an idol, as usual in a Hindoo house; but as no Hindoo occupies any part of this house now, the niche is, of course, empty. A Jewish family lives on the ground-floor, and hanging up at the side of their door we see a little case containing a bit of parchment, with some Hebrew sentences on it from Deut. vi. 4—9. This is kissed every morning by each person in the house.

We go up to the first floor, and on reaching the schoolroom door the children rise and say, "Good morning, madam." On hearing this English salutation, and seeing the English dress, and noticing English Bibles and school-books on the table, you might think you had come into an English school, but you would at once notice the dark faces of many of the children.

Their parents think a great deal of their learning our language, so we teach them a good many English phrases. The little ones have to learn three alphabets, because they must have English and Hebrew, or the parents would think I taught them nothing; and I, of course, wish them to learn to read the language they speak. We open school by singing hymns for half-an hour, followed by one of the Psalms repeated after me in Hindustani, and prayer. They know about twenty hymns, and we sing them to a tiny harmonium in the form of a book, with bellows inside instead of pedals. Several of these hymns they can repeat in English as well as Hindustani. I will tell you some of them. "There were ninety-and-nine," "Holy Bible, Book Divine," "Beautiful Zion," "Unto the hills I lift mine eyes," "I'm a pilgrim," "There is a happy land," "All people that on earth do dwell."

In the afternoon the school is closed with an evening hymn. They separate into classes for Scripture lessons. The little ones, and newcomers who cannot read, learn texts by rote, and look at Bible pictures, while their teacher talks to them about them. Then we have classes for Hindustani and English reading, from the Bible in both languages, as well as from "Talim dar Talim" ("Line upon Line") and Nelson's Royal Readers. I teach the elder ones Hebrew, and this makes another Scripture lesson; and once a week I give them half-an-hour of geography, and another half-hour of grammar. They were particularly interested in learning that the earth is round, and they think it as good as a game of play to give me examples of nouns, adjectives, and verbs. The other parts of speech they are beginning to master with a little more difficulty. We teach also plain and fancy needlework and arithmetic, and the little ones have some Kindergarten teaching.

On Friday, as a kind of reward, they have some Kindergarten games, into which they enter very heartily. It is a rule that those who have not been good during the week are not to join in this pleasant play, but I am glad to say it is almost a needless rule, for they are usually very attentive and quiet. This was not the case when they first came, for they had not been accustomed to discipline, but they soon grew to love me and their teacher as well, and love works wonders, you know. They are so fond of coming to school that they do not approve of holidays, and they learn lessons so readily that once when I invited some of them to come to tea and have a walk on the beach they brought their books with them.

These poor children hardly ever go beyond their own streets and lanes, where no sea is to be seen, nor pretty gardens—not that they are far from either. Some of them exclaimed on seeing our beautiful Back Bay, with its deep blue waters, "Oh, what a large tala'o!" that is, tank or pond, and more than once a rose has been described to me as "a sweet-smelling thing to be worn." They are not much accustomed to see roses growing. They are not shut up in their houses like so many poor Indian women and girls, but few of them can afford to go about much.

It is such a pleasure to me of a morning, when these dear children come to me, books in hand, for their Scripture lessons, to think that they are the same who last year were playing about the streets, knowing nothing. Still I am not satisfied with this; the Bible has been put into their hands, I want it to be in their hearts also; I want to know that they love the dear Saviour, who is the Jews' own Messiah, though they will not believe that He is, and that He died for their sins. They learn texts every day, and I want them to understand how the Old Testament, which they believe in, is fulfilled in the New.

Will you pray for my dear little Rachels, Mozels, Floras, &c., that they may have their eyes opened to behold wondrous things out of God's law, and may learn to know and love the true Messiah? Pray, too, for me and the teachers, that the Holy Spirit may teach us day by day, and that this little work for the Lord may be kept up and increased.

The poor people welcome with great eagerness and appreciation the flowers that are taken to their homes. [Miss] A. Hughes, hon. sec., Royal Mint, E.

RESCUED SLAVE CHILDREN.

A little book has been printed at the Missionary Institution Press, Lovedale, South Africa, giving short biographies of some sixty Galla rescued slaves, now at Lovedale. The story of their capture from slave dhows, reception at Aden by the Keith-Falconer Mission, and subsequent transmission to Lovedale, is full of interest. In a note to ourselves, the author of the booklet, Mr. M. Lockhead, says:

"It is a harrowing tale, but my pen fails to express with the force I could wish the awful horrors of that trade in children which is going on now. There are hundreds and hundreds of Galla boys and girls crossing the Red Sea and being taken to other places by merciless Arab slave dealers. Yet, strange to say, because people at home do not hear of the lashing, the yoking, and the lacerating chains, nothing is done. No interest is taken in these children, torn from their parents; they are passed from one owner to another, and ultimately crossing the Red Sea, boys, as well as girls, are sold for immoral purposes to licentious Mohammedans.

"Does not one's blood boil to think that this is going on to-day? In this age, when we are told that the slave-trade is almost entirely abolished, there are innocent children not only being sold as slaves, but subjected to the most abominable treatment, and when diseased and broken in health, they are sent to earn their bread as best they can. Shortly before leaving Aden, I was informed that in the centre of Arabia there is a colony of these diseased helpless Gallas, but I could not vouch for the accuracy of the information. This would have been the fate of the children who are with us, had they not, by a merciful hand, been delivered from such awful bondage. Now many of them have learned of Him who 'came to break oppression,' and they are most earnest in their desire to return to their own country and tell them about Christ.

"When I first wrote to The Christian about their capture, many kind friends helped us in providing for so many, which is no small burden. Our needs are still very pressing, and will be until the joyful time comes when we shall send some of them off to their own country to tell there of the Saviour's love. Some years ago the Roman Catholic Church sent about fifty rescued Galla and Abyssinian slaves to Rome, to be educated and trained. Some twenty of these are now scattered over Gallaland. We will not venture to say what their influence has been, but we hope the day is not far distant when the Gospel of Jesus, the Gospel of God's love, will be preached in that land of heathen darkness."

Orphan Homes of Scotland.

In his latest letter to the Glasgow papers Mr. Wm. Quarrier writes:—

Friends will be glad to hear that our boys' party arrived in safety at Halifax, and after a journey of seven hundred miles in the train, reached Brookville, where they received a hearty reception from the friends there. We have resolved to send the girls' party about the 13th of May, with the same ship, the s.s. Buenos Ayrean, of the Allan Line. Towards the outfits and passages of the 120 we intend sending, we have received between £500 and £600, leaving about £600 needed before the day of sailing. Since the boys' party left we have taken in thirty-four new cases, so that the vacant places are being speedily filled up.

A number of friends have been asking if I intend to apply to the trustees of the late Misses Steven, of Bellahouston, for part of the money left by them for charities. I wish to make it known here that I have never in the past made application for a share of trust funds, and have no intention of doing so in the present case, although the Misses Steven were givers to the work for the past twenty years. I will leave the trustees to judge on the merits of the work, and act as they see best.

LONDON CITY MISSION TO TRAM AND OMNIBUS MEN.—On Tuesday, April 12, a large gathering of tramcar and omnibus men was held at Leighton-road Mission Hall, Kentish-town. The men were welcomed at the door by Mr. J. Dawkins, the missionary. After supper the meeting was presided over by Mr. J. Barber Glenn, Secretary of the London Street Tramway Company. Mr. E. Bannister gave a stirring Gospel address from the word "Finished." Mr. Cromwell and Mr. Keep also spoke, after which Mr. J. Dawkins and his daughters entertained the men with sacred songs. Several men testified to the good they and others had received under Mr. Dawkins's labour among them, and the meeting broke up at about 2 o'clock in the morning, some of the men remaining behind to sign the total abstinence pledge. Mr. J. Dawkins's address is 34, St. Augustine's-road, N.W.

FULFILLED PROPHECY:

BABYLON.

Prophecies are miracles of knowledge, which constitute no unimportant part of the internal evidence of the Bible. Among men it is admitted to be unsafe to predict; for the most careful calculations are so frequently falsified by the event, that it has become a proverb that "the unexpected always happens." Yet the Word of God abounds in prophecies which subsequent history is continually fulfilling. Who, but God, speaking through his prophets, can accurately foretell future events? If this evidence exists, unbelievers are without excuse.

Among the many instances of fulfilled prophecy none is more interesting, and remarkable, and important, than that of Babylon; interesting, because it reminds us of an ancient city, the magnitude and splendour of which even this century looks upon with wonder; remarkable, because of the accuracy with which minute details of prophecy have been fulfilled; and important, because the evidence of its fulfilment exists to-day, so that all ought to be influenced by it.

Let us first conceive something of the glory of this ancient city. It dates back to a period soon after the Flood. Its name "Babylon" recalls the Tower of Babel, for the city was built near to the site of that gigantic monument of human folly and pride. Though founded so early, it was long before it attained to any great importance. Under Nabopolassar, the father of Nebuchadnezzar, it became not only an independent kingdom, but the capital city of an important empire. But Nebuchadnezzar greatly improved the city, and it is to his reign that the descriptions of its glory particularly refer.

In size it was nearly five times as large as the great city of London. It was built upon the river Euphrates, by which it was divided into two parts. A palace was built on either side of the river, and the two were connected by a bridge, and, according to some authorities, by a tunnel under the river as well. Besides these palaces, the other chief buildings were the temple of Belus, situated further north, and the magnificent palace of Nebuchadnezzar, which, with its hanging gardens, its plated pillars, its rich ornamentation of enamelled bricks, was regarded as one of the Seven Wonders of the World.

The wall enclosing the city formed a complete square. According to one writer, each side of the square was nearly fifteen miles in length, making the whole circuit of the walls nearly sixty miles. The lowest computation makes the sides of the square about twelve miles, and the whole circuit forty-eight miles. According to the earliest authorities, who were eye-witnesses of what they described, the walls were about three hundred feet high and over eighty feet wide. They have been aptly described as "artificial mountains," nearly the height of the dome of St. Paul's! On each side of the wall were twenty-five gates, made of solid brass. From each of these, fifty streets ran directly through the city, meeting the gate at the other side. Jeremiah refers to the high gates and the broad walls as worthy of special notice (Jer. li. 58).

The situation of the city was in every way favourable to its prosperity. Garments, tapestry, carpets were made in the city; from the most fertile country around, valuable productions were conveyed to Babylon, and thence by river to the sea; and its gigantic walls and great river seemed to render a successful siege impossible. Of all cities in the world, it seemed most likely to endure. Such was Babylon, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, the glory of the kingdoms. What wonder that Nebuchadnezzar grew proud of such a city; and, as he surveyed its magnificence and splendour, said, "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?"

Against this city the prophet of God lifts up his voice. Isaiah prophesied 150 years before the time of Nebuchadnezzar, and long before Babylon had made its power felt upon the nations. His predictions are contained in chapters xiii., xiv., xxi., xlv., and xlvii. Among other details he mentions the siege of the city, the people by whom the siege will be made, calls by name and describes the character of the general who shall conquer Babylon, and gives several minute particulars of the siege itself. Jeremiah, in chapters l. and li., repeats the prediction, with a few added particulars. Let us put side by side the statements of history with the words of prophecy. It is impossible to compare the two without being forced to admit that the prophets "spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

History tells us that the city was besieged by the Medes and Persians, under Cyrus, a man who was as remarkable for his integrity of character as for his military skill. Scripture says, "Go up, O, Elam" (or Persia); "besiege, O, Media" (Isa. xxi. 2). "Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus... I have raised him up in righteousness" (Isa. xlv. 1, 13). History tells us that when Cyrus came against Babylon, the people, who had formerly been the terror of the nations, became as cowards; their courage departed; they did not dare leave the city, but remained within its walls for two years. Scripture told us the same long before—"The mighty men of Babylon have forborn to fight, they have remained in their holds; their might hath failed, they became as women" (Jer. li. 30). History describes how Cyrus, despairing of forcing an entrance by the walls, or of starving the people into submission, determined to divert the course of the river, and make his way into the city by means of the river bed. To do this he digged trenches all round the city, and turned the waters into these trenches and into a large lake north of the city. By this means the waters were exhausted, and his forces made their way from both ends of the city by the river bed. No danger being suspected from that quarter, the gates leading to the quay were left open, and the enemy entered the city without one of her hundred gates being broken down or any of her walls being demolished. What saith the Scripture? "I will dry up thy sea, and make thy springs dry" (Jer. li. 36). "I have laid a snare for thee, and thou art also taken, O Babylon, and thou wast not aware" (Jer. l. 24). "The gates shall not be shut" (Isa. xlv. 1). "Evil shall come upon thee, and thou shalt not know from whence it ariseth" (Isa. xlvii. 11). History tells us that the soldiers of Cyrus, having entered the city, made their way to the palace where the king was feasting; that they assaulted the guards, who were also drinking before the palace gates; that the gates of the palace were open to discover the cause of the turmoil; that Cyrus and his men rushed in and destroyed the people and the king in that night's debauch. Scripture said, "The loins of kings were loosed to open before Cyrus the two leaved gates" (Isa. xlv. 1). "I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the Lord" (Jer. li. 39). Thus, as the Scripture said, "all her slain fell in the midst of her."

These are only some of the minute particulars in which the event corresponded with the prediction uttered more than a hundred years before, and all referring to the first siege of the city. But there is more to follow. Cyrus, though he took Babylon, did not destroy it. He left it in its magnificence to his successor, Darius Hystaspes; but it rebelled against him. Again a snare was laid for Babylon, and Darius took it, reduced its walls and removed its gates. Scripture was again fulfilled—"The walls of Babylon shall fall" (Jer. l. 44, 58). From that time its importance declined. In the second century of our era its walls only remained; in the fourth it was made a hunting ground for wild beasts. In the twelfth century it was "an utter desolation, and the ruins of Nebuchadnezzar's palace were inaccessible, owing to the number of serpents and scorpions that infested it."

It has been contended by Mr. B. W. Newton that the complete fulfilment of the predictions concerning Babylon is yet future. Yet we may read the statements of travellers, and compare them with the predictions of Scripture. The agreement between them suggests a very striking measure of accuracy. One writer says that "the whole face of the country is covered with a vast succession of mounds of rubbish." The prophet's words are true: "Babylon shall become heaps" (Jer. li. 37). Another says that through the neglect of the ancient embankments and canals the river overflows into the lower parts of the ground, making many lakes, pools, and marshes. Scripture described this: "I will also make it pools of water" (Isa. xiv. 23). So two apparently contradictory predictions are fulfilled by the event. Travellers say, that in the sixteenth century there "was not a house to be seen" upon the site of the ancient city; that now it is "a barren desert, in which the ruins are nearly the only indication that it has ever been inhabited." Scripture said: "It shall never be inhabited" (Isa. xiii. 20). Travellers tell us that the Arab regards the place with superstitious dread, and will neither pitch his tent nor pasture his flocks there. Scripture said the same: "The Arabian shall not pitch tent there, neither shall the shepherds make their flocks to lie down there" (Isa. xiii. 20). The present tenants of the ruins are described as "wild beasts and owls and jackals." Scripture predicted even this: "Wild beasts of the desert shall lie there; and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures; and owls shall dwell there" (Isa. xiii. 21). There is perfectly wonderful correspondence between the prediction and the event; history has but re-written the words of Scripture.

What are the lessons this strange story teaches? (1) That sin will surely be punished. The destruction of Babylon was the result of its own wickedness—its tyranny, idolatry, drunkenness, debauchery, luxury, pride. As certainly as fire burns, so certainly in nations and in individuals does sin work death. (2) The Bible is the Word of God, and therefore infallibly true. Are you the subject of its threatenings? They are sure to be fulfilled. Are you trusting its promises? Relying upon Him who is exalted to be a Prince and a Saviour? Looking for the mercy of God through Him? The ruins of Babylon say to us: "Trust Him without fearfulness. The Word of the Lord, that shall stand." G.W.

COSTERS' HALL, HOXTON.

On account of the subscriptions of his friends having fallen off during February and March, Mr. W. J. Orsman, L.C.C., fears that some of his supporters are under the impression that he is not to be found in his old quarters. The work continues, however, to be carried on with unabated vigour. Fifty meetings a week are still held on an average, and Mr. Orsman says, "As an evidence of their spiritual power we can point to the changed lives of hundreds of persons who attend the meetings." The year 1891 was quite equal to any former year as regards the general progress made.

The various associations at Costers' Hall represent a very far-reaching work. The Christian Workers' Association has now eighty-two voluntary helpers, twenty-seven of whom are female district visitors, who distribute tracts, visit the sick, and render much other useful service. The Costers' Hall appears to be becoming a favourite centre for temperance demonstrations.

At present, in addition to the general fund, the sick and benevolent fund is in great need. There is much sickness about, and the poor people have experienced great inconvenience on account of the high price of coals. Mr. Orsman's address is Milton House, Shacklewell-green, N.E.

THE INVALID LADIES' HOME, St. Andrews, Graham-road, Great Malvern, offers the material comfort and spiritual stimulus which many Christian ladies desire, but are not able of themselves to command. It has but recently been opened by Mrs. J. Willmot, who hopes that the advantages will soon be shared by a number of ladies sufficient to render the Home self-supporting. Reference is allowed to Dr. E. Wadams, Worfield House, Great Malvern, and to Mrs. Bishop, Tobermory, Argyleshire.

REV. THOMAS COOK,

WESLEYAN CONNEXIONAL EVANGELIST.

THE worker whom we introduce to our readers this week is the Senior Connexional Evangelist of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Converted to God in Middlesbrough in very early life, he at once became an active Christian. He began, like Andrew, with his own kindred, and gradually extended the scope of his efforts until he has visited most parts of England, and some parts of Ireland, Wales, and Scotland, and even Norway, on his Master's business. He is now on his way to South Africa, where he has engaged to spend some months in evangelistic work.

Believing himself to be distinctly called of God to the work, Mr. Cook commenced his career as an evangelist in the Halifax and Bradford Wesleyan district, where he laboured for two years with remarkable success. In the year 1882 he was accepted by the Wesleyan Conference as a minister on trial, and was appointed Connexional Evangelist, this being the first appointment of the kind made by that body. No circuit or pastoral charge was committed to his care, but he was set free to visit as many as possible of the churches that invited him, for the purpose of holding evangelistic services. He was then very young; he was but little known even in his own church; some of his methods were new; and the arrangement itself was altogether novel to Methodism.

From the first day the blessing of God has rested upon Mr. Cook's work, and the result has been that it has excited scarcely any opposition, and commended itself entirely to the judgment of those who have been associated with him; and of his brethren in the ministry, many of whom have themselves acknowledged that he has been an instrument in God's hands, not only for the quickening of their people, but for promoting their own fitness for pastoral work. During the last ten years Mr. Cook has held successful missions in Bristol, Cardiff, Walsall, Manchester, Leeds, Dublin, Sheffield, and many other large towns. In Cornwall especially have his labours been abundantly owned of God.

(From a Photograph by Mr. R. H. Macey, Rosslyn Hill Studio, Hampstead.)

Mr. Cook's preaching has not been marked by any special features calculated of themselves to attract great crowds. Neither eloquence, humour, dramatic power, nor pathos has accounted for the almost unique popularity of this young evangelist. With extreme simplicity and great earnestness he has testified of repentance towards God, and faith towards the Lord Jesus Christ. The blessing of God has attended his evangelical preaching; and by this charm, and by nothing else, he has drawn overflowing congregations in most parts of England, as well as in other parts of these islands.

Mr. Cook attributes the success of his ministry to a great blessing which he received shortly after his conversion. He has told the story of the reception of this blessing, and its effects upon his ministry, in a penny booklet, published by the Wesleyan Book Room, entitled, "Thomas Cook's Experience." When a candidate for the ministry, his preaching was objected to as being "too colloquial." But he has continued to adopt a colloquial style, and this decision has been fully justified.

The holiness meetings which Mr. Cook has always held in connection with his missions have been largely owned of God. Believers have been led to see what is the hope of their calling in Christ Jesus, and to claim by simple faith the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel. Mr. Cook insists on the duty and privilege of loving God with all the heart and soul and strength and mind, and loving one's neighbour as one's self. Members of almost all denominations have attended his meetings for believers, and they have been blessed as the result. In order to keep this blessing constantly before his converts, Mr. Cook has established what he calls an "Out-and-Out Band." This society has a membership of upwards of fourteen thousand, the greater part of whom are the fruits of this evangelist's ministry.

Special oversight is taken of all the converts by means of this organisation, secretaries being appointed to the various districts, and reports being sent to headquarters from time to time. None know how pleasant and delightful is that relationship which is described by the Apostle as "a son in the Gospel" except those who sustain it. But the relationship involves solicitude, as the great Apostle reminds us when he speaks of the "care of all the churches" which came upon him daily. St. Paul was careful to keep in touch with his converts, and hence addressed to them the Epistles which bear his name. He was not satisfied with the conversion of sinners; he longed to see those who were converted made "perfect and complete in all the will of God." Mr. Cook has endeavoured to imitate this apostolic example, and has had much reason to rejoice because his children in the Gospel stand fast in the Lord. Nor are the members of this band—many of whom are young people—engrossed with the interests of their own souls to the exclusion of all other interests. They are encouraged to take a practical view of the needs of the world. Hence the "Out-and-Out Band" has established a Gospel Car Association for the evangelisation of the villages, which object it is sought to accomplish by sending Gospel-cars into the villages, stocked with religious literature, and in charge of two lay evangelists, who also act as colporteurs. Four or five of these cars are now on the road. Rev. J. G. Mantle, of Birmingham, and Rev. Peter Thompson, of the East London Mission, are associated with Mr. Cook in this movement; as is also Rev. C. G. Moore, late of the China Inland Mission.

Mr. Cook has come into the closest contact with the working-men of England. His men's meetings, held at all his missions, have been crowded with men of all ages and ranks, and have yielded very precious fruit. His custom is to hold a service for men only on the afternoon of the second Sunday of his mission, admission being by ticket, the tickets having been well distributed in the workshops of the neighbourhood during the previous week. In many parts of England very large chapels have been crowded to the doors with men on these occasions, and the opportunity has been used to promote the furtherance of the Gospel. Publicans have been converted at these meetings, and, as a result, have abandoned their pernicious trade. Pigeon-flyers in the North of England have been brought to God, and have cast away their besetting sin. Drunkards have been led to forsake their way; and men who, like Zaccheus, have wronged their fellows, have been induced to make restitution. Only the Day itself will declare all the good that has been achieved by these men's meetings.

Mr. Cook sailed for South Africa on April 2, and intended soon after his arrival to commence a series of services in various parts of the colony. A few years ago he held a mission in Norway, addressing the people through an interpreter. Much good resulted from that effort, and Mr. Cook is of opinion that he may be permitted to accomplish a great work in South Africa, whither he has been invited by the South African Conference. Our readers will join us in the earnest prayer that it may please God to continue to use his servant in the great work to which He has called him.

Notes on the Riviera.

By CHARLES COOK.

Going by Paris we reached Marseilles, where, in the cheerful hall of the "Sailors' Rest," we found our old friend Mr. Chas. Faithfull setting forth Christ as the only Saviour. I was glad to add my own testimony, and on the following night at a pleasant "at home" there, I gave a short account of prison work in several lands. A steady work is being carried on here, and as the hall is on the quay, outside friends get the benefit of the inside talk. The McAll Mission has a bright and flourishing branch here. I looked in on the Sunday afternoon and found a goodly company present; a lady stood at the door inviting in the passers-by, and literally "smiling them in." I also visited the "Sailors' Home," which is worked by the Church Army, and saw several nationalities represented by the men who were resting in the reading-room. Thankful, indeed, were we to see these and other bright spots in so dark a place; for who can paint the vice or picture the awful iniquities of this Liverpool of France? I had been told that the hospitals here were very badly managed, but could hardly believe that patients were left for many weeks without water being provided for them to wash with.

There is no Protestant hospital for men, and, in consequence, any British sailor would be taken to the hospital of which I am about to speak. I left the glorious sunshine behind me—such bright weather as we seldom see in England—and visited the sickening ward. One of the patients was a sailor, who had been severely injured by a fall. I asked him several questions, in answer to which he said: "I have been here seven weeks without being washed. I had my leg (which was broken) set, but as it was set wrong, it had to be broken again and reset. The wound on my head has never been seen to; it has festered, and after a long while healed up; I have to pay two francs and a-half a day for being here." These hospitals need a thorough examination, and where there are so many British sailors regularly coming, Protestant hospitals should be erected.

IN THE PRISON.

Entering several cells I saw the mattresses torn, the straw protruding, and the bed clothing not what it should be. The walls were covered with the marks of vermin, and worse, while cobwebs abounded. One expects these things in Eastern Europe or Africa, but it is a disgrace to France. There can be no supervision by the authorities. I was hindered in the work of distributing the Scriptures, but succeeded in supplying the so-called Protestant prisoners with the New Testament and the Psalms.

Leaving Marseilles we had a pleasant journey along the coast, everywhere distributing our New Testaments, which were gladly accepted by all—officials, villagers, and gendarmes alike returning us many a "Merci, Merci." In due time Cannes was reached, and Mr. Webber, an old London friend, tells of good meetings here and in the neighbourhood. He is the Director of the McAll Mission in these parts. At Grasse, Mr. Webber has opened, on his own responsibility, a hall for the preaching of the Gospel, and is greatly encouraged by the gatherings, quite a number of Anarchists attending.

MONACO AND MONTE CARLO.

A "poisoned paradise" indeed! The plague spot of Europe! The cancer of the Continent! Bathed in glorious sunshine, beautiful for situation, breasting the azure waters of the Mediterranean, is seen this gem of the sunny South, and yet withal is noticed the trail of the serpent in this Eden of the Riviera. It is a strange mixing of physical beauty and human depravity—a commingling of the luxury and lust of the creature, with the handiwork and harmony of the Creator; a fitting illustration of the words of the poet—

> Where every prospect pleases,
> And only man is vile.

The Casino has recently been enlarged, extra rooms having been added, and there are now eleven tables in full play, which are crowded during the day as well as at night. It is calculated that each table realises from £1200 to £1500 per day for the benefit of the owners of the place. It is evident that the bulk of those who gamble must lose.

If one would look upon human nature at its worst, let him see the faces of those who attend this place: they all more or less wear the mark of the cursed gold fever. Women are seen in great numbers surrounding the tables, but many are old and haggard, without any sign of softness or womanly nature about them. Nothing but water is allowed to be drunk within the building, which has only once been closed during the past twenty-four years, the occasion being the death of the late Prince of Monaco. One instance of this intolerable nuisance has occurred within the last few days. A lady of some position and wealth attended the gambling-tables, where she quickly lost all she possessed in the shape of money; having an estate, this also, together with horses and carriages, was lost, and within an hour or two she had become utterly ruined.

A more solemn tragedy preceded this. A personal friend of mine, whilst staying in one of the hotels here, heard in the early morning a great noise in the room overhead, and inquired of a servant in the hotel what occasioned it. "We must never know anything," was the reply; "I cannot tell you." Observing that my friend was packing his bag preparatory to leaving Monte Carlo, she said, "As you are going away to-day, I will tell you; but do not repeat it. The lady in the room over this hanged herself, having lost all her money. I think she was a Russian." Neither of these cases has appeared in the papers, and every care is taken to hush up all such occurrences. The Casino is not the only means of gambling here seen. When wearied by the click of the roulette ball, or tired of the monotony of trente-et-quarante, many who are members of the gun club turn out into the open air, and take part with those whose object is the shooting of tame pigeons, which have been imported here in such small cages that when released to be shot at they have little or no power to fly away. A beautiful new white terrace has just been constructed right on the sea-front and splendidly turfed, and here may be daily seen Englishmen and others delighting in the ignoble sport of pigeon-shooting. By the papers I see that the first three winners are from England. As though this were not sufficient for the amusement of our countrymen, they are invited, by tickets distributed in all the hotels, and printed in their own language, to attend on certain evenings at ——, where "Cock-fighting and rat-killing will begin; and the evening will be closed by a boxing match."

WORLD'S WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.—An all-day Conference for Women will be held on Friday, May 6, at Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, E.C., under the presidency of Lady Henry Somerset. Representatives of the leading societies of women, who are working for Christ, will give short addresses. There will be a public meeting at 8 p.m., when Lady Somerset will preside.

ON BEHALF OF THE BLIND.—The thirty-sixth anniversary of the day of special prayer and thanksgiving on behalf of the blind, observed by those who take an interest in Dr. Moon's system of embossed reading, will take place on the first Sunday, May 1. In a circular letter, Dr. Moon says:—"The numbers of those already taught are large, but we desire that many more should possess the great privilege of reading for themselves, particularly the Word of God, which maketh the blind to see Him who is invisible to the natural eye, but who is clearly seen by faith, and whom to know is life eternal. It is encouraging to know that thousands of the blind, through the reading of our books, have found Jesus. Our library for the blind is now large, and the books various. Twenty-two new works were added last year, making 752 volumes to be had in my type, which has been adapted to 419 languages and dialects, and in each of these the Lord's Prayer, or some other portion of Scripture, can be had for the use of missionaries in foreign lands, as a first lesson for teaching the natives to read." Further particulars of the work may be had on application to Dr. William Moon, 104, Queen's-road, Brighton.

CHRISTIAN PROGRESS IN PERSIA.

Rev. Dr. Bruce writes from Julfa, Ispahan, Persia:—From the Punjaub to Mesopotamia, and from a line drawn from East to West, through the centre of Persia and Afghanistan, to the borders of Arabia, the C.M.S. Mission at Julfa, Ispahan, is the only agency for giving the light of the Gospel to the peoples of this vast region. There are not many places in it in which it would be possible for European missionaries to reside at present. In Mohammedan lands we can only reside in cities where there are non-Mohammedan native residents. There are three such communities in Persia, viz., Oriental Christians, Jews, and Parsees. The itinerating missionary can travel without let or hindrance and preach the Gospel everywhere in Persia.

We have had during the last year more signs than ever before that God is opening a door for the Gospel. There has been a great increase of British influence and an opening up of the country by various merchant companies. The improvement among the Armenian Christian community, socially, morally, and religiously, has told upon the Moslems, and made them desirous of availing themselves of the blessings of western civilisation and education. The power of the Moslems has been greatly broken. Until lately the Mohammedan boys were not allowed to attend the Mission School; now we have about 30 of them in attendance. The Mohammedans who formerly connected the idea of Christianity with the worship of images, and saints, and drunkenness, have now learnt that there is such a thing as a pure form of Christianity, to which these evils are as abhorrent as they are to their own faith.

There is also a remarkable and most blessed work being carried on by the missionary of the Jews Society (Mr. Noorallah) in Ispahan. Some months ago I had the privilege of entertaining a considerable number of the Rabbis and head-men of the Jews. They came at their own request, and spent the night as our guests with the hope that they would convince us that the Messiah had not come. One of the most noisy and bitter opponents of the truth that night was A. D., a head-man whom I had known for many years. If there was a Jew in Ispahan of whom I had less hope than of any other that I should ever see him as a humble suppliant at the feet of Jesus of Nazareth, it was A. D. He paid me a long visit yesterday, and I bless God for the change in him. On the night mentioned he said, after our discussion was over, "If God spoke from heaven and said the Messiah was come, I would say He was a false God." He now openly professes his belief that Jesus is the true Messiah. He says he has not been convinced by what any of us said to him, but by the word of God itself, especially by the prophet Jeremiah. What first struck him was the similarity between the sufferings of Jeremiah and the hatred shown to him by the Jewish priests and the same phenomena in the life of our blessed Lord. There is a grand opening for a school among the Jews of Ispahan. Mr. Noorallah has a small school of forty-five boys, but he has no proper accommodation for them, nor any funds to carry it on with. I know of no work more worthy of support than this, and earnestly appeal to those who love God's ancient people to come to the help of our brother.

Our great desideratum at present is a medical missionary for Ispahan. We earnestly ask all who are jealous for the glory of Jesus in these lands to pray that God will choose one out of the many Christian medical men in England, and thrust him forth into this grand field.

Evangelistic Hall for Jerusalem.

Rev. A. Ben-Oliel writes to us from Jerusalem:—"The need of an evangelistic hall in Jerusalem, where non-Episcopalians may worship God, and testify against the errors and superstitions of Latins, Greeks, &c., has for long years been deeply felt by thousands. Having recently called attention again to this most anomalous fact, one of the Lord's stewards writes to me: 'This is not as it should be. I would like to have the privilege of purchasing the ground, and also contributing towards the erection of the building.'

"I hasten, then, to invite the co-operation of Christian men and women of all denominations. The need of such a hall is very urgent, and I hope to be in a position to commence building so soon as I can procure the requisite firman from the Porte. Recently, at the request of the Jews themselves, I commenced a course of lectures on the Messianic prophecies and their fulfilment in the Lord Jesus."

FROM DR. J. G. PATON.

Writing to a friend in London, Rev. Dr. J. G. Paton, the "Apostle of the New Hebrides," says:—

Mrs. Paton has been laid low for a time under a severe attack of influenza, but she is now recovering, though it has left her very weak. Our family are all well at present. The two eldest sons are preaching the Gospel with acceptance; the third is about to enter upon his Divinity course here; the fourth and fifth are making gratifying progress. We have ample cause to praise God that they all give evidence of trying to love and serve Jesus Christ. Avowedly they are all preparing to become missionaries in the foreign field, and I hope nothing will ever draw them away from that purpose.

Our mission work prospers encouragingly, but white traders, especially French, German, and American, are now doing all they can to demoralise the natives by the introduction of their vices, and pushing the sale of intoxicating drinks and opium. By our advice, the Christian natives generally keep away from the traders and the drink, but over forty thousand poor heathen are sad sufferers by it and them. Report says that the natives of Santa lately threatened one of our missionaries, and murdered three traders. The missionary told them he would leave by the first vessel that called, whereupon a large number urged him not to leave, as the trouble would soon pass by.

Let me say that your boxes have been of great value to us in clothing our poor heathen, and supplying Christian natives on Aniwa with clothing, writing-paper, pencils, belts, scissors, &c. But the strong stuff and grey calico, torn up into two-yard lengths for kilts, was most of all valued by the men, who wear a striped or crimson shirt and two yards of cloth round the body as a kilt; and the women and girls also rejoiced over about three yards each of the print and lighter material for short gowns. We have exposed the evils of the Kanaka labour traffic till our Blessed Lord has led to its suppression in Queensland, and among British subjects on the islands; but Americans, Germans, and French yet carry it on in New Caledonia, Fiji, and other places. We hope soon to get it suppressed in all these places. It has been a terrible curse to our islanders, and carried off over a third of the population of our group.

I praise God for using the humble record of my life to deepen the interest of many in foreign missions, and for leading so many in Britain voluntarily to send money help to me. I offered first £200, and then £250, to any of our Presbyterian Churches or Sabbath-schools in Australasia that would get and support a missionary on our islands. The New Zealand Church has undertaken to support two—a medical and a ministerial worker. So I have given that church £500. Another congregation, in Victoria, has undertaken to support an additional missionary also, so I gave it £300 to help in paying passage, getting new house and boat for him, and meeting the expenses of opening a new station on a heathen island. Besides this, I am supporting three other missionaries, new men and their wives, added to our Mission since I was home, and by money sent me by the Lord's people; by my book I hope soon to be able to add another. Of course, I pay them through the Victorian Church, and if I were taken away it would feel morally bound for their continued support in the Mission.

One of our islands is called Lepers' Island, because of skin diseases, from which the natives suffer all through the group; but I do not know that as yet we have any real lepers there, though the disease in question is loathsome and resembles it. Our islanders suffer from many skin diseases; but after they become Christians, their changed and cleanly habits improve their health, and free them considerably from such diseases, except elephantiasis, from which many suffer much until they die with it.

MISS GUINNESS, after spending four years in China, is returning home. She has for some months been engaged upon a history of the China Inland Mission. The province of Honan, in which she hopes ultimately to labour, seems now to be opening up to the Gospel.

RESIGNATION OF PASTOR W. F. GOOCH.

(From a Correspondent.)

The step which Mr. Gooch has taken in severing his connection with Chatsworth-road Baptist Church and in being about to start, as now seems likely, an undenominational work in the Norwood district, is one which has excited keen feeling over a considerable area. For my own part, I am not surprised at the step Mr. Gooch has taken; though, out of regard to the distinguished use the Lord had made of him in the pastorate at Chatsworth-road, many of his friends kept hoping that the day of severance might be indefinitely postponed.

It is a serious matter when a thoroughly effective pastorate is closed. It means a great breaking up. The question, What is to become of the sheep? becomes in these mixed times a serious one to answer. For denominations are not now organic wholes. Between such a pastor as Mr. Gooch and many who serve under the evangelical flag there is a vast gulf. If the cause of Mr. Gooch's action were probed to its foundation, it would probably be found that he seeks freedom from all denominational fetters, chiefly on the ground that down-grade sentiments are suffered to act as a leaven within the organized churches, and thereby put an entirely different complexion on denominational progress.

Viewed from this standpoint, the step in question raises serious thought in the minds of the discerning. There can be no question that in all the churches the number is steadily growing of those who perceive that the day for denominational glorying is quite past, and to whom, henceforward, ministry will be undenominational in spirit whatever it may be in form. It was so with the late Dr. Saphir, who was often heard to say "I am sick of the churches;" it has been so with Mr. Gooch for many years.

It would, I think, be an error to suppose that Mr. Gooch elects to take an undenominational place because of any personal grievance in relation to Chatsworth-road Church. Humanly speaking, Mr. Gooch's pastoral position was an exceedingly strong one. There was no attempt to oust him; no expressed wish on the part of anyone that he should resign. He was strongly entrenched in the affections of the people to whom he ministered, and nothing was less desired by them than the severance of the pastoral tie.

It ought distinctly to be understood that so far as the subject of ordinance is concerned, Mr. Gooch is as much a Baptist as ever he was. While renouncing every denominational interest, he keeps to all the truth he has hitherto held. In his judgment the time for confederacy is past and the need of individual witness-bearing is accentuated. Hence Mr. Gooch prefers to stand apart and to serve the Church of God unhampered by the limitations that necessarily inhere in any religious organisation. The thought has been long maturing in his mind; and now that the die is cast, may the Great Head of the Church make him no less useful outside the denominations than he has been within their borders!

Among Anarchists in France.

La Guillotiere is the name of the workmen's quarter, and the abode of the Anarchists, in Lyons. A central spot in it, where many streets meet, is termed the "Place du Pont," and close by is situated the McAll Mission-room.

Next door to the mission-room is a confectioner's, the lease of which has just run out. I have received a most urgent appeal from the director of the Mission to procure this shop for his work, so as to enlarge the hall, which contains at present about 150 seats. The additional space would afford one hundred more sittings, and a long-wished-for room for the lending library, prayer, committee, and other work.

The proprietor has reduced the rent to forty pounds a year, taxes included, if taken immediately, for a term of from four to six years; and a donor has offered one quarter of the sum. I may say from a year's experience in Lyons that no better site for a room could be had, and that the evangelists at work are genuine, earnest men. It would be a pity to allow this opportunity to slip of giving them so many more hearers in the midst of such a neighbourhood.

The temperance work in that quarter has taken well, and a few days back a meeting was held at the "Salle Rivoire," the rendezvous of the Anarchists, and though rather noisy from the number of them present, they were, writes a correspondent, "touched to the quick."

I shall be happy to correspond with any one on this subject. B. Geeenn.

KURKU MISSION, CENTRAL INDIA.

In October, 1889, two young ladies, Misses Sharp and Roberts, went out to join, in Central India, the family of Rev. A. Norton, who for twelve years previously had been labouring, with some interruptions, among the Kurkus—one of the oldest aboriginal tribes in India, and chiefly to be found, half-naked and half-civilised, in the wild jungles of the hills in the Berar and Central Provinces.

By-and-by, Mr. Norton, being compelled to leave India, requested these sisters to carry on the work, until reinforcements reached them. A few months later, a married missionary, Mr. Fletcher, his wife, and Miss Meadows went out from Jabneel Training Home, Drayton-park; while last autumn three fresh missionaries followed—Miss Raine and Messrs. Drake and Hook.

These are now carrying on work at Bhaisdehu and Ellichpur, the old royal city of Berar, and another station is being opened at Jhallar, between Bhaisdehu and Betul; whilst the fourth station, Bithron, the "House of Song," at Khamla, is situated about three thousand feet high in the Gawilgarh hills, and has up till now only been used as a sanitorium station during the hot season, since no Pundit would go up and stay in that wild and lonely place with the missionaries, as tigers, bears, and other wild animals are found abundantly there.

The workers of the Kurku Mission do not receive any guaranteed salary, going out on the understanding that they will live as simply as possible, consistent with due care. In this way the expenses of the work have been comparatively very small. All information may be obtained from Rev. A. Müller, Jabneel Ministry Training Home, Drayton-park, N.

The Council are about to send out an older, married missionary, to act as leader of the eight labourers in the field, and if the Lord grants the means, this will be done next autumn. It would involve the fitting out, in the simplest possible way, of one of the stations as centre and basis for the whole work. Two more young men hope also to go with him.

SPRING.

The gladsome morn, the crystal light,
The pure, warm air so bright and clear,
The tender green of daintiest shade
Which from the hedgerows doth appear,
The scent of violets newly blown,
The happy lark on joyful wing,
Are calling in a spirit-voice,
"Rejoice! rejoice! for it is Spring."

In pink and purple, gold and white,
The crocuses and snowdrops bloom,
And speak of resurrection joys
Which cast the shadows from the tomb.
Our footsteps have a lighter tread,
A nameless rapture round us floats,
As here and there the birds we love
Refill the air with warbling notes,

And verily, "the light is sweet,"
From dawn's first ray till day is done;
And 'tis most pleasant, gracious Lord,
To look upon thy glorious sun.
Above, beneath, o'er landscape fair,
With thankful hearts we gaze around,
And see again, O God of love,
The year is with thy goodness crown'd.

Thy sheltering hand hath kept the earth
Through hurricane and chilly blast,
Its richness slept beneath the sod,
Until the storms were overpast;
Now gone the gloom of winter hours,
And hushed to rest the loud wind's moan,
It bursteth forth in gratitude,
To yield Thee gladly back thine own.

The fairest flowers their fragrance pour,
An incense-offering, Lord, to Thee;
To Thee the lark is winging up;
And all the full, true harmony
Of whisp'ring winds, and rustling trees,
And rippling streamlets, glancing bright,
For ever in a mystic tongue
Proclaim thy wisdom infinite.

And we thy children, in thine eyes
So far more dear and prized than they,
Would gather round thy sacred throne,
And deeper, nobler homage pay;
Yes, blessed Father, we would raise
The sweetest anthem love can bring,
To praise thy mercy and thy might,
O bounteous Giver of the Spring.

OBITUARY.

MISS CROSSLE, DUBLIN.

Many will have heard with regret of the death of Miss Crossle, whose active presence was, for some years past, felt in Christian work in Dublin. It was the great joy of her life to be used in her Master's service; she dedicated herself of late to the "Irish Railway Mission," and started a branch of this "Mission" in Dublin. On Thursday last she received the call "to depart and be with Christ." During the past few months she has been laid aside, during which time she was calm and peaceful, testifying for her Master.

MR. E. WESSON OF RIO DE JANEIRO.

Many will hear with deep regret of the death, from yellow fever, on March 20, of this devoted young labourer, who went out in July, 1890, to labour among seamen. A missionary writes: "This untimely death has come to us all as a great shock, for he had made himself greatly loved by his quiet unassuming manners and consecrated Christian life. His work in his Mission was most important and useful, and certainly his zeal for the Master has been an inspiration to us all. His life was most unselfish, and his earnest desire to help others led him to offer his services as nurse to some people who had yellow fever, with the sad result that his own life has been lost....We buried him this morning (March 21) in the English Churchyard. There were only a few present, as the news of his death had not reached very far. The Methodist minister and a Presbyterian missionary conducted the service. His most intimate friends and one or two sailors were present, and he was tenderly and lovingly laid to rest. Some day we shall see that pain-racked, tired body arrayed in all the beauty of the resurrection morn, triumphant and glorious."

WORK FOR LEISURE HOURS.

In 1868 the Braille system of embossed printing, though known to a few isolated blind persons in England, was almost unknown in our institutions for the blind. The system has now been adopted in almost every institution in the civilised world, with the exception of some institutions in the United States.

The work of producing books is carried on by the British and Foreign Blind Association in the following way. About two hundred volunteer writers, mostly ladies, are engaged in writing out the first Braille copies, and about sixty-five blind persons are regularly employed in making from these the number of copies needed. The Bible is no longer the sole book accessible to the blind. Hundreds of standard works are supplied to various libraries, and well-organised management brings them within reach of the reading blind in all parts of the Kingdom. A blind child in a Board School can now read from the same book as its seeing companions.

The number of the volunteer writers of the first copies may seem large, but the work is slow, and twice that number would not be too many. It is easy to give money, but it is quite another thing to take the trouble to learn to write correctly in the Braille type, and, having done so, to devote considerable time to transcribing the books needed. The great encouragement to these volunteers is the usefulness of their labour; for the blind writers who multiply the copies are poor, and thus obtain employment and add materially to their slender means of living.

It is important that those who undertake to write for the Association should send all their work to the office, 33, Cambridge-square, London, W. The object of this rule is to secure uniformity in Braille writing, it being carefully corrected before further copies are made, and to have sufficient work for the blind copyists, who thereby earn their daily bread. The Association undertakes to supply the institutions with properly-written books at about the cost of the binding and of the paper which they contain. Those who wish to help in this good work have only to apply to Mr. G. R. Boyle, at 33, Cambridge-square, W., who will fully explain the mode of operation.

The memorial to be raised in honour of the late Dr. T. R. Armitage is to take the form of a permanent endowment fund for the Association which has done, and is likely to continue to do, so much useful work, and in which he was so deeply interested. Standard and educational works are to be provided at a cheaper rate, and the progress of Braille literature will be materially helped forward.

PEACE OF SOUL.—It is of the utmost importance that Christians should be happy. The joy of the Lord is your strength. Depression is a leak through which the soul's peace wastes itself drop by drop. Peace is the condition of a healthy soul, and when it is broken it should cause deep concern. Some speak lightly of a believer's comfort, but God thinketh not so, for he cries, "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people!" Losing peace, the believer loses the spring and enthusiasm by which he runs unweariedly in the way of the Commandments, and the heroic valour by which he leaps over the wall of difficulty. He is but half a man who is habitually a downcast man. Our Lord would have his joy fulfilled in us that our joy may be full.—Spurgeon.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

A "Manual for the Holy Communion," entitled Let us Keep the Feast, is published by Messrs. Macniven and Wallace. The little book contains a considerable amount of instruction, and many devout and helpful suggestions in connection with the ordinance of the Lord's Supper. With its aim and much of its contents we are in hearty sympathy. It is written chiefly for Presbyterians, to whom some of its statements that seem to us obscure and doubtful may be perfectly clear. Here are a few sentences to which we desire to give emphasis:—"The first and simplest aspect of the Supper is that of a personal memorial."..."Not in any sense as a sacrifice, but as a memorial of the one all-sufficient Sacrifice...we partake of the outward signs which we can see, and thus realise more fully than in any other way his body broken and his blood shed for us, which we cannot see" (pp. 57-59). Equally clear is the author's statement as to the significance of the emblems used. She sees in the words and actions of our Lord a "full and simple explanation of the great fact of the Atonement, and a memorial of his voluntary Incarnation (He took), his violent death (He brake), and his vicarious Atonement (for you)." All this is excellent, and was never more needed than now. The officiating priest has no place at the Table if the ordinance retain this simple character.

But as we read further it appears to us that the ordinance loses much of its simplicity. To the Scriptural names for this feast are added "The Eucharist" and "The Sacrament." To the first, which represents the Supper as a thanksgiving, no exception need be taken, though we believe that truth would be advanced more surely if we kept to Scriptural terms. The other word is more objectionable. It is taken, this author tells us, "from the Latin word Sacramentum, which originally meant anything sacred, and was used especially of the oath of allegiance by which the Roman soldier bound himself to obedience." We do not agree with the author that this term, though unscriptural, is "most appropriate and descriptive." In our judgment it provides for the introduction of priestcraft. An oath requires some one to administer it, and it becomes easy for the presiding minister who administers the oath to regard himself as an officiating priest. Error would have had a more difficult course if New Testament terms had been adhered to.

We cannot help the conviction that the author has more than once been betrayed into the utterance of words that seem to teach sacramental efficacy. Here are examples:—Justification and sanctification "are the gifts bestowed in the sacraments, and all those who have received the outward sign of baptism are invited to come to the Lord's Supper to show forth their acceptance of the great spiritual blessings therein signified" (page 74). Which end of this sentence is true—the latter, which sees in the ordinance only the signs of spiritual blessings, or the former, which affirms that the "gifts are bestowed in the sacraments"?

"We do not go to the Sacraments because we are worthy and fit, but because we know that we are sinners needing to be washed in the precious blood of Christ, needing to be clothed in his righteousness, needing to be strengthened with his might in the inner man, and remembering that the sacraments are his own appointed means to these ends" (page 92). We hope we do not misjudge the writer, but it does appear in this paragraph as if the Sacraments occupied the place of Christ Himself.

We turn from this book, with some measure of disappointment, to the sermon entitled The Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, and preached at Belgrave Chapel by Rev. Marcus Rainsford (Jno. Hoby, 2d.). Although the word Sacrament, to which we have objected, occurs here also, yet the teaching seems to us to be much more simple and clear. Referring to our Lord's institution of the ordinance, he says, "He by no means intended it, or appointed it, as the 'chiefly effectual means' and channel for quickening dead souls, or justifying, or sanctifying, or saving those who partake of it" (page 5). This language reads like a direct contradiction to that of the author quoted above. We believe that Mr. Rainsford is right.

We give the substance of an important paragraph, too long for quotation, which denies that our Lord or his Apostles ever taught sacramental efficacy. "Can it be conceived possible, if they did so, that never on any one occasion do they urge the use of this 'chief means of grace' on the churches? that in enumerating the gifts of the ascended Saviour for the edification of his Church no allusion whatever should be made to the importance of 'Sacramental grace' or the intervention of a 'sacrificing priesthood'?" And after pointing out how few are the Scriptural references to the ordinance, the paragraph closes with the question, "Does not this remarkable silence contrast strongly with present-day teachings on the subject of 'Special Grace Communicated at Holy Communion'?"

We commend Mr. Rainsford's little pamphlet as an important and necessary corrective of the erroneous and dangerous teaching that prevails.

CONSUMPTIVES' HOME, AUSTRALIA.

Dear Sir,—You were good enough to insert in your columns a letter from Mrs. Varley in regard to "the Consumptive Home" at Echuca, situate in a dry and healthy climate, about 160 miles from Melbourne. My object in writing is twofold. First, I ask your influence to check the tendency to send advanced consumptive patients to Victoria. Numbers of these simply go out there to die. I can understand how often medical men are at a loss to know what to advise, and friends ask whether a sea voyage would not be good, &c. In this way hundreds are recommended to go, and are sent to the colonies. Now, the fact is, that they should either have gone much earlier or not at all.

It is really a serious question. In loneliness and poverty many of those thus sent to the Australian colonies pass their latest days. Not seldom do they die amid great poverty. The Consumptive Sanatorium at Echuca, which Mrs. Varley and Mrs. Sergeant were instrumental in opening, about two and a-half years since, is the only one of the kind in Victoria.

The people in Melbourne say, and not without reason in some cases, "It is too bad to send English consumptive patients to us, when it is known that death is but a question of a few weeks or months." There is force in this objection, and if my letter leads to more care at the hands of the medical profession and the friends of the consumptives themselves, it will not have been written in vain.

Having said so much, I would add that there are sure to be those who, going to the dry heat of Victoria in the early stages of pulmonary and cheat affections, will derive great benefit. Many who were weak, and ready to develop dangerous symptoms in England, have become strong and vigorous in the colonies. Beside this, we cannot admit that where suffering is we have the right to close our eyes to the fact, from whatever cause that suffering may have arisen.

Acting upon this principle, the ladies to whom I have referred were enabled to open the Consumptive Sanitorium at Echuca. During the two and a-half years it has been opened, about ninety patients have been received. A goodly number have recovered, many have been greatly relieved, whilst others have been won for Christ, and have passed away from us amid the care and love of Christian workers in this valuable sphere.

Fully one-half of those received were affected before they left England, so that the Institution is more English than Colonial. On this ground, I seek for these suffering ones the practical sympathy of some of those who are "stewards of substance." About one-half of the patients have been received into the Institution without any payment whatever. The gratitude of these sorrowing and lonely ones has been most touching. Others have paid from ten shillings to about one pound per week, according to their ability. The rent of the large and substantial house is £100. It stands in its own grounds, and could be purchased for about £1000. I should be grateful indeed if this letter should lead either to the purchase of the house or to the assistance of this valuable "Home." As I have shown, it is quite a voluntary work, sustained by prayer and effort. It is really more an English than a Colonial institution. About twenty beds are made up, and applications pour in upon Mrs. Varley, who acts as hon. secretary. The members of committee are resident in Melbourne. I shall be glad to forward to the treasurer, Mr. Kemp, of Melbourne, any help sent.

Ratcliff Strangers' Rest.

On Monday week a meeting was held to bid Godspeed to Miss Granger, who has sailed for Zanzibar to join Mrs. Hadland, already there. The same evening at the Strangers' Rest in the Highway a large number of sailors of many nationalities were gathered at tea, when, at the suggestion of a visitor, the question was asked: "Are sailors still drugged and then robbed in this neighbourhood?" The reply was unanimous, emphatic, and startling. "Yes," cried the company in one voice. One sailor and another described how, quite recently, he had been stripped of his clothing and money whilst insensible. "It is a common occurrence," said one: "and if a homeward-bound man puts himself in the way of drink he is sure to be robbed."

After tea an open-air meeting was held with perfect success. The North Evangelistic Choir sang, and an adjournment into the "Rest" took place, where meetings were held in right earnest and the presence of the Lord realised.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—Services by Major-General Synge, at Soldiers' Home, Dorchester, from April 23.—By Rev. W. H. Broad and Mr. J. Burnham, at Chiswick Mission Hall, from April 24 to May 1.

EVANGELISTIC MISSION.—A special eight days' mission has been conducted at Bedeston Conference Hall by Mr. Wm. Grove. Great interest has been shown, and on every evening some have professed to receive the Gospel of their salvation. This was particularly the case on Sunday week, when there was a much-increased attendance, and several confessed Christ.

The Book World.

The Hidden Hand. The enlarged edition of this exposure of the errors of Rome has reached its 43rd thousand. We are informed that copies may be had at half-price for distribution. (3d. Marshall Brothers, 10, Paternoster-row.)

A Missionary Service of Song, narrative by Rev. C. A. Davis, music arranged by John Burnham, has been issued by the Sunday-School Union (4d.). These ringing strains and telling words will doubtless help in stirring many to fresh missionary interest.

Leaves of Memory. By Elizabeth Cowell. (Seeley and Co.) A little volume of poems suggested by various circumstances. Scenes in France, India, and England are depicted in delicate verse by one who exercises the combined faculties of observation and imagination.

Five Words is a daily text-book, having this special feature, that the excerpts from Scripture are only five words in length. The selections have been made with care, and, though so brief, the "texts" are remarkable for spiritual compass and weight. (1s. Partridge.)

The Nursing Directory for 1892 is a very useful manual of reference, giving lists of nurses in London and the provinces, with details as to their qualifications. Information is also given regarding the various training schools for nurses. (5s. The Record Press, Limited, 376, Strand, W.C.)

Charles Haddon Spurgeon fitly finds a place in the series of "The World's Workers," published by Messrs. Cassell and Co. (1s.). The biographer, Mr. Holden Pike, has had the advantage of long and intimate association with the illustrious deceased, and tells the now familiar story in an interesting way.

The Church Missionary Society has published a series of African Sketches; or, Uganda and the Way Thither, by Bishop Tucker, with introduction by Rev. H. E. Fox. (2s.) Beautifully printed on fine card, these illustrations of mission life and work will be valued highly by those who follow the progress of the Gospel in Africa. Sarah Geraldina Stock supplies brief notes on the sketches.

Making the Most of Life. By J. R. Miller, D.D. (Hodder and Stoughton.) This is a very wise, helpful, and stimulating book. Every page is bursting with pregnant thoughts and suggestions bearing on the every-day practical life of the Christian. It is a book for the closet, for the family, for the Church, and for the market-place. The literary style is clear and terse; the matter is as good as the style.

Booklets.—With the title, All the Counsel of God, Dean Lefroy's very instructive paper read at the recent Islington Conference has been published as a shilling booklet by Messrs. Nisbet. Acquaintance with present-day speculations and fallacies, and a strong grasp of the truth, with much vigour in its enunciation, characterise the pages The Greatest King in the World, by E. P., is a Scriptural meditation on the glories of Christ. (1s. D. B. Friend and Co., 77, Western-road, Brighton.) St. Paul: A Study, by Prebendary Gordon Calthrop, contains several thoughtful and instructive addresses delivered in St. Paul's Cathedral. (1s. 6d. Home Words Office.)

The History of My Life. By the late Right Rev. Ashton Oxenden, D.D. (5s. Longmans, Green, and Co.) This short, chatty autobiography will pleasantly remind numbers in England and America of the good Bishop so lately taken home. Old school and college friends will enjoy the earlier chapters; old parishioners will read with interest the pages on Barham; but the sketches of Canadian life and the organisation of the Canadian Church form the pith of the book. Not least important are the closing remarks of one who surveyed with the calmness of age, the experience of two continents, and from a Scriptural standpoint, the general effects of Romish and Protestant doctrines.

Elizabeth Gilbert, and Her Work for the Blind. By Francis Martin. (2s. 6d. Cassell and Co.) It is now an established fact that the blind need not be wretched; they can learn much, impart much, and, in no cynical sense, enjoy life. But sixty years ago no such views were held. How the mighty and blessed change was effected—first in public opinion, then more slowly in private and public action—these interesting memoirs help to show. Oxford has reason to be proud of the Bishop of Chichester's blind daughter, whose believing prayers and ceaseless labours did as much, and in a less enlightened age, for our sightless fellow-creatures as the more noted Dr. Moon has effected in our own. The first sowed, the second watered, and God has given the increase.

Woman's Influence in the East as shown in the noble Lives of past Queens and Princesses of India. By John J. Pool, late of Calcutta. (6s. Elliot Stock.) Here are over a score very readable stories—a few of them more or less mythological, the remainder authentic history. The Zenana Mission work of recent years has proceeded on the precise conviction which this volume illustrates, that though invisible to the outside world, the women of India exert a powerful influence, first in the family, and then in society at large. There are painful as well as pleasing episodes in the book, and Christian readers will rise from its perusal more and more persuaded of the imperative duty to evangelise all ranks of India's women. Sir Lepel Griffin, in a somewhat controversial introduction, seems to doubt whether Indian women will ever enjoy the freedom of their English sisters. He declares that though the women of the East are not so much en evidence as those of Europe, "their influence within the legitimate circle of their domestic relations is quite as great, their manners are as good, and their morality is as high."

The Secret of Holiness. Rev. Samuel Garratt, M.A., has published (Pawsey and Hayes, Ipswich. 1d.), under this title, a sermon preached lately in Ipswich on certain developments of modern teaching as to holiness. He fully agrees with those who are seeking the deepening of spiritual life in their description of the unsatisfactory state of much of the Christianity of the day, but adds that he sees the strongest possible objections to what is termed "consecration" or "second blessing." This "act of consecration" he looks upon as "man's method of doing God's work." Inasmuch as the evil deplored has its seat in the fact that many professing Christians have never been born again, Mr. Garratt insists that the remedy must be a coming in simple faith, as lost sinners, to Him who is able and willing to save. While, so far as Canon Garratt goes, we fully agree with him, we certainly cannot admit that he covers the whole ground, for whilst some have been converted at such conventions, many, whose previous Christianity no one could doubt, have received quickening, and evidently, as proved by life and walk, a very real blessing.

Studies in Leviticus.

The Five Great Offerings and their Law; or, The Divine Programme of the Redeemer and His Redeemed. By E. M. S. (Marshall Brothers.) This book is introduced by a commendatory letter from Rev. H. C. G. Moule, M.A., and a preface by Rev. J. Elder Cumming, D.D. Its principal feature is an endeavour to show that the various offerings not only typify the different aspects of our Lord's person and work, but that they do this in a definite historical progression. The first part of the Book of Leviticus is regarded as setting forth "The Divine Programme of the Redeemer," and the second part (from ch. xiv. to end) "The Divine Programme for the Redeemed." According to this plan of interpretation, it is argued that the different parts of our Lord's work, as well as his own personal characteristics, are presented in the types in the order in which they appear in the antitype. We cannot say that the evidence for this appears to be very clear, but Bible students will do well to consider what is advanced, and if unable to accept the main proposition of the book, they may yet find much help from its pages. The author (who is a daughter of the late Rev. E. B. Elliott, author of "Horæ Apocalypticæ") has evidently bestowed much pains upon the study of the subject, and writes in a deeply devout and thoughtful manner. In spite of continued attacks on the Old Testament, lovers of the Word of God will not cease to find a rich store of spiritual instruction in the Book of Leviticus, and any help to the understanding of its symbols and shadows will be welcome.

We are glad to observe some cautionary remarks in reference to certain expositions of the types which lead in a dangerous direction, although their advocates are scarcely aware of the fact. The subject is by no means free from difficulty, and this suggests modesty in the expression of different views—a characteristic which is pleasingly manifested throughout the treatise. To us it seems as if certain features, here regarded as consecutive, might more properly be regarded as concurrent, but Bible students must judge for themselves, and we think they cannot fail to be interested and profited by a perusal of this work. The interpretations of the various sacrifices, &c., are quite independent of the question of their order, and the one may, therefore, be accepted where the other is questioned.

Profit and Loss is the title of a striking Gospel address by J. Coates, of the Bible Carriage Mission, Landsea House, Ross, Herefordshire.

The Bible—Its Seeming Difficulties, by J. D. Smith, is a booklet which may safely be placed in the hands of young believers and inquirers. (1d. A. Holness.)

W. Wileman, 27, Bouverie-street, E.C., publishes several cheap and useful series of tracts exposing modern Romanising tendencies, and expounding evangelical Protestant truth.

Talks about Temperance is a booklet containing three instructive and earnest addresses, by Rev. Charles Bullock, B.D. It gives a portrait of Canon Ellison, to whom it is dedicated. (3d. "Home Words" Office.)

The Popular Guide to the Second London County Council is a very useful Pall Mall "extra." It gives full particulars of the polls, "mems" about members, and 120 portraits. (6d. Pall Mall Gazette Office.)

The Bond of Sympathy is an attractive booklet by Rev. Arthur Finlayson. It should bear a message of comfort to many, and maybe its pages will point some to the Great Sympathiser. (1d. J. A. Mack, 28, Paternoster-row.)

What the Society of Friends Believes, and Why. An Address by William J. Sayce. 2d. (E. Hicks, jun., 14, Bishopsgate-street Without.) This is a booklet which will interest many outside the community to which the author belongs.

Mr. Holness has added the life story of Mr. Spurgeon to his attractive series of memoirs of mighty men. Written by James T. Allen, this penny booklet, entitled The Man and His Wonderful Messages, should have many readers. (In cloth, 6d.)

The Glories of Christ, illustrated by the Tabernacle in the Wilderness. (3d. Holness.) This booklet by H. F. Witherby, is full of teaching of the highest importance. It has already had a large circulation, and is worthy of recommendation to all Bible students.

The Reformatory and Refuge Union, 32, Charing-cross, S.W., has issued the fourteenth edition (enlarged) of The Classified List of Reformatory, Preventive, and Child-saving Institutions (1s.). Philanthropic workers will find it a very useful book of reference.

Messrs. Partridge have published some very attractive intaglio texts. The Lighthouse (4d.), and Homeward Bound (9d.) series are specially suited for the walls of mission-rooms, selections from God's Word being given in silvered letters on illuminated cards.

The Christian Covenant. A Summary Exposition of the Church Catechism, by Rev. James Silvester, M.A., of Bath, is a model booklet of its kind. Evangelical members of the Church of England will find their own views well and succinctly expressed. (3d. Nisbet and Co.)

Memoirs of Mighty Men is an admirable series of illustrated books issued by Mr. Holness. So far ten have been published, at one penny each in paper covers, and sixpence in cloth. Colporteurs and others will find these very acceptable to young and old, and they well deserve a wide circulation.

In A Plea for District Teachers, James Maclean, Coleraine, urges that a systematic effort should be made by every branch of the Church of Christ to teach the Gospel to the people in their own houses. We trust the pages will have the careful and prayerful study they deserve. (1d. J. and R. Parlane, Paisley.)

The Authority of Christ in the Criticism of the Old Testament. By Jonathan Seaver, M.A., vicar of St. Mary Magdalene, Peckham. A pamphlet embodying much thought and research, by one who is a loyal disciple of Christ, as well as a friend of true learning. (6d. Cooper and Budd, Highstreet, Peckham, S.E.)

Personalia.

Rev. W. F. Moulton, D.D., has sailed for America to represent the Wesleyans at a conference at Omaha.

Dr. W. M. Taylor, of New York, recently had a slight attack of paralysis, and a period of rest has been prescribed for him.

Rev. E. H. Ellis, so well known for his work at Dalston, has had remarkable encouragement since his settlement in Melbourne.

Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., announces that he expects to sail for America on June 4. Nothing has as yet been settled with regard to future movements.

Rev. Max Christlieb, son of the lamented Prof. Theodor Christlieb, of Bonn, expects to sail next year for Japan as a missionary.

Dr. Baedeker has been staying for a few days at Berlin. After visiting other German towns, he hopes to arrive in England by the end of the month.

Rev. John Gritton, D.D., has, we learn, resigned the secretaryship of the Lord's Day Observance Society. Rev. F. Peake has been appointed his successor.

Mr. Robert Bilke has just celebrated his silver wedding, and the friends at the three halls, though mostly poor, raised £12, which they presented as a token of love and thanksgiving.

Mr. Josiah Nix intends visiting the Epsom races as in recent years; the date being May 30—June 1. Workers will be welcome, and prayer is desired that the testimony borne among the vast crowds of pleasure-seekers may again be blessed.

Mr. Shuldham Henry, we are sorry to hear, has been laid low during the last fortnight with a very severe attack of influenza—the third in ten months. He is staying with Mr. John Morley, Upper Clapton. Prayer is asked for his restoration.

Rev. W. J. Macdonald, of St. Brycedale's F.C., Kirkcaldy, who recently preached at the Regent-square Church, London, is to receive a call to the pastorate of that congregation. In Kirkcaldy he succeeded Dr. Stalker, who is to be invited to Marylebone Presbyterian Church.

Dr Angus.—At a committee meeting of Regent's-park College, Dr. Angus intimated his intention to resign his position as president. It is now nearly forty-three years ago since he retired from the secretariat of the Baptist Missionary Society to enter upon the duties of his present post.

Dr. Frederic Godet, of Neuchatel, says the correspondent of The New York Evangelist, has all the enthusiasm of a young man of twenty. He is working on an Annotated Bible and on his Introduction to the New Testament. Though controverting what he holds as heresy, he is entirely free from the odium theologicum of the olden days.

Krikor Beheanilian.—This young Armenian is now studying at New College, West Hampstead. Born of Christian parents, in Marash in Cilicia, his heart was drawn at an early age towards the ministry. He came to England with slender means, and was eventually helped into the New College, from which, after completing a three years' course, he expects to go forth as a missionary for Cilicia. He has gained some friends in London, who may be expected to help him in the promotion of his life-work.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 24.—GENESIS V.

As the previous chapter tells of the course of the world, so this tells of the line of the sons of God, of which every age has had its representatives. Side by side with the broad current of worldliness, there has been the rivulet of grace. Putridity and salt; disease and antiseptic; darkness and light. Of which class art thou? Amid the names of these buried generations, as we tread this ancient cemetery, there is one which arrests us, as it tells of Enoch who walked with God. For fifty centuries that name and epitaph have stood to teach how immortal goodness is. When the great achievements of science and art are almost forgotten, the names of those who walked with God shall shine as the stars for ever. We can only walk with God by taking every single step on life's pathway in his company—never before God, nor behind Him, but in step with Him, so that the converse between God and the soul may go on unhindered, as when one friend talks with the other, whilst they walk. A life like that preaches, altogether apart from such testimony as is given by the lips. We are told that Enoch foretold the coming of the Lord, and it is always those who most anticipate the Advent who live in closest sympathy with the coming King; but his words had been altogether unavailing, if they had not been corroborated by a consistent life. There is no break to such a life as that. Some day men awake to find that it is not; that is all, and it appears that God has taken. We cannot do without God here, and God cannot do without us yonder. "They shall walk with me in white, for they are worthy."

MONDAY, APRIL 25.—GENESIS VI.

It was a dark age. Lawless and licentious wickedness roamed roughshod and unresisted through the world, so much so that the Lord repented having made man at all. Judgment was imminent, brooding like a thunder-cloud about to burst. But amid the universal corruption and violence which prevailed there was one man who stood out alone as very precious in the eyes of the Lord. His name meant Rest; he was righteous and blameless in his life; he walked in fellowship with God; his anointed ear was quick to perceive the voice of God, and his hand was deft to do all that God commanded him. It was with this man that God entered into covenant. Note what a marvellous word this is, that the eternal God should enter into covenant with man, and pledge Himself to be a God to him and to his seed. Ah! my soul, is this thy lot? Art thou included in the everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure, and dost thou know it? Then thou mayest live a life of rest amid a world in arms. But see to it that thou live worthily of so lofty an honour; be gracious, righteous, blameless, quick to hear, swift to obey. And thou shalt float over a very deluge unhurt.

TUESDAY, APRIL 26.—GENESIS VII.

What drowns most men only lifts the child of God nearer his home. "The waters increased and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth." There are other deluges than those of water. "Cares like a wild deluge come, and storms of sorrow fall." Then are the lofty mountains of human pride submerged, and the whole hemisphere of life, so far as to its horizon, is covered by a dull, monotonous waste of trouble. But these are times when God says to the soul, "Come," as if He were inside the ark of safety, and wanted the soul to learn the secret rapture of fellowship; and there is no such fellowship as that which the soul enjoys when like a bird fleeing out of the storm, it nestles warm and close in its God-given cote. God never says, "Go into shelter," but always "Come." Sorrow is intended to drive us in upon our reserves in Him. And blessed is the moment when the door is shut behind the fugitive, by the hand that opened it; for when once God has shut you in with Himself, no power can force, no skeleton key can unlock, no wedge can prise the door. Storms of sorrow, pitiless disaster, virulent hatred, must beat outside, whilst the believer rides over the deluge in Divine society.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27.—GENESIS VIII.

In the burnt-offering, all was consumed, not as a sacrifice for sin, but as a token of the consecration of every part to the service of God. It was meet and right for Noah, newly delivered from the grave of waters, to testify his gratitude to his Deliverer, and to profess his desire to be entirely yielded to his service and glory. He answered the appeal of the mercies of God, and presented himself and all he possessed, a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, as his reasonable service. We have been saved from a worse fate, at a more priceless cost. In union with the Redeemer of our souls we have passed through the deep waters of death. Death is now behind us for ever. God hath sworn, and will not repent, that we shall never experience that deluge again. It is appointed unto men once to die, and we men have died once in the death of Jesus. But have we offered the burnt sacrifice? Have we expressed our desire to be utterly, only, and all for Him? Have we judged it to be our duty not to live to ourselves, but to Him who died for us, and rose again, and who met the deep, dark waters of judgment that we might escape them for ever? If so, we have become a sweet savour to God, and our life is fragrant to Him in its sacrifice.

THURSDAY, APRIL 28.—GENESIS IX.

The water of the deluge had passed away, and the redeemed family found themselves standing on resurrection ground, from which the judgment had passed, and on which the sun was shining. In their experience we may read our own. We, too, have passed through death and have come to resurrection, for we have been crucified together with Christ, quickened with Him, raised with Him, and made to sit together with Him in heavenly places. And what should our life be? It is a life of blessedness—for are we not blessed with all spiritual blessings in Him?—and it is also one of fruitfulness, in which we multiply and replenish the earth with a spiritual seed. And, moreover, we have power by which we are able to exert authority over the lower creation, so that some of man's primeval authority is restored, and we become as priests and kings unto God. There is one remarkable exception: Noah was forbidden to eat blood, while it is our privilege spiritually to eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man. God's protection is over us, to avenge our wrong. His everlasting covenant is with us, like the waters of Noah, which can never return upon the earth. And above us there arches his bow, the covenant sign; as circumcision was the sign to Abraham and the Lord's Supper is to the Church. How blessed is it to tread the soil of the Redeemed Life: radiant, trustful, and free!

FRIDAY, APRIL 29.—GENESIS X.

These names tell of nations, and kingdoms, and peoples and tongues which have long ago passed away, leaving but little trace. And yet they must have been known to God, included in his love, redeemed by the precious blood of his Son, and eligible for the glory which is being prepared. And inasmuch as a whole chapter is devoted to them, we may surely infer that the kingdoms of men are matters of deep interest to God, and that earthly politics are being closely watched by his Omniscient eye. The child of God has no right to refuse an intelligent interest in the rise and fall of empires, in the procession of dynasties, or in the wars and strife of men. Though he does not belong to the world, he is bound to honour all men, to pray for those in authority, to yearn over and intercede for the herds of men who seem like dumb driven cattle, and to hasten the day when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever.

SATURDAY, APRIL 30.—GENESIS XI.

Babel, Babylon, Babylon the Great. Such is the lineage of the apostasy, which has ever followed the Church of God as a shadow stealing along the wall at our side. To Babel we must oppose Abraham; to Babylon, Jerusalem; to Babylon the Great, the New Jerusalem, the Bride, the Lamb's Wife; to human confederacies and fellowships, the Church. To one of these each soul of man belongs, and the summons is perpetually going forth to such of the people of God as are entangled in the meshes of the false and apostate system: "Come out of her, My people, that ye partake not of her sins nor receive of her plagues." God alone is the centre of unity and concord. Leave Him out, and all is confusion and vanity in the world and in the heart. However high the tower or strong the compact, neither is sufficient to confederate mankind. But when God is recognised there is a Divine order, a centre of unity, a focus, a meeting-place. As it is said of heaven, where they belong to many nations and kindreds and peoples and tongues, but make one great host or festal crowd, animated by one spirit, and eager to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Whenever God is put away there is confusion in lives and states and worlds. Make God first, and the scattered units compose a perfect whole; as stars and planets fall into perfect symmetry when we have discovered the central sun around which all revolve.

DR. BARNARDO'S EMIGRANT LADS.—In view of the recent dead-set in certain quarters against Dr. Barnardo and his emigration schemes, the following extract from the letter of a correspondent who happened to be a passenger on the steamer by which Dr. Barnardo's last detachment sailed to the West is interesting:—"Perhaps no sight has struck me so much since my return to Europe as these three hundred lads. We have had most ample opportunity of watching them, and there is only one opinion as to them, and that is of praise. Their conduct on board ship, where they are placed perhaps under the most unfavourable circumstances, has been excellent, and what must strike any observer is their happy look and the way in which they are kind and helpful to each other. When one looks at that crowd of clean, well-dressed, and respectable-looking lads, it is almost impossible to believe that they were waifs on the streets of London." It is, under ordinary circumstances, rather a far cry from the slums to good citizenship. But something is surely done to shorten the distance by the shipment of healthy lads from the temptations of the streets to such a territory of splendid possibilities as the Great North-West.—Pall Mall Gazette.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 1.

The Prayer of the Penitent.—Psalm li.

Golden Text: Verse 10.

The title rightly describes the circumstances connected with this Psalm. Not until the visit of Nathan the prophet did David make confession of his sin (2 Sam. xi. and xii.). The story is very touching, and gives increasing interest and value to this Psalm. It is rightly called the Prayer of the Penitent. Psalm xxxii., which follows this in the order of time, contains the joyous exultation of the forgiven sinner.

Note (1). The greatest saints are not secure from falling—unwatchfulness, neglect of duty, may lead those eminent for piety into grossest sin; (2) that saints in a backsliding condition suffer great distress—perhaps Psa. xxxii. 3, 4, describes David's inward condition during his long period of apparent indifference (see Jer. ii. 19); and (3) that the restoration of the backslider is God's work. It is not the lost sheep that returns to the fold in search of the Shepherd, but the Shepherd that leaves the ninety and nine in search of the one that has gone astray (Luke xv. 4). God sent Nathan after David before David returned to God. This Psalm teaches, also, that a sense of forgiveness deepens our penitence for sin.

v. 1. David's hope of forgiveness rests solely upon the mercy of God. To eyes that are blinded with the tears of sorrow for sin, there is no attribute in God' character that can minister comfort like his mercy. Note the words "thy lovingkindness," "thy tender mercies." These belong to God, and are inseparable from Him, as surely as sin belongs to David.

5, 6. The two "Beholds" stand in contrast one to the other. David's acts of sin have revealed the fact that he possesses a sinful nature. The streams are defiled only because the heart, the fountain, is impure. The second "Behold" reminds us of God's demand. Outward cleansing will not suffice. True holiness must have an inward source. What a blessing it is that the New Covenant provides what God demands (Heb. viii. 10).

7. Hyssop was used in cleansing the leper (Lev. xiv. 4-7) and in sprinkling with the water of purification (Numb. xix. 18, 19). It was a lowly plant and may be an emblem of Divine condescension. The hyssop cleanses by the application of the atoning blood. "Whiter than snow"—it is a prayer of marvellous faith. Never did David appear more unclean than now, yet the prayer is the outcome of his faith in the efficacy of Divine cleansing (Isa. i. 18).

10. "Create"—this is a Divine work. The blood of atonement cleanses the conscience; the Spirit of God renews the heart. Salvation requires both. Jesus combines them when teaching Nicodemus (Jno. iii. 5, 14-16). 11. "Cast me not away"—as Adam was cast out of Eden (Gen. iii.), as Cain was "hid from the face of God" (Gen. iv. 14); and as Israel was ultimately cast from his presence (2 Kings xiii. 23). This is the language of true penitence. It seeks not to flee from God, but to have the hindrance to renewed fellowship restored. 12. "Restore," &c. Note that David does not speak as though he had lost salvation, but he has lost the joy of it. A sheep in the mire is still a sheep; and a child of God, though he has fallen, does not cease to be a child. "Uphold me," &c. His fall has taught him his own weakness. If restored, he will fall again unless God shall hold him up (Psa. cxix. 117).

13 From this verse to the close David, claiming already the answer to his prayer, resolves upon making a grateful return. He can do nothing to merit his restoration, but having received it he can and will show his gratitude for it. He will do it in three ways:—(1) By witnessing to others (13-15). Those whom he has by evil example led to transgress, he will now lead in the way of Divine pardon. (2) By offering true sacrifices (16, 17). "This is one of the many Old Testament passages (Jer. vii. 22; Hos. vi. 6; Mic. vi. 6-8) which proves that the spiritual worshippers under the law looked beyond the temporary sacrifices, as in themselves insufficient (Heb. ix 9)." There is no atoning merit in a "broken heart," but it is the indispensable condition of laying hold upon the all-sufficient sacrifice for sin. "None but a broken-hearted sinner can appreciate a crucified Saviour."—McCheyne. (3) By seeking the welfare of the whole church (18, 19).

Illustrations.

Thomas Brooks says:—"Look, as one drop of ink coloureth a whole glass of water, so one gross sin, one shameful action, one hour's compliance with anything of anti-Christ, will colour and stain all the great things you have suffered and all the good things that ever you have performed." How brief was David's pleasure in sin, how long-continued and how deep his pain!

The London apprentices, pleading before Henry VIII. for pardon for their insurrection, cried out in bitter tones, "Mercy! Mercy!" The Monarch, moved by the sight, cried out, "Take them away, I cannot bear it." The cry for mercy never fails to reach the heart of God.

Letters to the Editor.

GOD'S CONTROVERSY WITH ENGLAND.

My dear Sir,—In your paper on "Prayer for Revival" reference is made to what I have definitely said, that we need look for no revival of religion in this land in answer to prayer until we have purged ourselves of the opium crime, now cursing the millions of Asia.

Without claiming to be specially enlightened as to the distinction between the Church and the world, I think I may venture to say that I do very clearly recognise that distinction; and as one who serves a Master who has said, "My kingdom is not of this world," and who seeks to obey the injunction "the servant of the Lord must not strive," I have conscientiously abstained from voting at Parliamentary and other elections for fifteen years past.

That Isaiah i. 15 is valid now, and applicable to the Church in this country, as well as to the world, I feel firmly persuaded. If the Church is silent concerning the most stupendous wrong ever inflicted by one nation upon another, then is the Church even more guilty than the world of England in this matter, and I am not aware that the Church has yet spoken out on the subject. We have been sending repeated issues of information and appeal to forty thousand ministers all over the United Kingdom during the past twelve months; how many of them have appealed to their congregations on the opium question? Have the exhortations of Ezekiel iii. 16-21, xxxiii. 12-20, no modern application to present faithfulness and unfaithfulness? Can ministers who have read the awful narrations we have sent out, and have failed to tell their people what our rulers are doing, escape from the solemn position described in Proverbs xxiv. 11, 12? In the Jewish nation of Isaiah's time there was, no doubt, a faithful remnant, including the prophet himself; that remnant answers to the parallel of the true Church within our own nation now. If the reasoning is good which appeared in your paper last week, then I take it Isaiah must have been wrong to trouble himself about his nation's sins. God is still regarding the men "that sigh and that cry;" and we have not to content ourselves with sighing, we must give ourselves to crying as well. Yes, "Cry aloud, and spare not." How dreadful to think that the name of our Lord is blasphemed now in China, some of the people calling the drug we send them "Jesus opium." How humiliating that our Queen is known in India as the greatest poisoner the world has ever witnessed, each opium ball manufactured in Bengal bearing her initials V.I.

But, alas! God's judgments—as I ventured to suggest in March, 1891—are already upon us in the shape of judicial blindness, infinitely worse than war or famine or pestilence. Since the first opium war in 1840, for which our cultured ruling classes were responsible, we have had the steady Romeward movement within the National Church, and amongst our upper classes; since the second opium war of 1857, which the people of this country endorsed by again returning Lord Palmerston to power, insidious unbelief in many forms has permeated the Nonconformist Churches and the middle classes. Is it surprising? "Shall I not visit for these things? saith Jehovah; and shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?"

It were well worth the while of all true-hearted Christians to band themselves together for the deliverance of our land and people from further judgments by the total prohibition of this great iniquity; then indeed might we expect to see "showers of blessing." It were well worth while if all temperance organisations took pause in prosecuting their patriotic endeavours, and for a few months threw their energies into the anti-opium crusade; then might they anticipate a great deliverance of our people from the thraldom of the vested drink interests. After all, what is the welfare and prosperity of the 40,000 000 of Great Britain, in the sight of a righteous God, in comparison with the 700,000,000 of Asia, who are exposed to the opium vice? We have to do with an unchangeable God: "just and right is He." Can we question how He looks upon this great controversy?

Yours sincerely,
James E. Mathieson.

P.S. It would be an acceptable recognition of the noble efforts of Alfred Dyer and Soonderbai Powar, were the Lord's stewards to send in liberally to the Anti-Opium Agency Committee, who need large funds for the further prosecution of this good work. The treasurer is Mr. George Gillett, 2, Birchin-lane, E.C.

Sir,—I read your recent brief stricture on the letter of "An Old Man" with much satisfaction, and thank you for it. I think I recognise the writer, whom I hold in the highest veneration and regard, and for whom personally I entertain a sincere affection. The writer's mistakes, I conceive, lies in his false premiss in the second paragraph. He implies that the promise, "I will be to them a God, and they shall be to Me a people," applies to Britain as a nation, and is at present in course of fulfilment. But the promise was made to God's ancient people, for the text of the sacred writer runs, "I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah, not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt..." Surely the reference here is to the twelve tribes of Israel—to Israel as a nation—"all Israel" (Rom. xi. 26), according to the terms of Jeremiah's prophecy (xxxi. 31-34), in which the Lord explicitly declares that "the seed of Israel shall not cease from being a nation before Him for ever." In that prophecy He further declares that "all shall know Him, from the least of them unto the greatest of them," that He "will forgive their iniquity, and remember their sin no more."

Now, surely, to identify us as a nation with the people to whom these promises were made, is a begging of the whole question, and to infer that such absolute promises, so universal in their application, and so blessedly full and comprehensive in their results, are receiving their fulfilment in our experience at the present time, is, methinks, to close one's eyes to the sad and humiliating facts which are hourly taking place among us, both at home and abroad.

Nor is it in the present dispensation that these glowing predictions will be fulfilled, nor until "the fulness of the Gentiles be come in" (Rom. xi. 25), but when "there shall" have "come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall" have "turned away ungodliness from Jacob," for "this," saith the Lord, "is my covenant unto them when I shall take away their sins" (xi. 26, 27).

"Distinguish the dispensations," said wisely one the Fathers of the Early Church, "and the Scriptures will agree," and it is just because this is overlooked that there are so many mistakes in their interpretation.

God is not now dealing with nations, as such, in a way of grace; the present is an elective dispensation of individuals from all nations. "At this present time there is a remnant according to the election of grace" from among the Jewish people (Rom. xi. 5), and, contemporaneously, God is "taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name" (Acts xv. 14).

The goodness and love of God to our nation is, indeed, most manifest in making her children, in such comparatively large numbers, the channels of blessing to so many other peoples of the world, as well as in increasing her greatness on every side; but there is not corresponding faithfulness on her part, and her great and numberless privileges do not prove her to be the Israel whom God has promised to bless by "taking away her sins."

Capernaum was "exalted to heaven" in privileges, but Christ affirmed she should be "brought down to hell," and that it should be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for her; and many "mighty works" were done in Chorazin and Bethsaida, but He declared it should be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the judgment than for them.

Even if we look at the professing Church, while there is much, very much, praised be God, for which to thank Him, and take courage, is it not a very sad reflection that both in the past, and even at the present time, the presence of so-called Christians in heathen lands, has been far from being an unmixed good; the importation of "fire-water," ammunition, and other abominations, with the licensed opium dens in India and China, has increased a hundredfold the difficulties with which the true soldiers and servants of Christ have had to contend. I feel very sure your verdict is a true one, that "in view of Britain's national crimes, we look forward to the future with an awful sense of impending judgment."

The warning given to the Gentile Church (Rom. xi. 20-22) had great need to be sounded in our ears, for there is too great reason to fear that she will be "cut off," and that the glorious promise of Jer. xxxi. will, ere long, be fulfilled to the letter, in "grafting in again" the natural branches into their own olive-trees" (iv. 23-24).—Yours in hope of the coming King,

E. J. B.

"THE ACCUSER CAST OUT."

Sir,—The articles on "The Accuser Cast Out" have my fullest sympathy in the practical issue raised. The interpretation and application of Rev. xii., and one or two other passages, seem to me a little strained, but these points I leave with but one remark upon Rev. xii.—viz., that I consider the "heaven" where "war" is predicted means "the air."

At the present time, so far as Scripture is opened up to me, the place of Satan's abode is "the air." Although he spends much time and energy in the earth, he can no longer (even if we allow that he could do so in Old Testament days) appear in heaven before God to accuse the saints, since they have now a personal Advocate there, and since our Advocate is there to this very end—viz., to present Himself and his work as an emphatic and full answer to everything that was against us. It is written of Him that in death He was "blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." Not only can no charge be urged as unmet by the atoning work of Christ which He presents to God on our behalf, but it seems both just and reasonable to understand from Rom. viii. 33 that God, the Justifier, will allow of no charge being even brought forward, "Who shall lay any charge?" Would not Col. i. 21, 22 alone be sufficient to establish the mind on this point? "Yet now hath He (Christ) reconciled (believers) in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblamable and unreproveable (Gr., unaccusable or unchargeable) in his sight." Thus Rom. viii. 33 puts the challenge, "Who shall lay any charge?" Who shall come in to accuse or with an accusation? (So the original means.) And Col. i. 22 declares emphatically that the believer is before God without the possibility of being charged or accused "in his sight."

The place or locality of the scenes described in Job i. and Zech. iii. is generally thought of as "heaven"; but the Word does not say this. The transaction depicted by the prophet (Zec. iii.) discourages the thought that Satan is allowed a standing as accuser of the saints of God. Take Joshua in his "filthy garments standing before the angel of the Lord," not merely as a representative of "the nation," but as a shadow of the penitent sinner having sought the Saviour's sheltering side, and what do we see? The accuser rebuked, and peremptorily dismissed. In Job i. the localisation of the scene is more definite. It is where "the sons of God come to present themselves before the Lord"; probably some familiar sanctuary, certainly on earth. And the accuser finds his way there. But he is immediately challenged by the Lord as an unlawful intruder: "And the Lord said unto Satan, 'Whence comest thou?'" True, the Lord permits him to try Job in his circumstances for his good, but God does not permit him to arraign or touch Job "himself," i.e., his standing or his soul.

Satan may and does come and accuse us to ourselves, and, alas! we often fail to meet him with our sufficient answer to everything—viz., Christ. Only to-day I heard of a friend, a godly deacon of a Christian church, whose mind has given way since an attack of influenza, but whose greatest agony is an agony of soul. The adversary takes advantage of the saint's weakness. "I'm being dealt with about my sins; it is here," he tearfully cries out, laying his hand to his heart. "They are all charged home upon me here." Yes, it may be "here," on our heart; Satan has access to the heart and conscience, but, thanks be to the Divine Man of the Cross, no charges nor accusations will be listened to or "lay" there before God, where Christ is now for us. Happy and free is the soul that thus apprehends and believes. "How do matters stand between you and God?" was asked of an aged believer. "There are no matters between my soul and God," she replied; "they were all settled for me long ago between God and his blessed Son."

OUR MAID-SERVANTS.

Dear Sir,—I was very glad to see some remarks in your "Notes" in The Christian of March 10, about the position of our maid-servants.

I should be very glad to see some thoughtful and practical articles or letters dealing with the treatment of servants.

If I might mention some points on which I should be especially glad of information, they are (1) Our servants and their recreations; (2) our servants and how much restraint we may exercise over them; (3) our servants and their friends.

It seems to me that the servant question is one of the most important subjects of the day, when we consider what an important part they play in our domestic life. It is, too, a question on which many of us are ignorant of the very first principles. I am, dear sir, your obedient servant, W. G. F.

Cambridge.

HEBREW CONFERENCE HALL, WHITECHAPEL.—This hall is situated in a densely-populated East-end district, and is the centre of the work of Mr. H. Ehrlich, of the London City Mission. The building is used for Gospel services, classes for Jews, mothers' meetings, social gatherings, and several evangelistic efforts. Many a poor Jew "of wandering foot and weary breast," as well as many an "outcast Londoner," has here heard, and eventually embraced, the glad tidings of redeeming love. The hall is the headquarters of the "Spitalfields Lodging-House Band," which also is connected with the London City Mission, and has for its special object the extension of Christ's Kingdom amongst the inhabitants of registered lodging-houses. The treasurer of the hall is Mr. A. Hughes, 71, Stratford-road, Plaistow, E.

HAYTI.—Pastor Hippolyte writes as to the work of the Society for the Propagation of Bibles and Religious Books, Port-au-Prince, Hayti:—It has only been a year since we have been permitted, through God's help, to organise this society, which has already done a good work, having sent out through the country 369 Bibles, 278 portions of Scriptures, 574 New Testaments. But another thing remains to be done, a thing which we hold very dear to our hearts, as a religious body. It is a "Bible House." We stand in great need of this, and we believe that if we could have such a building it would give more importance to our work, and would help us to do more for the Lord Jesus Christ in Hayti. Our purpose for erecting this building is to have not only a depôt for the Bibles, but also a lecture hall and a reading-room. Friends interested may communicate with Pastor L. Hippolyte, Port-au-Prince, Hayti.

Temperance Notes.

There are 2036 public-houses in the county of London.

A Women's Christian Temperance Association has been formed in Cork.

In St. Margaret's Parish, Westminster, there are thirty-eight public-houses, owned by two brewers.

The number of Christian churches throughout Scotland using unfermented wine at the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is steadily increasing.

The current issue of The Irish Temperance League Journal says:—"An' sure its the suppression of her drink shops wud be the makin' of Oireland intirely."

The Aberdeen Temperance Society has held a series of meetings in many of the villages around the city and the results have been most encouraging.

The total number of public-houses in England and Wales licensed for the sale of beer, or beer and wine, to be consumed on the premises, is 32,497.

The Governor of Petrovawody, Russia, has issued a proclamation declaring that judges caught indulging in strong drink on the bench will be prosecuted, and all their decisions annulled.

A Temperance Mission was last week conducted at the Wesleyan Chapel, Horbury. The meetings were very successful, a good array of speakers having been secured.

We learn that the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union have been refused space at the World's Fair, Chicago, for a pavilion such as they had at the Paris Exposition.

Petitions in favour of the Bill prohibiting the serving of children under the age of sixteen with liquor must be in the hands of Members of Parliament not later than May 10.

On the authority of Dr. Usher, there are, at the present time, nearly one hundred asylums and retreats in the world for the treatment of alcoholism, and heredity is the chief factor in nearly sixty per cent. of the cases.

The Liverpool publicans who have been discussing Sunday closing have come to the conclusion that, however desirable it might be, it is of little value so long as clubs are allowed to open on all hands.

The Lowestoft Branch of the B.W.T.A. recently gave a free tea to over a hundred women, many of whom were drunkards, and all non-abstainers. At the public meeting which followed, fourteen of these women took the pledge.

The Preston magistrates have unanimously refused a music and dancing licence to the Pleasure Gardens Company in that town. The application was strongly opposed by the local temperance societies.

The twenty-first half-yearly special service with unfermented wine was celebrated on Sunday week in Queen-street Hall, Edinburgh. There was a large attendance, area and galleries being filled with communicants.

Experienced workers declare that the series of temperance meetings recently held at Newcastle were the most important that have ever taken place in the district. The fifty-nine gatherings of various kinds were all successful, and many of them most enthusiastic.

One hundred and fifty-six Massachusetts towns held their local elections last month, during which fifteen important towns changed from the "wet" to the "dry" column (from license to no license), while only four towns did the reverse. This State has completely turned from license towards Prohibition.

The National Temperance Society of America has had a conference to promote the formation of Church Total Abstinence Associations. The meeting was highly successful, the sentiments advanced and incisive; for example, Miss Julia Coleman said, "I do not think the Lord will let Prohibition come until his people see the sin of selling intoxicants."

A meeting to which the forty-four English and Welsh teetotal mayors were specially invited was held the other day in the "Mayor's Parlour" at the Manchester Town Hall. Ald. Leech, Mayor of Manchester, presided, and declared himself a lifelong abstainer, although he had not taken a very active part in the work. The Mayors of Rochdale, Burnley, Grimsby, and West Hartlepool also spoke.

Saltaire in Yorkshire was founded by Sir Titus Salt as a prohibition township, and has kept so all through, save for an experiment of "off" sale, abandoned years ago, after ten years, because of the disastrous results of the innovation. The town was lately the scene of another attempt to obtain a licence; but the Saltaire people, who knew the benefits of Prohibition, rose in protest, and held indignation meetings, so that two days before the licensing session the application was withdrawn.

An important meeting has been held in Newcastle for the purpose of forming a "League for the Prohibition of the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors to Children." It was stated in the meeting that some of the Liverpool publicans provide sweets to induce the children to go into their houses. Instantaneous photographs have been taken throughout the city of children going to and from the public-houses. Public meetings are to be held, at which lantern exhibitions of the slides will be given, and every possible means adopted for arousing public opinion on this crying evil. The League makes a good start, and with Mr. E. R. Russell for president, seems assured of a useful future.

Evangelistic Notes.

Shaftesbury.—A fruitful mission has been held here; several young people and others have professed conversion.

Leominster.—Gospel meetings have been held by Mr. Henry Collins, and much has been accomplished in stirring up saints and sinners.

Helston.—As a result of a special mission lately held in the Wesleyan Chapel by Rev. S. Marriott between forty and fifty persons have professed to receive blessing.

Edenbridge.—Rev. David Smith has held a series of special evangelistic meetings here, which, as shown by a testimony meeting at the close, resulted in blessing to several.

Isleworth.—Mr. W. H. Thompson has recently held here a special mission, which appears to have been the means of reviving the spiritual work in the place and leading many to decision.

Ireland.—A series of evangelistic services has been held at three centres in the parish of Waringstown, co. Down, by Rev. Dr. Crozier, of Holywood, and Rev. J. H. Mervyn, of Belfast.

Belgravia.—A week of special Gospel services have just been held at Halkin-street West, Belgrave Church; the preachers were Dr. Thain Davidson and Dr. MacEwan, and Revs. W. M. Smith and James Paterson.

Shrewsbury.—The mission just held by Rev. J. More continues to show fruit. The various meetings were most encouraging, and not least the special service held by the evangelist in the Great Western railway-sheds.

Lanarkshire.—A successful series of evangelistic meetings, held in the Mission Hall, Dykehead, Shotts, by Mr. Samuel McKenzie, was brought to a close last Friday. A deep impression has been made in the district, the power of the Spirit being manifestly present, and not a few professing to have been born again.

Seamen's Bethel, Wapping, E.—A fifteen days' mission has just been concluded here, by Mr. G. Hefford, of the Evangelisation Society. In order to reach a class who otherwise attend no place of worship, free breakfasts were given each Sunday morning, and suppers twice each week. The congregations consisted of the poorest of the poor, who listened intently to the Gospel.

Sidcup.—Rev. F. C. Spurr held a united mission here from March 26 to April 6. The memory of the hallowed afternoon hours spent in searching God's Word will linger long in the minds and hearts of many who were privileged to attend. The evening services were fraught with much blessing, and many professed to find the Saviour and yield themselves to Him. Throughout the services the interest has been unabated.

Rev T. Waugh has held a remarkably interesting mission in Plymouth with many tokens of blessing. His addresses, delivered in an intensely earnest spirit, with many a plain and powerful homethrust, many a bright flash of humour, enriched by many a heart-moving illustration culled from his own experience, and always impressive and solemn in their application, were very successful, under God, in bringing many to decision, and produced an impression which will abide.

Mr. John M. McAuliffe, having now recovered from his recent illness, has paid a week's visit to Chingford with manifest blessing. He has also conducted a mission in the parish of St. Mathew's, Luton, wherein many were brought to the Lord. The hall at Tunbridge Wells in which Mr. McAuliffe conducts his home ministry will next month be enlarged. The whole cost of the enlargement has been undertaken by a Christian lady. The "Wayside Bible Carriage" will this summer, with two brethren, visit the villages of Warwickshire.

Rev. W. H. Aitken was the preacher at a largely-attended special mission held last week in Emanuel Church, Streatham-common. Mr. Aitken had a fortnight's mission in the same church about a year ago; a second visit so soon is somewhat unusual, and may be regarded as a token of regard, on Mr. Aitken's part, for the esteemed vicar, Mr. Streatfeild. At the closing service of the mission on Sabbath evening the missioner gave an extremely earnest and powerful Easter discourse on the words "Children of the resurrection." Collections were made at both the Sabbath services for the Parochial Mission Society and the South London Spiritual Aid Fund.

Eastwood, Notts.—Rev. R. Balgarnie has concluded a united mission at Eastwood, extending over fourteen days. The mission consisted of Congregationalists, Wesleyans, Primitives, and New Connexion Methodists. It was preceded by a week of united prayer, and has been signally blessed of God in the quickening of the churches and the conversion of souls. At the request of the colliers three services were held in the coal pits of Moor Green and Brinsley, belonging to Messrs. Barber, Walker, and Co. It was touching to see the earnestness of the men as they stood in their working garb with their Davey lamps, while their hearty singing reverberated through the workings. The mission closed with a united Communion at the Congregational Church (Rev. J. Loosemore, pastor). Such services have never been held in Eastwood before, and will long be remembered by all who attended them.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Dr. Barlow, the new Bishop of North Queensland, was formally installed at Townsville on Saturday week.

The Waifs and Strays Society has bought Walsham Hall of Bishop Wilkinson, for use as a Boys' Farm Home.

We hear that Mr. James Hakes, the promoter of the Bell-Cox Ritual Case, is seriously ill.

The Bishop of St. Asaph unveils to-day (21st), the Welsh national memorial to Bishop Morgan, translator of the Welsh Bible.

The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel—which is in its 191st year—received in 1891 from all sources only £116,520, as against £164,383 in 1890.

Fourteen poor but deserving City clerks recently found posts in one week at the St. Mary-at-Hill Church Army Office, and last week nine more were successful.

Two members of the Joynson family, Messrs. R. H. and P. Joynson, have given £1500 towards the erection of a new church at Peel-causeway, Altrincham.

The Bishop of Liverpool has recently shown his deep interest in all that concerns his old parish of Stradbroke (Suffolk) by paying off the loan obtained from Queen Anne's Bounty in 1874, for the restoration of the chancel of Stradbroke Church.

The Bishop of Ripon delivered an address, one day last week, to the railway servants of the North-Eastern Railway Company employed in the grain warehouse at the goods depôt, Wellington-street, Leeds. There were present a large number of the railway servants. His theme was the parables in Luke xv.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. A. J. Fearnley, after three and a-half years' work at Brigg, has accepted a pastorate at Bolton, near Sunderland.

Mr. Johnson, the newly-appointed home secretary of the London Missionary Society, was warmly welcomed last week.

Principal Simon, D.D., of Edinburgh, addressed last week the students at Bala on "Remedies for Religious Doubt."

Rev. F. Barclay, after nine years' labour at the Pilgrim Fathers' Church, New Kent-road, has resigned, and is now going to Australia.

The Preachers' Association connected with the Yorkshire Congregational Union number nearly 200 members, who conduct services, regularly or occasionally, in over forty chapels and mission rooms.

Interesting missionary meetings have just been held by the Liverpool branch of the L.M.S., several missionaries giving addresses on the condition of the various branches of the society in China, Samoa, Madagascar, India, and Central Africa, the reports being in all cases satisfactory.

The Lambeth Baths meetings were closed for the season on Saturday week, when Mr. R. K. Causton, M.P., presided, and Rev. W. Mottram said that during the session there had been 107 temperance and religious meetings. The registered attendances numbered 92,500, making a total of 2,797,500 attendances. The pledge-roll this season approached 450, making a grand total of 25,610 pledges taken during the thirty years' history of the movement.

Rev. Joseph Wood, of Wilmslow, in a strong paper on the evils of gambling, read before the Cheshire Congregational Union, stated that the records of the police-court revealed the fact that gambling and betting had for years past been gaining ground among all classes of the community. The vice attracted all ranks—shop boys, office boys, shop assistants; female servants had been over and over again in the courts charged with thefts and embezzlement, and it had been shown that the seduction of the gambling table and betting lists had led many of their victims into disgrace.

BAPTIST.

Special services of an interesting character have just been held in Nantwich by Rev. A. F. Greening.

Mr. J. Parnell, whose work at Carmel Chapel, Pimlico, is known to many, has resigned his charge after ten years' labour.

Anniversary sermons were preached in Stafford Baptist Church last Sunday by Rev. C. Duxbury, of Tamworth, to large congregations.

The English chapel at Carmarthen has been doing good work of late, and Pastor A. F. Miles has been greatly encouraged.

The various mission societies in connection with John-street Chapel, W.C., report much encouragement in the Lodging-house, Tract, Open-Air, and other operations.

Pastor Olsen, a missionary engaged in work in Norway, speaking at Halifax the other day, said that in some parts of the country from which he came there was only one religious service in six weeks. Twenty-five years ago Sunday-schools were unknown in Norway; now the scholars number 73,000.

Cann Hall-road Church, Leytonstone, is enjoying many evidences of Divine favour. A spirit of deep concern has come over a large number of the young people, and the Bible-class meetings have become seasons of prayer and praise. A new mission-station has just been annexed. There have been many accessions to the membership of the church, which, with its devoted pastor, Rev. G. T. Ennals, is looking for continued and multiplied blessing upon a united and loving testimony for Christ.

The Baptist Union Council has adopted a scheme for the formation of a society under the title of the "Baptist Union Church Extension Society," the objects of which will be to federate the churches in large towns for the purpose of undertaking church extension work, by way of securing sites, making grants, not only for the building of new chapels, but sustaining pastors in chapels thus erected; also promoting the better distribution of Baptist churches in the larger towns, due regard being had to the existence of the other Evangelical Free Churches.

METHODIST.

In East Anglia evangelistic work is being successfully carried on by the Wesleyan missions.

In Leeds, Birmingham, Manchester, and other centres where missions have been some years in operation, the latest returns are most encouraging.

The numerical returns from all the circuits in Methodism are now in, but some weeks will elapse before the results of the yearly census of membership is officially made known.

The Scarborough Wesleyan Circuit reports a membership of 1359, with twenty-seven on trial. The increase on the year is thirty-one, the largest increase reported for the last ten years.

At last week's meeting of the Wesleyan Council, a report was read as to the relation of artisans to public worship; the conclusions were that no movement of elevation or alleviation could be sustained if alienated from the Gospel, and that greater facilities should be provided for a simpler style of evangelical service.

The Methodists at Winsford have experienced great inconvenience by the demolition by subsidence of their old chapel at Wharton, in which for four or five years a flourishing Sunday-school had been conducted. During the past few months new and commodious Sunday-schools have been erected on the old site, and these were opened yesterday.

The Transvaal and Swaziland district reports a church membership numbering 3130, with 955 on probation. This is an increase on the year of 569 full members and 174 probationers. Rev. Owen Watkins, chairman of the district, is compelled to return to England on account of an attack of malarial fever, contracted on his recent visit to Mashonaland.

Rev. G. T. Candlin, who has been on furlough for twelve months from China, is arranging to return with his family to that land in a week or two. During his stay in this country Mrs. Candlin's health, which suffered severely in China, has been renewed. Her papers and addresses at missionary services have made a good impression as to the work among Chinese women.

The executive of the London Wesleyan Methodist Mission report that the spiritual work is of a most encouraging character, and the numerical returns for the year show a substantial increase. The actual figures are as follows:—West central branch 1440, increase 138; eastern branch 752, increase 81; southern branch 741, increase 122; central branch 705, increase 65; Groves Mission 147, increase 11; total, 3485 members, being 417 increase, and 1000 on trial.

Rev. J. Mitchell, in an essay on "The Ethics of War," read last week before a meeting of the Primitive Methodist Ministerial Association in Birkenhead, showed that the whole spirit of Christ was opposed to war, and added that if it was objected that, by acting on the lines laid down by Christ, individuals and nations would be the sport of the oppressors, he could only answer that on these very lines Christianity conquered the world. He considered it was simply shameful that professedly Christian nations should still resort to the arbitrament of war for the settlement of disputes.

PRESBYTERIAN.

A new church on Holy Island will, it is hoped, be opened in May.

The Earl-road Church, Liverpool, have called Rev. T. W. Pearson.

The Liverpool Presbytery has passed a resolution deploring the evils of the Opium Traffic.

Dr. Monro Gibson has paid a most successful visit to Bradford, and much interest has been awakened.

At Trinity Church, Clapham, special sermons were preached on Sunday week by Drs. Morison and H. S. Paterson.

Two fresh medical missionaries, Drs. Cousland and McPhun, are being ordained this week in St. John's Wood Church.

At the meeting of Synod, to be held next week in Birmingham, the late Dr. Fraser will be sorely missed. His place on the Business Committee will be taken by Dr. Oswald Dykes.

SALVATION ARMY.

The Plymouth meetings on Good Friday conducted by the General were good, both as regarded attendance and spiritual influence.

The lectures upon the Social branches of the Salvation Army work now being given by Colonel Pearson, illustrated by oxy-hydrogen lantern views, are attracting much attention and interest.

From returns recently to hand, it appears that upwards of one thousand officers are now engaged in the slum and rescue work in the various territories where the Army is now carrying on its operations.

The special meetings arranged for on Good Friday were well attended, and were marked by all the enthusiasm usually attendant on such occasions. At Islington the Chief of the Staff conducted most impressive services. An overflow meeting was necessary, and even then very many could not find entrance to the evening meeting.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Isaac Sharp and Dr. Dixon have now reached Yokohama.

The Friends at Kendal have had to take a larger hall for the Lord's-day evening meetings, owing to the increase of interest.

The Friends' Syrian Mission reports considerable encouragement, Miss Bishop having been cheered by the coming of Miss Trusted to her help.

The amount of the Friends' Famine Fund, irrespective of money or flour sent direct to Russia, is a little under £35,000.

The London Quarterly Meeting reports an increase of membership "by convincement," the Bunhill meeting alone reporting forty additions within the last three years.

E. W. Brooks writes from Simbirsk giving details of work in the Government of Samara. He expects to return to London immediately, but arrangements have been made for distribution in Russia by responsible parties.

The Friend seems to be more and more interesting. Last week's is full of news at once cheering and instructive. Its items from the Foreign Mission field are expressive of hope and success—India and Madagascar, China and Syria are thus reported. The wide circulation of such a weekly organ must do good.

On Sunday, the 10th, a neat little meeting-house was opened for public worship at the Solway Fisheries in Dumfriesshire. Robert Firth and Lucy Crosland, of Cleckheaton, and Eliza Pickard, of Leeds, were present and took part in the opening services, and on Monday, the 11th, R. F. Crosland lectured on the "History and Teaching of the Society of Friends." We are glad to know also that the Friends of Ardrossan have secured a site for a new meeting-house, and are arranging for its erection. Scotland is thus making a move.

A great and unexpected loss has occurred in the sudden death of the devoted and self-denying Sarah Elizabeth Fox, wife of Joseph Kingston Fox, late of Surbiton. While engaged in religious and very acceptable service in Ireland, she was overtaken with great illness and prostration in Dublin, and on Friday, the 8th inst., suddenly and quietly passed away to her eternal rest. By her death the Society of Friends has suffered the irreparable loss of a faithful minister and earnest worker for Christ, and her bereaved and sorrowing husband and relatives are left to mourn for her, amid the loving sympathies of Friends everywhere.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

On Saturday evening a mission-car, under the auspices of the "Out-and-Out Band" was opened at Belfast.

The Bishop of Derry, Dr. Alexander, has made a profound impression in New York by his course of lectures on "Primary Convictions," which are said to have been exceedingly able.

An interesting missionary conference was held last week in Fitzroy Av. Presbyterian Church, Belfast, at which addresses were delivered by Revs. Wm. Park, Dr. Rogers, Thos. Lyle, and Dr. Greig, late medical missionary in China.

Several well-known Presbyterian ministers, owing to age and infirmities, have resigned their congregations, such as Revs. Dr. Johnston (of Belfast), Dr. Wilson, and J. K. Leslie (of Cookstown), and Thomas Waters (of Newtownards).

There is a growing dissatisfaction in the Protestant Episcopal and some other churches in Ireland against the system of pew-rents, and it is not unlikely that in a short time the sittings in some churches will be made entirely free with the view of encouraging the masses to attend.

The Presbyterian Sabbath-school Society, which has been thirty years in existence, held its annual meeting last week. During the year over 800,000 publications were circulated, and there are now on the roll 1083 schools, 5979 teachers, and 82,061 scholars. In many of the schools a missionary association has been formed, and the year closed with a balance of over two hundred pounds in hand.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Birmingham, Rev. J. F. Haynes, D.D., of Clacton-on-Sea; at Tadcaster, on 10th inst., Mrs. W. Whitfield, suddenly, while teaching her class, a devoted Christian worker; at Hereford, suddenly from heart disease, Canon Musgrave, aged eighty, well known as an able preacher; at Worcester, Rev. T. L. Wheeler, aged eighty-six, an active and earnest clergyman; on April 4, at Ventnor, Mrs. Easter, of Chandler's Ford, a helper of many; at Maid's Moreton, Mrs. B. W. Johnstone, wife of the rector; at Silverhill, St. Leonard's, somewhat suddenly, Rev. R. H. Brenan, well known as a faithful Evangelical, whose work at Grays, Essex, and afterwards at St. Leonard's, has been blessed to many; at Bethafarn House, Carnarvon, Rev. David Richards, an indefatigable student and pastor, a powerful and eloquent preacher, and beloved for his godly and noble character; at Braceborough, Stamford, on the 13th inst., Rev. Thomas Ault, a faithful pastor; at Manchester, Mr. William Thorburn, aged eighty-seven, senior elder of Grosvenor-square Presbyterian Church, a godly and devoted servant of Christ; at Crosshill, Glasgow, on Sunday, 10th inst., Rev. D. McKinnon, of Chalmers Free Church, who, after preaching twice, died suddenly on his return home; Revs. Jas Barnier, LL.D., late incumbent of the parish of Clomantagh, an able pastor and preacher and an earnest Christian; at Ardara, co. Donegal, Mr. Richard Pearson, for many years a zealous and faithful Methodist class leader, local preacher and Christian worker.

Zenana Medical College.—Sir Richard Temple, chairman of the committee, asks for help in view of the good work ladies who have passed through the college are doing among those who otherwise have no medical help whatever. Secretary, Dr. G. de Gorrequer Griffith, 58, St. George's-road, S.W.

FAITHFUL IN THAT WHICH IS LEAST.

A leaflet in a letter, folded with thoughtful care,
And sealed with earnest longing, and a short heart-spoken prayer;
Commended to the Saviour, and sent forth on its way,
His changeless loving kindness, his faithfulness to say.

Simple it's chosen language, the soul and mind to reach,
Gone on its unseen mission, beyond the power of speech,
It will cause the eyes to kindle, the reader's heart to glow,
And the issues of that moment, eternity will show.

A leaflet in a letter, so small a thing to send,
And yet God's great salvation may on its course attend
Some tempted soul or weary, a longing heart oppress,
May through its timely coming find heaven's eternal rest.

Not much we say, but surely who can its import tell?
For once the soul is offered a draught from Zion's well,
The prodigal and the stranger, who far in sin have trod,
Read in its gentle pages the home-way back to God.

Not much we think, but ever seeking the sons of night,
The heart of God throbs in it, the word of truth is might;
And easy hearts are wanting, amid life's daily strife,
Some frequent sweet reminder of yon immortal life.

Not much to give for Jesus, easy this work for Him,
But the world is growing older, and faith oft groweth dim,
And the time is passing over, and it needs that some should stand
And do small things for Jesus, with free, unsparing hand.

A leaflet in a letter, who has an unsaved friend,
And will not Christ's own offer of full forgiveness send?
Who would not on its cover some dearly loved name write,
To see in heaven the letters formed in unfading light?

A leaflet in a letter, just that and nothing more,
Yet it came as a knock of Jesus to a long-closed sinner's door,
And his gracious invitation was heard, "Let Me come in,"
And another soul was ransomed from the bonds of death and sin.

A leaflet in a letter, but it brought another song
To the white-robed angels in glory, and the grand angelic throng;
And its mission, its triumph, were echoed round the throne,
For the Lord needs not the mighty to gather back his own.

Not a Novel—

But a Novel Book.

We mean it; you shall have it sent you, post free, if you will but send us your name and address.

It is a book, but not an ordinary one.

No novel, no book of travels, no book of adventures on land or sea could be more interesting and full of wonderment.

This book opens up to you in a simple yet graphic manner the mysterious workings of nature in your own stomach.

You would not believe what delicate mechanism, what clocklike precision, what faultless processes are secretly and quietly in constant operation; how all these are set in motion by a bit of food entering the stomach.

Studying these things teaches us what to eat, what to avoid, and how to promote health.

Those who suffer from weak stomachs or any form of dyspepsia should certainly read it.

Please send your address, mentioning this Journal, to Guy's Tonic Co., 4, Ludgate Circus, London.

1892. FREE GIFTS. 1892.

In the course of a year we usually present to Bazaars or deserving objects several of our Sewing Machines. (See our last week's Advertisement.)

There are quite a Number of Bazaars to be held at Easter, and we have accordingly awarded

TWO FREE GIFTS instead of One this Month.

ONE No. 9 D.A.A. £10 MACHINE goes to the "Bazaar of Bazaars," promoted and arranged by the Derby Temperance Society in conjunction with Homes for Waifs and Strays Society, Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Derby and Derbyshire Convalescent Home, and Ladies' Home Mission Association, to be held in the Royal Drill Hall, Derby; and another No. 9 D.A.A. £10 MACHINE goes to the Bazaar to be held at Easter at Desborough, near Market Harboro', for New Sunday Schools (Rev. Isaac Near, Pastor).

The successful Widow this month is—

Mrs. BRIGGS, 7, Zion Place, Eldon St., Newark-on-Trent,

To whom we have delivered A FREE GIFT of one of our No. 9 £7 10s. DRESSMAKERS' MACHINES.

All Recommendations received by us in March are now useless. Fresh Recommendations should now be sent in, and these should be on the special forms to be had from our Agents.

Please mark Letters of Recommendation with the letter "R" in top left-hand corner of envelope. Recommendations endorsed by our Local Agent will have more weight. Forms of Recommendation and addressed Envelopes may be had from our Local Agent, on personal application. We cannot promise to acknowledge or reply to any recommendations. Our nearest Agent's address may be had by sending to us a stamped addressed envelope.

HIGHBURY HILL BAPTIST CHAPEL.

On SUNDAY, April 24th, 1892, SERMONS on behalf of the Baptist Missionary Society will be PREACHED in the above Chapel—in the Morning, by the Rev. W. J. HENDERSON, B.A., of Coventry, and in the Evening by the Rev. JAMES CULROSS, D.D., of Bristol. Morning Service 11; Evening Service 6.30.

On SUNDAY, May 1st, the Service in the Morning will be conducted by the Rev. J. CLIFFORD, D.D., and in the Evening by the Rev. J. F. BENNETT, of Lincoln.

Be Up To Date.

It is a tradition with you that brimstone and treacle is a good Spring medicine, eh? And that Spring brings feverishness, eruptions, and a general disturbance of the system. Quite so. You accordingly proceed to dose yourself and dose your children with brimstone and treacle. But why? The mixture is messy and nauseous. It does good, but stomach colic is apt to ensue. But no matter. Those before you believed in it and so do you.

You might just as well stick to the farthing rushlight, and ignore paraffin, gas, and the electric light. But you don't do so because you know better.

Carry the principle farther, and give Frazer's Sulphur Tablets a trial as a Spring medicine. They are more efficacious, and far safer than brimstone and treacle, and much nicer to take.

Don't be bigoted nor sceptical. Live and learn. Think of Frazer's Sulphur Tablets as the best of all Spring medicines, and a valuable blood purifier. Why not test them free of charge? Samples will be sent gratis and post free on application. Name The Christian.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL,
LIVERPOOL ROAD, ISLINGTON, N.

For the reception of sufferers from INFECTIOUS FEVERS, whose means are insufficient to afford them proper isolation and treatment at home. Patients contribute about one-fourth of their cost while in Hospital, the other three-fourths falling upon the funds of the Charity.

78,000 persons have been treated here since 1802, and probably ten times that number have been preserved from infection.

Subscriptions and Donations will be gratefully received by the Secretary at the Hospital, Major W. CHRISTIE.

Bankers: Prescott, Dimsdale and Co., 62, Threadneedle Street.

THAMES CHURCH MISSION.

This Society, which has been doing good work on the Thames since 1844, is earnestly commended to the consideration of the Public.

The field of labour is from Richmond to the Nore, among a vast fluctuating population of Seamen, Emigrants, Bargemen, &c.

CONTRIBUTIONS are most URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this important work. F. PENFOLD (Paymaster-in-Chief, Royal Navy), Secretary.

EUCALYPTUS AND PINE JUJUBES

C. R. LAWRENCE ORIGINATOR

The pure oils of Pine and Eucalyptus, which alone enter into the composition of these Jujubes, possess remarkable antiseptic properties, and have been found most efficacious in the treatment of diseases of the Throat and Respiratory Organs. For Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, Loss of Voice, Catarrh, Influenza, and the Throat troubles common to public speakers and singers, they are being used with the most satisfactory results.

Lawrence's Eucalyptus and Pine Jujubes have won the approval and recommendation of the Medical Profession who prescribe them as a pleasant and convenient mode of administrating these medicines. A jujube placed in the mouth is a sure safeguard against infection.

Prices 1s. 1½d. and 2s. per box (post free 1s. 3d. or 2s. 3d.). Of all Chemists, or from the Sole Proprietor, G. R. LAWRENCE, M.P.S. Pharmaceutical Chemist, RHYL. London Agents: Barclays, Newberys, Sangers.

THIRTY-NINTH SERIES OF CASES.
CASE FOR THE WEEK.
CASE of Mr. H. HEAP, ACCRINGTON.
The illness of this patient commenced with a severe cold, with pleuritic pains, constant febrile heats, the feet at times "burning like a fire." This continued for six months, during which the strength gradually declined. When writing to me in February, 1891, he says:—"I have lost forty pounds in weight."
In the first fortnight after I wrote him he began to improve, picking up flesh and strength. The pain ceased, and the chest felt much more free. Writing me four months after commencing my treatment, he says:—"Your medicine has quite cured me. I can only thank you that I am not in my grave. I have been at work ever since, and am as strong as ever I was in my life. May the Lord spare you for many years to come, to be a blessing to sufferers from chest disease."—Henry Heap, Clayton-le-Moor, near Accrington.

Pure Concentrated FRY'S COCOA

PEPSONYMIN TONIC
THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely from its use." Mrs. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dyspepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SPITE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. BEETHAM'S Glycerine & Cucumber.

Is the most perfect Emollient Milk for Preserving and softening the Skin ever produced. It soon renders it soft, smooth, and white; entirely removes and prevents all roughness, redness, sunburn, tan, &c., and preserves the skin from the effects of the sun, wind, or hard water, more effectually than any other preparation. No lady who values her complexion should ever be without it, as it is invaluable at all seasons for keeping the skin soft and healthy.

Superior to every other preparation for rendering the skin delicately soft, smooth, and white.

A Clear and Beautiful Complexion is soon obtained by its use. For the Toilet and Nursery it is invaluable, and is delightfully refreshing if applied after violent exercise, or after visiting heated apartments, &c.

Beware of Injurious Imitations.

LITTLE BLIND JACOB.

OUR MOTTO:

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ."

Boys and Girls (under 18 years of age) living in happy homes the wide world over, are invited to become

Companions of the "Young Helpers' League,"

By filling up the Form of Application for Membership to be found on page 29 of this number of "The Christian," and enclosing therewith Sixpence in Stamps to the General Secretary, Miss RACHEL NORTON.

For this Annual Subscription of Sixpence, a beautiful Card of Membership will be sent by return of post, and the Quarterly Magazine of the "Young Helpers' League," admirably illustrated, will be posted during the year to each enrolled Companion of the League.

Clergymen and Ministers of all Denominations, Parents and Guardians of Children, Heads of Schools, and all Instructors of Youth, are invited to bring this proposal at once before their young charges, so as to link on the bright, joyous lives of well-to-do children with the less favoured existences of crippled or ailing Waif or Orphan Children whose days are often spent amid suffering, privation, and neglect.

Will not the gentle face of little Blind Jacob, one of our Waifs who has never seen the light of day, plead with every one the cause of his rescued Brothers and Sisters?

RACHEL NORTON, General Secretary of the League.
